>> Matt

>>

>> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

> Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually >> traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely >> resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of the >> environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees >> this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he > thinks

>> the world is and how he interprets it.

>> HTP,

>> Mahari

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>>>
>>> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the >> Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white >> integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back >> seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired",
> was >> passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both
> his >> hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman >> through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face
> was >> like all children who go through turmoil, like the >> moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of asking
> his >> grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....
>>>
>>> matt
>>>
>>> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
>>>
>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I >> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very >>> complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing >> results >>> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a >> lesson
>>> from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.
>> All >>> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds
>> (which >>> are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler
> to a >>> degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared > about
>> and >>> uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The >> brain
>>> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation
> and >>> activity to function at its best.
>>> HTP,
>>> Mahari
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira
> wrote:
>>>>

>>>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for >>> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been > decrypted.
>> The
>>> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to > say:
>>>>
>>>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not
> a >>> scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in > scientific >>> fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin
> colour
>>> will be predictive of intelligence."
>>>>
>>>> Check out the entire BBC article here:
>>> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>
>>>>
>>>> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up
> which >>> does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.
>> There
>>> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with >>> parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is > obvious
>> and
>>> the background of most intelligent people seems to too
> obviously >>> similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown
> for >>> instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their > younger >>> siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study > on
>> one->>> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what > accounts
>> for >>> the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I >> should >>> say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is >>> controversial, but then again isn't it all.
>>>>
>>>> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of >> Language >>> and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these > are >>> learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they > often >>> intuitive.

>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> _____
>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> _____
>> Do You Yahoo!?
>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>
>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>

| 23492|2007-10-24 16:59:19|matt mercer|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

Tee-hee, I love that idea because I think that's what inspires so many people about these books, that we can change the educational matrix and undo all the harm of ages past for children of every age, for if, as I like to coyly say, western civilization suffers from "elephantiasis of the PTAH, and children no longer have to be treated as birds in gilded cages, perhaps more and more people will find the courage resources and good company to raise their voices for a better future.....

cristofori whitakara wrote:

this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter( Ptah) and the books deals with alchemy(al-cham) ?

matt mercer wrote:

This goes along with my idea that introducing ancient language study into primary education might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori system is designed to encourage students to express their own stages of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient language study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would lend a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore language and their own expression from a formative base that is not grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination and cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this body of curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children, it might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph- Tocharian might be a good place to start.

I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of just etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology and phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the alphabets is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions from alphabet to alphabet.

Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a flag and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting the ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built from its fruits.....

.....out of all the bickering that goes on about the religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are all able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet. If Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at will, reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships that support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup that is more nurturing than any of us dreamed..... ....

matt

matt

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

>>and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going through those things...<<

Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her best to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed to. Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively. It's the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't realize or understand the child's potential. Children are just little people with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, matt mercer wrote:

>
> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying to express more about the resiliency of children and that they are constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders when they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this reaching out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking to learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult" world is so far above children, while say in the jungles of south america, every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that are faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are more of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going through those things...

>
> Matt

>
> Mahari Mengistu wrote:
Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually > traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely > resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of the > environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees > this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he thinks

> the world is and how he interprets it.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, matt mercer wrote:
> >
> > I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the > Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white > integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back > seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired",
was > passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both
his > hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman > through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face
was
> like all children who go through turmoil, like the > moon..... ..his stare as he had this conversation of asking
his > grandma what was wrong is what stays with me..... ..
> >
> > matt
> >
> > p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
> >
> > Mahari Mengistu wrote: I > agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very > > complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing
> results
> > and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a > lesson
> > from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.
> All > > too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds
> (which > > are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler
to a > > degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared
about
> and > > uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The > brain
> > is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation

and

> > activity to function at its best.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira wrote:

> > >

> > > After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for > > Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted.

> The

> > leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to > say:

> > >

> > > "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not
a > > scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific

> > fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin
colour

> > will be predictive of intelligence. "

> > >

> > > Check out the entire BBC article here:

> > <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

> > >

> > > I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up
which

> > does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.

> There

> > is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with > > parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious

> and

> > the background of most intelligent people seems to too
obviously > > similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown

for > > instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their

> younger > > siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study

on

> one-

> > year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts

> for

> > the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I > should
> > say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is > > controversial, but then again isn't it all.
> > >
> > > All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of > Language
> > and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these
are > > learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often > > intuitive.
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
_____
> > Do You Yahoo!?
> > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
_____
> > Do You Yahoo!?
> > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> >
> >
_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23493|2007-10-24 17:19:30|asar_imhotep|Re: Ptah/Ta and the Creation of Space-Time|
Peace Mahari

I think the more and more people research African languages, the more is going to be coming out on how to properly pronounce the words. Not only that, but more so how to interpret the philosophy behind the words.

For instance, going along the path you were going, we know "htp" graphically is a "flat line," while Ptah/Ta is a rising mound [as if something was arising from the flat mound].

Ptah means "ever expanding" and land or location. In the beginning there was "htp" [peace]. But creation happened when Ptah/Ta rose out of the Nun /hTp/. In the kongo this process is called Kala ye Zima (on and off /being and non-being).

Ptah/Ta and Space-Time

The Theory of Special Relativity was coined by scientist Albert Einstein in a 1905 paper "On the Electrodynamics of moving bodies." This theory states that observers in an inertial reference frame (in other words sitting still or idle) which are in uniform motion relative to one another, cannot perform any experiment to determine which one of them is in "absolute motion". The theory postulates that the speed of light would be the same for both observers. In other words, no matter where the observers are located and how they perceive the event, the laws of the universe are going to be the same regardless.

This theory by Einstein later prompted Hermann Minkowski to treat the 3 dimensions of space (height, width, length) and the 1 dimension of time as a single construct called the "Space-Time Continuum." This made space and time inseparable aspects of our reality.

The theory of relativity posits that perception of an event is relative to your coordinates (location/space) and time of observation of that event. A social example would posit that how you see the world is based on the time in which you are living and the particular location or culture you belong to. Two people observing the same event, often times view those events differently because they are viewing it from two different perspectives (locations) based on their upbringing and frame of reference. Any man or woman in a serious relationship can attest to this fact.

Well this concept of relativity and space-time was already talked about and understood in ancient Ta-Merry 5000 years before Einstein. All one has to do is take a look at the Mdw Ntr (hieroglyphic) writing and pay attention to the creation myths. The Mn-Nfr theology posits that the God Ptah (or Ta) rose out of the Nun (the ocean of consciousness of the creator). From this event, creation was able to happen. I am condensing this for sake of space, so forgive me.

In Mdw Ntr, you can read words forwards and backwards and they all mean something different. The word / Ta / means to create or it could mean land. The word / Ta / in reverse is / At / and it means "moment." Here we have the fundamentals of space-time and relativity. Before creation can occur, you need a place to create: that would be / Ta / or Ptah rising out of the Nun. At the moment / Ta / (a place) was created, time was automatic (its reverse).

When there is total peace /htp/ there is no movement of any kind; which also means there is no time. But when Ta formed, it became the space and the objects (which has height, width and lengths). It's opposite /at/ becomes the time (moment) necessary for the creation process. They are inseparable.

In the physical realm, everything has an opposite. So the creation of Hot makes Cold automatic. The concept of Above makes the concept of Below automatic. One can't exist without the other: the same with Space-Time. Before you can create anything, you need a place to put your creation. Time is the measure of two or more events. Creation is an event (including the creation of the place to create in) and creation happens in intervals called time. Here we see the Nile Valley people codifying science in myth, 5000 years before Einstein's Theory of Relativity and Minkowski's Space-Time Continuum.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> This just occurred to me. We know how the Kemau loved to "play" with > words. "HTP" backwards is "PTH". I'm not a linguist so perhaps > someone who is or has more expertise can stop the speculation > immediately. But since no vowels were used how do we know precisely > which vowels might go between the consonants?

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

| 23494|2007-10-24 18:17:22|matt mercer|Re: Ptah/Ta and the Creation of Space-Time|

I think this has a lot to do with cyclic time too, Ta and At the arising of the moment of cultural infrastructure's conception and birth is confined to the natural laws you express so eloquently like the procession of principals on the ceiling of the temple of HATHOR. Cyclic growth and the collective cooperative expression of growth reflecting these cycles and their clear examination and representation is part of the foundation of this language. and you're right now is a great time of rediscovery and revitalization.

Thanks.
Matt

asar_imhotep wrote:

Peace Mahari

I think the more and more people research African languages, the more is going to be coming out on how to properly pronounce the words. Not only that, but more so how to interpret the philosophy behind the words.

For instance, going along the path you were going, we know "htp" graphically is a "flat line," while Ptah/Ta is a rising mound [as if something was arising from the flat mound].

Ptah means "ever expanding" and land or location. In the beginning there was "htp" [peace]. But creation happened when Ptah/Ta rose out of the Nun /hTp/. In the kongo this process is called Kala ye Zima (on and off /being and non-being).

Ptah/Ta and Space-Time

The Theory of Special Relativity was coined by scientist Albert Einstein in a 1905 paper "On the Electrodynamics of moving bodies." This theory states that observers in an inertial reference frame (in other words sitting still or idle) which are in uniform motion relative to one another, cannot perform any experiment to determine which one of them is in "absolute motion". The theory postulates that the speed of light would be the same for both observers. In other words, no matter where the observers are located and how they perceive the event, the laws of the universe are going to be the same regardless.

This theory by Einstein later prompted Hermann Minkowski to treat the 3 dimensions of space (height, width, length) and the 1 dimension of time as a single construct called the "Space-Time Continuum." This made space and time inseparable aspects of our reality.

The theory of relativity posits that perception of an event is relative to your coordinates (location/space) and time of observation of that event. A social example would posit that how you see the world is based on the time in which you are living and the particular location or culture you belong to. Two people observing the same event, often times view those events differently because they are viewing it from two different perspectives (locations) based on their upbringing and frame of reference. Any man or woman in a serious relationship can attest to this fact.

Well this concept of relativity and space-time was already talked about and understood in ancient Ta-Merry 5000 years before Einstein. All one has to do is take a look at the Mdw Ntr (hieroglyphic) writing and pay attention to the creation myths. The Mn-Nfr theology posits that the God Ptah (or Ta) rose out of the Nun (the ocean of consciousness of the creator). From this event, creation was able to happen. I am condensing this for sake of space, so forgive me.

In Mdw Ntr, you can read words forwards and backwards and they all mean something different. The word / Ta / means to create or it could mean land. The word / Ta / in reverse is / At / and it means "moment." Here we have the fundamentals of space-time and relativity. Before creation can occur, you need a place to create: that would be / Ta / or Ptah rising out of the Nun. At the moment / Ta / (a place) was created, time was automatic (its reverse).

When there is total peace /htp/ there is no movement of any kind; which also means there is no time. But when Ta formed, it became the space and the objects (which has height, width and lengths). It's opposite /at/ becomes the time (moment) necessary for the creation process. They are inseparable.

In the physical realm, everything has an opposite. So the creation of Hot makes Cold automatic. The concept of Above makes the concept of Below automatic. One can't exist without the other: the same with Space-Time. Before you can create anything, you need a place to put your creation. Time is the measure of two or more events. Creation is an event (including the creation of the place to create in) and creation happens in intervals called time. Here we see the Nile Valley people codifying science in myth, 5000 years before Einstein's Theory of Relativity and Minkowski's Space-Time Continuum.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>
> This just occurred to me. We know how the Kemau loved to "play" with > words. "HTP" backwards is "PTH". I'm not a linguist so perhaps > someone who is or has more expertise can stop the speculation > immediately. But since no vowels were used how do we know precisely > which vowels might go between the consonants?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23495|2007-10-24 19:05:44|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

Peter is a Latin name, not Jewish. It's the Latin equivalent of Kefas.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Maybe, maybe not. There is a theory that the name Peter, a judeo-christian biblical character and common jewish name comes from Ptah.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

> wrote:

> >

> > this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter(Ptah) and the > books deals with alchemy(al-cham)?

> >

> > matt mercer wrote: This goes along with my idea that introducing ancient language study into primary education might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori system is designed to encourage students to express their own stages > of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient language study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would lend > a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore language and their own expression from a formative base that is not grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination and cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this body of > curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if

> > Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children, it > might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph-Tocharian might be > a good place to start.

> > I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of just > etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic

> languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in > particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology

and
> phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, > taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the alphabets > is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions from > alphabet to alphabet.
>> Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a flag > and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting the > ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built
from > its fruits.....out of all the bickering that goes on about
the > religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good time > time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are
all > able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet. If > Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at will,
> reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over > inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships that > support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the > father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup
that > is more nurturing than any of us dreamed.....
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> matt
>>
>>
>> matt
>>
>>
>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: >>and that a child who has > not seen or experienced the Traumas of >> adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives >> that are going through those things...<<
>>
>> Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her best >> to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed to.
>> Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively. It's >> the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential >> appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't realize >> or understand the child's potential. Children are just little

> people
> > with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:
> > >
> > > I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying to > > express more about the resiliency of children and that they are > > constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders
> > when > > they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this reaching > > out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking
> > to > > learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult"
world
> > is > > so far above children, while say in the jungles of south america, > > every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that
are > > faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting > > that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are
> > more > > of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and that
> > a > > child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is > > more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going > > through those things...
> > >
> > > Matt
> > >
> > > Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> > Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually > > > traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely > > > resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of
the > > > environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees > > > this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he > > > thinks
> > > the world is and how he interprets it.
> > > HTP,

>>> Mahari
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:
>>>>
>>>> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In
the
>>> Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white >>> integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back >>> seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired",
>> was >>> passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both
>> his >>> hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman >>> through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face
>> was
>>> like all children who go through turmoil, like the >>> moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of asking
>> his >>> grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....
>>>>
>>>> matt
>>>>
>>>> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
>>>>
>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I >>> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very >>>> complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing
>>> results
>>>> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a >>> lesson
>>>> from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.
>>> All >>>> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds
>>> (which >>>> are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler
>> to a >>>> degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared
>> about
>>> and >>>> uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for.

The

>>> brain

>>>> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation

>> and

>>>> activity to function at its best.

>>>> HTP,

>>>> Mahari

>>>>

>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira

>> wrote:

>>>>>

>>>>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for

>>>>> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been

>> decrypted.

>>> The

>>>> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to >>> say:

>>>>>

>>>>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not

>> a

>>>> scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in

>> scientific

>>>> fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin

>> colour

>>>> will be predictive of intelligence."

>>>>>

>>>>> Check out the entire BBC article here:

>>>> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

>>>>>

>>>>> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up

>> which

>>>> does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.

>>> There

>>>> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with >>>> parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is >> obvious

>>> and

>>>> the background of most intelligent people seems to too

>> obviously

>>>> similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown

> > for > > > instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their > > > younger > > > siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study
> > on
> > > one-
> > > year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what > > accounts
> > > for > > > the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I > > > should
> > > say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is > > > controversial, but then again isnt it all.
> > > >
> > > > All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of > > > Language > > > and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these
> > are > > > learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they > > often > > > intuitive.
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
_____
> > > > Do You Yahoo!?
> > > > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
around
> > > > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> > > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
_____
> > > > Do You Yahoo!?
> > > > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> > > > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> > > >
> >
> >

> >
> >
> >
> > Do You Yahoo!?
> > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > Do You Yahoo!?
> > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> >
>
| 23496|2007-10-25 00:37:38|asar_imhotep|Nsw Bty possibly Nsi Buta?|
Peace Phamily

I may have another possible Ba'Ntu connection in terms of its political organization and the title and role of the "king." I have always disliked the European term "king" to apply to African style forms of leadership because I always felt they were inadequate in explaining the relationship of the leader to a community, and the world view of the leader from the community's perspective.

As mentioned before on this yahoogroup, the term primarily associated with the ruler of political Ta-Merri is /nsw bty/. As has been discussed, prior to Roman rule, the term PER AAH was mainly used to describe the "place" of leadership rather than the leader itself (with the exception of Akenaten). It is like saying, "The White House today ordered an attack on Bosnia." The physical location represents metaphorically the government in total.

To try and see how the Mdw Ntr was pronounced, many scholars turn to the Greek, Coptic and Cuneiform writings. After peeping a 2002 discussion on the AEgyptian-L@rosta.org.uk list serve between James P. Allen and Jerome Colburn, some of the dialogue inspired me to revisit the Kongo form of governance in relation to the most important political institution in Ba'Ntu society [the Mbongi] and the name of its leadership and role in society.

I have argued over the past few weeks that to understand key elements of Ancient Ta-Merrian culture and political structure, one must look to the living systems of Africa for traces of cultural norms still practiced by the indigenous people: especially amongst the Ba'Ntu speakers. I will attempt to make a connection between the name of the political leader of Ba'Ntu society and the name of the leader of Ta-Merrian society to see if the perceived connection is solid.

In the Kongo society, as well as all indigenous Ba'Ntu societies in Africa, they make political decisions and gather to discuss matters in an "open hut" called an Mbongi. Mbongi comes from the root `bonga' which means to take, to possess, to bear and to accept. The term `bongi' means "the one who takes" (responsibilities, etc.). An Mbongi is a public-open-house, institution of debates and of conceptualization, and the community parliament, the popular court of justice.

Here is where all important decisions are made for the society by its wisest members. The Mbongi possesses its own leaders and their assistants (Mu bonga) to take care of the community's and country's diverse responsibilities. This is where the elders call to discuss things and make decisions. The leadership organization is as follows:

1. Mfuma-mbongi (the chief of the Mbongi) ? could be considered the president of the Mbongi.
2. Landi kia Mfuma-mbongi ? this is the second in command and really the assistant of the chief of the Mbongi. He is an adjunct and assist in case of death or disease of the Mfuma-mbongi.
3. Mfumu-dikanda (the chief of the extended family) ? He is the chief of his lineage and the Mbongi (the head of the nation as a whole). He and his assistant are responsible for everyone in the Kanda (the society).

The name most important name for our discussion is the latter, the Mfumu-dikanda. What is so striking about this position is its philosophical similarities to how the leader in Ta-Merrian society was viewed. The Mfumu-dikanda is the intermediary, N'kambakani, between the government of the Mbongi and his own lineage, but also between his lineage in the physical or upper world and the ancestors' spiritualized community. In Africa, your lineage not only consists of your direct blood lineage, but the lineages of the society at large. So when you hear lineage, think country (the collective lineage). So just like a Nsw Bty was a representative of "God" and was an intermediary between God, the ancestors and the community, the same is viewed here with the Mfumu-dikanda. Also what is key in this discussion is the concept that he is the chief of "the extended family" ? the nation. This we will revisit later.

Now, going back to the discussion of James P Allen, in his dialogue about the value in the word /itn/, he mentions the following concerning his reservations, while also giving some proposals for the term Nsw Bty in the Cuneiform (rendered "in-si-ib-ia"). He goes on to state:

- > Re hamunzu (from Dahamunzu = tA-Hjmt-nswt "the
- > queen"), this may not be an
- > exception to the general rule. Both this and
- > cuneiform insibia = nswt-bjt
- > seem to reflect an Egyptian *insi, with an
- > initial vowel. In the second
- > case, however, Fecht (Wortakzent und
- > Silbenstruktur, #72) has argued that
- > the stress was on the second syllable
- > (*insi'bya), so that the first may
- > simply represent an unstressed "vocalic" n
- > (*nsi'bya) ? (emphasis mine)

What is important in this discussion is what I have bolded. Now in conventional Egyptology the term Nsw Bty means "King of upper and lower Egypt." This is taken from the fact that the Nsw (sedge plant) is associated with the south, while the alleged "bee" (more a wasp to me) is associated with the north.

What I am proposing is that the term Nsw Bty really means "Chief of the extended family" just like the Mfumu-dikanda mentioned above. In the KiKongo language, the word NSI means "land" or "country." I am proposing that word /nsw/ is really "nsi" like James P Allen was explaining above. It seems to be the same structure as in the Bantu language as the hedge plant has the phonetic value of /sw/ and in Bantu languages the /n/ is a nominal prefix (affixed to class stems) or an adjectival prefix (affixed to variable class stems).

I am also proposing that the term /bty/ is really the Ba'Ntu word "buta" which means "family." So I am proposing as the name Nsi Buta, or roughly translated "chief of the extended family or country." In most cases I think that the .t's are only written and not stressed in speech (like the ~~in~~ the French Les)

~~I also think that the Kmtjw had the political structure of the Ba'Ntu partly because the Mfumu-dikanda, and all African leaders of the time, did not have palaces like you find in Europe. You have no record of where the actual Nsw Bty lived. To me, they were amongst the people. One might ask, "well why do we have these mighty temples and pyramids, but no palace for the 'king'?" To me it's no different than all of our monies going towards large churches and administrative buildings, but not so much on our own dwellings (which won't last as long as the Churches or Government buildings).~~

~~I think in general we have wrong how things were structured in ancient Ta Merri and we must look to the living systems of Africa for a better idea. Diop has already done some comparison similar to this in Civilization or Barbarism. What do you think?~~

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23497|2007-10-25 01:15:05|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

It is now. It appears that we don't really know the origins of Latin. So it could, in fact, have its origins in Kemet - or some of its words, at least.

***

Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is based on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet. In the 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian peninsula by the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River Tiber, where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early years Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European Etruscan language<< of northern Italy.***

Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely of Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin in grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.

***

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka" wrote:

>

> Peter is a Latin name, not Jewish. It's the Latin equivalent of > Kefas.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > Maybe, maybe not. There is a theory that the name Peter, a judeo-> > christian biblical character and common jewish name comes from

Ptah.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter(Ptah) and
> the

> > books deals with alchemy(al-cham)?

> > >

> > > matt mercer wrote: This goes along with my > > idea that introducing ancient language study into primary

education

> > might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the > > cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through > > institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori > > system is designed to encourage students to express their own > stages

> > of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient language > > study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of > > contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would > lend
> > a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore > > language and their own expression from a formative base that is not > > grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and > > arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination

and > > cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this body

> of

> > curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if > > > Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children, it > > might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph-Tocharian might > be
> > a good place to start.
> > > I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of

just

> > etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic
> > languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in > > particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology
> and
> > phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, > > taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the

alphabets

> > is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions from
> > alphabet to alphabet.
> > > Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a flag

> > and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting

the

> > ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built
> from > > its fruits.....out of all the bickering that goes on about

> the >> religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good time >> time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are
> all >> able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet.

If

>> Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at will,
>> reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over >> inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships that >> support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the >> father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup
> that >> is more nurturing than any of us dreamed.....
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> matt
>>>
>>>
>>> matt
>>>
>>>
>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: >>and that a child who has

>> not seen or experienced the Traumas of >>> adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives

>>> that are going through those things...<<
>>>
>>> Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her > best >>> to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed

to.

>>> Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively.

It's

>>> the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential >>> appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't > realize >>> or understand the child's potential. Children are just little
>> people

> > > with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.

> > > HTP,

> > > Mahari

> > >

> > > --- In Ta.Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

> > > >

> > > > I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying

to > > > express more about the resiliency of children and that they are > > > constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders

> > when

> > > they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this > reaching > > > out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking

> > to > > > learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult"

> world

> > is > > > so far above children, while say in the jungles of south

america,

> > > every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that

> are > > > faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting

> > > that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are

> > more

> > > of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and > that

> > a > > > child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood

is > > > more apt to help support those people in their lives that are > going > > > through those things...

> > > >

> > > > Matt

>>>>
>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>>> Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually >>>> traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are > extremely >>>> resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of
> the >>>> environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he > sees >>>> this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he >>> thinks
>>>> the world is and how he interprets it.
>>>> HTP,
>>>> Mahari
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In
> the
>>>> Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white >>>> integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the > back
>>>> seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older > lady, "retired",
>>> was >>>> passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both

>>> his >>>> hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman >>>> through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his > face
>>> was
>>>> like all children who go through turmoil, like the >>>> moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of > asking
>>> his >>>> grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....
>>>>>
>>>>> matt
>>>>>
>>>>> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
>>>>>
>>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I >>>> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very >>>> complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing

>>>> results
>>>>> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take

> a >>>> lesson
>>>>> from these tests and give more attention and love to our > kids.
>>>> All >>>>> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds

>>>> (which >>>>> are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler

>>> to a >>>>> degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared
>>> about
>>>> and >>>>> uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for.
> The
>>>> brain
>>>>> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs > stimulation
>>> and
>>>>> activity to function at its best.
>>>>> HTP,
>>>>> Mahari
>>>>>
>>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira
>>> wrote:
>>>>>>
>>>>>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place
> for >>>>> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been >>> decrypted.
>>>> The
>>>>> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had

this

> to >>>> say:
>>>>>>

>>>>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept
> not
>>> a >>>> scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in >>> scientific
>>>> fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin
>>> colour
>>>> will be predictive of intelligence."
>>>>>
>>>>> Check out the entire BBC article here:
>>>>> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>
>>>>>
>>>>> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up
>>> which >>>> does not focus on race as so many researchers have done > before.
>>>> There >>>>> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated

with >>>>> parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is >>> obvious

>>>> and
>>>>> the background of most intelligent people seems to too
>>> obviously >>>>> similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have > shown
>>> for >>>>> instance that eldest children are more intelligent than

their

>>>>> younger >>>>> siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another > study
>>> on
>>>>> one-
>>>>> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what >>> accounts
>>>>> for >>>>> the differences in their 20s and older if not environment.

I

>>>>> should
>>>>> say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is >>>>> controversial, but then again isn't it all.
>>>>>>

>>>>> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure

of

>>>> Language

>>>>> and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these

>>> are >>>>> learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they

>>> often

>>>>> intuitive.

>>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

around

>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> _____

>>> Do You Yahoo!?

>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>>>

>>

>

| 23498|2007-10-25 01:24:43|asar_imhotep|Re: Possible origin of the nwt symbol (correct spacing)|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>

>

> I don't think it's a coincidence as it proves again that all African > traditional cultures are relative.

>

> Question:

>

> We know that 'Dua.t' in Kamitic terminology refers to "the > underworld". However, i've come across another definition of it > meaning "land beyond the horizon"? Is this accurate? If so, do you > think this is a reference to it being an "island" or "isle"?

>

>

> Respectfully,

>

> Sharma Men Ra

>

I can't say. I haven't come across that term. And I can't see at this point how looking over the horizon can be associated with an island. So I can't answer that.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23499|2007-10-25 08:25:06|cristofori whitakara|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

is the punic language of the canaanite(phoenicians) an influence on latin? The greek language has shemitic elements within it and that influence may have had one on latin? for example the Cushite word Kentake became Candace in Latin.

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

It is now. It appears that we don't really know the origins of Latin. So it could, in fact, have its origins in Kemet - or some of its words, at least.

***

Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is based on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet. In the 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian peninsula by the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River Tiber, where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early years Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European Etruscan language<< of northern Italy.***

Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely of Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin in grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.

***

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Djehuti Sundaka" wrote:

>

> Peter is a Latin name, not Jewish. It's the Latin equivalent of > Kefas.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > Maybe, maybe not. There is a theory that the name Peter, a judeo-> > christian biblical character and common jewish name comes from Ptah.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter( Ptah) and
> the

> > books deals with alchemy(al-cham) ?

> > >

> > > matt mercer wrote: This goes along with my > > idea that introducing ancient language study into primary

education

> > might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the > > cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through > > institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori > > system is designed to encourage students to express their own > stages
> > of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient language > > study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of > > contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would > lend
> > a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore > > language and their own expression from a formative base that is
not > > grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and > > arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination
and > > cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this body
> of > > curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if > > > Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children, it > > might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph- Tocharian might
> be
> > a good place to start.
> > > I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of
just
> > etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic
> > languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in > > particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology
> and
> > phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, > > taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the
alphabets
> > is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions from
> > alphabet to alphabet.
> > > Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a flag
> > and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting
the > > ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built
> from > > its fruits..... .....out of all the bickering that goes on about
> the > > religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good time > > time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are
> all

>> able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet.

If

>> Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at will,

>> reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over

>> inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships that

>> support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the >> father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup

> that >> is more nurturing than any of us dreamed..... ....

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> matt

>>>

>>>

>>> matt

>>>

>>>

>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: >>and that a child who

has

>> not seen or experienced the Traumas of >>> adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives

>>> that are going through those things...<<

>>>

>>> Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her

> best

>>> to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed
to.

>>> Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively.

It's

>>> the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential >>> appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't > realize

>>> or understand the child's potential. Children are just little

>> people

>>> with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.

>>> HTP,

>>> Mahari

>>>

>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>>>>

>>>> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying
to >>> express more about the resiliency of children and that they are >>> constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders

>> when >>> they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this > reaching >>> out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking
>> to >>> learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult"
> world
>> is >>> so far above children, while say in the jungles of south
america,
>>> every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that
> are >>> faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting >>> that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are
>> more >>> of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and > that
>> a >>> child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood
is >>> more apt to help support those people in their lives that are > going >>> through those things...
>>>>
>>>> Matt
>>>>
>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>>> Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually >>>> traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are > extremely >>>> resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of
> the >>>> environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he > sees >>>> this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he >>> thinks
>>>> the world is and how he interprets it.
>>>> HTP,
>>>> Mahari
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta.Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>>>>>
>>>>> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In
> the
>>>>> Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white >>>>> integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the > back
>>>>> seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older > lady, "retired",
>>>>> was >>>>> passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both
>>>>> his >>>>> hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman >>>>> through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his > face
>>>>> was
>>>>> like all children who go through turmoil, like the >>>>> moon..... .....his stare as he had this conversation of > asking
>>>>> his >>>>> grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....
>>>>>>
>>>>>> matt
>>>>>>
>>>>>> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
>>>>>>
>>>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I >>>>>> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very >>>>>> complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing
>>>>>> results
>>>>>> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take
> a >>>>>> lesson
>>>>>> from these tests and give more attention and love to our > kids.
>>>>>> All >>>>>> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds
>>>>>> (which >>>>>> are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler
>>>>>> to a >>>>>> degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared
>>>>>> about

>>>> and >>>> uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for.
> The
>>>> brain
>>>> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs > stimulation
>>> and
>>>> activity to function at its best.
>>>> HTP,
>>>> Mahari
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Agola Kisira
>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place
> for >>>>> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been >>> decrypted.
>>>> The
>>>>> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this
> to >>>> say:
>>>>>
>>>>>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept
> not
>>> a >>>>> scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in >>> scientific
>>>>> fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin
>>> colour
>>>>> will be predictive of intelligence. "
>>>>>
>>>>>> Check out the entire BBC article here:
>>>>> http://news.bbc.co.uk/ 2/hi/science/ nature/7052416. stm
>>>>>
>>>>>> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up
>>> which >>>>> does not focus on race as so many researchers have done > before.
>>>> There
>>>>> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated
with >>>>> parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is >>> obvious
>>>> and

>>>> the background of most intelligent people seems to too
>>> obviously >>>> simmilar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have > shown
>>> for >>>> instance that eldest children are more intelligent than
their >>>> younger >>>> siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another > study
>>> on
>>>> one-
>>>> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what >>> accounts
>>>> for
>>>>> the differences in their 20s and older if not environment.

I

>>>> should >>>>> say for complteness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is >>>>> controversial, but then again isnt it all.
>>>>>>
>>>>>> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure
of
>>>> Language
>>>>> and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these
>>> are >>>>> learned skills and are certainly not instictive nor are they >>> often >>>>> intuitive.

>>>>>>

>>>>>>

>>>>>>

>>>>>>

>>>>>>

>>>>>>

>>>>>>

>>>>>> _____
>>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?

>>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection

> around

>>>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>>>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>
>>>>
>>>> _____
>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
around
>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> _____
>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> _____
>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>
>>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23500|2007-10-25 11:31:52|A.E.|New Egyptology finds?|

Attachments :

---

The Cairo Caper

On a documentary about cons/thieves around the world that made great profit out of their criminal activities, I recorded this transcript.. "Master Minds"

Master Minds, TV detective documentary Wed Oct 24 04:28:00 2007

Narrator: The press called him "Indiana Jones," a daring tomb raider who looted ancient artifacts from Egypt.

He obviously recognized that there was a potential to make a huge income from smuggling these antiquities into the west and selling them. His accomplices idolized him as a master of deception. The idea behind the smuggling operation is a fantastic, very, very clever idea. It's brilliant. He was a top player in a dangerous game.

Parry

[A] I was immensely proud of what I was doing. It's a game which requires wit and skill and very good nerves.

For 10 years, he eluded authorities on two continents and made millions. Find out how he did it -- next, on "masterminds." Beneath the sands of Egypt lie the remains of 5,000 years of human history. In the early '90s, there was an upsurge in the smuggling of these ancient artifacts. Property was being excavated from the ground and then suddenly turning up in the west and being sold for huge profits.

In an effort to protect their priceless cultural heritage, Egyptian authorities cracked down. Security was dramatically increased. The risks are considerable. Egyptian prisons are not a place that you want to spend a great deal of time in.

But in London, the center of the illegal-antiquities trade, British authorities noticed a flood of illicit goods still coming onto the Market. Various people across the western world were prepared to pay bigger and bigger money. Presuming that you have the expertise, you can make millions of pounds per year.

Police feared someone had found a way to beat the system. This British smuggler was manipulating the whole system for financial gain. He exploits the antiquity Market, but he exploits it brilliantly. Then, in 1993, a 3,000-year-old sculpture of an ancient pharaoh, Amenhotep3 , came onto the London Market.

It was an extremely significant piece. It was a very rare piece.

Smuggler [A] At the height of the gulf war, with security at an all-time high, a master smuggler had found a way to do the impossible. If I had been caught at that time, they'd have killed me.

His most brilliant move was being able to transport it out of Egypt without raising any questions. To get the piece out of the country, he took the shadowy art of smuggling to a level law enforcement had never seen before. Back in England, the statue was transformed from contraband into a legitimate collector's piece and sold for over a million dollars.

He was a mastermind of smuggling antiquities from Egypt.

A lot of the newspapers over here saw me as a sort of Indiana Jones. [A] I saw myself as something very old-fashioned and very traditional, doing something that the English do well -- smuggling with calm nerves and moral courage and a sense of fun -- a sense of humor.

Parry

[A] was a dashing, romantic figure, and one of the most ingenious smugglers of the 20th century. The question is, how did he do it? Parry is one of the 20th century's greatest antiquity smugglers, eluding massive security to escape from Egypt with a million-dollar sculpture. But this mastermind with nerves of steel didn't start out like Indiana Jones. Born into a middle-class family, Parry is accepted into prestigious Cambridge university. He develops an interest in art and antiquities and reinvents himself as an upper-class gentleman.

[a] My family wanted me to get on a train and go into the city and make a lot of money and have a heart attack when I was 50. And I point-blank refused.

He's [A] a complex character. He has almost a heightened sense of honor. He wanted to go into the army but was turned down. He then joined the territorial army -- sort of weekend soldiers and part-timers. Denied the opportunity to pursue a full-time military career, Parry returns to his first love, the past.

[A] Just touching something ancient was a wonderful feeling. You catch a vibration. And I knew that that was what I wanted to do.

After training as an antiquities restorer, he quickly gains an international reputation.

[A] I was the highest-paid restorer in England, probably Europe, but I still could not afford to buy any of these wonderful objects. I would have the most stunning things on my table that I had restored and brought back to life, and then I'd have to give them back. And I realized that a restorer is just a servant.

What Parry wants is to be his own master. He was restoring objects for dealers who were selling them for thousands or even hundreds of thousands of pounds. And I think his head was turned. He obviously recognized that there was a potential to make a huge income from smuggling these antiquities into the west and selling them.

[A] Egypt is the place if you have a passion for antiquities -- 3,000 years of continuous civilization, an enormous number of objects and buildings, and the feeling that, at any time, something wonderful is going to turn up.

Parry

travels to Cairo, under the guise of a researcher. There, he makes contact with a local smuggler. He befriended a chap called Ali Farag, who was the youngest of a large family, all of whom were engaged in smuggling antiquities out of Egypt.

[C] Ali Farag tells Parry about an artifact that has been found at a construction site, but the gulf war is raging, and Parry must proceed with extreme caution.

The country was under full military alert. Foreigners were being arrested if they were seen with Egyptians. [A] I was actually hiding in the boot of the car because there were roadblocks everywhere. Went out to the southern suburbs of Cairo.

A building contractor with connections to the smuggling underworld has unearthed an ancient artifact. Parry realizes he's looking at a 3,000-year-old sculpture that will make him a very rich man, if he can keep his cool.

[A] The Egyptians are the best salesmen in the world. They're psychologically so brilliant.

The high-stakes game begins.

[A] He was looking at me, and I met his eyes and looked away. The last thing I'm gonna do is let this one go, because I've been waiting for 5 years for this.

Parry

is desperate, but so is the contractor. Parry calls his bluff. The Egyptians were panicking. They were desperate for currency.

Now the master dealmaker drives a very hard bargain -- $6,000 cash for a million-dollar piece of history.

[A] I had my first world-class piece. There wasn't any period of feeling, "oh, the world is wonderful. God's on my side." All I realized was, "oh, Christ, how am I gonna get this out?"

Because being caught with the piece could be fatal, he must think fast. His most brilliant move and the move that no one else had identified was the actual disguising of the piece.

[A] And that meant preparing it, which was to make the object look, as much as possible, like a kitsch, a bazaar thing, the sort that idiots buy in the hotel shops all the time. To do this, I had to take a battered antiquity and make it look like a modern complete object, so I had to build up -- make up the things which were missing.

He coats the statue with a gum and applies gold leaf. He polishes the leaf, then paints the sculpture so it looks like a cheap souvenir. He then buys a real souvenir, keeps the receipt, removes the base, and places the sculpture on it.

[A] Having done that, the object looked absolutely ghastly, but it gave us a good chance of getting through. Security was double. There were armed soldiers everywhere. In fact, it was just complete bloody madness for me to do it. And the consequences of getting it wrong would be really, really nasty. I would have been taken to the desert and not come back.

At the airport, security is everywhere. Parry is stopped by the antiquities police.

[A] a guard made me open the suitcase, and he said, "what is this?" I said, "oh, it's a present. Here's the receipt." And I tried to distract him by holding the receipt. And then the bit I dreaded -- he reached into his pocket, and he brought out his bloody keys. Now, Egyptians are very good with keys. They get a key, and they scratch the surface. And I knew that, if he scratched on the face, he would go straight through to the stone, and I'd be bugged. And as he went to scratch, I said, "no, no, not there -- underneath -- much better."

I had to get him down to the base, where I'd prepared an extra inch of plaster just for him to scratch. And he saw the plaster, looked at it, and waved his hand, and wandered off. And thank god I got it right.

Back in England, he sails through customs, but his work is far from complete. First, he must remove the elaborate disguise without damaging the sculpture. Breaking the gilding and plaster is far too risky. But his expert knowledge of chemistry pays off. Before he covered the statue in plaster, he coated it with a protective layer of plastic.

[A] I put it into a bath of acetone, and gradually, gently, everything will float off, leaving the antiquity exactly as I received it in Egypt.

He then took it to the next stage, where he actually changed the eyeline. He added part of the beard to it -- in his own words, "give it a better line so that the collectors would pay more money for it."

But if buyers suspect the piece is stolen, they'll alert police, so he now forges documents to give the statue a convincing history.

[A] To make the labels, I took some Victorian pharmacy labels, cut out the letters, rearranged them, had them printed on a very old stock of paper, and then practiced my copperplate '20s handwriting with ink which I'd chemically faded. And then, having cut out the label, I aged it. I soaked it in tea. I dried it. I wet it. I dried it again. So I had a label that looked thoroughly scratched and ancient.

He glues the label to the back of the sculpture.

[A] It would appear that the object hadn't come from Egypt at all -- had come from an old country collection in England.

Parry

is now ready to strike. Through his network of international antiquities dealers, he sells the sculpture for a million dollars.

[A] Congratulations. I couldn't believe it. It seemed that I'd actually achieved what I'd wanted in one hit.

But this success is just the beginning. And Parry's ambition to be the world's greatest antiquities smuggler will soon threaten to bring him down.

Parry

[A] has made a million dollars smuggling the sculpture of Amenhotep03. Over the next 4 years, he continues to secretly export Egyptian antiquities and reaps a fortune. He indulged himself with his life-style. He had several suits made by his Devon tailor. He bought an extremely expensive sports car.

[A] I made millions of pounds, which was nice. It's nice to be paid for what you love doing.

As soon as the money got bigger, the objects got bigger, and the whole game became more dangerous and more sophisticated. He realized that he needed a mule to carry these pieces out. Parry targets Mark Perry, a local handyman. {Parry is not Perry. Perry is the mule} kind of walked in, and I was sort of awestruck by him. I think he saw that I was gullible in the first place. He knew that, "here's a lad, a young lad, young family -- very short of money." Parry offers {the mule}

Parry

Mark Perry [D] 500 a week, plus all the adventure he can handle.

[D] Somebody comes along to me and says, "you're going over to Egypt, where you're going to stay in a hotel -- all expenses paid -- and I'm gonna pay you for it" -- but I had the chance of adventure. I had the chance of money and getting away from the day-to-day realities of life. I could actually do something.

Parry

soon introduces his protégé to Egypt's smuggling underworld.

[D] We arrived in Cairo, and nothing prepared me for what I was about to feel that day -- just amazing to see. And of course, again, I was awestruck by it all.

[A] I showed Mark what I was doing.

He even trained him in how to camouflage the objects. And then Mark would bring them back to this country.

[A] And I took him through customs once to show him the techniques. And I instructed him very, very carefully what to do if there was any problem.

[D] I did all the dirty donkey work. It was my life on the line. I've carried half a million pounds' worth of antiquity in a bag through the center of Cairo and not even thought anything of it -- didn't even realize what I had. All I was wanting to do was get back for a beer in the bar.

With his mule in place, Parry now hires a more sophisticated partner to help negotiate with the Egyptians.

He makes a deal with

[E] Andrew may, an aristocrat fallen on hard times.

[A] We had a gentleman's understanding that he would only take the smaller pieces that were no longer of any concern to me, and that he would train himself in the Market, and, eventually, maybe, in a decade's time, he would take over for me.

But [E] Andrew may soon turns out to be a problem. The mistake he made with Andrew may was that, having gone to Egypt and seen the huge amounts of money that could be made, Andrew may had begun buying pieces and bringing them out, as well as bringing out Parry's pieces.

[A] He was too greedy and too hungry and too frightened. And he tried, putting it very simply, to rip me off.

The big difference between [A] Parry and [E] Andrew was that Parry had worked with antiquities for many, many years as a restorer. Parry had done his homework. Andrew, in the space of months, tried to pull off the same act and lacked the knowledge.

In Cairo, Andrew buys a collection of rare, ancient Egyptian documents known as "papyrus." But fearing the artifacts are fake, he takes them to the British museum to be authenticated. It was one of the most stupid things that you could possibly have done.

Museum archeologists quickly realized these are artifacts that they had originally discovered and that had been stolen in Egypt. They contact police.

When we were contacted by the British museum -- formed an opinion immediately that it was such a dumb thing to have done that this person couldn't possibly be responsible for the theft and the looting of this material.

When we started to research Andrew may, we found that he was the owner of a manor house in Devon. One of his tenants was Parry [A], somebody who had a large collection of Egyptian material and was working as a restorer.

The police are ready to move against Parry, but when they arrive at his home, he isn't there. They have to break in.

We found Parry's [A] workshop, and it was in the workshop that we found a vast amount of antiquities.

So it was fortuitous or perhaps unfortuitous for Parry that he turned up while we were in his house.

[A] When I got to my front door, I could see that my kitchen window had been smashed. And there was a great, stout man there. And I said to him, "have I been burgled? What's happening?" And he said, "we're the police." And I said, "oh, thank god you're here." And he said, "well, actually, we did that, and we're here to arrest you." And I said, "well, why couldn't you have bloody knocked like anybody else?"

Parry

reacted in a typical Parry way. He put on a superior air -- that he was better than anyone else who might be there. He huffed and puffed. He had a rational explanation for everything that he was doing.

Parry

[A] is arrested on the charge of handling stolen property. His 10-year multimillion-dollar smuggling operation has finally caught up with him, but putting him in prison will prove extremely difficult.

Parry

[A] is arrested but cannot be charged with smuggling because his crimes were committed in Egypt.

And to actually prosecute Parry in this country was not easy. The police are forced to charge him with the lesser crime of handling stolen property. Although he is eventually found guilty, authorities are troubled by the difficulty of bringing him to justice. As a result, new laws are enacted, giving police the power to charge smugglers in their country of residence.

The case itself has redrawn the legal lines for the antiquities Market, the antiquities trade in not just this country, not just in the USA, but for the world.

But to this day, Parry believes he did nothing wrong.

[Parry] I was immensely proud of what I was doing, because having seen what was going on in Egypt, I was aware that, if it weren't for people like me, a lot of those objects would be destroyed.

I've no doubt that he justified his actions to himself through being the modern-day robin hood, saving antiquities for the world. Despite what Parry would like to think of himself, he is and was a criminal.

After serving 3 years of a 6-year sentence, Parry [A] is released. He is currently working again as a restorer and is often consulted by police investigating the illegal-antiquities trade.

-- Captions by vitac -- www.Vitac.Com captions paid for by the courtroom television network

=====

If you ever watched the Antique Road Show, you will see that stuff only 100 .. 200 years can sell for thousands or a couple hundred thousand.

On multiple programs they also show accounts where people bring in forged antiques. Any.. All Egyptology artifacts .. antiques of any kind are to be suspected. Things made of stone or etched in stone are impossible to validate.

Even in this "smuggled piece" , "He then took it to the next stage, where he actually changed the eyeline. He added part of the beard to it -- in his own words, "give it a better line so that the collectors would pay more money for it." (also modified the broken nose).

The discovery of Egyptian artifacts / information is worth hundreds of thousands or millions, directly in cash or in fame that will indirectly put that cash in a faker's pocket. Being "a respected archeologist" is the best way to pass off forgeries.

The broken statue shown in this documentary was a little bigger than a man's hand.

Smuggled, modified to get collectors to pay more money for it.. this little broken piece sold for over 1 million pounds. {British pounds are more than dollars}

This crook made million(S) of pounds in a period of 10 years. He spent 3 years in prison and came out with his millions of pounds still in his pockets.

It is impossible to trust any one when it comes to ancient Egyptian finds. What is really funny is how much of the public believes these people because of their title.. and really funny is when those "Egyptologist" do not even have any physical evidence when they claim to have some new information or evidence about ancient Egypt.

The antique detectives were doing some of the speaking in the documentary. This program will be repeated on the documentary "Master Minds", the title: Cairo Caper.

Why would any one believe any claims unless they at least asked for the evidence? It appears being "an Egyptologist" now means.. no facts needed, it is say because it came out of "an Egyptologist's" vibrating lips.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23501|2007-10-25 17:05:41|Paul Kekai Manansala|Ancient Egyptians used waterways to transport pyramid stones from qu|

Ancient Egyptians used waterways to transport pyramid stones from quarries

By ANI

Thursday October 25, 02:33 PM

Washington, Oct 25 (ANI): Egyptian archaeologists claim to have discovered a canal at the Aswan rock quarry, which they say was used to ferry stone blocks used for constructing the giant pyramids, to the Nile River.

Scientists have for long suspected that workers moved the massive blocks and other artefacts directly to their final destinations over waterways.

The discovery of canals at the Giza pyramids and the Luxor Temple, and ancient artwork showing Egyptians using boats or barges to move large monuments like obelisks and statues, has given further credence to this theory.

But the newfound canal, which has since been filled in, is the first proof that waterways facilitated the transportation of all obelisks, including those at the Luxor and Karnak Temples, originally hewn in the Aswan area.

"What you have is a very strong evidence that they may have loaded these stones in at the quarry ... and as a result not dragging and hauling them over land. It eliminates that land connection," said Richard R. Parizek, a professor of geology at Penn State University who led the scientific tests confirming the canal's existence.

Larger obelisks can weigh more than 50 tons, and a particularly well-known unfinished obelisk at the quarry is thought to weigh more than 1,100 tons. It was the largest such monument ever attempted but was abandoned after latent cracks emerged, revealing a rare glimpse of ancient construction practices.

Salima Ikram, an Egyptologist at the American University of Cairo said, that archaeologists had for long suspected the existence of a canal linking the Nile to the quarry site.

"It very nice to find this real confirmation. If they had just been using rollers and dragging things each time, everything would have been much more time-consuming and far slower," said Ikram.

Archaeologists now believe that workers dragged the large stone monuments onto rafts at a point below the floodwater level, allowing the artefacts to float when the water level rose.

The canal likely filled in with water during the one of the Nile's annual floods, they said.

They said the canal was probably a natural split in the quarry granite, exploited and shaped by workers to make it more functional.

Incidentally, geologists have also found tooling marks along the canal similar to those where obelisks were removed.

The findings were announced at the Second International Conference on Geology of the Tethyr at Cairo University in March and will be published in advance of the next meeting in January, reports National Geographic. (ANI)

| 23502|2007-10-25 17:07:50|Paul Kekai Manansala|Ethiopia starts re-erecting ancient obelisk|

Ethiopia starts re-erecting ancient obelisk

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia

24 October 2007 04:28

Ethiopia has started re-erecting its famed Axum obelisk 30 months after it returned to the country from Italy where it stayed for 70 years, a United Nations expert said on Wednesday.

The UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (Unesco), which is overseeing the operation, said preliminary work to restore the 1 700-year-old obelisk on its original site has been completed.

"At the moment, the obelisk exists in three main pieces but we have prepared the foundations, brought on the necessary equipment and mobilised our labour resources at the site," Unesco expert Sumeko Ohinata said.

"It's a very complex project; we don't want any impacts on other obelisks, so we are working to achieve stability," she added.

The three pieces of the 150-tonne stela are being re-erected at a cost of $4-million, Ohinata said.

"We are aiming to complete the re-erection by the end of September next year, but the entire process will be finalised a few months later," she added.

Italian soldiers carted away the 24m, third-century BC granite funeral stela on the orders of then-dictator Benito Mussolini 70 years ago during his attempt to colonise Ethiopia.

Since then, the obelisk had remained in Italy standing outside the Rome headquarters of the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation until the last of its three pieces arrived in Axum in April 2005.

Axum, founded around 100 BC, was the capital of the Axumite kingdom that flourished as a major trading centre from the fifth century BC to the 10th century AD.

At its height, the kingdom extended across areas in what are today Ethiopia, Eritrea, Sudan, Somalia and Yemen. -- Sapa-AFP

| 23503|2007-10-25 17:20:54|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ptah/Ta and the Creation of Space-Time|

I think we may have hit upon a very important element to determine how the spiritual - perhaps, even scientific - methodology of the Kemau worked. If one assumes that for every expression there is the opposite form of expression one can see that this would likely infuse every aspect of Kemetite life especially for the scientists, the priests, scribes and Per-aas.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

>

> Peace Mahari

>

> I think the more and more people research African languages, the more is > going to be coming out on how to properly pronounce the words. Not only > that, but more so how to interpret the philosophy behind the words.

>

> For instance, going along the path you were going, we know "htp" > graphically is a "flat line," while Ptah/Ta is a rising mound [as if > something was arising from the flat mound].

>

> Ptah means "ever expanding" and land or location. In the beginning

there > was "htp" [peace]. But creation happened when Ptah/Ta rose out of

the > Nun /hTp/. In the kongo this process is called Kala ye Zima (on and off

> /being and non-being).

>

>

> Ptah/Ta and Space-Time

>

> The Theory of Special Relativity was coined by scientist Albert

Einstein

> in a 1905 paper "On the Electrodynamics of moving bodies." This > theory states that observers in an inertial reference frame (in other > words sitting still or idle) which are in uniform motion relative

to one > another, cannot perform any experiment to determine which one of them is > in "absolute motion". The theory postulates that the speed of light > would be the same for both observers. In other words, no matter

where > the observers are located and how they perceive the event, the laws

of

> the universe are going to be the same regardless.

>

> This theory by Einstein later prompted Hermann Minkowski to treat

the 3

> dimensions of space (height, width, length) and the 1 dimension of

time

> as a single construct called the "Space-Time Continuum." This > made space and time inseparable aspects of our reality.

>

> The theory of relativity posits that perception of an event is relative > to your coordinates (location/space) and time of observation of that > event. A social example would posit that how you see the world is based > on the time in which you are living and the particular location or > culture you belong to. Two people observing the same event, often

times

> view those events differently because they are viewing it from two > different perspectives (locations) based on their upbringing and frame

> of reference. Any man or woman in a serious relationship can attest

to > this fact.

>

> Well this concept of relativity and space-time was already talked

about > and understood in ancient Ta-Merry 5000 years before Einstein. All

one > has to do is take a look at the Mdw Ntr (hieroglyphic) writing and pay > attention to the creation myths. The Mn-Nfr theology posits that

the God

> Ptah (or Ta) rose out of the Nun (the ocean of consciousness of the > creator). From this event, creation was able to happen. I am condensing

> this for sake of space, so forgive me.

>

> In Mdw Ntr, you can read words forwards and backwards and they all

mean > something different. The word / Ta / means to create or it could mean

> land. The word / Ta / in reverse is / At / and it means

> "moment." Here we have the fundamentals of space-time and > relativity. Before creation can occur, you need a place to create:

that > would be / Ta / or Ptah rising out of the Nun. At the moment / Ta /

(a > place) was created, time was automatic (its reverse).

>

> When there is total peace /htp/ there is no movement of any kind;

which > also means there is no time. But when Ta formed, it became the space and > the objects (which has height, width and lengths). It's opposite /at/> becomes the time (moment) necessary for the creation process. They

are > inseparable.

>

> In the physical realm, everything has an opposite. So the creation

of

> Hot makes Cold automatic. The concept of Above makes the concept of > Below automatic. One can't exist without the other: the same with > Space-Time. Before you can create anything, you need a place to put your > creation. Time is the measure of two or more events. Creation is an > event (including the creation of the place to create in) and creation

> happens in intervals called time. Here we see the Nile Valley people

> codifying science in myth, 5000 years before Einstein's Theory of > Relativity and Minkowski's Space-Time Continuum.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com> <<http://www.mochasuite.com>>

>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > This just occurred to me. We know how the Kemau loved to "play"

with

> > words. "HTP" backwards is "PTH". I'm not a linguist so perhaps > > someone who is or has more expertise can stop the speculation > > immediately. But since no vowels were used how do we know precisely

> > which vowels might go between the consonants?

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

>

| 23504|2007-10-25 17:32:24|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Possible origin of the nwt symbol (correct spacing)|

>>And I can't see at this point how looking over the horizon can be associated with an island.<<

Well, if you looked westward (which, I think, is generally considered the western horizon) across the Atlantic from Afrika there would be thousands of islands. And increasingly it appears that the Kemau knew about the "New World" as they knew about the rulers of the mountain countries as is evident in their glyph for foreign rulers.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>>

>>

>> I don't think it's a coincidence as it proves again that all >> traditional cultures are relative.

African

>>

>> Question:

>>

>> We know that 'Dua.t' in Kamitic terminology refers to "the >> underworld". However, i've come across another definition of it >> meaning "land beyond the horizon"? Is this accurate? If so, do

you >> think this is a reference to it being an "island" or "isle"?

>>

>>

>> Respectfully,

>>

>> Sharma Men Ra

>>

>

>

> I can't say. I haven't come across that term. And I can't see at

this > point how looking over the horizon can be associated with an island.

> So I can't answer that.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23505|2007-10-25 17:39:04|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

It would require some research there. But it seems quite possible.

It does appear to me that the Phoenicians were a trading merchant people. And trade is the best method of transferring not only goods, financial exchange and culture but words naturally as well.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> is the punic language of the canaanite(phoenicians) an influence on latin? The greek language has shemitic elements within it and that influence may have had one on latin? for example the Cushite word Kentake became Candace in Latin.

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: It is now. It appears that we don't really know the origins of > Latin. So it could, in fact, have its origins in Kemet - or some of > its words, at least.

> ***

> Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is based > on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet. In the > 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian peninsula by > the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River Tiber,

> where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early years

> Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European Etruscan

> language<< of northern Italy.***

>

> Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely of > Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman

> Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin in > grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.

> ***

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> wrote:

> >
> > Peter is a Latin name, not Jewish. It's the Latin equivalent of > > Kefas.
> >
> > Djehuti Sundaka
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
> > >
> > > Maybe, maybe not. There is a theory that the name Peter, a judeo-

> > > christian biblical character and common jewish name comes from > > > Ptah.
> > > HTP,
> > > Mahari
> > >
> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > > this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter(Ptah)

and
> > the
> > > books deals with alchemy(al-cham)?
> > > >
> > > > matt mercer wrote: This goes along with my > > > idea that introducing ancient language study into primary
> > > education
> > > might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the > > > cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through > > > institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the

Montessori
> > > system is designed to encourage students to express their own
> > > stages
> > > of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient

language
> > > study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of > > > contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would > > > lend > > > a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore

> > > language and their own expression from a formative base that is
> not > > > grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and > > > arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination
> and > > > cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this > body
> > of > > > curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if > > > > Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children,

it > > > might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph-Tocharian might

> > be

> > > a good place to start.

> > > > I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of
> just

> > > etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic

> > > languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in > > > particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology

> > and

> > > phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology,

> > > taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the

> alphabets

> > > is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions

from

> > > alphabet to alphabet.

> > > > Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a

> flag

> > > and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting

> the

> > > ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built

> > from > > > its fruits.....out of all the bickering that goes on

about

> > the > > > religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good

time

> > > time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we

are

> > all

> > > able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet.

> If

> > > Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at

will,

> > > reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over > > > inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships

that

> > > support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the > > > father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup

> > that > > > is more nurturing than any of us dreamed.....

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > matt

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > matt

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > Mahari Mengistu wrote: >>and that a child who

> has

> > > not seen or experienced the Traumas of > > > > adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their > lives

> > > > that are going through those things...<<

> > > >

> > > > Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her

> > best

> > > > to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed

> to.

> > > > Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively.

> It's

> > > > the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential

> > > > appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't > > realize

> > > > or understand the child's potential. Children are just little

>>> people
>>>> with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly > directed.
>>>> HTP,
>>>> Mahari
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying
> to >>>> express more about the resiliency of children and that they

are >>>> constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their > elders

>>> when >>>> they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this >> reaching >>>> out is what I am interested in because it is like they are > asking
>>> to >>>> learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult"
>> world
>>> is >>>> so far above children, while say in the jungles of south
> america,
>>>> every child is taught the "real" life and death situations

that

>> are >>>> faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am > suggesting >>>> that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong

are

>>> more
>>>> of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world,

and

>> that
>>> a >>>> child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood

> is >>>> more apt to help support those people in their lives that are > > going > > > through those things...

> > > >
> > > > Matt
> > > >
> > > > Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> > > > Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually > > > > traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are > > extremely > > > > resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense

of
> > the > > > > environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he > > sees > > > > this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what

he > > > > thinks
> > > > the world is and how he interprets it.
> > > > HTP,
> > > > Mahari
> > > >
> > > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer

wrote:
> > > > >
> > > > > I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work,

In
> > the
> > > > Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white > > > > integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in

the > > back
> > > > seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older
> > lady, "retired",
> > > > was > > > > passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put > both
> > > > his > > > > hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old

woman

>>>> through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his >> face

>>>> was

>>>>> like all children who go through turmoil, like the >>>>> moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of

>> asking

>>>> his >>>>> grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....

>>>>>>

>>>>>> matt

>>>>>>

>>>>>> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?

>>>>>>

>>>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I >>>>>> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a > very >>>>>> complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing

>>>>> results

>>>>>> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to > take

>> a

>>>>> lesson

>>>>>> from these tests and give more attention and love to our >> kids.

>>>>>> All

>>>>>>> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own

> worlds

>>>>>> (which >>>>>>> are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their

> toddler

>>>>> to a >>>>>>> degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling

uncared

>>>> about

>>>>>> and

>>>>>>> uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared

for.

>> The
>>>>> brain
>>>>> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs >> stimulation
>>>> and
>>>>> activity to function at its best.
>>>>> HTP,
>>>>> Mahari
>>>>>
>>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira

>>>> wrote:
>>>>>>
>>>>>>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place

>> for >>>>> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been >>>> decrypted.
>>>>> The
>>>>>> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had > this
>> to >>>>> say:
>>>>>>
>>>>>>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept

>> not
>>>> a >>>>>> scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in >>>>> scientific >>>>>> fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin

>>>> colour
>>>>>> will be predictive of intelligence."
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>> Check out the entire BBC article here:
>>>>>>> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened

up

>>>> which >>>>> does not focus on race as so many researchers have done
>> before.
>>>>> There
>>>>> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated
> with >>>>> parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is >>>> obvious
>>>>> and
>>>>> the background of most intelligent people seems to too
>>>> obviously >>>>> similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have >> shown
>>>> for >>>>> instance that eldest children are more intelligent than
> their
>>>>> younger >>>>> siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another >> study
>>>> on
>>>>> one-
>>>>> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what >>>> accounts
>>>>> for >>>>> the differences in their 20s and older if not environment.

> I
>>>>> should
>>>>> say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is >>>>> controversial, but then again isn't it all.
>>>>>>
>>>>>> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure
> of
>>>>> Language
>>>>> and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that > these
>>>> are >>>>> learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are > they
>>>> often >>>>> intuitive.
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>

>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> _____
>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
>> around
>>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> _____
>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
> around
>>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> _____
>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection

around
>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> _____
>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection

around
>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>>
>>>>
>>
>
>
>
>
>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>
| 23506|2007-10-25 22:06:07|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|
The geographic origins of Latin in the PIE homeland are by no means unknown.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>
> It is now. It appears that we don't really know the origins of > Latin. So it could, in fact, have its origins in Kemet - or some
of
> its words, at least.
> ***
> Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is based > on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet. In the > 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian peninsula by > the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River Tiber,
> where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early years
> Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European Etruscan > language<< of northern Italy.***
>
> Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely of > Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman > Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin in > grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.
> ***
> HTP,
> Mahari

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"
> wrote:

>>
>> Peter is a Latin name, not Jewish. It's the Latin equivalent of >> Kefas.
>>
>> Djehuti Sundaka

>>
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>>>

>>> Maybe, maybe not. There is a theory that the name Peter, a judeo-
>>> christian biblical character and common jewish name comes from > Ptah.
>>> HTP,
>>> Mahari
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter(Ptah)
and
>> the >>> books deals with alchemy(al-cham)?
>>>>
>>>> matt mercer wrote: This goes along with my >>> idea that introducing ancient language study into primary > education
>>> might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the >>> cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through >>> institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori
>>> system is designed to encourage students to express their own >> stages
>>> of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient
language
>>> study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of >>> contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would >> lend
>>> a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore >>> language and their own expression from a formative base that is
> not >>> grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and >>> arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination
> and >>> cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this > body
>> of >>> curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if >>>> Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children,
it >>> might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph-Tocharian might
>> be

>>> a good place to start.
>>>> I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of
> just
>>> etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic
>>> languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in >>> particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology
>> and
>>> phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, >>> taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the
> alphabets
>>> is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions
from
>>> alphabet to alphabet.
>>>> Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a > flag
>>> and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting
> the >>> ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built
>> from >>> its fruits.....out of all the bickering that goes on
about
>> the >>> religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good
time
>>> time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are
>> all >>> able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet.
> If >>> Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at
will,
>>> reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over >>> inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships
that >>> support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the >>> father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup
>> that >>> is more nurturing than any of us dreamed.....
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> matt

>>>>
>>>>
>>>> matt
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: >>>and that a child who
> has
>>> not seen or experienced the Traumas of >>>> adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their > lives
>>>> that are going through those things...<<
>>>>
>>>> Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her >> best
>>>> to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed
> to.
>>>> Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively.
> It's
>>>> the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential >>>> appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't >> realize
>>>> or understand the child's potential. Children are just little
>>> people
>>>> with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly > directed.
>>>> HTP,
>>>> Mahari
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying
> to >>>>> express more about the resiliency of children and that they
> are >>>>> constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their > elders
>>> when >>>> they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this >> reaching >>>> out is what I am interested in because it is like they are > asking
>>> to >>>> learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult"
>> world
>>> is >>>> so far above children, while say in the jungles of south

> america,
>>>> every child is taught the "real" life and death situations
that
>> are >>>> faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am > suggesting >>>> that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong
are
>>> more >>>> of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world,
and
>> that
>>>> a >>>> child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood
> is >>>> more apt to help support those people in their lives that are >> going >>>> through those things...
>>>>>
>>>>> Matt
>>>>>
>>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>>>>> Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually >>>>> traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are >> extremely >>>>> resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense
of
>> the >>>>> environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he >> sees >>>>> this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what
he >>>>> thinks
>>>>> the world is and how he interprets it.
>>>>> HTP,
>>>>> Mahari
>>>>>
>>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer
wrote:
>>>>>>
>>>>>> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work,
In
>> the
>>>>> Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white >>>>> integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in

the
>> back
>>>>> seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older >> lady, "retired",
>>>>> was >>>>> passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put > both
>>>>> his >>>>> hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old
woman >>>>> through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his >> face
>>>>> was
>>>>> like all children who go through turmoil, like the >>>>> moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of >> asking
>>>>> his >>>>> grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....
>>>>>>
>>>>>> matt
>>>>>>
>>>>>> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
>>>>>>
>>>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I >>>>>> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a > very >>>>>> complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing
>>>>>> results
>>>>>> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to > take
>> a >>>>>> lesson
>>>>>> from these tests and give more attention and love to our >> kids.
>>>>>> All >>>>>> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own > worlds
>>>>>> (which >>>>>> are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their > toddler
>>>>>> to a >>>>>>> degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling

uncared

>>> about

>>>> and

>>>>> uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for.

>> The

>>>> brain

>>>>> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs

>> stimulation

>>>> and

>>>>> activity to function at its best.

>>>>> HTP,

>>>>> Mahari

>>>>>

>>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira

>>>> wrote:

>>>>>>

>>>>>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place

>> for

>>>>> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been

>>>> decrypted.

>>>>> The

>>>>>> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had

> this

>> to >>>>> say:

>>>>>>

>>>>>>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept

>> not

>>>> a

>>>>>> scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in

>>>> scientific

>>>>>> fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin

>>>> colour

>>>>>> will be predictive of intelligence."

>>>>>>>

>>>>>>> Check out the entire BBC article here:

>>>>>>> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

>>>>>>>

>>>>>>>> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up

>>>> which

>>>>> does not focus on race as so many researchers have done >> before.
>>>>> There
>>>>> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated
> with >>>>> parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is >>>> obvious
>>>>> and
>>>>> the background of most intelligent people seems to too
>>>> obviously >>>>> similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have >> shown
>>>> for >>>>> instance that eldest children are more intelligent than
> their
>>>>> younger >>>>> siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another >> study
>>>> on
>>>>> one-
>>>>> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what >>>> accounts
>>>>> for
>>>>> the differences in their 20s and older if not environment.
> I
>>>>> should
>>>>> say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is >>>>> controversial, but then again isn't it all.
>>>>>>
>>>>>> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure
> of
>>>>> Language
>>>>>> and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that > these
>>>> are >>>>>> learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are > they
>>>> often >>>>>> intuitive.
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>

>>>>>
>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
>> around
>>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
> around
>>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
around
>>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?

>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
around
>>>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>>>>>
>>>
>>
>

| 23507|2007-10-26 08:36:42|cristofori whitakara|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|
another possible way is through war. hannibal fought many battles with the romans and he spoke a shemitic language also. doesn't hanni-bal mean lover of baal?

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

It would require some research there. But it seems quite possible.
It does appear to me that the Phoenicians were a trading merchant people. And trade is the best method of transferring not only goods, financial exchange and culture but words naturally as well.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> is the punice language of the canaanite(phoenicians) an influence on latin? The greek language has shemitic elements within it and that influence may have had one on latin? for example the Cushite word Kentake became Candace in Latin.

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: It is now. It appears that we don't really know the origins of > Latin. So it could, in fact, have its origins in Kemet - or some of its words, at least.

> ***

> Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is based on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet. In the 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian peninsula by the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River Tiber, where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early years Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European Etruscan language<< of northern Italy.***

>

> Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely of Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin in grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.

> ***

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> wrote:

> >

> > Peter is a Latin name, not Jewish. It's the Latin equivalent of Kefas.

> >

> > Djehuti Sundaka

> >

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> > >

> > > Maybe, maybe not. There is a theory that the name Peter, a judeo-

>>> christian biblical character and common jewish name comes from > Ptah.

>>> HTP,

>>> Mahari

>>>

>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara

>>> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter( Ptah)
and

>> the

>>> books deals with alchemy(al-cham) ?

>>>>

>>>> matt mercer wrote: This goes along with my

>>> idea that introducing ancient language study into primary
> education

>>> might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the

>>> cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through >>> institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the

Montessori

>>> system is designed to encourage students to express their own

>> stages

>>> of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient
language

>>> study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of >>> contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would >> lend

>>> a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore

>>> language and their own expression from a formative base that is

> not

>>> grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and >>> arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination

> and >>> cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this > body

>> of

>>> curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if

>>>> Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children,
it >>> might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph- Tocharian might

>> be

>>> a good place to start.

>>>> I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of

> just
> > etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic
> > > languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in > > > particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology
> > and
> > > phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, > > > taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the
> alphabets
> > > is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions
from
> > > alphabet to alphabet.
> > > > Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a > flag
> > > and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting
> the > > > ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built
> > from > > > its fruits..... .....out of all the bickering that goes on about
> > the > > > religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good
time
> > > time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are
> > all > > > able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet.
> If > > > Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at
will,
> > > reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over > > > inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships
that > > > support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the > > > father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup
> > that > > > is more nurturing than any of us dreamed..... ....
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > matt
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > matt

>>>>
>>>>
>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: >>and that a child who
> has
>>> not seen or experienced the Traumas of >>>> adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their > lives
>>>> that are going through those things...<<
>>>>
>>>> Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her >> best
>>>> to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed
> to.
>>>> Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively.
> It's
>>>> the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential >>>> appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't >> realize
>>>> or understand the child's potential. Children are just little
>>> people
>>>> with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly > directed.
>>>> HTP,
>>>> Mahari
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, matt mercer wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying
> to >>>>> express more about the resiliency of children and that they
are >>>>> constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their > elders
>>> when >>>>> they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this >> reaching >>>>> out is what I am interested in because it is like they are > asking
>>> to >>>>> learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult"
>> world
>>> is >>>>> so far above children, while say in the jungles of south
> america,
>>>>> every child is taught the "real" life and death situations
that

> > are > > > > faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am > suggesting > > > > that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong
are
> > > more > > > > of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world,
and
> > that
> > > a > > > > child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood
> is > > > > more apt to help support those people in their lives that are > > going > > > > through those things...
> > > > >
> > > > > Matt
> > > > >
> > > > > Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> > > > Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually > > > > traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are > > extremely > > > > resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense
of
> > the > > > > environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he > > sees > > > > this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what
he > > > > thinks
> > > > the world is and how he interprets it.
> > > > HTP,
> > > > Mahari
> > > >
> > > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, matt mercer
wrote:
> > > > >
> > > > > I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work,
In
> > the
> > > > Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white > > > > integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in
the
> > back

>>>> seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older
>> lady, "retired",
>>>> was >>>> passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put > both
>>>> his >>>> hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old
woman
>>>> through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his >> face
>>>> was
>>>> like all children who go through turmoil, like the >>>> moon..... .....his stare as he had this conversation of >> asking
>>>> his >>>> grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....
>>>>>
>>>>> matt
>>>>>
>>>>> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
>>>>>
>>>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I >>>>> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a > very >>>>> complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing
>>>>> results
>>>>> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to > take
>> a >>>>> lesson
>>>>> from these tests and give more attention and love to our >> kids.
>>>>> All >>>>> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own > worlds
>>>>> (which >>>>> are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their > toddler
>>>> to a >>>>> degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared
>>>> about
>>>>> and

>>>>> uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for.

>> The

>>>>> brain

>>>>> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs

>> stimulation

>>>> and

>>>>> activity to function at its best.

>>>>> HTP,

>>>>> Mahari

>>>>>

>>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira

>>>> wrote:

>>>>>>

>>>>>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place

>> for

>>>>> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been

>>>> decrypted.

>>>>> The

>>>>> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had

> this

>> to >>>>> say:

>>>>>>

>>>>>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept

>> not

>>>>> a

>>>>>> scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in

>>>>> scientific

>>>>>> fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin

>>>>> colour

>>>>>> will be predictive of intelligence. "

>>>>>>>

>>>>>>> Check out the entire BBC article here:

>>>>>>> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

>>>>>>>

>>>>>>> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up

>>>>> which

>>>>>> does not focus on race as so many researchers have done

>> before.

>>>>> There

>>>>> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated
> with >>>>> parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is >>>> obvious
>>>> and
>>>>> the background of most intelligent people seems to too
>>>> obviously >>>>> similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have >> shown
>>>> for >>>>> instance that eldest children are more intelligent than
> their
>>>>> younger >>>>> siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another >> study
>>>> on
>>>>> one-
>>>>> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what >>>> accounts
>>>>> for
>>>>> the differences in their 20s and older if not environment.
> I
>>>>> should
>>>>> say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is >>>>> controversial, but then again isn't it all.
>>>>>>
>>>>>>> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure
> of
>>>>> Language
>>>>>> and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that > these
>>>> are >>>>>> learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are > they
>>>> often >>>>>> intuitive.
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>> _____
>>>>>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>>>>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection

> > around
> > > > > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> > > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > _____
> > > > Do You Yahoo!?
> > > > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
> around
> > > > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > _____
> > > > Do You Yahoo!?
> > > > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
around
> > > > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > _____
> > > > Do You Yahoo!?
> > > > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
around
> > > > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> > > >
> > >
> >
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23508|2007-10-26 10:43:44|asar_imhotep|Re: Possible origin of the Dua.t in Proto-Bantu|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

>>>And I can't see at this > point how looking over the horizon can be associated with an island.<<

>

> Well, if you looked westward (which, I think, is generally considered > the western horizon) across the Atlantic from Afrika there would be > thousands of islands. And increasingly it appears that the Kemau > knew about the "New World" as they knew about the rulers of the > mountain countries as is evident in their glyph for foreign rulers.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

The only philosophical justification I could think of, concerning islands being associated in the dUa.t is more so in relation to the concept of the "Nun" being a large ocean (of unformed matter, consciousness, etc.) and for any isolated center of activity in this realm, the dUa.t, it would seem (if we could possibly picture it) like an island in this vast ocean of consciousness (unformed matter).

Their representation of spiritual concepts comes from their empirical observations of nature. This relationship of island and ocean is the only thing I can think of that would explain the common associations with the dUa.t and islands in relation to the pro-bantu word /dUa/ meaning island (or isolated area amongst a greater vastness).

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23509|2007-10-26 11:04:41|asar_imhotep|Re: Ptah/Ta and the Creation of Space-Time|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I think we may have hit upon a very important element to determine > how the spiritual - perhaps, even scientific - methodology of the > Kemau worked. If one assumes that for every expression there is the > opposite form of expression one can see that this would likely infuse > every aspect of Kemetite life especially for the scientists, the > priests, scribes and Per-aas.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

Two Kemetic Proverbs come to mind that should help us in understanding their philosophy and science:

1. One foot isn't enough to walk with.
  2. A phenomenon always arises from the interaction of complementaries.
- If you want something look for the complement that will elicit it. Set causes Horus. Horus redeems Set.

Another proverb that keeps me grounded is:

1. Popular beliefs on essential matters must be examined in order to discover the original thought.

For me this means to examine the cosmology of the people. In their cosmology lies the secret to their orientation of understanding. In African societies their cosmology shapes the people's purpose, political organization and how they approach scientific phenomena. It is an inseparable component for addressing their humanness.

(1)Gerald Massey, Ancient Egypt the Light of the World, Volume I, page 438.

(2)Ihsa Schwaller de Lubicz, Her-Bak: The Living Face of Ancient Egypt.

(3)Ihsa Schwaller de Lubicz, Her-Bak: Egyptian Initiate.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23510|2007-10-26 11:36:34|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is based > on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet. In the > 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian peninsula by > the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River Tiber,

> where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early years
> Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European Etruscan > language<< of northern Italy.***

>

> Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely of > Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman > Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin in > grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.

> ***

I got the above info from Wikipedia - not that it is the last word - but what is Latin's geographic origin. However, from my perspective, any eurocentric explanation is in doubt.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

wrote:

>

> The geographic origins of Latin in the PIE homeland are by no means > unknown.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

| 23511|2007-10-26 11:57:41|Alex van Deelen|Scientist's Study Of Brain Genes Sparks a Backlash|

Here we go again. They are trying to contaminate the good work on the genome project, with pre-existing beliefs of what Black people did or did not do in history.

They take a weak correlation (brain size and a specific gene) and weave that into the rise of civilisations.

And then claim victim status and talk of 'intellectual police' when people call them out on it.

Alex

http://online.wsj.com/public/article/SB115040765329081636-T5DQ4jvnwqOdVvsP\_XSVG\_lvgik\_20060628.html?mod=blogs

Scientist's Study Of Brain Genes Sparks a Backlash
Dr. Lahn Connects Evolution In Some Groups to IQ; Debate on Race and DNA 'Speculating Is Dangerous' By ANTONIO REGALADO
June 16, 2006

CHICAGO -- Last September, Bruce Lahn, a professor of human genetics at the University of Chicago, stood before a packed lecture hall and reported the results of a new DNA analysis: He had found signs of recent evolution in the brains of some people, but not of others.

It was a triumphant moment for the young scientist. He was up for tenure and his research was being featured in back-to-back articles in the country's most prestigious science journal. Yet today, Dr. Lahn says he is moving away from the research. "It's getting too controversial," he says.

Dr. Lahn had touched a raw nerve in science: race and intelligence.

What Dr. Lahn told his audience was that genetic changes over the past several thousand years might be linked to brain size and intelligence. He flashed maps that showed the changes had taken hold and spread widely in Europe, Asia and the Americas, but weren't common in sub-Saharan Africa.

Web sites and magazines promoting white "racialism" quickly seized on Dr. Lahn's suggestive scientific snapshot. One magazine that blames black and Hispanic people for social ills hailed his discovery as "the moment the antiracists and egalitarians have dreaded."

Dr. Lahn has drawn sharp fire from other leading genetics researchers. They say the genetic differences he found may not signify any recent evolution -- and even if they do, it is too big a leap to suggest any link to intelligence. "This is not the place you want to report a weak association that might or might not stand up," says Francis Collins, director of the genome program at the National Institutes of Health.

Several scientific groups have set out to disprove or challenge Dr. Lahn's discoveries. His own university now says it is abandoning a patent application it filed to cover a DNA-based intelligence test that drew on his work.

As scientific tools for probing genes become increasingly powerful, research into human differences has exploded. Most of the time, scientists are looking for clues about the causes of disease. But some research is raising tensions as scientists such as Dr. Lahn venture into studies of genetic differences in behavior or intelligence.

Pilar Ossorio, a professor of law and medical ethics at the University of Wisconsin, criticizes Dr. Lahn for implying a conclusion similar to "The Bell Curve," a controversial 1994 bestseller by Richard J. Herrnstein and Charles Murray. The book argued that the lower average performance by African-Americans on IQ tests had a genetic component and wasn't solely the result of social factors. Referring to Dr. Lahn and his co-authors, Prof. Ossorio says: "It's exactly what they were getting at. There was a lot of hallway talk. People said he's doing damage to the whole field of genetics."

The 37-year-old Dr. Lahn says his research papers, published in Science last September, offered no view on race and intelligence. He personally believes it is possible that some populations will have more advantageous intelligence genes than others. And he thinks that "society will have to grapple with some very difficult facts" as scientific data accumulate. Yet Dr. Lahn, who left China after participating in prodemocracy protests, says intellectual "police" in the U.S. make such questions difficult to pursue.

Scientists believe that a small group of anatomically modern humans struck out from Africa probably less than 100,000 years ago. After arriving on the Eurasian land mass, they continued to split up and eventually humans populated nearly every corner of the globe. One use of genetic research is to probe how each group evolved differently after becoming isolated from the others. Recently created genetic maps of people of African, Asian and European ancestry make that research easier.

For instance, researchers have found that most Europeans have a genetic variant that lets them fully digest milk as adults. The variant is much less common in Africa and Asia, where lactose intolerance is widespread. Scientists theorize that it spread quickly among Europeans because drinking milk from domesticated dairy animals conferred a nutritional advantage. Similar evolutionary reasoning may explain why many people in malaria-prone parts of Africa carry gene variants linked to malaria resistance.

Other research is starting to explain variations in human skin color and hair texture. But scientists tense up when it comes to doing the same sort of research on the brain. Sociologist Troy Duster, who studies the use of racial categories by geneticists, worries that scientists will interpret data in ways that fit their prejudices. He cites the sorry history of phrenology, a study of skull shapes popular in the 19th century, and other pseudoscientific techniques used to categorize people as inferior. "Science doesn't transcend the social milieu," says Dr. Duster, of New York University.

Dr. Lahn traces his interest in human differences back to his youth in China. Foreigners there used to have a special currency that they could use at stores closed to ordinary Chinese. "I wondered why people were different, and why Chinese were at the bottom," he says.

By the time violence struck Tiananmen Square in 1989, Dr. Lahn, the son of two physicists, was an undergraduate at Harvard University. He channeled his curiosity into genetics and built his reputation with a groundbreaking study of the Y chromosome. After taking a post at the University of Chicago in 2000, Dr. Lahn won a prestigious fellowship from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute.

The fellowship pays most of his research bills and has allowed him to pursue creative projects, often on attention-grabbing subjects. One study looked at how promiscuity among female chimpanzees, gorillas and humans affected the evolution of a gene that makes sperm sticky. "Bruce is in a hurry to be famous," says Martin Kreitman, a Chicago colleague who is friendly with him.

Henry Harpending, a University of Utah anthropology professor who recently published a theory for why Ashkenazi Jews tend to have high IQ's, says Dr. Lahn once suggested they co-author an article for Scientific American about the genetics of behavior, in which they could explain why "Chinese are boring."

"I think that Bruce doesn't understand political correctness," Dr. Harpending says. Dr. Lahn says he only vaguely recalls the conversation but confirms that he wonders whether during China's imperial times there was "some selection" against rebellious individuals.

In recent years, Dr. Lahn has become interested in why the human brain is so large and complex. Although humans and chimpanzees share about 96% of their DNA, human brains are about four times larger. Even today, researchers can find a correlation, on average, between people's brain size and their IQ.

Dr. Lahn's group zeroed in on the role of two genes, called ASPM and microcephalin, that are known to have a role in brain size. Humans with defective copies of either gene are born with brains only about one-third the normal size.

Studying DNA from several species, the Chicago team found that, over millions of years, the genes had undergone more rapid change in monkeys, apes and humans than in other animals. Their next step was to determine if evolution had continued in modern humans. Dr. Lahn's graduate students began decoding DNA from 1,184 people belonging to 59 groups from around the world, including Bedouins, Pima Indians and French-speaking Basques.

The data showed that evolution had continued in recent millennia. A statistical analysis of DNA patterns suggested that new mutations in each of the two brain-related genes had spread quickly through some human populations. Evidently, these mutations were advantageous among those populations -- just as the genetic variant promoting milk digestion was advantageous to early Europeans. Dr. Lahn and his team further observed that the new mutations are found most frequently outside of Africa.

What the data didn't say was how the mutations were advantageous. Perhaps the genes play a role outside of the brain or affect a brain function that has nothing to do with intelligence.

While acknowledging that the evidence doesn't permit a firm conclusion, Dr. Lahn favors the idea that the advantage conferred by the mutations was a bigger and smarter brain. He found ways to suggest that in his papers. One mutation, which according to his estimates arose some 40,000 years ago, coincided with the first art found in caves, the paper observed. The other mutation, present mostly in people from the Middle East and Europe, and estimated to be 5,800 years old, coincided with the "development of cities and written language."

That suggested brain evolution might have occurred in tandem with important cultural changes. Yet because neither variant is common in sub-Saharan Africa, there was another potential implication: Some groups had been left out.

The dean of the University of Chicago's medical school, James L. Madara, says he approached Dr. Lahn before the papers were published. They discussed whether the report could be taken out of context. "Let the chips lie where they may," Dr. Madara says he told Dr. Lahn. As long as the ideas and data are clear, "don't worry about the implications," the dean said.

John Easton, head of media relations at the medical school, says his office was worried the work could be misinterpreted and abused by racist groups. Mr. Easton borrowed a copy of "The Mismeasure of Man," the famous attack on IQ tests and brain-volume measurements by the late paleontologist Stephen Jay Gould. Mr. Easton helped Dr. Lahn with talking points about his research. "We said, 'Don't be shy about telling people what it doesn't mean,' " Mr. Easton recalls.

Mr. Easton says Dr. Lahn "makes us nervous" but "with Bruce we know it's not driven by personal bias." That is because Asians "don't score at the top" in the frequency of the brain-gene mutations, Mr. Easton says.

Dr. Lahn's paper and talk at his university -- in which he also claimed the gene variants were probably linked to higher IQ -- provoked a strong reaction both on and off campus. Dr. Collins, head of the federal genome program, obtained advance copies of the papers and circulated them to top population geneticists. He wasn't persuaded by the statistical evidence for evolution and criticized Dr. Lahn's work in media interviews.

The papers won wide attention among researchers, and several responded by setting out to test Dr. Lahn's findings. Scientists at the Broad Institute, a top genetics center in Cambridge, Mass., have been reanalyzing some of the data and say they may challenge Dr. Lahn's finding that evolution acted on ASPM, one of the genes. Broad's influential chief, Eric Lander, says scientists probing recent evolution run the risk of "seeing a difference, and saying there is a story to fit it."

A team at the University of California, Los Angeles, recently tested whether the gene variants actually affect brain size. They studied DNA from 120 people whose brain volumes they had already measured using magnetic-resonance imaging. They didn't find any difference. "It certainly makes you want to look at other explanations" of what the variations mean, says Roger P. Woods, a UCLA brain-mapping expert who reported the results in May.

Some of Dr. Lahn's co-authors are also uncomfortable with the work. Sarah Tishkoff, a geneticist at the University of Maryland who provided DNA from remote African groups, says she is bothered how one paper drew a link between the genetic changes and the rise of civilization. She thinks it is too early to reach any conclusions about why the changes spread and says it is "very simplistic" to imagine that a single gene could have a major effect on complex cultural traits.

Several groups of scientists have sent letters to Science criticizing the papers. Dr. Lahn prepared responses, sending one earlier this month, but Dr. Tishkoff wasn't willing to add her name to them.

"You have to follow the data wherever it leads, but speculating in this field is dangerous," says Spencer Wells, head of the National Geographic Society's Genographic Project, a five-year, $40 million effort to collect DNA samples from 100,000 indigenous people. Dr. Wells says the project team might try to find evolutionary reasons for physical differences such as why Danes are taller than pygmies. But Dr. Wells says National Geographic won't study the brain. "I think there is very little evidence of IQ differences between races," he says.

The accuracy of Dr. Lahn's work and his views on race came up in his tenure review last fall, says a person familiar with it. After debate, his department voted unanimously in his favor, according to another faculty member. A more senior committee agreed and awarded Dr. Lahn the post of full professor, although it wasn't unanimous, this person says.

Dr. Lahn stands by his work but says that because of the controversy he is moving into other projects. Earlier this year, Mr. Easton of the university's media department forwarded Dr. Lahn a paper by two economists looking at the IQ of infants of different races. Dr. Lahn wasn't interested. "I'm surprised anyone studies this," he replied in an email.

Dr. Lahn says he isn't as eager as he once was to continue studying brain differences. P. Thomas Schoenemann, a professor of anthropology at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, says that at Dr. Lahn's request he collected DNA from 25 people whose brain sizes he had studied previously. But the two scientists haven't been in touch recently.

The university's patent office is also having second thoughts. Its director, Alan Thomas, says his office is dropping a patent application filed last year that would cover using Dr. Lahn's work as a DNA-based intelligence test. "We really don't want to end up on the front page...for doing eugenics," Mr. Thomas says.

More recently, Dr. Lahn says he was moved when a student asked him whether some knowledge might not be worth having. It is a notion to which he has been warming. Dr. Lahn says he once tried testing himself for which version of the brain genes he has. The experiment's outcome was blurry "but it wasn't looking good," he says. He hasn't tried testing himself again.

Write to Antonio Regalado at antonio.regalado@wsj.com
| 23512|2007-10-26 12:20:36|crisofori whitakara|11,000 wall painting|

Oldest wall painting said to be found

Oct. 11, 2007
Special to World Science

Archaeologists have found an 11,000-year-old wall painting underground in northern Syria that they call the world's oldest, the Reuters news agency has reported.

The two square-meter (square yard) painting is red, black and white. It was found at Djade al-Mughara, a Neolithic settlement of on the Euphrates northeast of Aleppo, team leader Eric Coqueugniot told Reuters.

A painting uncovered at Djade al-Mughara Neolithic site, northeast of the Syrian city of Aleppo, in this September handout photo. The painting was discovered by a team of French archaeologists.

---

?It looks like a modernist painting,? he told the agency. ?Some of those who saw it have likened it to work by [modernist artist Paul] Klee. Through carbon dating we established it is from around 9,000 B.C.?He added that another painting was found next to it, but isn't yet fully excavated. Coqueugniot works at France's National Centre for Scientific Research.

Rectangles dominate the mural, which adorned an adobe circular wall of a large, wooden-roofed house, according to Reuters. The site has been excavated since the early 1990s. The painting will be moved to Aleppo's museum next year, Coqueugniot told the agency. Its red came from burnt hematite rock, crushed limestone formed the white and charcoal provided the black.

The world's oldest painting on a built wall was found in Turkey but was dated 1,500 years after the one at Djade al-Mughara, according to Science magazine.

The site's inhabitants lived off hunting and wild plants, Coqueugniot told Reuters. ?There was a purpose in having the painting in what looked like a communal house, but we don't know it. The village was later abandoned and the house stuffed with mud,? he added. ?This site is one of several Neolithic villages in modern day Syria and southern Turkey. They seem to have communicated with each other and had peaceful exchanges.?

Mustafa Ali, a leading Syrian artist, told Reuters that similar geometric designs to those in the Djade al-Mughara painting found their way into art throughout the Levant and Persia, and even appear in carpets and rugs. Syria was at the crossroads of the ancient world and has thousands of mostly unexcavated archaeological sites.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23513|2007-10-26 19:40:04|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

The "Indo-European" link in the article goes to an article on the origins of Indo-European languages.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is based > > on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet. In
 the > > 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian peninsula
 by > > the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River Tiber,
 > > where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early years
 > > Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European Etruscan > > language<< of northern Italy.***
 > >
 > > Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely of > > Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman > > Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin in > > grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.
 > > ***
 >
 > I got the above info from Wikipedia - not that it is the last word - > but what is Latin's geographic origin. However, from my perspective,

 > any eurocentric explanation is in doubt.
 > HTP,
 > Mahari

>
 > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"
 > wrote:
 > >
 > > The geographic origins of Latin in the PIE homeland are by no means > > unknown.
 > >
 > > Djehuti Sundaka
 > >
 >

| 23514|2007-10-26 22:29:05|Paul Kekai Manansala|More on quarry canal|

Canal Linking Ancient Egypt Quarry to Nile Found

Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt for National Geographic News
 October 24, 2007

Experts have discovered a canal at an Aswan rock quarry that they believe was used to help float some of ancient Egypt's largest stone monuments to the Nile River.

It has long been suspected that ancient workers moved the massive artifacts directly to their final destinations over waterways.

Enlarge Photo

Printer Friendly

Email to a Friend

RELATED

- Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts Announce \(July 27, 2007\)
- Egypt's Oldest Known Art Identified, Is 15,000 Years Old \(July 11, 2007\)
- Egypt: Pictures, Facts, Videos, More

Ancient artwork shows Egyptians using boats or barges to move large monuments like obelisks and statues, and canals have also been discovered at the Giza pyramids and the Luxor Temple. (Related: "Ancient Flowers Found in Egypt Coffin" [June 29, 2006].)

But the newfound canal, which has since been filled in, is the first proof discovered at the granite quarries in Aswan. Almost all obelisks, including those at the Luxor and Karnak Temples, were originally hewn in the Aswan area.

"What you have is very strong evidence that they may have loaded these stones in at the quarry ... and as a result not dragging and hauling them over land," said Richard R. Parizek, a professor of geology at Penn State University who led the scientific tests confirming the canal's existence.

"It eliminates that land connection."

Heavy Workload

Larger obelisks can weigh more than 50 tons, said Adel Kelany, an inspector with Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities who led the team that first dug up the site in 2002.

And a well-known unfinished obelisk at the quarry is thought to weigh more than 1,100 tons. It was the largest such monument ever attempted but was abandoned after latent cracks emerged, revealing a rare glimpse of ancient construction practices.

"We have actually long suspected the existence of a canal linking the Nile to the quarry site, and it's very nice to find this real confirmation," said Salima Ikram, an Egyptologist at the American University of Cairo.

"If they had just been using rollers and dragging things each time, everything would have been much more time-consuming and far slower."

Experts said the canal likely filled in with water during the one of the Nile's annual floods. Workers would have dragged the large stone monuments onto rafts at a point below the floodwater level, allowing the artifacts to float when the water level rose.

Continued on Next Page >>

| 23515|2007-10-26 23:34:28|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

I just purchased a book called "Who Were the Minoans: An African Answer". It argues that the Minoans were an African people - specifically the Fulani. The author GJK Campbell-Dunn also makes reference to the Phoenicians asserting that they have African origins as well. I've just begun to read the book. And on page 16 he states:

"The Etruscans, we now know, were African".

It is thus far a very interesting book with numerous references and says what Dr. Winters has long been stating.

Would you not think that from approx. 750BC to 200CE - the early period of the Latin language that the Etruscans would have at least a little input into the language? While reading about the Etruscans I noticed that it said:

"Senatus Populusque Romanus. "Populus" is a word of Etruscan origin, - que (Etruscan -c with probably the same pronunciation) means "and", and even Romanus itself probably came from the Etruscan language."

I've always wondered about the similarity between the Kemetic word "roman" (I believe the spelling is wrong, please correct me) for man and the Italian/Latin word Roman.

Thus, if the Etruscans were Afrikan and ruled over Rome for 900 years during the early development of the Latin language, it is unquestionably possible that the language could have - even likely have - words of Afrikan/Kemetic origin.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka" wrote:

>
> The "Indo-European" link in the article goes to an article on the > origins of Indo-European languages.

>
> Djehuti Sundaka

>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >
> > Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is based > > > on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet. In

> the > > > 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian peninsula

> by > > > the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River > Tiber,
> > > where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early
> years
> > > Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European

Etruscan

> > > language<< of northern Italy.***
> > >
> > > Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely of > > > Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman > > > Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin in > > > grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.
> > > ***
> >
> > I got the above info from Wikipedia - not that it is the last word -

>
> > but what is Latin's geographic origin. However, from my > perspective,
> > any eurocentric explanation is in doubt.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > The geographic origins of Latin in the PIE homeland are by no

> means

> > > unknown.

> > >

> > > Djehuti Sundaka

> > >

> >

>

| 23516|2007-10-27 17:53:45|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

Genetic evidence

A team of geneticists from different universities in Italy and Spain undertook the first genetic studies of the ancient Etruscans, based on mitochondrial DNA from 80 bone samples taken from tombs dating from the seventh century to the third century BC in Etruria.[17] This study finds that they were more related to each other than to the general population of modern Italy. Recent studies suggested a Near East origin [18]

This team of scientists did not use genetic testing to estimate total population numbers, however they referenced a second work that did give an estimate [19] Based upon that estimate, the pool contained between about 150,000 to 200,000 women. Dividing these numbers by the 36 cities in the three Etruscan leagues obtains an average of between 4167 and 6944 women per community. Selecting an arbitrary family size of four gives a most approximate Etruscan population of 600,000 to 800,000 persons in about 36 communities of an average between 16,668 and 27,776 persons each. These populations are sufficiently dense and sufficiently urban to have accomplished everything the Etruscans were supposed to have accomplished.

The studies did show that there is a link between Etruscans and certain populations of Anatolia. In particular, the areas of historical Etruscan occupation share a relatively high concentration of y-haplogroup G with Anatolians. This evidence is not specific to any period or calendar date; the time of a contiguous population or significant migration might be far back in the stone age.

Another team of Italian researchers has shown that the mtDNA of cattle (Bos taurus) in modern Tuscany is different from that of cattle normally found in Italy, and even in Europe as a whole.[20] Their mtDNA is, in fact, similar to that of cattle typically found in the Near East. Many tribes who have migrated in the past have typically taken their livestock with them as they moved. This bovine mtDNA study suggests that at least some people whose descendants were Etruscans did in fact make their way to Italy from Anatolia or other parts of the Near East. The study gives no clue as to when they might have done so.

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Etruscans>

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I just purchased a book called "Who Were the Minoans: An African > Answer". It argues that the Minoans were an African people - > specifically the Fulani. The author GJK Campbell-Dunn also makes > reference to the Phoenicians asserting that they have African origins

> as well. I've just begun to read the book. And on page 16 he > states:

> "The Etruscans, we now know, were African".

>

> It is thus far a very interesting book with numerous references and > says what Dr. Winters has long been stating.

> Would you not think that from approx. 750BC to 200CE - the early > period of the Latin language that the Etruscans would have at least
a > little input into the language? While reading about the Etruscans

I

> noticed that it said:

> "Senatus Populusque Romanus. "Populus" is a word of Etruscan origin, -

> que (Etruscan -c with probably the same pronunciation) means "and",
> and even Romanus itself probably came from the Etruscan language."

>

> I've always wondered about the similarity between the Kemetic > word "roman" (I believe the spelling is wrong, please correct me)
for > man and the Italian/Latin word Roman.

> Thus, if the Etruscans were Afrikan and ruled over Rome for 900
years

> during the early development of the Latin language, it is > unquestionably possible that the language could have - even likely > have - words of Afrikan/Kemetic origin.

> HTP,

> Mahari

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> wrote:

> >

>> The "Indo-European" link in the article goes to an article on the >> origins of Indo-European languages.
>>
>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>>>
>>> Latin is a member of the Italic languages and its alphabet is > based >>> on the Old Italic alphabet, derived from the Greek alphabet.
In
>> the >>> 9th or 8th century BC Latin was brought to the Italian > peninsula
>> by >>> the migrating Latins who settled in Latium, around the River >> Tiber,
>>> where Roman civilization would develop. ***During those early
>> years
>>> Latin came under the influence of the >>non-Indo-European > Etruscan
>>> language<< of northern Italy.***
>>>>
>>>> Although surviving Roman literature consists almost entirely
of >>>> Classical Latin, the actual spoken language of the Western Roman >>>> Empire was Vulgar Latin, which differed from Classical Latin
in
>>>> grammar, vocabulary, and (eventually) pronunciation.
>>>> ***
>>>>
>>>> I got the above info from Wikipedia - not that it is the last > word -
>>
>>> but what is Latin's geographic origin. However, from my >> perspective,
>>> any eurocentric explanation is in doubt.
>>> HTP,
>>> Mahari
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> The geographic origins of Latin in the PIE homeland are by no

> > means > > > > unknown.

> > > >
> > > > Djehuti Sundaka

> > > >

> > >

> >

>

| 23517|2007-10-28 12:23:09|asar_imhotep|Re: Nsw Bty possibly Nsi Buta?|

I don't know if this got lost in the shuffle, but I really want to get some feedback on this. I appreciate it.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:
Peace Phamily

I may have another possible Ba'Ntu connection in terms of its political organization and the title and role of the "king." I have always disliked the European term "king" to apply to African style forms of leadership because I always felt they were inadequate in explaining the relationship of the leader to a community, and the world view of the leader from the community's perspective.

As mentioned before on this yahooogroup, the term primarily associated with the ruler of political Ta-Merri is /nsw bty/. As has been discussed, prior to Roman rule, the term PER AAH was mainly used to describe the "place" of leadership rather than the leader itself (with the exception of Akenaten). It is like saying, "The White House today ordered an attack on Bosnia." The physical location represents metaphorically the government in total.

To try and see how the Mdw Ntr was pronounced, many scholars turn to the Greek, Coptic and Cuneiform writings. After peeping a 2002 discussion on the AEgyptian-L@... list serve between James P. Allen and Jerome Colburn, some of the dialogue inspired me to revisit the Kongo form of governance in relation to the most important political institution in Ba'Ntu society [the Mbongi] and the name of its leadership and role in society.

I have argued over the past few weeks that to understand key elements of Ancient Ta-Merrian culture and political structure, one must look to the living systems of Africa for traces of cultural norms still practiced by the indigenous people: especially amongst the Ba'Ntu speakers. I will attempt to make a connection between the name of the political leader of Ba'Ntu society and the name of the leader of Ta-Merrian society to see if the perceived connection is solid.

In the Kongo society, as well as all indigenous Ba'Ntu societies in Africa, they make political decisions and gather to discuss matters in an "open hut" called an Mbongi. Mbongi comes from the root `bonga' which means to take, to posses, to bear and to accept. The term `bongi' means

"the one who takes" (responsibilities, etc.). An Mbongi is a public-open-house, institution of debates and of conceptualization, and the community parliament, the popular court of justice.

Here is where all important decisions are made for the society by its wisest members. The Mbongi possesses its own leaders and their assistants (Mu bonga) to take care of the community's and country's diverse responsibilities. This is where the elders call to discuss things and make decisions. The leadership organization is as follows:

1. Mfuma-mbongi (the chief of the Mbongi) ? could be considered the president of the Mbongi.
2. Landi kia Mfuma-mbongi ? this is the second in command and really the assistant of the chief of the Mbongi. He is an adjunct and assist in case of death or disease of the Mfuma-mbongi.
3. Mfumu-dikanda (the chief of the extended family) ? He is the chief of his lineage and the Mbongi (the head of the nation as a whole). He and his assistant are responsible for everyone in the Kanda (the society).

The name most important name for our discussion is the latter, the Mfumu-dikanda. What is so striking about this position is its philosophical similarities to how the leader in Ta-Merrian society was viewed. The Mfumu-dikanda is the intermediary, N'kambakani, between the government of the Mbongi and his own lineage, but also between his lineage in the physical or upper world and the ancestors' spiritualized community. In Africa, your lineage not only consists of your direct blood lineage, but the lineages of the society at large. So when you hear lineage, think country (the collective lineage). So just like a Nsw Bty was a representative of "God" and was an intermediary between God, the ancestors and the community, the same is viewed here with the Mfumu-dikanda. Also what is key in this discussion is the concept that he is the chief of "the extended family" ? the nation. This we will revisit later.

Now, going back to the discussion of James P Allen, in his dialogue about the value in the word /itn/, he mentions the following concerning his reservations, while also giving some proposals for the term Nsw Bty in the Cuneiform (rendered "in-si-ib-ia"). He goes on to state:

- > Re hamunzu (from Dahamunzu = tA-Hjmt-nswt "the queen"), this may not be an
- > exception to the general rule. Both this and
- > cuneiform insibia = nswt-bjt
- > seem to reflect an Egyptian *insi, with an
- > initial vowel. In the second
- > case, however, Fecht (Wortakzent und
- > Silbenstruktur, #72) has argued that
- > the stress was on the second syllable
- > (*insi'bya), so that the first may
- > simply represent an unstressed "vocalic" n
- > (*nsi'bya) ? (emphasis mine)

What is important in this discussion is what I have bolded. Now in conventional Egyptology the term Nsw Bty means "King of upper and lower Egypt." This is taken from the fact that the Nsw (sedge plant) is associated with the south, while the alleged "bee" (more a wasp to me) is associated with the north.

What I am proposing is that the term Nsw Bty really means "Chief of the extended family" just like the Mfumu-dikanda mentioned above. In the KiKongo language, the word NSI means "land" or "country." I am proposing that word /nsw/ is really "nsi" like James P Allen was explaining above. It seems to be the same structure as in the Bantu language as the hedge plant has the phonetic value of /sw/ and in Bantu languages the /n/ is a nominal prefix (affixed to class stems) or an adjectival prefix (affixed to variable class stems).

I am also proposing that the term /bty/ is really the Ba'Ntu word "buta" which means "family." So I am proposing as the name Nsi Buta, or roughly translated "chief of the extended family or country." In most cases I think that the .t's are only written and not stressed in speech (like the in the French Les)

~~I also think that the Kmtjw had the political structure of the Ba'Ntu partly because the Mfumu-dikanda, and all African leaders of the time, did not have palaces like you find in Europe. You have no record of where the actual Nsw Bty lived. To me, they were amongst the people. One might ask, "well why do we have these mighty temples and pyramids, but no palace for the 'king'?" To me it's no different than all of our monies going towards large churches and administrative buildings, but not so much on our own dwellings (which won't last as long as the Churches or Government buildings).~~

~~I think in general we have wrong how things were structured in ancient Ta-Merri and we must look to the living systems of Africa for a better idea. Diop has already done some comparison similar to this in Civilization or Barbarism. What do you think?~~

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23518|2007-10-28 21:03:38|A.E.|Victor Loret - KV35 - proposed mummy of Nefertiti|

Attachments :

Victor Loret, the Egyptologist who first went into KV35?

The whole assertion of Joann Fletcher is based on a mummy found in KV35, so we first need to see :

* What is in the manifest of mummies, artifacts recorded by Loret.

* What items were taken out.

It seems that Joann Fletcher has nothing to say about this KV35 info, so let's start there.

=====

Loret's collection of papers, drawings, photographs and other materials were kept, until the heirs eventually decided to sell them. Thanks to the antiquarian booksellers Ars Libri of Boston, which had already sold the Varille library in 2001, the Universita di Milano was able to acquire the entire archive in January 2002, thereby enriching its important Egyptological resources.

[ <http://www.unimib.it/go/Home/English-version> ]

=====

If we are even going to consider the mummy in KV35 could possibly belong to Nefertiti, we must first investigate that tomb.

Here is an e-mail I have been sending to universities / museums that are deal with Loret and KV35

-----

"Is there any such thing as a manifest of mummies, artifacts Loret removed from KV35?"

-----

What was in the tomb when Loret documented it and what was removed is essential to our investigation

=====

How is it that all mummies but these 3 were taken from the tomb to the museum in Cairo?

If they entered the particular room at one time and found a straight arm and later it was replaced with a bent arm, did a ghost play musical arms ?

Why was the whole series of rooms stripped from their contents about 100 years ago, but only these 3 mummies were left? Show us other rooms that contained mummies when Fletcher went to KV35 to investigate?

Was there any other rooms the extra arms could have come from or did the extra "bent arm" come from outside of that tomb?

The place that appears to have the writings of Loret is the Università di Milano... but with his original text we find in the records of The Theban project... KV 35 was used as a cache for the mummies of Thutmes IV, Amenhetep III, Merenptah, Sety II, Siptah, Rameses IV, Rameses V, Rameses VI, an anonymous female called the "Elder Woman" (who some think is Tiye, the wife of Amenhetep III), and a further mummy, probably of Setnakht. The mummies remained undisturbed until they were discovered by Victor Loret.

Categories of Objects Recovered, Accessories, Architectural elements , Clothing, Food , Human mummies ,Jewellery ,Models ,Sculpture ,Tomb equipment ,Vegetal remains ,Vessels ,Warfare and hunting equipment, Written documents

The tomb was stripped of it's contents.. artifacts AND mummies.. all except for 3 mummies in one room?

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23519|2007-10-28 21:03:53|A.E.|Victor Loret (Egyptologist) .. a biography I guess|

Attachments :

Victor Loret.. a biography I guess

(1859-1946) Victor Loret studied Egyptology in Paris with Gaston Maspero. In 1881 they met Egypt.

They were the first members of the French Archaeological Mission in Cairo. In 1883, he worked in Thebes with Eugene Lefebvre in royal and other tombs, copying their decoration and studying their inscriptions.

This was his experience in the Valley of the Kings. Fifteen years later, he would make the greatest discovery of his life--the tombs of Thutmose III and Amenhotep II.

From 1886 until 1929 Loret held the chair of Egyptology at Lyons, going back to Egypt only in 1897-99 as director of the Antiquities Service. In these years, he founded the Annales du Service des Antiquites de l'Egypte, still published today, and dug in Saqqara and in Thebes.

Loret was a good scholar and teacher: among his students were Kuentz, Devaud, Montet, Gauthier, and Varille, all of whom became well-known Egyptologists.

Some of Loret's glass plate negatives went to the University of Lyons.

Some of Loret's philological notes are now in the Institut de France in Paris.

The majority of his archives were left to his student Alexandre Varille. They were stored in the Varille family flat in Lyons and their country house at Lourmarin de Provence.

They were kept with the archives of Alexandre Varille (person not a place).

Victor Loret, the Egyptologist who first went into KV35?

The whole assertion of Joann Fletcher is based on a mummy found in KV35, so we first need to see :

* What is in the manifest of mummies, artifacts recorded by Loret.

* What items were taken out.

It seems that Joann Fletcher has nothing to say about this KV35 info, so let's start there.

=====

Loret's collection of papers, drawings, photographs and other materials where kept, until the heirs eventually decided to sell them. Thanks to the antiquarian booksellers Ars Libri of Boston, which had already sold the Varille library in 2001, the Universita di Milano was able to acquire the entire archive in January 2002, thereby enriching its important Egyptological resources.

[ <http://www.unimib.it/go/Home/English-version> ]

=====

If we are even going to consider the mummy in KV35 could possibly belong to Nefertiti, we must first investigate that tomb.

Here is an e-mail I have been sending to universities / museums that are deal with Loret and KV35

-----

"Is there any such thing as a manifest of mummies, artifacts Loret removed from KV35?"-

-----

What was in the tomb when Loret documented it and what was removed is essential to our investigation

=====

Loret's archives include correspondence between him, De Morgan, Schweinfurth, Ebers, Brugsch, Varille and Montet. The latter was the discoverer of Tanis, the capital of Egypt at the end of the second millennium BC, and of the rich tombs of the pharaohs buried there. Every year, on his return from Tanis, he would write letters to Loret describing his discoveries, asking for his advice, and send him annotated photographs, which are of extraordinary importance for our understanding of the history of the excavations (Fig. 3). (8)

Loret was fascinated by the study of zoology and botany, and in his archives there are notes and lists concerning Egyptian birds and fishes, casts in plaster and tin (Fig. 4), and tracings of other animals, and notes on trees and plants, sometimes together with dried and pressed specimens inside notebooks.

There are also numerous cards with lexicographical observations, arranged in alphabetical order, which were to be used for a never finished Egyptian dictionary (Fig. 5), as well as various notebooks containing texts copied and translated, comments on archaeological sites or on objects in museums, notes on religion and a mass of observations on Egyptian music and musical instruments, both ancient and modern, a subject on which Loret was a true authority. He wrote voluminously on all these topics, and the Università di Milano is now in possession of the proofs as well as the original manuscripts of published and unpublished works (Figs. 6-7 and 9-12).

Of particular interest are the travel notebooks, made more attractive by the enchanting sketches that illustrate them, including one dating from Loret's first trip to Egypt in 1881 (Fig. 6). An extremely important manuscript, describing in detail the Musée de Boulaq (Fig. 7), the first collection of Egyptian antiquities in the country (Fig. 8), (9) dates from the same year. The dossier concerning the excavations carried out at Saqqara in 1897-99 is also exceptionally useful (Fig. 9), since it contains a great deal of unpublished information on the tombs that were discovered, and detailed lists of objects, noting the exact locations in which they were found.

At his death, his library and a small group of glass plate negatives went to the University of Lyons, while his philological notes were in part bequeathed to Montet, and are now in the Institut de France in Paris; (5) however, the majority of his archives were left to his beloved student Alexandre Varille. They were stored in the Varille family flat in Lyons and in their country house at Lourmarin de Provence, where they were kept together with the archives of Alexandre Varille, who died only five years after his master, in November 1951. This important collection of papers, drawings, photographs and other materials belonging to the two scholars were jealously guarded by the Varille family for almost half a century, until the heirs eventually decided to sell them. Thanks to the antiquarian booksellers Ars Libri of Boston, which had already sold the Varille library in 2001, (6) the Università di Milano was able to acquire the entire archive in January 2002, thereby enriching its important Egyptological resources. (7)

Loret's archives, whose rediscovery represents one of the major events in the history of Egyptology in recent decades, include a rich correspondence between him and such colleagues as De Morgan, Schweinfurth, Ebers, and Brugsch, not to mention his former students, including Varille and Montet. The latter was the discoverer of Tanis, the capital of Egypt at the end of the second millennium BC, and of the rich tombs of the pharaohs buried there. Every year, on his return from Tanis, he would write letters to Loret describing his discoveries, asking for his advice, and send him annotated photographs, which are of extraordinary importance for our understanding of the history of the excavations (Fig. 3). (8)

Loret was fascinated by the study of zoology and botany, and in his archives there are notes and lists concerning Egyptian birds and fishes, casts in plaster and tin (Fig. 4), and tracings of other animals, and notes on trees and plants, sometimes together with dried and pressed specimens inside notebooks.

There are also numerous cards with lexicographical observations, arranged in alphabetical order, which were to be used for a never finished Egyptian dictionary (Fig. 5), as well as various notebooks containing texts copied and translated, comments on archaeological sites or on objects in museums, notes on religion and a mass of observations on Egyptian music and musical instruments, both ancient and modern, a subject on which Loret was a true authority. He wrote voluminously on all these topics, and the Università di Milano is now in possession of the proofs as well as the original manuscripts of published and unpublished works (Figs. 6-7 and 9-12).

Of particular interest are the travel notebooks, made more attractive by the enchanting sketches that illustrate them, including one dating from Loret's first trip to Egypt in 1881 (Fig. 6). An extremely important manuscript, describing in detail the Musée de Boulaq (Fig. 7), the first collection of Egyptian antiquities in the country (Fig. 8), (9) dates from the same year. The dossier concerning the excavations carried out at Saqqara in 1897-99 is also exceptionally useful (Fig. 9), since it contains a great deal of unpublished information on the tombs that were discovered, and detailed lists of objects, noting the exact locations in which they were found.

The entrance to the tomb of Thutmose III, the powerful pharaoh to whom Egypt owed its maximum territorial expansion, was discovered by Loret's workmen on 12 February 1898, while he was away in Aswan. He only came back to Luxor on 21 February, and the first page of the excavation journal dates from that day.

The tomb, situated in an elevated position at the end of a rocky gorge, is a well-preserved architectural and artistic masterpiece. Its principal innovative features are the cartouche-shaped burial chamber and sarcophagus, the latter carved out of yellow quartzite painted red, a detail that astonished Loret at the time of its discovery. Another novelty is the well, to a depth of six metres, which had a religious significance, symbolising as it did the approach to the underworld, combined with a practical function, namely to collect the rainwater which its creators realised would eventually seep through, while also serving as a deterrent to tomb-robbers.

While the entrance corridors are undecorated, the well and the burial chamber are adorned with a frieze of khekher (bundles of reeds), and the ceiling is painted like a night sky, in blue with yellow stars. Furthermore, the walls of the antechamber present the images and the names of seven hundred and forty-one deities listed in the so-called Book of the Netherworld, or Amduat, and on the walls of the burial chamber this same text is written in cursive hieroglyphs and is accompanied by representations of deities or funerary scenes. These are outlined, or painted, in black and red on a brownish-yellow background, like an enormous papyrus unrolled on the walls, as Loret already noted the first time he penetrated this large chamber. Its two central columns are decorated in the same style, with text and images of another funerary composition, the Litany of Re.

Loret was not surprised to find the sarcophagus opened and empty, since the mummy of the king had been found, in 1881, in tomb 320 of Deir el-Bahari, known as the first cachette, together with the mummies of fifty-two other pharaohs or important persons. They had been hidden there during the 22nd dynasty, at the beginning of the first millennium BC, to protect them from the ravages of robbers looking for jewels inside the bandages. (13) When the mummies reached the Musee de Boulaq in Cairo, their discoverer, Emile Brugsch, together with Eugene Lefebure, at that time director of the French Archaeological Mission, and the junior members of the Mission--Loret among them--listed them and made a preliminary study of them for Maspero, the director of the Antiquities Service, who was temporarily away in France. (14)

Loret probably remembered this first encounter with royal mummies when, in 1898, he had the good fortune to discover many other mummies of pharaohs hidden in the tomb of Amenhotep II, afterwards called the second cachette (Fig. 12). He entered the tomb on 9 March in the evening, and explored it all night long, going through corridors and chambers full of fragments of items that had been broken by robbers as well as other pieces in good condition, amounting to a total of around two thousand objects, including a number of beautifully painted wooden artifacts. (15) Inside one model boat, in the antechamber, he found a mummy which has been identified as in all probability being that of the pharaoh Sethnakht, but an even greater surprise awaited him in the burial chamber, where--inside a carefully carved, cartouche-shaped quartzite sarcophagus--he discovered the body of the tomb's owner, Amenhotep II. It was the first time that a pharaoh had been found in his own tomb.

The room is decorated like Thutmosis III's burial chamber, with elegant silhouettes of the king and various gods on the pillars, the text of the Amduat displayed on the walls, and its blue ceiling studded with yellow stars: when found, the ensemble was absolutely intact. Four small rooms open onto this chamber: in one of them Loret found three mummies, one plausibly identified as Queen Tiye, the wife of Amenhotep III. The original photograph of the three bodies as found, previously presumed lost, (16) is one of the great treasures of the archive (Fig. 15). Another of the rooms, closed off with limestone blocks, some of which had been removed from the top right-hand corner in antiquity, had an amazing surprise in store for Loret. Nine mummies were lying there, inside coffins which were partly covered, partly uncovered, and mostly bearing royal cartouches. He entered the room, and on closer inspection discovered that the bodies were those of many of the most celebrated pharaohs of the New Kingdom, identified by docketts upon the bandages and/or upon the coffins: (17) Thutmosis IV, Amenhotep III, Merenptah, Sethi II, Siptah, Ramesses IV, V and VI, and an unknown woman, maybe Queen Tawosret.

From his journal, which is preserved in the archive, we now know the exact position of each mummy and of the objects deposited in the room by priests or officials of the 21st dynasty who wanted to save their kings from destruction. From the same journal, it is possible to retrieve information concerning the other materials uncovered and their respective positions within the ideal grids into which Loret divided the antechamber and the burial chamber, grids that--hitherto unpublished and presumed lost--have previously only been hypothetically, but as it transpires accurately, reconstructed by Egyptologists in recent years. (18)

When the excavation was finished and everything, objects and mummies, had been made ready to be sent to Cairo, Loret received from the Egyptian government, upon the initiative of Sir William Garstin, the Under Secretary of State for the Public Works Department, the order to leave the mummies in the tomb, since public opinion was opposed to the transfer of the bodies of the kings from the tomb in which they were reinterred to the Ghiza Museum. The news was unexpected, and Loret was astonished and concerned by it, since there was a serious risk of theft. Various newspapers dating from April 1898 report the entire controversy: these interesting articles, together with Loret's handwritten comments, are gathered together in a separate dossier among his papers.

In the following year, Loret continued his excavations in the Valley of the Kings and made other significant discoveries: above all the intact tomb of Maiherpri, a non-royal but prominent personage of Nubian origin. In spite of this new success, he resigned from his post as Director of the Antiquities Service, and went back to France; he was never to return to Egypt (Fig. 14).

In January 1900, Gaston Maspero, Director of the Service for the second time, ordered the nine mummies found in the cache to be sent to Cairo, while Amenhotep II, the mummy in the boat, probably of Sethnakht, and the three others found in one of the side rooms were left in the tomb.

In the end in November 1901, as Loret had feared, thieves entered the tomb. The boat in which the mummy lay, and Amenhotep II's bow deposited inside the sarcophagus, were stolen; (19) the mummy in the boat was smashed to pieces, and only the mummy of Amenhotep II was undamaged by robbers looking in vain for jewellery which had probably already been stolen in antiquity. (20) But by that time another young archaeologist, Howard Carter, was in charge of the Valley of the Kings, and was obliged to deal with the problem. (21) The discoverer of the tomb himself was in France with all his notes, his photographs, his plans and sketches which were never published, doubtless distressed by the unpleasant situation that had arisen during his directorship of the Antiquities Service.

To remember what Loret did for Egyptology, and to add precious information about the history of the Valley of the Kings, all this material is currently being digitalised and studied in detail, and will be comprehensively published as part of a series of volumes devoted to the treasures of the Università di Milano in 2004.

1) E. David (ed.), G. Maspero, Lettres d'Egypte: Correspondance avec Louise Maspero (1883-1914), Paris, 2003, pp. 118, 126. At the beginning, Maspero considered 'le petit' Loret an excellent scholar, and relations between them were excellent. However, from the closing years of the nineteenth century, onwards, Maspero was harshly critical of the work done by Loret in Egypt. See ibid., pp. 247-48, 270, 347, 568.

(2) Lefebure was Professor of Egyptology at Lyons from 1879 until 1884, but in the years 1881-83 lived in Egypt, having been appointed to direct the French Archaeological Mission there. In 1885, he was Professor of Egyptology at the College de France, and afterwards at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes. In 1887, he moved to Algiers, where he founded an Egyptological school in the local university, and where he died in 1908. See H. Mondor, Eugene Lefebure: Sa vie--Ses lettres a Mallarme Paris, 1951, pp. 127-39; W.R. Dawson, E.P. Uphill, M.L. Bierbrier, Who Was Who in Egyptology, London, 1995, 3rd edition, pp. 243-44.

(3) N. Reeves, Ancient Egypt: The Great Discoveries--A Year-by-Year Chronicle, London, 2000, pp. 101, 105.

(4) A. Varille, 'Victor Loret 1859-1946', Annales du Service des Antiquites de l'Egypte, vol. XLVII, 1947, pp. 7-13.

(5) P. Montet, 'Le dictionnaire hieroglyphique et les carnets de Victor Loret', Kemi, vol. XVII, 1964, pp. 7-9. For some letters and notes sent by Loret to Lefebure, see G. Lefebure, 'Correspondance de Victor Loret', Kemi, vol. XII, 1952, pp. 5-6.

6) Ars Libri Ltd., Egyptology: The Library of Alexandre Varille, catalogue no. 124, Boston, 2001.

(7) P. Piacentini, La Biblioteca e gli Archivi di Egittologia del Dipartimento di Scienze dell'Antichita dell'Universita degli Studi di Milano, Novara, 2002; P. Piacentini and E.W. Seibel, 'L'egittologo bibliofilo', in P. Piacentini and M. Pozzi (eds.), Egitto: Dalle piramidi ad Alessandro Magno, exh. cat., Milan, 2002, pp. 20-21.

(8) For other letters from Tanis, sent by Montet to his family, in which Loret is mentioned with great affection, see P. Montet, Lettres de Tanis 1939-1940: La decouverte des tresors royaux, C. Montet-Beaucour and J. Yoyotte (eds.), Paris, 1998, pp. 18, 77, 115, note 5, and p. 261.

(9) P. Piacentini and V. Rondot, '1881: Musee de Boulaq, mort de Mariette', in M. Eldamaty and M. Trad (eds.), Egyptian Museum Collections Around the World, vol. II, Cairo, 2002, pp. 949-56.

(10) KV 26-41, plus KV L-M, and maybe more. Further researches in Loret's papers will probably establish the precise number of tombs he discovered.

(11) D.C. Forbes, Tombs, Treasures, Mummies: Seven Great Discoveries of Egyptian Archaeology, Sebastopol and Santa Fe, 1998, pp. 59, 83, note 30, pp. 89, 103, 108-109, note 3; N. Reeves, Valley of the Kings: The Decline of a Royal Necropolis, London, 1990, pp. 21, 192, 221, note 93; N. Reeves and R.H. Wilkinson, The Complete Valley of the Kings, London, 1996, pp. 69, 100, 179.

(12) V. Loret, 'Le tombeau de Thoutmes III' and 'Le tombeau d'Amenophis II et la cachette royale de Biban-el-molouk', Bulletin de l'Institut Egyptien, vol. IX (third series), 1898, pp. 91-112, plates 1-15.

6) Ars Libri Ltd., Egyptology: The Library of Alexandre Varille, catalogue no. 124, Boston, 2001.

(7) P. Piacentini, La Biblioteca e gli Archivi di Egittologia del Dipartimento di Scienze dell'Antichita dell'Universita degli Studi di Milano, Novara, 2002; P. Piacentini and E.W. Seibel, 'L'egittologo bibliofilo', in P. Piacentini and M. Pozzi (eds.), Egitto: Dalle piramidi ad Alessandro Magno, exh. cat., Milan, 2002, pp. 20-21.

(8) For other letters from Tanis, sent by Montet to his family, in which Loret is mentioned with great affection, see P. Montet, Lettres de Tanis 1939-1940: La decouverte des tresors royaux, C. Montet-Beaucour and J. Yoyotte (eds.), Paris, 1998, pp. 18, 77, 115, note 5, and p. 261.

(9) P. Piacentini and V. Rondot, '1881: Musee de Boulaq, mort de Mariette', in M. Eldamaty and M. Trad (eds.), Egyptian Museum Collections Around the World, vol. II, Cairo, 2002, pp. 949-56.

(10) KV 26-41, plus KV L-M, and maybe more. Further researches in Loret's papers will probably establish the precise number of tombs he discovered.

(11) D.C. Forbes, Tombs, Treasures, Mummies: Seven Great Discoveries of Egyptian Archaeology, Sebastopol and Santa Fe, 1998, pp. 59, 83, note 30, pp. 89, 103, 108-109, note 3; N. Reeves, Valley of the Kings: The Decline of a Royal Necropolis, London, 1990, pp. 21, 192, 221, note 93; N. Reeves and R.H. Wilkinson, The Complete Valley of the Kings, London, 1996, pp. 69, 100, 179.

(12) V. Loret, 'Le tombeau de Thoutmes III' and 'Le tombeau d'Amenophis II et la cachette royale de Biban-el-molouk', Bulletin de l'Institut Egyptien, vol. IX (third series), 1898, pp. 91-112, plates 1-15.

Patrizia Piacentini "'Wonderful things' on paper: the Egyptologist Victor Loret in the Valley of the Kings". Apollo. July 2003. FindArticles.com. 27 Oct. 2007.

http://findarticles.com/p/articles/mi\_m0PAL/is\_497\_158/ai\_106732097

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23520|2007-10-28 21:04:11|A.E.|Hidden chamber BS .. Retarded Robbers KV35|

Attachments :

From the transcript : Nefertiti Resurrected

=====

In 1898, a Frenchman named Victor Loret began excavating a tomb sealed for thousands of years.

Deep underground, he stumbled on a hidden chamber. Inside; three anonymous mummies. One seemed mutilated. Beside it, Loret found a wig.

=====

She believes she's found Nefertiti's mummy hidden in a sealed chamber in the valley of the kings.

=====

Armed with forensic science, the team examines a mummy walled up in a hidden chamber for more than 3, 000 years.

=====

Then they say

=====

KV35 contains four side chambers. One of these contains the lost mummy.

The tomb was used by priests to house mummies whose own tombs had been looted.

=====

The tiny shapes are beads left behind when tomb robbers ripped jewelry from lady x's neck.

=====

The next revelation suggests lady x was more than a queen. It lies in the wrappings torn from the body by tomb robbers.

=====

IF the tomb was robbed when Loret entered

#1 He was not the first to enter

#2 Loret nor any "Egyptologist discovered any hidden chamber"

#3 Nor did the original robbers find any "hidden chamber" ... unless Loret found this particular wall broken down when he entered.. and

#4 The top royalty had no hidden rooms for themselves

" the team examines a mummy walled up in a hidden chamber for more than 3, 000 years."

... PURE BS. This chamber was "hidden" NEVER but the tomb it's self was unknown ONLY until the robbers found it.

The room was NOT walled up until after 1898 when Loret went into the tomb.

By the Theban project web site

Categories of Objects Recovered, Accessories, Architectural elements , Clothing, Food , Human mummies ,Jewelry ,Models ,Sculpture ,Tomb equipment ,Vegetal remains ,Vessels ,Warfare and hunting equipment, Written documents

All of this stuff was taken out of the tomb after Loret entered, so it does NOT appear these things were worth robbing by "the robbers" who were there before Loret?

So what kind of jewelry was left and why didn't the "robbers" want these other artifacts?

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23521|2007-10-28 21:04:35|A.E.|Numbered Transcript from the documentary|

Attachments :

The original bible/Torah had no book divisions, no chapters, paragraphs or even punctuation. These were added later so people could easily find the same information in discussion /debate.

I have taken the complete transcript From the "documentary" Nefertiti resurrected and numbered it.

i.e.

[ 18 ] Her name means "perfection" A queen of legendary

[ 19 ] beauty, she was the royal consort of the pharaoh

[ 20 ] Akhenaton and loving mother to six daughters and

[ 21 ] stepson Tutankhamen.

[ 80 ] In a walled-up chamber deep in a tomb, Dr. Joann

[ 81 ] Fletcher she's found the [ 82 ] missing queen.

If you buy or record the program and have the transcript printed out, you can make notes.

If you question my own assertions, you need only need compare my words and the program.

Most pictures I include are from the program, so if I pop in a picture I will give the exact reference where the images appear in the "documentary"

My responses to this transcript -> will easily be found<http://encyclopediaegypt.com/NefResNum.htm>The whole numbered transcript is here.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23522|2007-10-28 21:04:47|ANGELINE BANDON-BIBUM|New Member, Angeline, says "Hello"!

Hello Everyone!

My name is Angeline Bandon-Bibum, and I live in Maryland. I'm married with three children. I'm also an author. I look forward to participating in discussions with the Ta Seti Group.

Peace be with you!

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream

Check out my websites:

<http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum>

<http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamanovel.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamlamentationsofawarrior.blogspot.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23523|2007-10-28 23:31:05|asar_imhotep|Where are the research papers of Chancellor Williams?|

Peace Phamily

I wanted to know if anyone on this list would have any information on the research that was not published by Dr. Chancellor Williams? Has anyone attempted to summarize his work based on these papers and other findings? He mentions in his work The Destruction of Black Civilizations that he intended for his work to be a several volume series, but due to him becoming blind, he had to hurry and do a summation in one volume.

I would like to know if someone bought his papers? Are they in a university library? Does his family still have the works? I mean, what has been done with them?

I appreciate any information one can provide.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23524|2007-10-29 08:06:16|A.E.|NefResNum.htm 18 through 21|

Attachments :

Consort = A husband or wife, especially the spouse of a monarch

Nefer (in regards to Jewelry) = reddish stones you can pick up from the ground or baked clay mixed with coloring agents. Nefer = clay or little reddish rocks strung together to make a bracelet or necklaces. Dirt cheap to make. Nefer necklace = pretty rocks strung on a string. Most of the pretty "nefer" necklaces I have seen are made up of assorted colored stones.

Nefer = good, to be good, beautiful, gracious, pleasant

Nefer = means "the house of vitality".

Nefer = beautiful

Nefer = God or Goddess in hieroglyphs.

Nefer = red stone or red porcelain and was worn from a necklace or a string of beads

Nefer Mut = means Mother of God

Porcelain = ceramic made by firing a pure clay and then glazing it with variously colored fusible materials

[ 18 ] Her name means "perfection" A queen of legendary

[ 19 ] beauty, she was the royal consort of the pharaoh

[ 20 ] Akhenaton and loving mother to six daughters and

[ 21 ] stepson Tutankhamen.

18 Her name .. the name Nefer can be goddess, pretty, good, gracious, pleasant. I suppose no different than today people picked fancy names for their children.

19 Consort=wife, but I know of no marriages as such. At that time it was socially accepted for a man to have as many babes as he could get. If he had the normal male urges and was ruler of Egypt how many babes would he have had? Well just ask any young man (a) If it was totally acceptable and (b) you could take any beautiful girls you wanted and (c) you owned every room in the hotel, how many rooms would be empty.

We don't have any proof of what Akhenaton actually did do, but we can ask any young male what they would do if they were in that situation.

Consort = wife ... wife = women a man keeps around for sex/companionship.

I suppose Akhenaton had more royal consorts than you could put in a motel, choosing one or more when ever they filled his appetite at that time.

20 A mother to 6 daughters. I think this is right but I have yet to find the hieroglyphs where they are recorded as her daughters ???

21 A step son Tutankhamen.. IF Tut was the son of Akhenaton. This is believed but I have yet to find the hieroglyphs that identify Tut as the son of Akhenaton ???

21 Tutankhamen would have also been the son in-law of Nefertiti.

21 If Tut was the son of Akhenaton and Akhenaton died it would have been Tut (NOT Nefertiti) who would have been the next ruler.

21 If after Akhenaton died, Nefertiti was the next ruler, then Tut was not a ruler of Egypt.

21 Neither Nefertiti nor Tut's name is recorded in the hieroglyphs that manifest the names of the Egyptian rulers.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23525|2007-10-29 08:06:32|A.E.|NefResNum.htm 22 through 26|

Attachments :

NefResNum.htm

[ 22 ] She was queen Nefertiti, and she ruled as an equal to [ 23 ] any man, past or present.

The European concept of Queen.. one of the ruler's babes, in the middle east would take on the meaning of one of the ruler's pleasure givers. In the middle east in those times... (if you read such books as the bible)

Esther 2: 12. The instructions concerning these girls were that before being taken to the king's bed, each would be given six months of beauty treatments with oil of myrrh, followed by six months with special perfumes and ointments. Then, as each girl's turn came for spending the night with King Ahasuerus, she was given her choice of clothing or jewelry she wished, to enhance her beauty. She was taken to the king's apartment in the evening and the next morning returned to the second harem where the king's wives lived.

You are the ruler of the whole nations. You cannot break any laws because any thing you say is the law and you have all the babes you can keep up with. Nefertiti may have gotten pregnant on some of the times it was her turn to sleep with the king, but Akhenaton (if his plumbing worked) would have had dozens of children.

It is written Solomon had 1000 wives and concubines, how many children would he have produced?

Nefertiti may have been head of Akhenaton's harem. The concept of Akhenaton going steady with one true love is laughable. Nefertiti was only one of the deserts in the fun room of Akhenaton.

One of the Pharaohs is reported to having over 100 children.

[ 24 ] With her husband, they challenged the established

[ 25 ] religious order; an unforgivable sin, even for a

[ 26 ] pharaoh; a sin so great, it may have led to her murder

24 Nefertiti one of multiple wives

24 Where is any text that identifies any conflict between Akhenaton and the priest

24 Akhenaton was Pharaoh, he was the establishment ... the god that walked among men.

25 In what text did any priest declare the sun worship a sin?

25 In what text is it written that Akhenaton stopped the worship of other gods?
25 In what text is it written that Akhenaton stopped funding other religious worship?
25 In what text is it written other types of worship ceased when Akhenaton became ruler?
25 If Akhenaton was the living god how could he commit a sin and where is it written there was ever any controversy in his reign?
26 If Fletcher is going to state any thing let to Nefertiti's murder, wouldn't Fletcher first have to prove how Nefertiti died?
26 When the wounds were first found on that mummy, Fletcher speculated grave robbers did it after death
26 When the scientist stated the wounds were made centuries before while the body was still moist, Fletcher needed to change her story from grave robbers did it, to the woman was murdered.. and because this woman has wounds typical to murder, that is how she jumps to "Nefertiti was murdered by the priest".

As far as I know

- * There is NO text stating Akhenaton cut off any funds for worship outside of the sun god.
- * There is NO text stating other types of worship ceased or were reduced
- * There is NO text stating the outrage of any priest.

We do have information that the sun god appears to have been the personal favorite of Akhenaton and that is ALL we have.

As far as I have read or have been shown, the whole story only one God being worshipped under Akhenaton is nothing more than information created by "experts" by virtue of their imaginations.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23526|2007-10-29 08:07:44|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: New Member, Angeline, says "Hello"!|
Greetings Angeline, welcome to Ta_Seti!

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23527|2007-10-29 10:07:53|Peter Gray|Re: Victor Loret - KV35 - proposed mummy of Nefertiti|

I agree this is more Loret biograpphy than anything to do with Nefertiti.

Peter

---

To: SOE-lounge@yahoogroups.com; EncEg_Nefertiti@yahoogroups.com;
Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: archaic.egypt@encyclopediaegypt.com
Date: Sun, 28 Oct 2007 12:19:22 -0500
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Victor Loret - KV35 - proposed mummy of Nefertiti

Victor Loret, the Egyptologist who first went into KV35?

The whole assertion of Joann Fletcher is based on a mummy found in KV35, so we first need to see :

* What is in the manifest of mummies, artifacts recorded by Loret.

* What items were taken out.

It seems that Joann Fletcher has nothing to say about this KV35 info, so let's start there.

=====

Loret's collection of papers, drawings, photographs and other materials where kept, until the heirs eventually decided to sell them. Thanks to the antiquarian booksellers Ars Libri of Boston, which had already sold the Varille library in 2001, the Universita di Milano was able to acquire the entire archive in January 2002, thereby enriching its important Egyptological resources.

[ <http://www.unimib.it/go/Home/English-version> ]

=====

If we are even going to consider the mummy in KV35 could possibly belong to Nefertiti, we must first investigate that tomb.

Here is an e-mail I have been sending to universities / museums that are deal with Loret and KV35

-----

"Is there any such thing as a manifest of mummies, artifacts Loret removed from KV35?"

-----

What was in the tomb when Loret documented it and what was removed is essential to our investigation

=====

How is it that all mummies but these 3 were taken from the tomb to the museum in Cairo?

If they entered the particular room at one time and found a straight arm and later it was replaced with a bent arm, did a ghost play musical arms ?

Why was the whole series of rooms stripped from their contents about 100 years ago, but only these 3 mummies were left? Show us other rooms that contained mummies when Fletcher went to KV35 to investigate?

Was there any other rooms the extra arms could have come from or did the extra "bent arm" come from outside of that tomb?

The place that appears to have the writings of Loret is the Universita di Milano... but with his original text we find in the records of The Theban project... KV 35 was used as a cache for the mummies of Thutmes IV, Amenhetep III, Merenptah, Sety II, Siptah, Rameses IV, Rameses V, Rameses VI, an anonymous female called the "Elder Woman" (who some think is Tiy, the wife of Amenhetep III), and a further mummy, probably of Setnakht. The mummies remained undisturbed until they were discovered by Victor Loret.

Categories of Objects Recovered, Accessories, Architectural elements , Clothing, Food , Human mummies ,Jewellery ,Models ,Sculpture ,Tomb equipment ,Vegetal remains ,Vessels ,Warfare and hunting equipment, Written documents

The tomb was stripped of it's contents.. artifacts AND mummies.. all except for 3 mummies in one room?

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!
| 23528|2007-10-29 11:56:36|A.E.|My wife went shopping !!! AGAIN !!! and|

Attachments :

She bought this book from half price book store

<http://www.mykidsbookbee.com/?q=hieroglyphics>

Second row down, second from the left about $8.00

Heiroglyphics. The secrets of Ancient Egyptian writing to unlock and discover

This version is for kids. I haven't opened it. I will give it to my grand daughter. How hard is it to learn Chinese.. they create university classes to teach it, and yet Chinese children can read and speak Chinese.

It has some little games in it, so maybe I can get the kid to learn Heiroglyphics and teach me?

My past experience of learning things in the past is to begin with material targeted at children. The "adult versions" have authors assuming readers already know things .. building blocks essential to understanding the next chunks of information.

Often these books are reduced 50 to 85%. If you buy them local or some on line places there is no shipping.

<http://missteapot.vox.com/library/book>

This is only one of many such Egyptology books for children. If you want to learn hieroglyphics start with the basics.

All actual knowledge of the identities of people and what they did will be found in the ancient text.

I suppose you could buy one of those $120.00 books you can't understand and won't read, but it will be another cool dust collector on your shelf.

Start with a children's book, then grab one of your grand children and pretend it is for them. This particular version has assorted games. I can't recommend any one, it just got here because my wife went shopping !!!AGAIN!!! and it looks like it could be fun for little kids and big ones who love Egyptology.

My grand kids live about a thousand miles away, so I won't get to open the fun looking box. Let me know if you get your grandchildren to teach you, then you can teach me.

If you are going to play this game, check around there may be better versions than this and the library is cool... but their boxes don't have games, rubber stamps, stickers and a model of the temple of Ramses you (Oooops I mean your grandkid) can build.

There may be a tutor DVD at your library check it out, most now have all kind of travel or history videos.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23529|2007-10-29 11:57:09|cristofori whitakara|Re: New Member, Angeline, says "Hello"!
nice to have another member mrs. bandon-bibum

ANGELINE BANDON-BIBUM wrote:

Hello Everyone!

My name is Angeline Bandon-Bibum, and I live in Maryland. I'm married with three children. I'm also an author. I look forward to participating in discussions with the Ta Seti Group.

Peace be with you!

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream

Check out my websites:

<http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum>

<http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamanovel.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamlamentationsofawarrior.blogspot.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23530|2007-10-29 12:37:38|Mahari Mengistu|James Watson Quits Post After Remarks on Races|

This guy's son has schizophrenia. It used to be considered that mental illness was inherited. I think there is less emphasis on that theory now. But it strikes me as logical that if schizophrenia and bipolar can be helped - as he stated - through genetic research and genes are inherited that insanity (of a sort) can be inherited. So it could be that he is a "mild" schizo. And what we are experiencing is the rantings of a mad scientist. And he got lucky with his research; perhaps, because of his "madness". Perhaps, it shows the benefits of stepping out of the box or not living in the "box". LOL

James Watson Quits Post After Remarks on Races

By CORNELIA DEAN

Published: October 26, 2007

James D. Watson, the eminent biologist who ignited an uproar last week with remarks about the intelligence of people of African descent, retired yesterday as chancellor of the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory on Long Island, and from its board.

John Dunn for The New York Times

James D. Watson addressing a June 2006 class at the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory.

🔊 Back Story With Cornelia Dean and David Corcoran\(mp3\)

Related

Text: Statement by James D. Watson (October 25, 2007)

Text: Announcement by Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory (October 25, 2007)

In a statement, Dr. Watson noted that, at 79, he was "overdue" to surrender leadership positions at the laboratory, which he joined as director in 1968. He was president from 1994 until 2003. But he said the circumstances of his resignation "are not those which I could ever have anticipated or desired."

Dr. Watson, who shared a 1962 Nobel Prize for describing the double-helix structure of DNA, and later headed the American government's part in the international Human Genome Project, is leaving in a swirl of denunciations and canceled speaking invitations, including one from Rockefeller University, which yesterday canceled a lecture he was to have given next week.

Dr. Watson, who has long had a reputation for challenging scientific orthodoxy and for sometimes incendiary off-the-cuff remarks, became a center of controversy last week after he was quoted in The Times of London as suggesting that, over all, people of African descent are not as intelligent as people of European descent.

In the ensuing uproar, he issued a statement apologizing "unreservedly" for the comments, adding, "There is no scientific basis for such a belief."

But Dr. Watson he did not say he was misquoted, and he could not be reached for comment yesterday.

In a brief interview, Bruce Stillman, the president of the laboratory, insisted that Dr. Watson's decision to step down was his own. Last week, the board had relieved him of administrative responsibilities as chancellor, a position in which he was concerned mostly with education efforts and fund-raising.

In a statement, the laboratory said Dr. Watson had transformed Cold Spring Harbor from "a small facility into one of the world's great education and research institutions." Eduardo Mestre, chairman of the laboratory's board, said he had made "immeasurable contributions" to the establishment.

But a spokesman for the laboratory said yesterday that while Dr. Watson would keep an office at the laboratory and would live there "in a house he built on land the laboratory owns," he would no longer have a job there.

Other officials at the laboratory did not respond to telephone calls.

The furor erupted in England, where Dr. Watson was touring to promote his new book, "Avoid Boring People: Lessons from a Life in Science" (Knopf). After his remarks were reported, the Science Museum in London canceled a sold-out speech he was scheduled to deliver and his comments were widely denounced as racist.

The lecture Rockefeller University canceled yesterday was in connection with Dr. Watson's receipt of this year's Lewis Thomas Prize, which the university awards annually to scientists whose books help bridge the gap between the laboratory and the wider world. Dr. Watson is being honored for "The Double Helix," the book he wrote about the elucidation of DNA. Though he will still receive the prize, and the $5,000 it carries, "there were some members of the university community who had expressed reservations about Dr. Watson coming here to speak after the controversy over his remarks in the U.K.," Joseph Bonner, Rockefeller's director of communications, said yesterday.

Mr. Bonner said that just as Rockefeller's president, Sir Paul M. Nurse, had decided to cancel the event, Dr. Watson called to suggest the same thing. Mr. Bonner said Sir Paul made the decision after consulting "various members of the university community and university leadership."

In his statement, Dr. Watson said the work of the Human Genome Project, an international effort that deciphered the chemical contents of human genes, had opened the door to work on many diseases, particularly illnesses like schizophrenia and bipolar disorder, ailments that he said had afflicted members of his family.

But he was also aware of how the knowledge of genetics could be used for malign purposes. One of his first acts as director of the Human Genome Project was to set aside 3 percent of its money for studies of the work's legal and ethical implications. The figure was later raised to 5 percent.

In his statement Dr. Watson referred to his Scots and Irish forebears, saying their lives had been guided by faith in reason and social justice, "especially the need for those on top to help care for the less fortunate."

| 23531|2007-10-29 13:12:32|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: James Watson Quits Post After Remarks on Races|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

>

> This guy's son has schizophrenia. It used to be considered that mental > illness was inherited. I think there is less emphasis on that theory > now.

For the longest time, the idea that schizophrenia was inherited was the holy grail of behavioral genetics, social biology, etc.

However, all the years of research has not provided a single genetic marker that causes the condition.

There are some genetic conditions that can increase one's susceptibility to schizophrenia, for example the lack of the rhesus factor, but none of these cause the condition.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23532|2007-10-29 13:23:42|cristofori whitakara|nubian language|

i was reading the first book of kings in the old testament and i came across this verse. after reading it i thought to myself that this Edomite prince had to speak the nubian language if in fact he was in the "king of egypt's" court". Is Tahpenes another name for northern sudan?

"14": And the LORD stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: he was of the king's seed in Edom.

"15": For it came to pass, when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, after he had smitten every male in Edom;

"16": (For six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom:)

"17": That Hadad fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a little child.

"18": And they arose out of Midian, and came to Paran: and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt; which gave him an house, and appointed him victuals, and gave him land.

"19": And Hadad found great favour in the sight of Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the queen.

"20": And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's house: and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23533|2007-10-29 14:08:00|cristofori whitakara|nubian language|

in the another chapter of the first book of king chapter nine it is written that:

16: For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife.

when solomon spoke to this wife was he speaking her language or his?

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23534|2007-10-29 15:42:07|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: nubian language|

The same language because the biblical Hebrews are the people of Kemet.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>
>
>

> in the another chapter of the first book of king chapter nine it is written that:

> 16: For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife.

> when solomon spoke to this wife was he speaking her language or

his?

>
>
>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23535|2007-10-29 17:45:47|Matthew|, Just for fun, out of debating the origins of expression and transl|

Authorship and authority and authenticity

:

.I found this text written in latin on the the sacred texts archive site in the egyptian section "The Hieroglyphs of Horapollo " translated by Alexander Turner. I found this to be appropriate as to the discussion of secular or lexiconic translation of "Egyptian" as a scientific language of ecological principals and a poetic form of expression that embraces the fluid nature of communication that is passed from one generation to the next.

I translated this line or line from latin to english, in the style of an olde bard. from "How manliness combined with temperance" or Masculinity:

Calidissum enim est huic animali membrum,

Though his skin seem hard and cold as stone,

ita ut semel eo in foeminae vulvam immisso vel abseque uollo moto semen effutiat.

in truth in time is as soft as womens lips and ripe as the grapes before the wine.

Quod si quando a vulva vaccae aberrans,

For when a kiss empty errs such planting,

in alium corporis partem membrum intendent,

even death this moment can not penetrate,

tum ejas immodica intentione vaccani vulnerat.

for here truth lies as mountains vast emptiness embraces.

Quin et temperans est quippe cum nunquam post conceptum, vaccam ineat.

For within all a eons endless with infinity yet even dreamed, in utter fullness lives.

The playing with word forms here is monumental if not circumspect, the Romans and their language have much beauty truth and continuity to offer us still and tied with egypt's forgotten son, as their perception and expression sleeps, have much rearing ahead of us.

Much respect and joy.

Matt Mercer JAH

| 23536|2007-10-29 18:28:20|ANGELINE BANDON-BIBUM|Midwest Book Review (Oregon, WI USA)|

★★★★★ Highly recommended as a soulful romance that dares to contemplate fundamental and deadly serious human issues., September 6, 2007

By Midwest Book Review (Oregon, WI USA) -

The debut novel of wife and mother Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Sojourner's Dream is an African-American romance between Sojourner Brown, a shy graduate student, and Joseph Kalisa, a cultured corporate lawyer who works for an established law firm in Washington, D.C. Despite their attraction to and compassion for one another, Sojourner and Joseph must each confront their past before they can move ahead into the future. Sojourner will need to cultivate her inner strength to become a steadfast wife, while Joseph must come to terms with the genocide that took place in his native land of Rwanda. Highly recommended as a soulful romance that dares to contemplate fundamental and deadly serious human issues.

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream

Check out my websites:

<http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum>

<http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamanovel.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamlamentationsofawarrior.blogspot.com>

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream

Check out my websites:

<http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum>

<http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamanovel.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamlamentationsofawarrior.blogspot.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23537|2007-10-30 06:04:42|Peter Gray|Re: nubian language|

Dear Elliott (if that is your name),

Please explain how the Biblical Hebrews came to be Egyptian? Do you simply mean that by the time they left Egypt, they had become so thoroughly culturally acclimated that they spoke the Egyptian language?

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com

Date: Mon, 29 Oct 2007 22:15:52 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: nubian language

The same language because the biblical Hebrews are the people of Kemet.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

>

>

> in the another chapter of the first book of king chapter nine it is written that:

> 16: For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife.

> when solomon spoke to this wife was he speaking her language or
his?

>

>

>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Cafe Stop by today!
| 23538|2007-10-30 06:19:30|Peter Gray|Re: James Watson Quits Post After Remarks on Races|
Back in the early nineties when I was working with a molecular modelling firm in New Jersey on protein/DNA interaction with small molecules, (among other diverse chemistries), I did have occasion to interact with Cold Spring Harbor researchers, but could not sense the "schizophrenia". However, I did have a vigorous suspicion of the seemingly close collaboration they had with Fort Detrick, which was also a client of mine, and which also has a suspect history regarding blacks and "third world" peoples.

Paul, do you have the actual remarks he made?

Regards,

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: mahari@myway.com

Date: Mon, 29 Oct 2007 19:37:33 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] James Watson Quits Post After Remarks on Races

This guy's son has schizophrenia. It used to be considered that mental illness was inherited. I think there is less emphasis on that theory now. But it strikes me as logical that if schizophrenia and bipolar can be helped - as he stated - through genetic research and genes are inherited that insanity (of a sort) can be inherited. So it could be that he is a "mild" schizo. And what we are experiencing is the rantings of a mad scientist. And he got lucky with his research; perhaps, because of his "madness". Perhaps, it shows the benefits of stepping out of the box or not living in the "box". LOL

James Watson Quits Post After Remarks on Races

By CORNELIA DEAN

Published: October 26, 2007

James D. Watson, the eminent biologist who ignited an uproar last week with remarks about the intelligence of people of African descent, retired yesterday as chancellor of the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory on Long Island, and from its board.

John Dunn for The New York Times

James D. Watson addressing a June 2006 class at the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory.

🔊 Back Story With Cornelia Dean and David Corcoran\(mp3\)

Related

Text: Statement by James D. Watson (October 25, 2007)

Text: Announcement by Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory (October 25, 2007)

In a statement, Dr. Watson noted that, at 79, he was "overdue" to surrender leadership positions at the laboratory, which he joined as director in 1968. He was president from 1994 until 2003. But he said the circumstances of his resignation "are not those which I could ever have anticipated or desired."

Dr. Watson, who shared a 1962 Nobel Prize for describing the double-helix structure of DNA, and later headed the American government's part in the international Human Genome Project, is leaving in a swirl of denunciations and canceled speaking invitations, including one from Rockefeller University, which yesterday canceled a lecture he was to have given next week.

Dr. Watson, who has long had a reputation for challenging scientific orthodoxy and for sometimes incendiary off-the-cuff remarks, became a center of controversy last week after he was quoted in The Times of London as suggesting that, over all, people of African descent are not as intelligent as people of European descent.

In the ensuing uproar, he issued a statement apologizing "unreservedly" for the comments, adding, "There is no scientific basis for such a belief." But Dr. Watson he did not say he was misquoted, and he could not be reached for comment yesterday.

In a brief interview, Bruce Stillman, the president of the laboratory, insisted that Dr. Watson's decision to step down was his own. Last week, the board had relieved him of administrative responsibilities as chancellor, a position in which he was concerned mostly with education efforts and fund-raising.

In a statement, the laboratory said Dr. Watson had transformed Cold Spring Harbor from "a small facility into one of the world's great education and research institutions." Eduardo Mestre, chairman of the laboratory's board, said he had made "immeasurable contributions" to the establishment.

But a spokesman for the laboratory said yesterday that while Dr. Watson would keep an office at the laboratory and would live there "in a house he built on land the laboratory owns," he would no longer have a job there.

Other officials at the laboratory did not respond to telephone calls.

The furor erupted in England, where Dr. Watson was touring to promote his new book, "Avoid Boring People: Lessons from a Life in Science" (Knopf). After his remarks were reported, the Science Museum in London canceled a sold-out speech he was scheduled to deliver and his comments were widely denounced as racist.

The lecture Rockefeller University canceled yesterday was in connection with Dr. Watson's receipt of this year's Lewis Thomas Prize, which the university awards annually to scientists whose books help bridge the gap between the laboratory and the wider world. Dr. Watson is being honored for "The Double Helix," the book he wrote about the elucidation of DNA. Though he will still receive the prize, and the $5,000 it carries, "there were some members of the university community who had expressed reservations about Dr. Watson coming here to speak after the controversy over his remarks in the U.K.," Joseph Bonner, Rockefeller's director of communications, said yesterday.

Mr. Bonner said that just as Rockefeller's president, Sir Paul M. Nurse, had decided to cancel the event, Dr. Watson called to suggest the same thing. Mr. Bonner said Sir Paul made the decision after consulting "various members of the university community and university leadership."

In his statement, Dr. Watson said the work of the Human Genome Project, an international effort that deciphered the chemical contents of human genes, had opened the door to work on many diseases, particularly illnesses like schizophrenia and bipolar disorder, ailments that he said had afflicted members of his family.

But he was also aware of how the knowledge of genetics could be used for malign purposes. One of his first acts as director of the Human Genome Project was to set aside 3 percent of its money for studies of the work's legal and ethical implications. The figure was later raised to 5 percent.

In his statement Dr. Watson referred to his Scots and Irish forebears, saying their lives had been guided by faith in reason and social justice, "especially the need for those on top to help care for the less fortunate."

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.
Play Now!

| 23539|2007-10-30 09:36:04|Franklin Jones|Fool a people that they are less and with time they'll come to accep|

Today when presented with the argument that white racism is still a detrimental problem in America many Blacks themselves may strongly disagree. There are those African Americans that share the belief that too many of their fellow blacks are guilty of over stating and over using white racism as a scape goat as an excuses for our own failures as a race. Today many African American may even clinch with embarrassment and lower their heads when another Black person makes a declaration concerning white racism within America today. [especially if their within the company of whites] In fact many African American even demonstrate profound resentment towards their fellow Blacks that makes such claims that white racism is still a detrimental problem in America today. This unprecedented division and fighting among ourselves on the issue of how relevant is white racism today upon the lives of African Americans exist because the system of white racism that prevails today is far more sophisticated today than any form of white racism previously faced before by African Americans. It is so in fact sophisticated that some of us have to better educate ourselves in order to recognize it. While perhaps nothing can be more frustrating for a Black person whom has been a victim of brutal white racism than having their fellow Blacks ignore their cries and arguing with them while accusing them of peddling victim-hood, it should nevertheless be expected that some Blacks would disagree with the racist analogy given the circumstances of today of where in which the African American psyche is subjected almost every moment of their existence to a mortifying paradigm-environment of where in which the racist perceptions, value system and norms of the "so-called" white majority that negatively portrays Blacks as non-contributors and as the problems for all that is wrong in America through their controlled media therefore accordingly many African Americans would identify with their white counterparts and against themselves. They have become conditioned to do.

We are all to some degree affected by the messages that the media feeds to us. However there are those segment of African Americans that are more deeply influenced by the false information that is deliberately being fed through the national media. Many Black viewers unknowingly succumb to the campaign of negative psychological warfare that is deliberately being implemented against the black race therefore acquiring the U.S. Government's divide and conquer objectives. Having been routinely subjected all of their lives to unrelenting series of negative statistics and stories about themselves many Black themselves develops a perceptions of disdain and contempt for their own race. The negative media reports may even cause some Blacks to literary identify with white hatreds towards blacks ["some may even go as far as to say that Black people makes them sick and so embarrassed and therefore that they can understand why white's hate us."] Furthermore these feelings of self contempt among many African Americans are then further exacerbated during their educational development where they subjected to a miseducational system of where in which white are falsely made to appear more humane and creative throughout history and the contributions and achievements of Blacks remains omitted. A racist educational system of where Black students are taught to respect the contributions and achievements of whites and nothing of themselves other than slavery and the civil right era struggles. [An educational system system that withholds 97% percent of their contributions as a race.]

The U.S. Government deliberately uses the media to greatly influence the perception of its Black population. like for example the negative portrayal of Africa- a portrayal excluding the fact that the disparities now suffered by Africa are the direct results of white racist imperialism and greed- may cause many African Americans to develop contempt and embarrassment of their African lineage and to feel a sense of gratitude to America now believing that their enslaved parents were the lucky one being brought from the back wards that is Africa.

And to the contrary the negative portrayal of African Americans before the world causes many Africans to come to America believing that Black Americans are lazy , good for nothing and have contributed nothing towards building America thus keeping us divided.

Another example that we African Americans are all to some degree victims of the U.S. Government's negative propaganda that causes us to believe negatively of ourselves is the fact that many African Americans share the belief of the negative premise that Blacks don't like to read, however to the contrary to this premise whenever we visit the public libraries within our communities we most often find its halls filled with Black children either reading books or reading on the Internet. Also in fact never before in the history of Africans in America have we ever had more Black authors, Black publishing companies, Black magazine than we do now. Twenty years ago Jet magazine was published by the Johnson publishing company once a month now they publish Jet magazine once a week. The Johnson publishing company they have now grown to one of the most successful publishing companies in the world their publications are now sold in Africa , the Caribbean and virtually everywhere that Black people can be found reading.

But despite these facts we Black accept the negative lies about us and start saying it among ourselves. Some Blacks are made to believe that equality now exists within America because of all of the successful Black celebrities that have obtained millionaire status. However the truth of the matter is that most Black that acquire millionaire status does so because they possess talents that whites can exploit to become multimillionaires and even become billionaires. for every Black entertainer or athlete that earns $10 million this year

There are whites behind the scene making hundreds of millions worldwide exploiting that Black celebrity. Most of us that acquire this degree of success does so only when whites can financially benefit from exploiting us.

African Americans can no longer survive as nations hanging on to lies. A reality of truth must prevail if we are to be a part of the future. Racism is still a devastating problem that continues to erode America like a cancer. The many problems now facing Black America will not be corrected by affirmative action or implementing outdated strategies of foot marches, speeches, the commemoration of fallen Black martyrs, nor from the preaching of scriptures from any religious texts, but instead by exposing and the eradication of today's modern system of institutionalized racism of where in which America's Black citizens are today more proficiently than ever before- being systematically imprisoned, murdered, exploited, suppressed, racially devalued through mis-education, confused and turned against each other through negative psychological warfare conducted through a controlled media.

Despite the many substantial gains made today by African Americans in the field of entertainment, education, and politics, the U.S. Government's secret unyielding determination to maintain its White dominance by implementing methods of suppressing its Black population has not been truly abandoned-- but rather more sophisticated reincarnated to be more acceptable with contemporary times. Today, the masses of African Americans remain still the largest, most racially devalued and most deliberately exploited and suppressed class in America , only now the methods now used avoid the conventional, blatant, now morally unacceptable methods used in the past. Unlike the brutal system of racism used in the past that caused African Americans to rally together and unify themselves against, this modern system of racism is not easily comprehended by Blacks. Most African Americans have never heard of this method of asserting White racism, therefore many will find it too shocking and stunning to contemplate nevertheless, it is directly intertwined with the many problems adversely affecting Black America today. It is a method so opaque that many of its Black victims remain largely unaware of it themselves. And while most African Americans may instinctively feel that something is wrong, they cannot, however, express their suspicions and conceptualize them sufficiently so that they and others can comprehend and act to defend themselves against it. It is, in fact, so sophisticated that even very bright African American individuals have little, if any, hope of extricating themselves from its brutal effects. In fact, most Blacks cannot believe that they are being attacked or subdued because it wears the appearance [if any] of being totally self-inflicted by African Americans themselves.

Clearly now there are those of you that are irritatingly thinking that here goes another Black man wrongly blaming whites again for the short comings of Blacks. These type of perceptions and responses are not uncommon today, even from among Blacks also -- moreover they are expected. Today, the scenario of the Black victim peddler that is always playing the inevitable race card to overstate their case and absolve themselves from all responsibility is deliberately overstated and perpetuated within the American society. This deliberately being done to discourage and prevent us from realizing that there actually does exist a modern deliberate system of racism implemented by America's White governmental elites with the underlying objective of maintaining White dominance.

The following disclosure that exposes a more prevalent and detrimental form of racism that now prevails in the U.S. will be quite difficult and very uncomfortable for many Americans to accept. It will also be difficult for even many African Americans themselves. Because the Black Psyche has been so deliberately bombarded with negative images of themselves, and are unknowingly conditioned through a controlled media and racially biased educational system to respect and admire America's white culture and to subconsciously despise themselves—it has therefore become literally more easier for many Blacks to accept that the problem is now themselves rather than that of white racism. Therefore for Blacks to realize the following monumental disclosure will require that they overcome a psychologically ingrained White is right preferential that has been indoctrinated unrelentingly upon the Black psyche that is rarely moved and reexamine some of their prior negative self-perceptions of themselves. Although this will be a difficult task for many, however in doing so, the rewards will be a change from feelings of hopelessness and despair to an awareness of the most urgent issue of our time.

Although today most African Americans do not experience racism the way their parents experienced it, they do, however, still experience White racism. White racism in the U.S. is still a current and devastating problem that now prevails with sophistication and is employed more covertly and more proficiently than ever before. Since the methods of the past were no longer morally acceptable, the decline of the blatant, overt racism used in the United States to suppress African Americans up until the 1960's coincided with the implementation of a better disguised, more intensified, sophisticated, and more covert method of White racism more fitting for the times.

Today the most prevalent and lethal system of racism assaulting African Americans now exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives. The U.S. Government's unrelenting commitment towards maintaining its white dominance accordingly resulted in it using this system against its Black population.

The United States government secretly implemented its largest ever covert operation against its Black population through a campaign of psychological warfare that deliberately conspires to severely reduce African Americans upward mobility by corrupting them of unity, reason, and common sense. By using false statistics and negative media reports denigrating its Black population and disproportionately portraying Black men as the face of crime and Black women as the face of welfare. These portrayals of African Americans are totally false and inaccurate but are necessary to produce a consensual environment of where in which Blacks are more easily exploited and their unity corrupted. The objective of this psychological warfare is to produce increasingly acrimonious beliefs and prejudiced perceptions about and against African Americans to create a shift in victimization in behalf of whites that lessens pressure for social change on behalf of Blacks thus making the nation and the entire world insensitive to the plight of African Americans, thus successfully stripping them of the national and international support that was acquired during the 1960's civil rights struggles. This campaign engenders a shift of victimization that fosters distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. Moreover, this method also makes any serious criticism of White racism almost impossible today. Not only does it tranquilize efforts on behalf of Blacks, it also affects attitudes that, when enacted through governmental policies, laws, and other legislation actions, serve to ensure that African Americans will not advance. Its effects are manifested in ideas, education, governmental policies, economic stratification, social segregation, housing markets, hiring and promotion practices, psychological issues, and minority access to a variety of social services and opportunity. It also creates a false justification for the legal systems mistreatment of African Americans wherein they are disproportionately incarcerated, given stiffer sentences, and are more likely than other racial groups to be treated brutally, beaten, and fired upon by police officers while they are unarmed.

This perversion of reality, shifting the blame, and role reversal of the problem of racism to be the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through press releases, pamphlets, radio, newspaper, and magazine articles and television. Because no group can be preconditioned to see only the worst in themselves and not exhibit some degree of negative psychological impact, the worst aspect of this psychological operation against America's Black population is, not how it adversely affects race relations, but instead how it causes many African Americans to perceive themselves.

The governmental psycho-social treatment of African Americans is designed to mold the character of self hatred. The unrelenting daily assault on the Black psyche [of were in which they are routinely subjected daily to seeing through a controlled national media only the worst in themselves that also insinuate that they should admire, respect, and trust only whites] corrupts many African Americans sense of reason, unity and also divides and demobilizes African Americans by engendering self-doubt, self-loathing, and distrust among their group. Here is a simplified analogy of how this is being done to America's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually come to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own ship even if theirs was in fact better. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception.

Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The United States Government's psychological operation of devaluing African Americans is not always recognized. In fact, in most cases, it is executed very subtly and is often done under the pretext of helping African Americans, while in fact actually exploiting them. For example, in August 1996, then President William Bill Clinton signed the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, better known as the Welfare Reform Bill. During the ceremonial undertaking, which was broadcast on television to the entire nation and the world, the president was strategically accompanied by two African American welfare moms who were positioned on either side of him as he signed the new bill perpetuating false images of African American women without using overt racism thus feeding and perpetuating the racist stereotype that the largest recipients of welfare are lazy Black mothers. This image was filmed, photographed, and transmitted all over the world thus meeting the government's objective of changing the face of racism in America to reflect that the racial problem in America stems from behavior among African Americans which justifies White attitudes towards Blacks while producing psychological feelings of embarrassment, gratitude, and indebtedness among Blacks towards the American government.[ The fact, however, is that the largest recipient of welfare assistance are White women,] .

Perhaps no president relied more heavily on the use of the psychological operation that portrayed African American Women as negative welfare queens than Ronald Reagan . His career as an actor and spokesperson for General Electric provided him with an audience to redefine his storytelling style and to perfect the ability of appealing to the concerns and fears of White voters without the use of overtly racist appeals. Reagan's campaigns revolved around themes that exemplified the image of the Black welfare queen. Reagan gave an elaborate story of welfare abuse that appeared in the New York Times which stated that there's a woman in Chicago . She has 80 names, 30 addresses, 12 social security cards, and is collecting veteran benefits on 4 non-existing deceased husbands. And she is collecting social Security on her cards. She's got Medicaid, is getting food stamps, and she is collecting welfare under each name. Her tax-free income is over $150,000. The speech emphasized how "they, the abusers, enjoy lives of leisure, whereas "we" [Whites] work harder than ever before with little chance of ever getting ahead. The welfare queen abuse story played, and continues to play, well among the White masses, and its reference to the abuser leaves little doubt about the implied racial identity of the abuser without stating the racial identity of the abuser explicitly. The story then acquires a life of its own, far more elaborate and lucrative than before. At times, she has more kids and less husbands. Nevertheless, it worked because it delivered messages penetrating the consciousness of White voters across party lines. After Reagan defeated Carter in the 1980 election, the welfare stories made it possible for him to reduce social programs.

A more recent example of the United States deliberate devaluing of African Americans through the usage of psychological operations was seen during the 2005 flooding of New Orleans in the wake of Hurricane Katrina. While many African American victims that where left behind suffered from hunger, dehydration, and the trauma of having loved ones dying all around them, the White media was more adept at portraying these Black victims as wild, inhuman, deviant criminals. The press presented, for the most part, those images of the desperate and suffering Black families that reinforced their negative and racist stereotypes. As seen, for example, were in which the media painted the perception that most of these Black people were uncontrollable looters stealing equipment and appliances although their homes were under water. Nevertheless, the images of Black people taking food and water were perpetuated as looting as shown in the constant repetition of the same 5-minute looping footage of so-called looters. On the other hand, Whites doing the same thing were portrayed in television coverage as shopping for food. If the looting by Blacks was as rampant as reported, why then was there the need to keep repeating the same 5-minute footage again and again?

Then, there were the many unfounded rumors broadcast, not only nationally but also globally; that hospitals had been raided by drug addicts; and that there were many gang rapes of women and children in the New Orleans Convention Center; also that babies' throats had been cut; and that Black thugs were shooting at rescuers. Although these rumors were later found to be untrue, the damage was already done against African Americans. What is more, African Americans are denigrated within every aspect of American society by the U.S. government's psychological operation -- from their educational failures, their crime statistics, and also their national health statistic reports. Where, based upon the U.S. Government's national health statistics and reports concerning the health of Black America, it appears as if the bodies of Black people are literally genetically and physically inferior to that of the bodies of Whites. However, when examined outside of governmental discretion and control, we see, to the contrary, that Blacks are most often America's greatest athletes.

This tendency of the U.S. government to routinely subjugate African Americans within the American society is clearly a case of psychological warfare at work. The mounting evidence is too great to be purely coincidental and too prevalent to be merely dismissed as an oversight or as being the work of a few local governments. It is being deliberately implemented at a national level. Moreover, this modern racism, as herein defined, has had a serious deleterious effect on many African Americans. It is believed to be directly attributed to the intensification of internalized racism, loss of motivation, school failure, profound division, and present confused outlook that is now so prevalent among so many African Americans today.

Moreover, all African Americans have experienced the burden of this psychological warfare, some more severely than others. It is experienced every time we [Blacks] read a newspaper, watch the evening news, enter a classroom, and read its racially biased textbooks. And while many Black Americans have successfully navigated through the mortifying system of modern racism and have gone on to lead successful, productive lives, for far too many African Americans this immense devaluation can seem inescapable and tragically, over time, many begin to accept subconsciously and painfully the negative portrayals of themselves. Many also become discouraged by the acceptance that their society is also preconditioned to see the worst in them and that, therefore, if they were ever to gain acceptance, if it is to be won at all, that success would be hard won and likely to manifest negative internalized psychological pain and distress within many African Americans that can take many forms. Under such extreme degradation as experienced by African Americans, many develop the psychological aberration of self contempt wherein which they become literally prejudiced against other Blacks.

Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs. The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

The U.S. Government's ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

This psychological operation also discourages our brightest and most gifted African Americans who historically were responsible for gathering and motivating the lesser-educated and complacent masses of African Americans to demand equality. Many of these Black elites are rendered disillusioned and frustrated, therefore now having fallen victim in adopting the same disdain and contemptuous views towards the lesser fortunate Black masses as their White counterparts do, themselves saying that the rhetoric of victimization of racism by the lesser fortunate Blacks are merely excuses. They've adopted the same ideology and character of their White counterparts in regards to the Black masses; thus making the case that, if they have made it then, all those other less fortunate Blacks can also do the same. Many of these successful Blacks have also moved to the suburbs segregating themselves from the Black masses and, instead of focusing their efforts on the suffering of these Black masses, now redirect their attention towards trying to show Whites that not all Blacks are like these negative images depicted. This psychological operation of influence also undermines Black leadership. Many Black leaders today -- although most will perhaps never publicly admit this -- have become disillusioned and frustrated by the false statistics and representation of their fellow African American masses. Many leaders, in profound frustration and desperation, have called out to the African American community for a spiritual revival of themselves. Moreover, many of our Black leaders have become complacent in terms of significance, gains, and effectiveness. Today, there is no more real striving, no more real struggle, and no significant gains made. Many of our leaders have become insignificant pied pipers who lead the following back masses on outdated foot marching strategies while shouting out the cries of racism and demands for equality. The only effectiveness these strategies serve is as a platform to give the illusion and appearance of hope and action. However, within such a mortifying environment as Black people endure psychologically in daily life, perhaps hope is a good thing.

The African American psyches have borne centuries of extremely unhealthy and brutal devaluing in the American society from slavery through its aftermath of Jim Crow inequalities, but today's system of covert white racism is by far arguably the worst system of racism ever faced by African Americans and also Africans the world over.

These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are on-going, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblack truth.org

---

Be a better Globetrotter. Get better travel answers from someone who knows.
Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

---

Building a website is a piece of cake.
Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

---

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>
| 23540|2007-10-31 08:26:36|Paul Kekai Manansala|Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|

Unearthing Egypt's Greatest Temple

Discovering the grandeur of the monument built 3,400 years ago

- By Andrew Lawler
- Smithsonian magazine, October 2007

Rebellious Son

Andrew Lawler

Amenhotep III was succeeded by one of the first known monotheists

"Heya hup!" Deep in a muddy pit, a dozen workers wrestle with Egypt's fearsome lion goddess, struggling to raise her into the sunlight for the first time in more than 3,000 years. She is Sekhmet?"the one who is powerful"?the embodiment of the fiery eye of the sun god Ra, but now she is caked in dirt and bound by thick rope. As the workers heave her out of the pit and onto a wooden track, the sand shifts and the six-foot-tall granite statue threatens to topple. A half-dozen men in ankle-length robes grab the taut ropes, again shout the Arabic equivalent of "heave, ho!" and steady her just in time.

Within the hour, the seated Sekhmet is once again imperious: her breath creates the desert wind, her anger feeds on disease and war, and her power protects mighty pharaohs. Or did. This long-buried statue is one of 730?one for every day and night of the year?that guarded a vast collection of gates, colonnades, courts and halls built by the great Egyptian king Amenhotep III, who reigned over Egypt for 38 years in the 14th century B.C., at the height of peace and prosperity. In its day, "The House of Millions of Years" was the largest and most impressive temple complex in the world. But it was no match for earthquakes, fires, floods or Amenhotep III's successors, who scavenged stone blocks and statues for their own temples. Much of the site, near the Valley of the Kings along the west bank of the Nile River, is covered with sugar cane.

Hourig Sourouzian, an Armenian archaeologist, is directing the effort to rescue the long-neglected site and its many statues. "They didn't deserve this treatment!" she says as a worker hoses off the mud and salt coating a Sekhmet lined up with a dozen similar statues in the bright sun.

Egyptologists had long assumed that all that remained of the temple complex were the imposing Colossi of Memnon, two seated statues of Amenhotep III at the entrance to his temple, and some stones and fragments of statuary. Sourouzian had been working at a neighboring temple, Merentptah, from which she would visit the Amenhotep complex. "I was always interested in the fragmented statuary of the site and dreamed about seeing them reconstructed instead of lying in vegetation, water and junk," she recalls. Then, in 1996, a brush fire swept over the area, charring the stones and fragments and making them more vulnerable to cracking and erosion. When Sourouzian and her husband, German archaeologist Rainier Stadelmann, surveyed the damage, she says, "It was terrible and depressing, and we swore to take action."

First, she convinced the World Monuments Fund in 1998 to designate the temple one of the world's "100 Most Endangered Sites" and fund the initial conservation area of the shattered fragments aboveground. During the course of that effort, Sourouzian began to suspect that there was more to be found underground. By 2000, however, the money had run out, and she and Stadelmann reluctantly began to wrap up their work. But a wealthy French woman who had attended a lecture by Sourouzian in Paris agreed to fund a more ambitious excavation. Within a year, the team began to uncover their first statues, and the archaeologists realized that many treasures still lay beneath the dirt.

Born in Baghdad to parents of Armenian descent, Sourouzian grew up in Beirut and studied art history at the Sorbonne in Paris. Sent to Karnak by the Louvre, she became one of the leading authorities on Egyptian royal statuary. "She's probably the best Egyptian art historian of our time," says Betsy Bryan, an Egyptologist at Johns Hopkins University. Now, along with Stadelmann, who once headed the German Archaeological Institute in Cairo, Sourouzian orchestrates a team of two dozen specialists from around the world—including French, Swiss, German, Spanish and Japanese researchers—and as many as 400 local workers.

What began modestly has become one of the most ambitious projects Egypt has seen in decades, bringing to light a triumph of engineering and art that once dwarfed even the massive Karnak and Luxor temples across the Nile. Amenhotep III called the complex "a fortress of eternity out of good white sandstone—worked with gold throughout. Its floors were purified with silver, all of its doorways were of electrum," an alloy of gold and silver.

The recently liberated Sekhmet statue is one of 72 of the goddess that Sourouzian and her team have discovered. They've also found two huge statues of Amenhotep III, each flanked by a smaller one of Queen Tye and a menagerie of sacred animals, including an alabaster hippopotamus. The project is giving Egyptologists a fresh look at the mysterious temple culture that dominated ancient life here, in which hordes of priests conducted rituals, made offerings and administered the intricate rites designed to ensure the eternal well-being of the dead pharaoh.

1 2 3

| 23541|2007-10-31 09:56:48|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: nubian language|
Peter, my name is not important so Elliott will suffice.

"Please explain how the Biblical Hebrews came to be Egyptian?"

In my opinion, based on historical documentation and archeological evidence, the people of Kemet are the only culture that can authenticate Biblical history; therefore they have always been Hebraic in religious orientation.

"Do you simply mean that by the time they left Egypt, they had become so thoroughly culturally acclimated that they spoke the Egyptian language?"

Well if you believe the Exodus myth, by the time the Hebrews left Kemet, they would have had to been thoroughly culturally Kemetian.

But what I am saying, like Benjamin Sass in his work titled, The Genesis of the Alphabet and its Development in the Second Millennium BC, Agypten, " The origin of the Phoenician letters [and even more so the Old Negev letters] in the Proto-Canaanite and Proto-Sinaitic scripts, and the borrowing of most, if not all, letter forms in the latter script from Egyptian hieroglyphics on the basis of acrophony are now seen as indubitable facts (cf. Snyczyer 1974, 9)."

The Hebrew language is classified as an Afro-Asiatic language group because clearly the oldest Hebrew writings are Kemetian in origin.

Not only does the Hebrew language have Kemetian origins but many Biblical stories and religious traditions are validated by Kemetian historical accounts and archeological evidence.

The covenant of circumcision that God made with Abraham, the oldest Christian hymn and New Testament text, monotheism, the Ten Commandments and Leviticus religious laws, a hereditary priesthood , divine kingship, the crook and flail, the virgin birth and only begotten son of God belief , as well as many biblical psalms and poems, are all of Kemetian origins.

Moreover, many of the Biblical accounts of the Hebrew kings are identical to the known reigns of the kings of Kemet.

Peter, I am saying the ancient Hebrews are Kemetian because Kemet is the only place where extensive evidence exists of their cultural activity.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Dear Elliott (if that is your name),

>

> Please explain how the Biblical Hebrews came to be Egyptian? Do you simply mean that by the time they left Egypt, they had become so thoroughly culturally acclimated that they spoke the Egyptian language?

>

> Peter

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: elliottandelliottmtg@...: Mon, 29 Oct 2007
22:15:52 +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: nubian language

>
>
>
>

> The same language because the biblical Hebrews are the people of Kemet.--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoo.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:>> > > in the another chapter of the first book of king chapter nine it is written that:> 16: For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife. > when solomon spoke to this wife was he speaking her language or his?> > >

_____> Do You Yahoo!?!>
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around >
<http://mail.yahoo.com>>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

_____>
> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger
Café Stop by today.

> http://www.cafemessenger.com/info/info\_sweetstuff2.html?
ocid=TXT_TAGLM_OctWtagline

>

| 23542|2007-10-31 10:14:38|Matthew|Plaeides and Seshat :games with names and a joke about time and auth|

Plaeides and the great white light:or Seshat remembers her name how many little girls does it take to screw in a light bulb?

8

1 to bark orders :ka

2 to pantomime the way :ba

3 to bake cookies :khat

4 to tell everyone what their specific role is :sahu

5 to crack the whip :akh

6 to follow everyone around to ensure job performance :shut

7 to provide emotional support :ib

and 8

to kill the other seven so she can screw in the damn light bulb! :ren

PLease excuse the "anti-feminist" humor, I am part Hungarian after all!

Matt

| 23543|2007-10-31 11:35:00|deep_space_1999|Anti Gravity|

I would appreciate any information on the subject of Anti-Gravity as a serious report.

John.

| 23544|2007-10-31 11:53:56|Peter Gray|Re: Anti Gravity|

Paul,

I too am interested in these seemingly esoteric issues, but are we a general all-purpose blog or supposed to be on topic with respect to African history? And while I'm picking bones, is it also appropriate to use this space to advertise one's wares, such as books, etc.? Thanks.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: pendragn@tpg.com.au

Date: Wed, 31 Oct 2007 18:34:55 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Anti Gravity

I would appreciate any information on the subject of Anti-Gravity as a serious report.

John.

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.

Play Now!

| 23545|2007-10-31 12:04:48|Peter Gray|Re: nubian language|

Thanks for elaborating in such detail.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com

Date: Wed, 31 Oct 2007 16:45:12 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: nubian language

Peter, my name is not important so Elliott will suffice.

"Please explain how the Biblical Hebrews came to be Egyptian?"

In my opinion, based on historical documentation and archeological evidence, the people of Kemet are the only culture that can authenticate Biblical history; therefore they have always been Hebraic in religious orientation.

"Do you simply mean that by the time they left Egypt, they had become so thoroughly culturally acclimated that they spoke the Egyptian language?"

Well if you believe the Exodus myth, by the time the Hebrews left Kemet, they would have had to been thoroughly culturally Kemetian.

But what I am saying, like Benjamin Sass in his work titled, The Genesis of the Alphabet and its Development in the Second Millennium BC, Agypten, "The origin of the Phoenician letters [and even more so the Old Negev letters] in the Proto-Canaanite and Proto-Sinaitic scripts, and the borrowing of most, if not all, letter forms in the latter script from Egyptian hieroglyphics on the basis of acrophony are now seen as indubitable facts (cf. Snyczer 1974, 9)."

The Hebrew language is classified as an Afro-Asiatic language group because clearly the oldest Hebrew writings are Kemetian in origin.

Not only does the Hebrew language have Kemetian origins but many Biblical stories and religious traditions are validated by Kemetian historical accounts and archeological evidence.

The covenant of circumcision that God made with Abraham, the oldest Christian hymn and New Testament text, monotheism, the Ten Commandments and Leviticus religious laws, a hereditary priesthood, divine kingship, the crook and flail, the virgin birth and only begotten son of God belief, as well as many biblical psalms and poems, are all of Kemetian origins.

Moreover, many of the Biblical accounts of the Hebrew kings are identical to the known reigns of the kings of Kemet.

Peter, I am saying the ancient Hebrews are Kemetian because Kemet is the only place where extensive evidence exists of their cultural activity.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

$$>$$
$$>$$
 $\succ$
$$>$$
 $\gt$
$$>$$
$$>$$
 $\succ$

_____ > Do You

<http://mail.yahoo.com>>

$$>$$
$$>$$
$$>$$
 $\succ$  $\succ$  $\succ$  $\angle$  $\gamma$

---

Attachments :

---

I attached a copy of the Phoenician alphabet to this post. I was considering what you said about the diverse relationships of people that came out of this kingdom, and the conflicts that arose out of not only language development from glyph to script but of the ideologies that were codified within the alphabetical systems.

I see Phoenician represents an era of this strife, and as I will explain my translation of the allegory present in the alphabet, perhaps you will see the parallels. This reminds me of the Essene story of Melkizedek and Belial and the conflict of the sons of light and the sons of darkness. The Phoenicians representing the underdog of the champion of light in the seas of darkness where the secularized principal of holy matrimony of man and woman are the highest ideal as a challenge to the free thinking culture of the "Egyptian" kingdom and the world at large, given their predisposition to travel and spread the "word" .

Starting at the beginning:

Alef: the measure (like the triangle in Meroitic, or QA)

Bet: of the beauty

gimel: of the cultivation

Dalet: of the work

He: of perceiving < "all doubles" man/woman, "Noah's ark"

Waw: the authority

Zayin: of the field

Het: of society

Tet: is nurturing

Yod: individuals

Kaf:through the authority of the measure of the work between

Lamed: students

Mem: the body of teachings

Nun:and teachers

Samek: and sequential learning

:Ayin from birth

Pe: to old age

Sade:the root

Qof: and the flower

Resh:of the planting

Shin: is the potential growth of this teaching

Taw: and the truth of any authorities ability to harvest this teaching

Kind of a mutated Rossetta stone of fascism at its most organized, which is to say that any poet can recognize the lack of talent fostered by such abject stupidity. Now imagine a system of indoctrination that has no priesthood but has a form of transmission that recognizable only thru a systematic pantomime of rites of call and response of non verbal communication and is spread to every major culture through trade routes. No wonder people hate gypsies so much. Anyways, food for thought , and enuff fat to chew on through any winter. Jealousy seems to be the worst seed and the most popular.

MAtt JAH

elliottandelliottmtg wrote:

Peter, my name is not important so Elliott will suffice.

"Please explain how the Biblical Hebrews came to be Egyptian?"

In my opinion, based on historical documentation and archeological evidence, the people of Kemet are the only culture that can authenticate Biblical history; therefore they have always been Hebraic in religious orientation.

"Do you simply mean that by the time they left Egypt, they had become so thoroughly culturally acclimated that they spoke the Egyptian language?"

Well if you believe the Exodus myth, by the time the Hebrews left Kemet, they would have had to been thoroughly culturally Kemetian.

But what I am saying, like Benjamin Sass in his work titled, The Genesis of the Alphabet and its Development in the Second Millennium BC, Agypten, " The origin of the Phoenician letters [and even more so the Old Negev letters] in the Proto-Canaanite and Proto-Sinaitic scripts, and the borrowing of most, if not all, letter forms in the latter script from Egyptian hieroglyphics on the basis of acrophony are now seen as indubitable facts (cf. Snycezer 1974, 9)."

The Hebrew language is classified as an Afro-Asiatic language group because clearly the oldest Hebrew writings are Kemetian in origin.

Not only does the Hebrew language have Kemetian origins but many Biblical stories and religious traditions are validated by Kemetian historical accounts and archeological evidence.

The covenant of circumcision that God made with Abraham, the oldest Christian hymn and New Testament text, monotheism, the Ten Commandments and Leviticus religious laws, a hereditary priesthood , divine kingship, the crook and flail, the virgin birth and only begotten son of God belief , as well as many biblical psalms and poems, are all of Kemetian origins.

Moreover, many of the Biblical accounts of the Hebrew kings are identical to the known reigns of the kings of Kemet.

Peter, I am saying the ancient Hebrews are Kemetian because Kemet is the only place where extensive evidence exists of their cultural activity.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Dear Elliott (if that is your name),

>

> Please explain how the Biblical Hebrews came to be Egyptian? Do you simply mean that by the time they left Egypt, they had become so thoroughly culturally acclimated that they spoke the Egyptian language?

>

> Peter

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: elliottandelliottmt g@...: Mon, 29 Oct 2007

22:15:52 +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: nubian language

>

>

>

>

> The same language because the biblical Hebrews are the people of Kemet.--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:>> > > in the another chapter of the first book of king chapter nine it is written that:> 16: For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife. > when solomon spoke to this wife was he speaking her language or his?> > >

____> Do You Yahoo!>

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around >

<http://mail.yahoo.com>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

____

> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sub>é</sub>Stop by today.

> http://www.cafemessenger.com/info/info\_sweetstuff2.html?

| ocid=TXT_TAGLM_ OctWLtagline

>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23547|2007-10-31 20:39:02|Peter Gray|Re: Fool a people that they are less and with time they'll come to a Franklin,

Sorry if I fall into the category of those blacks who make a stance against "peddling victimhood", but enough of "what they done to us" already. No offense. I just don't consider cranking up the volume particularly useful or helpful.

Peter

---

To: luv4self_network@yahoogroups.com;

neo_black_network@yahoogroups.com; ta_seti@yahoogroups.com

From: thanubian@yahoo.com

Date: Tue, 30 Oct 2007 07:11:03 -0700

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fool a people that they are less and with time they'll come to accept it : Blacks are victims of lies and mis-information about themselves.

Today when presented with the argument that white racism is still a detrimental problem in America many Blacks themselves may strongly disagree.

There are those African Americans that share the belief that too many of their fellow blacks are guilty of over stating and over using white racism as a scape goat as an excuses for our own failures as a race. Today many African American may even clinch with embarrassment and lower their heads when another Black person makes a declaration concerning white racism within America today. [especially if their within the company of whites]

In fact many African American even demonstrate profound resentment towards their fellow Blacks that makes such claims that white racism is still a detrimental problem in America today.
This unprecedented division and fighting among ourselves on the issue of how relevant is white racism today upon the lives of African American sexist because the system of white racism that prevails today is far more sophisticated today than any form of white racism previously faced before by African Americans. It is so in fact sophisticated that some of us have to better educate ourselves in order to recognize it While perhaps nothing can be more frustrating for a Black person whom has been a victim of brutal white racism than having their fellow Blacks ignore their cries and arguing with them while accusing them of peddling victimhood, it should nevertheless be expected that some Blacks would disagree with the racist analogy given the circumstances of today of where in which the African American psyche is subjected almost every moment of their existence to a mortifying paradigm-environment of where in which the racist perceptions, value system and norms of the "so called" white majority that negatively portrays Blacks as non-contributors and as the problems for all that is wrong in America through their controlled media therefore accordingly many African Americans would identify with their white counterparts and against themselves. They have become conditioned to do.

We are all to some degree affected by the messages that the media feeds to us. However there are those segments of African Americans that are more deeply influenced by the false information that is deliberately being fed through the national media. Many Black viewers unknowingly succumb to the campaign of negative psychological warfare that is deliberately being implemented against the black race therefore acquiring the U.S.

Government's divide and conquer objectives. Having been routinely subjected all of their lives to unrelenting series of negative statistics and stories about themselves many Black themselves develops a perceptions of disdain and contempt for their own race. The negative media reports may even cause some Blacks to literary identify with white hatreds towards blacks ["some may even go as far as to say that Black people makes them sick and so embarrassed and therefore that they can understand why white's hate us."] Furthermore these feelings of self contempt among many African Americans are then further exacerbated during their educational development where they subjected to a miseducational system of where in which white are falsely made to appear more humane and creative throughout history and the contributions and achievements of Blacks remains omitted. A racist educational system of where Black students are taught to respect the contributions and achievements of whites and nothing of themselves other than slavery and the civil right era struggles. [An educational system that withholds 97% percent of their contributions as a race.]

The U.S. Government deliberately uses the media to greatly influence the perception of its Black population. like for example the negative portrayal of Africa- a portrayal excluding the fact that the disparities now suffered by Africa are the direct results of white racist imperialism and greed- may cause many African Americans to develop contempt and embarrassment of their African lineage and to feel a since of gratitude to America now believing that their enslaved parents were the lucky one being brought from the back wards that is Africa.

And to the contrary the negative portrayal if African Americans before the world causes many Africans to come to America believing that Black Americans are lazy , good for nothing and have contributed nothing towards building America thus keeping us divided.

Another example that we African Americans are all to some degree victims of the U.S. Governments negative propaganda that causes us to believe negatively of ourselves is the fact that many African Americans share the belief of the negative premise that Blacks don't like to read, however to the contrary to this premise whenever we visit the public libraries within are communities we most often find it's halls filled with Black children either reading books or reading on the Internet. Also in fact never before in the history of Africans in America have we ever had more Black authors, Black publishing companies, Black magazine than we do now. Twenty years ago Jet magazine was published by the Johnson publishing company once a month now they publish Jet magazine once a week. The Johnson publishing company they have now grown to one of the most successful publishing companies in the world their publications are now sold in Africa, the Caribbean and virtually everywhere that Black people can be found reading.

But despite these facts we Black accept the negative lies about us and start saying it among ourselves. Some Blacks are made to believe that equality now exist within America because of all of the successful Black Celebrities that have obtained millionaire status. However the truth of the matter is that most Black that acquire millionaire status does so because they possess a talents that whites can exploit to become multimillionaires and even become billionaires. For every Black entertainer or athlete that earns $10 million this year

There are whites behind the scene making hundreds of millions world wide exploiting that Black celebrity. Most of us that acquire this degree of success does so only when whites can financially benefit from exploiting us.

African Americans can no longer survive as nation hanging on to lies. A reality of truth must prevail if we are to be a part of the future. Racism is still a devastating problem that continues to erode America like a cancer. The many problems now facing Black America will not be corrected by affirmative action or implementing outdated strategies of foot marches, speeches, the commemoration of fallen Black martyrs, nor from the preaching of scriptures from any religious texts, but instead by exposing and the eradication of today's modern system of institutionalized racism of where in which America's Black citizens are today- more proficiently than ever before- being systematically imprisoned, murdered, exploited, suppressed, racially devalued through mis-education, confused and turned against each other through negative psychological warfare conducted through a controlled media.

Despite the many substantial gains made today by African Americans in the field of entertainment, education, and politics, the U.S. Government's secret unyielding determination to maintain its White dominance by implementing methods of suppressing its Black population has not been truly abandoned-- but rather more sophisticated reincarnated to be more acceptable with contemporary times. Today, the masses of African Americans remain still the largest, most racially devalued and most deliberately exploited and suppressed class in America, only now the methods now used avoid the conventional, blatant, now morally unacceptable methods used in the past. Unlike the brutal system of racism used in the past that caused African Americans to rally together and unify themselves against, this modern system of racism is not easily comprehended by Blacks. Most African Americans have never heard of this method of asserting White racism, therefore many will find it too shocking and stunning to contemplate. Nevertheless, it is directly intertwined with the many problems adversely affecting Black America today. It is a method so opaque that many of its Black victims remain largely unaware of it themselves. And while most African Americans may instinctively feel that something is wrong, they cannot, however, express their suspicions and conceptualize them sufficiently so that they and others can comprehend and act to defend themselves against it. It is, in fact, so sophisticated that even very bright African American individuals have little, if any, hope of extricating themselves from its brutal effects. In fact, most Blacks cannot believe that they are being attacked or subdued because it wears the appearance [if any] of being totally self-inflicted by African Americans themselves.

Clearly now there are those of you that are irritatingly thinking that here goes another Black man wrongly blaming Whites again for the shortcomings of Blacks. These type of perceptions and responses are not uncommon today, even from among Blacks also -- moreover they are expected. Today, the scenario of the Black victim peddler that is always playing the inevitable race card to overstate their case and absolve themselves from all responsibility is deliberately over stated and perpetuated within the American society. This deliberately being done to discourage and prevent us from realizing that there actually does exist a modern deliberate system of racism implemented by America's White governmental elites with the underlying objective of maintaining White dominance.

The following disclosure that exposes a more prevalent and detrimental form of racism that now prevail in the U.S. will be quite difficult and very uncomfortable for many Americans to accept. It will also be difficult for even many African Americans themselves. Because the Black Psyche has been so deliberately bombarded with negative images of themselves, and are unknowingly conditioned through a controlled media and racially biased educational system to respect and admire America's white culture and to subconsciously despise themselves—it has therefore become literally more easier for many Blacks to accept that the problem is now themselves rather than that of white racism. Therefore for Blacks to realize the following monumental disclosure will require that they overcome a psychologically ingrained White is right preferential that has been indoctrinated unrelentingly upon the Black psyche that is rarely moved and reexamine some of their prior negative self-perceptions of themselves. Although this will be a difficult task for many, however in doing so, the rewards will be a change from feelings of hopelessness and despair to an awareness of the most urgent issue of our time.

Although today most African Americans do not experience racism the way their parents experienced it, they do, however, still experience White racism. White racism in the U.S. is still a current and devastating problem that now prevails with sophistication and is employed more covertly and more proficiently than ever before. Since the methods of the past were no longer morally acceptable, the decline of the blatant, overt racism used in the United States to suppress African Americans up until the 1960's coincided with the implementation of a better disguised, more intensified, sophisticated, and more covert method of White racism more fitting for the times.

Today the most prevalent and lethal system of racism assaulting African Americans now exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives. The U.S. Government's unrelenting commitment towards maintaining its white dominance accordingly resulted in it using this system against its Black population.

The United States government secretly implemented its largest ever covert operation against its Black population through a campaign of psychological warfare that deliberately conspires to severely reduce African America's upward mobility by corrupting them of unity, reason, and common sense. By using false statistics and negative media reports denigrating its Black population and disproportionately portraying Black men as the face of crime and Black women as the face of welfare. These portrayals of African Americans are totally false and inaccurate but are necessary to produce a consensual environment of where in which Blacks are more easily exploited and their unity corrupted. The objective of this psychological warfare is to produce increasingly acrimonious beliefs and prejudiced perceptions about and against African Americans to create a shift in victimization in behalf of whites that lessens pressure for social change on behalf of Blacks thus making the nation and the entire world insensitive to the plight of African Americans, thus successfully stripping them of the national and international support that was acquired during the 1960's civil rights struggles. This campaign engenders a shift of victimization that fosters distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. Moreover, this method also makes any serious criticism of White racism almost impossible today. Not only does it tranquilize efforts on behalf of Blacks, it also affects attitudes that, when enacted through governmental policies, laws, and other legislation actions, serve to ensure that African Americans will not advance. Its effects are manifested in ideas, education, governmental policies, economic stratification, social segregation, housing markets, hiring and promotion practices, psychological issues, and minority access to a variety of social services and opportunity. It also creates a false justification for the legal systems mistreatment of African Americans wherein they are disproportionately incarcerated, given stiffer sentences, and are more likely than other racial groups to be treated brutally, beaten, and fired upon by police officers while they are unarmed.

This perversion of reality, shifting the blame, and role reversal of the problem of racism to be the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through press releases, pamphlets, radio, newspaper, and magazine articles and television. Because no group can be preconditioned to see only the worst in themselves and not exhibit some degree of negative psychological impact, the worst aspect of this psychological operation against America's Black population is, not how it adversely affects race relations, but instead how it causes many African Americans to perceive themselves.

The governmental psycho-social treatment of African Americans is designed to mold the character of self hatred. The unrelenting daily assault on the Black psyche [of were in which they are routinely subjected daily to seeing through a controlled national media only the worst in themselves that also insinuate that they should admire, respect, and trust only whites] corrupts many African Americans sense of reason, unity and also divides and demobilizes African Americans by engendering self-doubt, self-loathing, and distrust among their group. Here is a simplified analogy of how this is being done to America's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually come to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own ship even if theirs was in fact better. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception.

Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The United States Government's psychological operation of devaluing African Americans is not always recognized. In fact, in most cases, it is executed very subtly and is often done under the pretext of helping African Americans, while in fact actually exploiting them. For example, in August 1996, then President William Bill Clinton signed the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, better known as the Welfare Reform Bill. During the ceremonial undertaking, which was broadcast on television to the entire nation and the world, the president was strategically accompanied by two African American welfare moms who were positioned on either side of him as he signed the new bill perpetuating false images of African American women without using overt racism thus feeding and perpetuating the racist stereotype that the largest recipients of welfare are lazy Black mothers. This image was filmed, photographed, and transmitted all over the world thus meeting the governments objective of changing the face of racism in America to reflect that the racial problem in America stems from behavior among African Americans which justifies White attitudes towards Blacks while producing psychological feelings of embarrassment, gratitude, and indebtedness among Blacks towards the American government.[ The fact, however, is that the largest recipient of welfare assistance are White women,] .

Perhaps no president relied more heavily on the use of the psychological operation that portrayed African American Women as negative welfare queens than Ronald Reagan . His career as an actor and spokesperson for General Electric provided him with an audience to redefine his storytelling style and to perfect the ability of appealing to the concerns and fears of White voters without the use of overtly racist appeals. Reagan's campaigns revolved around themes that exemplified the image of the Black welfare queen. Reagan gave an elaborate story of welfare abuse that appeared in the New York Times which stated that there's a woman in Chicago . She has 80 names, 30 addresses, 12 social security cards, and is collecting veteran benefits on 4 non-existing deceased husbands. And she is collecting social Security on her cards. She's got Medicaid, is getting food stamps, and she is collecting welfare under each name. Her tax-free income is over $150,000. The speech emphasized how "they, the abusers, enjoy lives of leisure, whereas "we" [Whites] work harder than ever before with little chance of ever getting ahead. The welfare queen abuse story played, and continues to play, well among the White masses, and its reference to the abuser leaves little doubt about the implied racial identity of the abuser without stating the racial identity of the abuser explicitly. The story then acquires a life of its own, far more elaborate and lucrative than before. At times, she has more kids and less husbands. Nevertheless, it worked because it delivered messages penetrating the consciousness of White voters across party lines. After Reagan defeated Carter in the 1980 election, the welfare stories made it possible for him to reduce social programs.

A more recent example of the United States deliberate devaluing of African Americans through the usage of psychological operations was seen during the 2005 flooding of New Orleans in the wake of Hurricane Katrina. While many African American victims that were left behind suffered from hunger, dehydration, and the trauma of having loved ones dying all around them, the White media was more adept at portraying these Black victims as wild, inhuman, deviant criminals. The press presented, for the most part, those images of the desperate and suffering Black families that reinforced their negative and racist stereotypes. As seen, for example, were in which the media painted the perception that most of these Black people were uncontrollable looters stealing equipment and appliances although their homes were under water. Nevertheless, the images of Black people taking food and water were perpetuated as looting as shown in the constant repetition of the same 5-minute looping footage of so-called looters. On the other hand, Whites doing the same thing were portrayed in television coverage as shopping for food. If the looting by Blacks was as rampant as reported, why then was there the need to keep repeating the same 5-minute footage again and again?

Then, there were the many unfounded rumors broadcast, not only nationally but also globally; that hospitals had been raided by drug addicts; and that there were many gang rapes of women and children in the New Orleans Convention Center; also that babies' throats had been cut; and that Black thugs were shooting at rescuers. Although these rumors were later found to be untrue, the damage was already done against African Americans. What is more, African Americans are denigrated within every aspect of American society by the U.S. governments psychological operation -- from their educational failures, their crime statistics, and also their national health statistic reports. Where, based upon the U.S. Governments national health statistics and reports concerning the health of Black America, it appears as if the bodies of Black people are literally genetically and physically inferior to that of the bodies of Whites. However, when examined outside of governmental discretion and control, we see, to the contrary, that Blacks are most often America's greatest athletes.

This tendency of the U.S. government to routinely subjugate African Americans within the American society is clearly a case of psychological warfare at work. The mounting evidence is too great to be purely coincidental and too prevalent to be merely dismissed as an oversight or as being the work of a few local governments. It is being deliberately implemented at a national level. Moreover, this modern racism, as herein defined, has had a serious deleterious effect on many African Americans. It is believed to be directly attributed to the intensification of internalized racism, loss of motivation, school failure, profound division, and present confused outlook that is now so prevalent among so many African Americans today.

Moreover, all African Americans have experienced the burden of this psychological warfare, some more severely than others. It is experienced every time we [Blacks] read a newspaper, watch the evening news, enter a classroom, and read its racially biased textbooks. And while many Black Americans have successfully navigated through the mortifying system of modern racism and have gone on to lead successful, productive lives, for far too many African Americans this immense devaluation can seem inescapable and tragically, over time, many begin to accept subconsciously and painfully the negative portrayals of themselves. Many also become discouraged by the acceptance that their society is also preconditioned to see the worst in them and that, therefore, if they were ever to gain acceptance, if it is to be won at all, that success would be hard won and likely to manifest negative internalized psychological pain and distress within many African Americans that can take many forms. Under such extreme degradation as experienced by African Americans, many develop the psychological aberration of self contempt wherein they become literally prejudiced against other Blacks.

Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs. The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

The U.S. Government's ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

This psychological operation also discourages our brightest and most gifted African Americans who historically were responsible for gathering and motivating the lesser-educated and complacent masses of African Americans to demand equality. Many of these Black elites are rendered disillusioned and frustrated, therefore now having fallen victim in adopting the same disdain and contemptuous views towards the lesser fortunate Black masses as their White counterparts do, themselves saying that the rhetoric of victimization of racism by the lesser fortunate Blacks are merely excuses. They've adopt the same ideology and character of their White counterparts in regards to the Black masses; thus making the case that, if they have made it then, all those other less fortunate Blacks can also do the same. Many of these successful Blacks have also moved to the suburbs segregating themselves from the Black masses and, instead of focusing their efforts on the suffering of these Black masses, now redirect their attention towards trying to show Whites that not all Blacks are like these negative images depicted. This psychological operation of influence also undermines Black leadership. Many Black leaders today -- although most will perhaps never publicly admit this -- have become disillusioned and frustrated by the false statistics and representation of their fellow African American masses. Many leaders, in profound frustration and desperation, have called out to the African American community for a spiritual revival of themselves. Moreover, many of our Black leaders have become complacent in terms of significance, gains, and effectiveness. Today, there is no more real striving, no more real struggle, and no significant gains made. Many of our leaders have become insignificant pied pipers who lead the following back masses on outdated foot marching strategies while shouting out the cries of racism and demands for equality. The only effectiveness these strategies serve is as a platform to give the illusion and appearance of hope and action. However, within such a mortifying environment as Black people endure psychologically in daily life, perhaps hope is a good thing.

The African American psyches have borne centuries of extremely unhealthy and brutal devaluing in the American society from slavery through its aftermath of Jim Crow inequalities, but today's system of covert white racism is by far arguably the worst system of racism ever faced by African Americans and also Africans the world over.

These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are on-going, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblacktruth.org

---

Be a better Globetrotter. Get better travel answers from someone who knows.

Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

---

Building a website is a piece of cake.

Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around <http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Windows Live Hotmail and Microsoft Office Outlook together at last. Get it now!
| 23548|2007-11-01 09:16:23|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|

Does anyone know if Memnon Hotep is the Memnon mentioned in the Trojan War or in other Greek literature? His reign is about the same time as the Trojan War is supposed to have occurred, I believe.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>
> Unearthing Egypt's Greatest Temple
> Discovering the grandeur of the monument built 3,400 years ago
>
> * By Andrew Lawler
> * Smithsonian magazine, October 2007
>
> Rebellious Son
> <<http://www.smithsonianmag.com/history-archaeology/rebelliousson->

200711.\

> html>
> Andrew Lawler
> [0] > Amenhotep III was succeeded by one of the first known monotheists
>
> "Heya hup!" Deep in a muddy pit, a dozen workers wrestle with

Egypt's

> fearsome lion goddess, struggling to raise her into the sunlight

for the > first time in more than 3,000 years. She is Sekhmet?"the one who is > powerful"?the embodiment of the fiery eye of the sun god Ra, but now > she is caked in dirt and bound by thick rope. As the workers heave her > out of the pit and onto a wooden track, the sand shifts and the > six-foot-tall granite statue threatens to topple. A half-dozen men

in > ankle-length robes grab the taut ropes, again shout the Arabic > equivalent of "heave, ho!" and steady her just in time.

>

> Within the hour, the seated Sekhmet is once again imperious: her breath

> creates the desert wind, her anger feeds on disease and war, and her > power protects mighty pharaohs. Or did. This long-buried statue is

one > of 730—one for every day and night of the year—that guarded a > vast collection of gates, colonnades, courts and halls built by the > great Egyptian king Amenhotep III, who reigned over Egypt for 38

years > in the 14th century B.C., at the height of peace and prosperity. In

its

> day, "The House of Millions of Years" was the largest and most > impressive temple complex in the world. But it was no match for > earthquakes, fires, floods or Amenhotep III's successors, who scavenged

> stone blocks and statues for their own temples. Much of the site, near > the Valley of the Kings along the west bank of the Nile River, is > covered with sugar cane.

>

> Hourig Sourouzian, an Armenian archaeologist, is directing the effort to > rescue the long-neglected site and its many statues. "They didn't > deserve this treatment!" she says as a worker hoses off the mud and salt > coating a Sekhmet lined up with a dozen similar statues in the bright

> sun.

>

> Egyptologists had long assumed that all that remained of the temple > complex were the imposing Colossi of Memnon, two seated statues of > Amenhotep III at the entrance to his temple, and some stones and > fragments of statuary. Sourouzian had been working at a neighboring > temple, Merentptah, from which she would visit the Amenhotep complex. "I > was always interested in the fragmented statuary of the site and dreamed > about seeing them reconstructed instead of lying in vegetation,

water > and junk," she recalls. Then, in 1996, a brush fire swept over the area, > charring the stones and fragments and making them more vulnerable to > cracking and erosion. When Sourouzian and her husband, German > archaeologist Rainier Stadelmann, surveyed the damage, she says, "It was > terrible and depressing, and we swore to take action."

>

> First, she convinced the World Monuments Fund in 1998 to designate

the > temple one of the world's "100 Most Endangered Sites" and fund the > initial conservation area of the shattered fragments aboveground.

During > the course of that effort, Sourouzian began to suspect that there

was > more to be found underground. By 2000, however, the money had run out, > and she and Stadelmann reluctantly began to wrap up their work. But

a > wealthy French woman who had attended a lecture by Sourouzian in Paris

> agreed to fund a more ambitious excavation. Within a year, the team > began to uncover their first statues, and the archaeologists realized

> that many treasures still lay beneath the dirt.

>

> Born in Baghdad to parents of Armenian descent, Sourouzian grew up

in

> Beirut and studied art history at the Sorbonne in Paris. Sent to Karnak

> by the Louvre, she became one of the leading authorities on Egyptian > royal statuary. "She's probably the best Egyptian art historian of our > time," says Betsy Bryan, an Egyptologist at Johns Hopkins University.

> Now, along with Stadelmann, who once headed the German

Archaeological

> Institute in Cairo, Sourouzian orchestrates a team of two dozen > specialists from around the world?including French, Swiss, German,

> Spanish and Japanese researchers?and as many as 400 local workers.

>

> What began modestly has become one of the most ambitious projects

Egypt

> has seen in decades, bringing to light a triumph of engineering and art

> that once dwarfed even the massive Karnak and Luxor temples across

the > Nile. Amenhotep III called the complex "a fortress of eternity out

of > good white sandstone?worked with gold throughout. Its floors were > purified with silver, all of its doorways were of electrum," an alloy of > gold and silver.

>

> The recently liberated Sekhmet statue is one of 72 of the goddess

that

- > Sourouzian and her team have discovered. They've also found two huge
- > statues of Amenhotep III, each flanked by a smaller one of Queen

Tye and

- > a menagerie of sacred animals, including an alabaster hippopotamus.

The

- > project is giving Egyptologists a fresh look at the mysterious temple

- > culture that dominated ancient life here, in which hordes of priests
- > conducted rituals, made offerings and administered the intricate rites

- > designed to ensure the eternal well-being of the dead pharaoh.
- >
- > 1
- > <http://www.smithsonianmag.com/history-archaeology/egyptiantemple-

200711\
> .html?page=1

- > 2
- > <http://www.smithsonianmag.com/history-archaeology/egyptiantemple-

200711\
> .html?page=2

- > 3
- > <http://www.smithsonianmag.com/history-archaeology/egyptiantemple-

200711\
> .html?page=3

- >
- | 23549|2007-11-01 12:35:05|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|
- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

- >
- > Does anyone know if Memnon Hotep is the Memnon mentioned in the
- > Trojan War or in other Greek literature? His reign is about the
- > same time as the Trojan War is supposed to have occurred, I believe.
- > HTP,
- > Mahari
- >

The Memnon in Homer is called the King of Ethiopia, but I guess there still could be a connection. According to Herodotus, Memnon founded the city of Susa in Persia.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Mananala

| 23550|2007-11-01 15:24:41|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|

Particularly, since the term Ethiopia had gotten bandied about so much. Also, since it is believed that the Homer narration is taken from oral tradition it is reasonable to assume that specificity is the first casualty.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > Does anyone know if Memnon Hotep is the Memnon mentioned in the

> > Trojan War or in other Greek literature? His reign is about the > > same time as the Trojan War is supposed to have occurred, I believe.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

>

> The Memnon in Homer is called the King of Ethiopia, but I guess there > still could be a connection. According to Herodotus, Memnon founded > the city of Susa in Persia.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Mananala

>

| 23551|2007-11-01 15:36:15|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Nsw Bty possibly Nsi Buta?|

Asar,

I noticed that folks are not replying to your request. Personally, it seems like a possibility but it's just a weak guess. I think people may just be too unfamiliar with the language to even begin to write conversantly about the possibilities. And most people are afraid of making a mistake or appearing to be ignorant. Of course, we are all ignorant about something at some time. So what? My attitude is "Nothing ventured, nothing gained". That, I think, applies to intellectual pursuits as well. But then I'm not a scholar.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

>
> I don't know if this got lost in the shuffle, but I really want to get > some feedback on this. I appreciate it.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

> Peace Phamily

>

> I may have another possible Ba'Ntu connection in terms of its political > organization and the title and role of the "king." I have always > disliked the European term "king" to apply to African style forms of > leadership because I always felt they were inadequate in explaining

the > relationship of the leader to a community, and the world view of the > leader from the community's perspective.

>

> As mentioned before on this yahoogroup, the term primarily associated > with the ruler of political Ta-Merri is /nsw bty/. As has been > discussed, prior to Roman rule, the term PER AAH was mainly used to > describe the "place" of leadership rather than the leader itself

(with > the exception of Akenaten). It is like saying, "The White House

today

> ordered an attack on Bosnia." The physical location represents > metaphorically the government in total.

>

> To try and see how the Mdw Ntr was pronounced, many scholars turn

to the

> Greek, Coptic and Cuneiform writings. After peeping a 2002

discussion on

> the AEgyptian-L@ list serve between James P. Allen and Jerome

> Colburn, some of the dialogue inspired me to revisit the Kongo form

of > governance in relation to the most important political institution

in

> Ba'Ntu society [the Mbongi] and the name of its leadership and role

in > society.

>

> I have argued over the past few weeks that to understand key

elements of > Ancient Ta-Merrian culture and political structure, one must look

to the > living systems of Africa for traces of cultural norms still practiced by > the indigenous people: especially amongst the Ba'Ntu speakers. I

will > attempt to make a connection between the name of the political leader of

> Ba'Ntu society and the name of the leader of Ta-Merrian society to see

> if the perceived connection is solid.

>

> In the Kongo society, as well as all indigenous Ba'Ntu societies in > Africa, they make political decisions and gather to discuss matters

in > an "open hut" called an Mbongi. Mbongi comes from the root `bonga'

which > means to take, to possess, to bear and to accept. The term `bongi'

means

> "the one who takes" (responsibilities, etc.). An Mbongi is a > public-open-house, institution of debates and of conceptualization,

and

> the community parliament, the popular court of justice.

>

> Here is where all important decisions are made for the society by

its > wisest members. The Mbongi possesses its own leaders and their > assistants (Mu bonga) to take care of the community's and country's > diverse responsibilities. This is where the elders call to discuss > things and make decisions. The leadership organization is as follows:

>

>

> 1. Mfuma-mbongi (the chief of the Mbongi) ? could be considered > the president of the Mbongi.

> 2. Landi kia Mfuma-mbongi ? this is the second in command and > really the assistant of the chief of the Mbongi. He is an adjunct

and > assist in case of death or disease of the Mfuma-mbongi.

> 3. Mfumu-dikanda (the chief of the extended family) ? He is the > chief of his lineage and the Mbongi (the head of the nation as a whole).

> He and his assistant are responsible for everyone in the Kanda (the > society).

>

> The name most important name for our discussion is the latter, the > Mfumu-dikanda. What is so striking about this position is its > philosophical similarities to how the leader in Ta-Merrian society

was > viewed. The Mfumu-dikanda is the intermediary, N'kambakani, between

the > government of the Mbongi and his own lineage, but also between his > lineage in the physical or upper world and the ancestors'

spiritualized

> community. In Africa, your lineage not only consists of your direct > blood lineage, but the lineages of the society at large. So when you > hear lineage, think country (the collective lineage). So just like a Nsw

> Bty was a representative of "God" and was an intermediary between

God,

> the ancestors and the community, the same is viewed here with the > Mfumu-dikanda. Also what is key in this discussion is the concept

that > he is the chief of "the extended family" ? the nation. This we will > revisit later.

>

> Now, going back to the discussion of James P Allen, in his dialogue

> about the value in the word /itn/, he mentions the following > concerning his reservations, while also giving some proposals for

the > term Nsw Bty in the Cuneiform (rendered "in-si-ib-ia"). He goes on

to > state:

>

>> Re hamunzu (from Dahamunzu = tA-Hjmt-nswt "the >> queen"), this may not be an >> exception to the general rule. Both this and >> cuneiform insibia = nswt-bjt

>> seem to reflect an Egyptian *insi, with an >> initial vowel. In the second >> case, however, Fecht (Wortakzent und

>> Silbenstruktur, #72) has argued that

>> the stress was on the second syllable

>> (*insi'bya), so that the first may

>> simply represent an unstressed "vocalic" n

>> (*nsi'bya) ? (emphasis mine)

>

> What is important in this discussion is what I have bolded. Now in > conventional Egyptology the term Nsw Bty means "King of upper and lower

> Egypt." This is taken from the fact that the Nsw (sedge plant) is > associated with the south, while the alleged "bee" (more a wasp to me)

> is associated with the north.

>

> [05_nsw_full.gif (259 bytes)]

>

> [05_nsw-bity.gif (218 bytes)]

>

> What I am proposing is that the term Nsw Bty really means "Chief of

the

> extended family" just like the Mfumu-dikanda mentioned above. In the > KiKongo language, the word NSI means "land" or "country." I am proposing

> that word /nsw/ is really "nsi" like James P Allen was explaining above.

> It seems to be the same structure as in the Bantu language as the hedge

> plant has the phonetic value of /sw/ and in Bantu languages

the /n/ is

> a nominal prefix (affixed to class stems) or an adjectival prefix

> (affixed to variable class stems).

>

> I am also proposing that the term /bty/ is really the Ba'Ntu

word "buta"

> which means "family." So I am proposing as the name Nsi Buta, or > roughly translated "chief of the extended family or country." In most > cases I think that the .t's are only written and not stressed in speech

> (like the ~~in the French Les~~)

>

> [05_nsw-bity.gif (218 bytes)]

> ~~I also think that the Kmtjw had the political structure of the~~

~~Ba'Ntu~~

> ~~partly because the Mfumu dikanda, and all African leaders of the~~

~~time,~~

> ~~did not have palaces like you find in Europe. You have no record of~~

> ~~where the actual Nsw Bty lived. To me, they were amongst the~~ ~~people. One~~

> might ask, "well why do we have these mighty temples and pyramids,

but > no palace for the `king'?" To me it's no different than all of our > monies going towards large churches and administrative buildings,

but > not so much on our own dwellings (which won't last as long as the > Churches or Government buildings).

>

> I think in general we have wrong how things were structured in

ancient

> Ta Merri and we must look to the living systems of Africa for a better

> idea. Diop has already done some comparison similar to this in > Civilization or Barbarism. What do you think?

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23552|2007-11-02 11:28:03|asar_imhotep|Re: Nsw Bty possibly Nsi Buta?|

I understand. I just recently sent Dr. Theophile Obenga my previous inquiries concerning the Niw.t symbol and I will better present this argument and send it to him as well for review. I await his feedback. Knowing him, he's going to stress method and seeing if you can find the symbol amongst other Bantu cultures. So that is what I'm doing.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Asar,

> I noticed that folks are not replying to your request. Personally, > it seems like a possibility but it's just a weak guess. I think > people may just be too unfamiliar with the language to even begin to > write conversantly about the possibilities. And most people are > afraid of making a mistake or appearing to be ignorant. Of course, > we are all ignorant about something at some time. So what? My > attitude is "Nothing ventured, nothing gained". That, I think, > applies to intellectual pursuits as well. But then I'm not a scholar.

> HTP,

> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
> wrote:
>
>
>> I don't know if this got lost in the shuffle, but I really want to > get >> some feedback on this. I appreciate it.
>>
>> Asar Imhotep
>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
> wrote:
>> Peace Phamily
>>
>> I may have another possible Ba'Ntu connection in terms of its > political >> organization and the title and role of the "king." I have always >> disliked the European term "king" to apply to African style forms of >> leadership because I always felt they were inadequate in explaining
> the >> relationship of the leader to a community, and the world view of the >> leader from the community's perspective.
>>
>> As mentioned before on this yahooogroup, the term primarily > associated >> with the ruler of political Ta-Merri is /nsw bty/. As has been >> discussed, prior to Roman rule, the term PER AAH was mainly used to >> describe the "place" of leadership rather than the leader itself
> (with >> the exception of Akenaten). It is like saying, "The White House
> today
>> ordered an attack on Bosnia." The physical location represents >> metaphorically the government in total.
>>
>> To try and see how the Mdw Ntr was pronounced, many scholars turn
> to the >> Greek, Coptic and Cuneiform writings. After peeping a 2002
> discussion on >> the AEgyptian-L@ list serve between James P. Allen and Jerome >> Colburn, some of the dialogue inspired me to revisit the Kongo form
> of > > governance in relation to the most important political institution

> in > > Ba'Ntu society [the Mbongi] and the name of its leadership and role
> in > > society.
> >
> > I have argued over the past few weeks that to understand key
> elements of > > Ancient Ta-Merrian culture and political structure, one must look > to the > > living systems of Africa for traces of cultural norms still > practiced by > > the indigenous people: especially amongst the Ba'Ntu speakers. I > will > > attempt to make a connection between the name of the political > leader of > > Ba'Ntu society and the name of the leader of Ta-Merrian society to > see
> > if the perceived connection is solid.
> >
> > In the Kongo society, as well as all indigenous Ba'Ntu societies in > > Africa, they make political decisions and gather to discuss matters
> in > > an "open hut" called an Mbongi. Mbongi comes from the root `bonga'
> which > > means to take, to possess, to bear and to accept. The term `bongi'
> means
> > "the one who takes" (responsibilities, etc.). An Mbongi is a > > public-open-house, institution of debates and of conceptualization,
> and
> > the community parliament, the popular court of justice.
> >
> > Here is where all important decisions are made for the society by
> its > > wisest members. The Mbongi possesses its own leaders and their > > assistants (Mu bonga) to take care of the community's and country's > > diverse responsibilities. This is where the elders call to discuss > > things and make decisions. The leadership organization is as > follows:
> >
> >
> > 1. Mfuma-mbongi (the chief of the Mbongi) ? could be considered > > the president of the Mbongi.
> > 2. Landi kia Mfuma-mbongi ? this is the second in command and > > really the assistant of the chief of the Mbongi. He is an adjunct
> and

> > assist in case of death or disease of the Mfuma-mbongi.
 > > 3. Mfumu-dikanda (the chief of the extended family) ? He is the > > chief of his lineage and the Mbongi (the head of the nation as a > > whole).
 > > He and his assistant are responsible for everyone in the Kanda (the > > society).
 > >
 > > The name most important name for our discussion is the latter, the > > Mfumu-dikanda. What is so striking about this position is its > > philosophical similarities to how the leader in Ta-Merrian society
 > > was > > viewed. The Mfumu-dikanda is the intermediary, N'kambakani, between
 > > the > > government of the Mbongi and his own lineage, but also between his > > lineage in the physical or upper world and the ancestors'
 > > spiritualized
 > > community. In Africa, your lineage not only consists of your direct > > blood lineage, but the lineages of the society at large. So when you > > hear lineage, think country (the collective lineage). So just like > > a Nsw
 > > Bty was a representative of "God" and was an intermediary between > > God,
 > > the ancestors and the community, the same is viewed here with the > > Mfumu-dikanda. Also what is key in this discussion is the concept
 > > that > > he is the chief of "the extended family" ? the nation. This we will > > revisit later.
 > >
 > > Now, going back to the discussion of James P Allen, in his dialogue > > about the value in the word /itn/, he mentions the following > > concerning his reservations, while also giving some proposals for
 > > the > > term Nsw Bty in the Cuneiform (rendered "in-si-ib-ia"). He goes on
 > > to > > state:
 > >
 > > > Re hamunzu (from Dahamunzu = tA-Hjmt-nswt "the > > > queen"), this may not be an > > > exception to the general rule. Both this and > > > cuneiform insibia = nswt-bjt
 > > > seem to reflect an Egyptian *insi, with an > > > initial vowel. In the second > > > case, however, Focht (Wortakzent und > > > Silbenstruktur, #72) has argued that
 > > > the stress was on the second syllable
 > > > (*insi'bya), so that the first may

> > > simply represent an unstressed "vocalic" n > > > (*nsi'bya) ? (emphasis mine)
 > >
 > > What is important in this discussion is what I have bolded. Now in > > conventional Egyptology the term Nsw Bty means "King of upper and > lower > > Egypt." This is taken from the fact that the Nsw (sedge plant) is > > associated with the south, while the alleged "bee" (more a wasp to > me)
 > > is associated with the north.
 > >
 > > [05_nsw_full.gif (259 bytes)]
 > >
 > > [05_nsw-bity.gif (218 bytes)]
 > >
 > > What I am proposing is that the term Nsw Bty really means "Chief of
 > the
 > > extended family" just like the Mfumu-dikanda mentioned above. In the > > KiKongo language, the word NSI means "land" or "country." I am > proposing > > that word /nsw/ is really "nsi" like James P Allen was explaining > above.
 > > It seems to be the same structure as in the Bantu language as the > hedge
 > > plant has the phonetic value of /sw/ and in Bantu languages
 > the /n/ is
 > > a nominal prefix (affixed to class stems) or an adjectival prefix > > (affixed to variable class stems).
 > >
 > > I am also proposing that the term /bty/ is really the Ba'Ntu
 > word "buta"
 > > which means "family." So I am proposing as the name Nsi Buta, or > > roughly translated "chief of the extended family or country." In > most > > cases I think that the .t's are only written and not stressed in > speech
 > > (like the ~~in the French Les~~)
 > >
 > > [05_nsw_bity.gif (218 bytes)]
 > > I also think that the Kmtjw had the political structure of the > Ba'Ntu
 > > partly because the Mfumu-dikanda, and all African leaders of the
 > time,
 > > did not have palaces like you find in Europe. You have no record of > > where the actual Nsw Bty lived. To me, they were amongst the > people. One >> might ask, "well why do we have these mighty temples and pyramids,

> but >> no palace for the `king'?" To me it's no different than all of our >> monies going towards large churches and administrative buildings,
> but >> not so much on our own dwellings (which won't last as long as the >> Churches or Government buildings).
>>
>> I think in general we have wrong how things were structured in
> ancient >> Ta Merri and we must look to the living systems of Africa for a > better
>> idea. Diop has already done some comparison similar to this in >> Civilization or Barbarism. What do you think?
>>
>> Asar Imhotep
>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>
>

| 23553|2007-11-02 11:30:12|cristofori whitakara|Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|
i dont recall from what source but i had once heard that the trojan war was a battle between the wooly haired ethiopians against the straigh-haired ethiopian and the story was passed down to the hellenics. i guess further research will prove valuable.

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Particularly, since the term Ethiopia had gotten bandied about so much. Also, since it is believed that the Homer narration is taken from oral tradition it is reasonable to assume that specificity is the first casualty.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
> >
> > Does anyone know if Memnon Hotep is the Memnon mentioned in the > > Trojan War or in other Greek literature? His reign is about the > > same time as the Trojan War is supposed to have occurred, I believe.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
>
> The Memnon in Homer is called the King of Ethiopia, but I guess there > still could be a connection. According to Herodotus, Memnon founded > the city of Susa in Persia.

>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Mananala
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23554|2007-11-02 15:09:41|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|
Interesting. And where is this war supposed to have taken place in Ethiopia/Kemet or in Greece? In that plot line the woollyheads obviously won.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
wrote:

>
> i dont recall from what source but i had once heard that the trojan war was a battle between the wooly haired ethiopians against the straigh-haired ethiopian and the story was passed down to the hellenics. i guess further research will prove valuable.

>
> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Particularly, since the term Ethiopia had gotten bandied about so > much. Also, since it is believed that the Homer narration is taken > from oral tradition it is reasonable to assume that specificity is

the > first casualty.

> HTP,
> Mahari

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> > >

> > > Does anyone know if Memnon Hotep is the Memnon mentioned in the

> > > Trojan War or in other Greek literature? His reign is about the > > > same time as the Trojan War is supposed to have occurred, I believe.

> > > HTP,

> > > Mahari

> > >

> >

> > The Memnon in Homer is called the King of Ethiopia, but I guess

there > > still could be a connection. According to Herodotus, Memnon founded

> > the city of Susa in Persia.

> >

> > Regards,

> > Paul Kekai Mananala

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23555|2007-11-02 23:56:26|Paul Kekai Manansala|OT: 5 guesses on Emperor Qin Shihuang's tomb|

This is off-topic but perhaps of interest to archaeology buffs here. Also, Egyptologists might be interested in the ziggurat-like nature of the Qin Emperor's tomb.

Some stepped pyramids of mysterious origin have been found in Central China.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

---

---

5 guesses on Emperor Qin Shihuang's tomb

<http://china.org.cn/english/culture/229549.htm>

Qin Shihuang holds a central place in Chinese history for being the first emperor who united the country. He is also well known for his part in the construction of the spectacular Great Wall and his splendid terracotta army.

To ensure his rule in the afterlife, this emperor commanded more than 700,000 conscripts from all parts of the country to build him a grand mausoleum as luxurious as any of the palaces he had in mortal life. Legend says that numerous treasures were placed in the tomb.

As time passed, no one knew exactly what was put in the grand palace. Recently, Guo Zhikun, a specialist in the history of the Qin (221 BC-206 BC) and Han (206 BC-220 AD) dynasties, gave a press conference in Xi'an, the capital city of west China's Shaanxi Province. He disclosed his academic research results focusing on the Mausoleum of Emperor Qin Shihuang, making bold guesses about the mysterious tomb complex that fascinates the whole world.

Guess 1: How tall was the tomb mound?

According to Guo, the mausoleum of Emperor Qin Shihuang is actually composed of two parts: the tomb mound, a hillock above the tomb, and the underground palace, the chamber containing the emperor's coffin.

Most historical records indicate that the original tomb mound was 115 meters in height and 2,076 meters in girth. Exposed to the wind and sun for thousands of years, the mound has been greatly weathered down. The current girth is 1,390 meters, and the base of the mound covers an area of 120,750 square meters.

There has been a decades-long argument about why the mound's height dropped so sharply in recent years. Guo said that most people attributed it to the erosion from wind and rain and to manmade changes. However, another opinion has emerged recently. According to Duan Qingbo who leads the archaeological team at the mausoleum, the height of 115 meters recorded in most historical documents was just a figure copied down from the original blueprint. It is believed that the construction was left unfinished due to a nationwide uprising of peasants. After the emperor's corpse was placed in the chamber, the tomb mound project began. Later, about half of the laborers were transferred to the construction site of another palace building. When the peasant army approached the Mausoleum of Emperor Qin Shihuang, the second emperor of the dynasty, who had taken the throne from his dead father, hastily organized the remaining workers on the construction site to fight against the rebels. No more soil were added onto the hillock later.

Guess 2: How many gates does the underground palace have?

Opinions also differ on how many gates the underground palace contains. Some said there were two, one made of stone and the other of bronze. Others said that there were six, because Emperor Qin Shihuang had always considered the number "six" auspicious.

How many gates does the underground palace have then? After reading through piles of ancient documents, Guo Zhikun said that the exact number was recorded clearly in Records of the Historian, a great historical book written by Sima Qian. In it, the author wrote, "When the emperor died, he was placed in the underground palace. Then, the middle gate was closed and the outer gate was shut down. All workmen were entombed. No one escaped."

Guo explained that the emperor's coffin and all his burial articles were placed inside the middle gate. When the palace was shut down, workmen were busy working in it. Within seconds, however, they were entombed along with the emperor and became burial sacrifices themselves.

From Sima Qian's description, Guo inferred that the underground palace had three gates: an outer gate, a middle gate and an unmentioned inner gate. In addition, in Sima Qian's record, the middle gate was "closed", which meant it had two planks, and the outer gate was "shut down", which meant it slide down vertically. Guo believed the middle door was locked automatically once it was closed. It was designed deliberately to prevent any breakthrough from inside or any invasion from outside. Besides, Guo guessed the unmentioned inner gate had the same mechanism as the middle one and the three gates were located on a straight line.

Guess 3: How many treasures lie buried?

The tomb of Emperor Qin Shihuang was filled with fine vessels, precious stones and other rarities according to Sima Qian's record. Liu Xiang, another famous scholar before Sima Qian, wrote in one of his passages, "Since antiquity, no one has ever been buried in such a luxurious manner as Emperor Qin Shihuang."

All the sketchy but intriguing words made us curious about the mysterious wealth buried in the magnificent underground palace. In Records of the Historian, one can find descriptions about a golden wild goose, pearls and jade. But what else lies down there?

In the late 1980s, a large bronze chariot equipped with life-size horses was unearthed outside the west wall of the underground palace of Emperor Qin Shihuang. These elaborately decorated burial articles fascinated the world about the treasures hidden in the emperor's tomb chamber.

"Emperor Qin Shihuang was fond of music. He must have all kinds of musical instruments buried with him," guessed Guo. Recently, a pit for sacrifices was found between the inner wall and outer wall of the tomb complex. Covering 600 square meters, the pit was 40 meters wide from east to west and 15 meters long from north to south. Most of the articles excavated were pottery figures of courtiers, musicians and acrobats. In recent years, a variety of traditional Chinese musical instruments, such as Bianzhong (bronze chimes), were unearthed. Guo felt confident that the underground palace must have a whole collection of musical instruments. Besides, Guo guessed that there might be many valuable ancient books in addition to treasures and jewels.

Guess 4: Does the automatic-shooting crossbows function well?

Ancient Chinese tended to bury treasures with them. Not surprisingly, tomb robbery was once rampant throughout the country. To prevent outside invasions, Emperor Qin Shihuang ordered a full range of precautions. It is said that besides poisonous mercury, booby traps with automatically ejected arrows were installed in the tomb chamber to deter would-be robbers. Anyone who dared to break in would certainly die a violent death.

However, all those alleged lethal weapons have been buried under earth for thousands of years. Would they still function adequately now? Most people believe that the crossbows would still shoot arrows if they are triggered. Guo also agreed so after he carefully studied ancient smelting technology recorded in historical books.

In a modern test, a coating of chromate was found on the surface of weapons excavated along with the terracotta warriors. This coating served to make bronze weapons rust-resistant. Thus, it is highly likely that the automatic crossbows may function well even after thousands of years.

Guo speculated that these crossbows were the first automatic burglar-proof devices in the world. "Craftsmen were ordered to fix up these crossbows in such a way so that any thief breaking in would be shot." He quoted a line in Records of the Historian to support his prediction.

Guess 5: Is the corpse of Emperor Qin Shihuang well preserved?

Although it is widely believed that the underground palace has not been disturbed in past years, some people hold the opinion that the emperor's body had putrefied.

According to historical records, the emperor died during an inspection tour. It was summer so the body couldn't be kept for long. In fact, records state that the body had started to stink even before it was carried back to the capital.

In one of his works, Guo pointed out that it is possible the emperor's corpse might be relatively well preserved. He had three reasons supporting his assumption. First, during the Qin era, it was common practice among aristocrats to put mercury in their tombs to prevent corpses from decaying. Second, when the emperor died, all prominent officials were accompanying him, along with an imperial doctor with superb medical skills who was summoned to his deathbed. Third, modern tests on the soil of the tomb mound show unusually high concentrations of mercury. Guo pointed out all these conditions indicate the possibility of preservation for his body.

Guo: All the guesses have to be testified by archeological finds.

At the press conference, Guo's new book, Guesses on the Underground Palace of Qin Mausoleum, was introduced to the public. "When I wrote this book, I consulted scores of famous archeologists via letters, E-mails or face-to-face communications. They all gave me tremendous help." Guo Zhikun said that his assumptions were based on the results of previous research. If they turn out to be correct, the credit should be given to all scholars engaged in this field.

As technology advances, maybe one day we can open the grand palace and discover all the answers to these questions.

(China.org.cn by Chen Xia, October 24, 2007)

| 23556|2007-11-03 06:32:24|cristofori whitakara|Re: OT: 5 guesses on Emperor Qin Shihuang's tomb|

dr. clyde winters spoke to this. he records a person huangdi i recall as the founder of the chinese dynasties and connects this person to the mandinke

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

This is off-topic but perhaps of interest to archaeology buffs here. Also, Egyptologists might be interested in the ziggurat-like nature of the Qin Emperor's tomb.

Some stepped pyramids of mysterious origin have been found in Central China.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

---

5 guesses on Emperor Qin Shihuang's tomb

---

<http://china.org.cn/english/culture/229549.htm>

Qin Shihuang holds a central place in Chinese history for being the first emperor who united the country. He is also well known for his part in the construction of the spectacular Great Wall and his splendid terracotta army.

To ensure his rule in the afterlife, this emperor commanded more than 700,000 conscripts from all parts of the country to build him a grand mausoleum as luxurious as any of the palaces he had in mortal life. Legend says that numerous treasures were placed in the tomb.

As time passed, no one knew exactly what was put in the grand palace. Recently, Guo Zhikun, a specialist in the history of the Qin (221 BC-206 BC) and Han (206 BC-220 AD) dynasties, gave a press conference in Xi'an, the capital city of west China's Shaanxi Province. He disclosed his academic research results focusing on the Mausoleum of Emperor Qin Shihuang, making bold guesses about the mysterious tomb complex that fascinates the whole world.

Guess 1: How tall was the tomb mound?

According to Guo, the mausoleum of Emperor Qin Shihuang is actually composed of two parts: the tomb mound, a hillock above the tomb, and the underground palace, the chamber containing the emperor's coffin.

Most historical records indicate that the original tomb mound was 115 meters in height and 2,076 meters in girth. Exposed to the wind and sun for thousands of years, the mound has been greatly weathered down. The current girth is 1,390 meters, and the base of the mound covers an area of 120,750 square meters.

There has been a decades-long argument about why the mound's height dropped so sharply in recent years. Guo said that most people attributed it to the erosion from wind and rain and to manmade changes. However, another opinion has emerged recently. According to Duan Qingbo who leads the archaeological team at the mausoleum, the height of 115 meters recorded in most historical documents was just a figure copied down from the original blueprint. It is believed that the construction was left unfinished due to a nationwide uprising of peasants. After the emperor's corpse was placed in the chamber, the tomb mound project began. Later, about half of the laborers were transferred to the construction site of another palace building. When the peasant army approached the Mausoleum of Emperor Qin Shihuang, the second emperor of the dynasty, who had taken the throne from his dead father, hastily organized the remaining workers on the construction site to fight against the rebels. No more soil were added onto the hillock later.

Guess 2: How many gates does the underground palace have?

Opinions also differ on how many gates the underground palace contains. Some said there were two, one made of stone and the other of bronze. Others said that there were six, because Emperor Qin Shihuang had always considered the number "six" auspicious.

How many gates does the underground palace have then? After reading through piles of ancient documents, Guo Zhikun said that the exact number was recorded clearly in Records of the Historian, a great historical book written by Sima Qian. In it, the author wrote, "When the emperor died, he was placed in the underground palace. Then, the middle gate was closed and the outer gate was shut down. All workmen were entombed. No one escaped."

Guo explained that the emperor's coffin and all his burial articles were placed inside the middle gate. When the palace was shut down, workmen were busy working in it. Within seconds, however, they were entombed along with the emperor and became burial sacrifices themselves.

From Sima Qian's description, Guo inferred that the underground palace had three gates: an outer gate, a middle gate and an unmentioned inner gate. In addition, in Sima Qian's record, the middle gate was "closed", which meant it had two planks, and the outer gate was "shut down", which meant it slide down vertically. Guo believed the middle door was locked automatically once it was closed. It was designed deliberately to prevent any breakthrough from inside or any invasion from outside. Besides, Guo guessed the unmentioned inner gate had the same mechanism as the middle one and the three gates were located on a straight line.

Guess 3: How many treasures lie buried?

The tomb of Emperor Qin Shihuang was filled with fine vessels, precious stones and other rarities according to Sima Qian's record. Liu Xiang, another famous scholar before Sima Qian, wrote in one of his passages, "Since antiquity, no one has ever been buried in such a luxurious manner as Emperor Qin Shihuang."

All the sketchy but intriguing words made us curious about the mysterious wealth buried in the magnificent underground palace. In Records of the Historian, one can find descriptions about a golden wild goose, pearls and jade. But what else lies down there? In the late 1980s, a large bronze chariot equipped with life-size horses was unearthed outside the west wall of the underground palace of Emperor Qin Shihuang. These elaborately decorated burial articles fascinated the world about the treasures hidden in the emperor's tomb chamber.

"Emperor Qin Shihuang was fond of music. He must have all kinds of musical instruments buried with him," guessed Guo. Recently, a pit for sacrifices was found between the inner wall and outer wall of the tomb complex. Covering 600 square meters, the pit was 40 meters wide from east to west and 15 meters long from north to south. Most of the articles excavated were pottery figures of courtiers, musicians and acrobats. In recent years, a variety of traditional Chinese musical instruments, such as Bianzhong (bronze chimes), were unearthed. Guo felt confident that the underground palace must have a whole collection of musical instruments. Besides, Guo guessed that there might be many valuable ancient books in addition to treasures and jewels.

Guess 4: Does the automatic-shooting crossbows function well?

Ancient Chinese tended to bury treasures with them. Not surprisingly, tomb robbery was once rampant throughout the country. To prevent outside invasions, Emperor Qin Shihuang ordered a full range of precautions. It is said that besides poisonous mercury, booby traps with automatically ejected arrows were installed in the tomb chamber to deter would-be robbers. Anyone who dared to break in would certainly die a violent death.

However, all those alleged lethal weapons have been buried under earth for thousands of years. Would they still function adequately now? Most people believe that the crossbows would still shoot arrows if they are triggered. Guo also agreed so after he carefully studied ancient smelting technology recorded in historical books.

In a modern test, a coating of chromate was found on the surface of weapons excavated along with the terracotta warriors. This coating served to make bronze weapons rust-resistant. Thus, it is highly likely that the automatic crossbows may function well even after thousands of years.

Guo speculated that these crossbows were the first automatic burglar-proof devices in the world. "Craftsmen were ordered to fix up these crossbows in such a way so that any thief breaking in would be shot." He quoted a line in Records of the Historian to support his prediction.

Guess 5: Is the corpse of Emperor Qin Shihuang well preserved?

Although it is widely believed that the underground palace has not been disturbed in past years, some people hold the opinion that the emperor's body had putrefied.

According to historical records, the emperor died during an inspection tour. It was summer so the body couldn't be kept for long. In fact, records state that the body had started to stink even before it was carried back to the capital.

In one of his works, Guo pointed out that it is possible the emperor's corpse might be relatively well preserved. He had three reasons supporting his assumption. First, during the Qin era, it was common practice among aristocrats to put mercury in their tombs to prevent corpses from decaying. Second, when the emperor died, all prominent officials were accompanying him, along with an imperial doctor with superb medical skills who was summoned to his deathbed. Third, modern tests on the soil of the tomb mound show unusually high concentrations of mercury. Guo pointed out all these conditions indicate the possibility of preservation for his body.

Guo: All the guesses have to be testified by archeological finds.

At the press conference, Guo's new book, Guesses on the Underground Palace of Qin Mausoleum, was introduced to the public. "When I wrote this book, I consulted scores of famous archeologists via letters, E-mails or face-to-face communications. They all gave me tremendous help." Guo Zhikun said that his assumptions were based on the results of previous research. If they turn out to be correct, the credit should be given to all scholars engaged in this field.

As technology advances, maybe one day we can open the grand palace and discover all the answers to these questions.

(China.org.cn by Chen Xia, October 24, 2007)

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23557|2007-11-03 07:23:48|cristofori whitakara|Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|
the source of this quote is wikipedia:

Achilles slew Thersites, and after a dispute sailed to Lesbos, where he was purified for his murder by Odysseus after sacrificing to Apollo, Artemis, and Leto.<sup>[108]</sup>

While they were away, Memnon of Ethiopia, son of Tithonus and Eos,<sup>[110]</sup> came with his host to help his stepbrother Priam.<sup>[111]</sup> He did not come directly from Ethiopia, but either from Susa in Persia, conquering all the peoples in between,<sup>[112]</sup> or from the Caucasus, leading an army of Ethiopians and Indians.<sup>[113]</sup> Like Achilles, he wore armor made by Hephaestus.<sup>[114]</sup> In the ensuing battle, Memnon killed Antilochus, who took one of Memnon's blows to save his father Nestor.<sup>[115]</sup> Achilles and Memnon then fought. Zeus weighed the fate of the two heroes; the weight containing that of Memnon sank,<sup>[116]</sup> and he was slain by Achilles.<sup>[108][117]</sup>

Priam was a descendant of Zeus-Ammon (Amon Ra).

Susa was the Cushite elamite capital city

"and Indians" is this referring to the straight haired Ethiopian Dravidians?

Hephaestus represents Ptah is greek mythology in asia minor as the hittites children of Heth of Canaan were military aides to the King of ethiopia. i know biblical history can be faulty but this reminds me of the cushite king of iraq nimrod who ruled over the canaanite tribes

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Interesting. And where is this war supposed to have taken place in Ethiopia/Kemet or in Greece? In that plot line the woollyheads obviously won.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> i dont recall from what source but i had once heard that the trojan war was a battle between the wooly haired ethiopians against the straigh-haired ethiopian and the story was passed down to the hellenics. i guess further research will prove valuable.

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Particularly, since the term Ethiopia had gotten bandied about so > much. Also, since it is believed that the Homer narration is taken > from oral tradition it is reasonable to assume that specificity is the > first casualty.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> > >

> > > Does anyone know if Memnon Hotep is the Memnon mentioned in the

> > > Trojan War or in other Greek literature? His reign is about the > > > same time as the Trojan War is supposed to have occurred, I believe.

> > > HTP,

> > > Mahari

> > >

> >

> > The Memnon in Homer is called the King of Ethiopia, but I guess there > > still could be a connection. According to Herodotus, Memnon founded > > the city of Susa in Persia.

> >

> > Regards,

> > Paul Kekai Mananala

> >

>

>

>

>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23558|2007-11-03 11:34:20|Manu Ampim|ANCIENT EGYPT TOUR ORIENTATION -
November 11th|

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR IX

ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET) - 2008

Personally escorted by

PROF. MANU AMPIM

(experienced tour guide & historian of Africana Studies)

-----
*FREE TOUR INFORMATION SESSION - 1 hour

DATE:Sunday, November 11, 2007

PLACE: 580 Grand Avenue , Oakland , CA

(across from Lake Merritt )

TIME: 2:45 pm (sharp)

*Must call to reserveseat - space is limited.

510.482.5791 or Profmanu@acninc.net

Tour itinerary

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

Tour schedule: May 31 - June 14, 2008 - $3299 (all inclusive)

---

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR IX

ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET)

TRIP INCLUDES:

- All tips, taxes, and domestic travel in Egypt
- Deluxe hotel accommodations& two meals per day
- Entrance fees to over 40 sites & monuments
- CD on "Documenting Your Travel Experiences"
- On-site and evening presentations by Prof. Ampim
- Optional 5 units college credit

TOUR HIGHLIGHTS (LAND OF THE PHARAOHS):

We will visit...

- The great pyramids of Giza & the Great Sphinx (Hermes-Akhet), which is the most well-known statue in the world.
- The ancient capital city of Memphis and the extensive monuments of Sakkara, including the Tomb of Ptah-Hotep, author of the oldest surviving book in the world.
- The massive Dahshur & Meidum pyramids, and the Mastaba of Ra-Hotep & Nofret, whose famous statues in the Cairo Museum are forgeries according to Prof. Ampim in his book, Modern Fraud.
- The Egyptian Museum with its renowned collection of well-preserved Pharaonic antiquities.
- The temples of Luxor and Karnak, which constitute one of the largest open-air museums in the world.
- The famous Valley of the Kings/Queens and Noble Tombs, including the Tomb of King Tutankhamen & the Temple of Queen Hatshepsut.
- The ancient city of the tomb builders, Deir el-Medina.
- The Luxor Museum & the Nubian Museum in Aswan.
- The Dendera, Edfu, and Abydos temples
- The Noble Tombs in Aswan & the temples of Pharaoh Ramses II / Queen Nefertari at Abu Simbel.
- The ancient Workmen's Village of Deir el Medina
- The Nubian village tour
- and much more...

-----

Prof. Manu Ampim is a leading primary researcher and historian on African & African American history and culture. He has written two books, conducted pioneering first-hand research in 18 countries, and has taken eight educational tours to Egypt and Central America. Ampim is currently an professor of history and Africana Studies at Contra Costa College and Merritt College in northern CA, and host of the popular internet radio program, "Africana Studies" on www.BlakeRadio.com

=====

FULL TRIP ITINERARY & REGISTRATION FORM

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

FOR MORE INFO:

Prof. Manu Ampim

Director, Advancing the Research

510-482-5791

www.ManuAmpim.com

profmanu@acninc.net

TOUR REGISTRATION & PAYMENT:

Consolidated Tours Organization, Inc.

1675 Virginia Avenue, Suite 200

Atlanta, GA 30337

Tel. 404-767-2727

Fax. 404-766-4520

Email: ctoinc@aol.com

| 23559|2007-11-04 14:29:59|Paul Kekai Manansala|Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

French version vs. the real thing.

Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the public for the first time.

We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.

A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the mummy onto a wooden stretcher.

Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, shrivelled body of the boy king.

It was a rare and incredible moment.

See how Tutankhamun looked then and now

Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras, saying: "The only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is the face and the legs.

"But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we can say that the mummy is going to be safe."

---

In pictures: Face unveiled

The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn erode the tombs and all that lies within.

Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian museum long ago, the mummy was not.

In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come and visit his tomb.

So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus and put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.

Iconic symbol

For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one of the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.

At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists rashly declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept this and together with his team spent many years following clues around this crumbling valley.

On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of Tutankhamun.

More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb was discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthral. Now his fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

By ANNA JOHNSON ? 5 hours ago

LUXOR, Egypt (AP) ? King Tut's buck-toothed face was unveiled Sunday for the first time in public ? more than 3,000 years after the youngest and most famous pharaoh to rule ancient Egypt was shrouded in linen and buried in his golden underground tomb.

Archeologists carefully lifted the fragile mummy out of a quartz sarcophagus decorated with stone-carved protective goddesses, momentarily pulling aside a beige covering to reveal a leathery black body.

The linen was then replaced over Tut's narrow body so only his face and tiny feet were exposed, and the 19-year-old king, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a century, was moved to a simple glass climate-controlled case to keep it from turning to dust.

"I can say for the first time that the mummy is safe and the mummy is well preserved, and at the same time, all the tourists who will enter this tomb will be able to see the face of Tutankhamun for the first time," Egypt's antiquities chief Zahi Hawass said from inside the hot and sticky tomb.

"The face of the golden boy is amazing. It has magic and it has mystery," he added.

Hawass said scientists began restoring the badly damaged mummy more than two years ago. Much of the body is broken into 18 pieces ? damage sustained when British archaeologist Howard Carter first discovered it 85 years ago, took it from its tomb and tried to pull off the famous golden mask, Hawass said.

But experts fear a more recent phenomenon ? mass tourism ? is further deteriorating Tut's mummy. Thousands of tourists visit the underground chamber every month, and Hawass said within 50 years the mummy could dissolve into dust.

"The humidity and heat caused by ... people entering the tomb and their breathing will change the mummy to a powder. The only good thing (left) in this mummy is the face. We need to preserve the face," said Hawass, who wore his signature Indiana Jones-style tan hat.

The mystery surrounding King Tutankhamun ? who ruled during the 18th dynasty and ascended to the throne at age 8 ? and his glittering gold tomb has entranced ancient Egypt fans since Carter first discovered the hidden tomb, revealing a trove of fabulous gold and precious stone treasures and propelling the once-forgotten pharaoh into global stardom.

He wasn't Egypt's most powerful or important king, but his staggering treasures, rumors of a mysterious curse that plagued Carter and his team ? debunked by experts long ago ? and several books and TV documentaries dedicated to Tut have added to his intrigue.

Archeologists in recent years have tried to resolve lingering questions over how he died and his precise royal lineage. In 2005, scientists removed Tut's mummy from his tomb and placed it into a portable CT scanner for 15 minutes to obtain a three-dimensional image. The scans were the first done on an Egyptian mummy.

The results ruled out that Tut was violently murdered ? but stopped short of definitively concluding how he died around 1323 B.C. Experts, including Hawass, suggested that days before dying, Tut badly broke his left thigh, an apparent accident that may have resulted in a fatal infection.

The CT scan also provided the most revealing insight yet into Tut's life. He was well-fed and healthy, but slight, standing 5 feet, 6 inches tall at the time of his death. The scan also showed he had the overbite characteristic of other kings from his family, large incisor teeth and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned.

The unveiling of Tut's mummy comes amid a resurgence in the frenzy over the boy king. A highly publicized museum exhibit traveling the globe drew more than 4 million people during its initial four-city American-leg of the tour. The exhibit will open Nov. 15 in London and later will make a three-city encore tour in the U.S. beginning with the Dallas Museum of Art.

The Egyptian tourism industry is hoping to capitalize on that interest and draw tourists to Luxor to see something they couldn't in traveling exhibit ? the mummy itself.

The number of tourists who visit Tut's tomb is expected to double to 700 a day now that the mummy will be on display indefinitely, said Mostafa Wazery, who heads the Valley of the Kings for Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities. Most of Egypt's other identified mummies are on display in museums in Luxor and Cairo.

But not every tourist was eager to find out that Tut's mummy was being moved to a modern, see-through case.

"I really think he should be left alone in quiet, in peace," said British tourist Bob Philpotts after viewing Tut's tomb before the mummy was moved on Sunday. "This is his resting place, and he should be left (there)."

Hawass said experts will begin another project to determine the pharaoh's precise royal lineage. It is unclear if he is the son or a half brother of Akhenaten, the "heretic" pharaoh who introduced a revolutionary form of monotheism to ancient Egypt and was the son of Amenhotep III.

Sunday's unveiling ensured the boy pharaoh would remain eternal, said Hawass.

"I can assure you that putting this mummy in this case, this showcase, can make the golden boy live forever," he said.

Photo 1 of 6

The face of the linen-wrapped mummy of King Tut is seen in his new glass case in his underground tomb in the famed Valley of the Kings in Luxor, Egypt Sunday, Nov. 4, 2007. The mummy of the 19-year-old pharaoh, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a century, was placed in a climate-controlled glass box in the tomb, with only the face and feet showing under the linen covering. (AP Photo/Ben Curtis)

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23561|2007-11-05 02:47:35|Peter Kaiza|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal other peoples civilisations?

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: pmanansala@sbcglobal.net
Date: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

French version vs. the real thing.

Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the public for the first time.

We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side. A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the mummy onto a wooden stretcher. Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, shrivelled body of the boy king. It was a rare and incredible moment.

See how Tutankhamun looked then and now

In pictures: Face unveiled

Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras, saying: "The only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is the face and the legs. "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we can say that the mummy is going to be safe."

The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn erode the tombs and all that lies within.

Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian museum long ago, the mummy was not.

In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, the remains of the boy king were badly damaged.

Now the body is also threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come and visit his tomb.

So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus and put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.

Iconic symbol

For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one of the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.

At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists rashly declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept this and together with his team spent many years following clues around this crumbling valley.

On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of Tutankhamun.

More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb was discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthral. Now his fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

| 23562|2007-11-05 09:45:20|lloyd spivey|Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display|

----- Original Message -----

From: K. Loganathan

To: akandabaratam@egroups.com; agamicpsychology@egroups.com;
meykandar@egroups.com; Ta_Seti@yahooogroups.com

Sent: Sunday, November 4, 2007 8:23:03 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

<http://ap.google.com/article/ALeqM5il0ZJBzzRK-iUB-Q0b8AaAwnkVqAD8SN1L881>

Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

By ANNA JOHNSON 5 hours ago

LUXOR, Egypt (AP) King Tut's buck-toothed face was unveiled Sunday for the first time in public more than 3,000 years after the youngest and most famous pharaoh to rule ancient Egypt was shrouded in linen and buried in his golden underground tomb.

Archeologists carefully lifted the fragile mummy out of a quartz sarcophagus decorated with stone-carved protective goddesses, momentarily pulling aside a beige covering to reveal a leathery black body.

The linen was then replaced over Tut's narrow body so only his face and tiny feet were exposed, and the 19-year-old king, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a century, was moved to a simple glass climate-controlled case to keep it from turning to dust.

"I can say for the first time that the mummy is safe and the mummy is well preserved, and at the same time, all the tourists who will enter this tomb will be able to see the face of Tutankhamun for the first time," Egypt's antiquities chief Zahi Hawass said from inside the hot and sticky tomb.

"The face of the golden boy is amazing. It has magic and it has mystery," he added.

Hawass said scientists began restoring the badly damaged mummy more than two years ago.

Much of the body is broken into 18 pieces damage sustained when British archaeologist Howard Carter first discovered it 85 years ago, took it from its tomb and tried to pull off the famous golden mask, Hawass said.

But experts fear a more recent phenomenon mass tourism is further deteriorating Tut's mummy. Thousands of tourists visit the underground chamber every month, and Hawass said within 50 years the mummy could dissolve into dust.

"The humidity and heat caused by ... people entering the tomb and their breathing will change the mummy to a powder. The only good thing (left) in this mummy is the face. We need to preserve the face," said Hawass, who wore his signature Indiana Jones-style tan hat.

The mystery surrounding King Tutankhamun who ruled during the 18th dynasty and ascended to the throne at age 8 and his glittering gold tomb has entranced ancient Egypt fans since Carter first discovered the hidden tomb, revealing a trove of fabulous gold and precious stone treasures and propelling the once-forgotten pharaoh into global stardom.

He wasn't Egypt's most powerful or important king, but his staggering treasures, rumors of a mysterious curse that plagued Carter and his team debunked by experts long ago and several books and TV documentaries dedicated to Tut have added to his intrigue.

Archeologists in recent years have tried to resolve lingering questions over how he died and his precise royal lineage. In 2005, scientists removed Tut's mummy from his tomb and placed it into a portable CT scanner for 15 minutes to obtain a three-dimensional image. The scans were the first done on an Egyptian mummy.

The results ruled out that Tut was violently murdered but stopped short of definitively concluding how he died around 1323 B.C. Experts, including Hawass, suggested that days before dying, Tut badly broke his left thigh, an apparent accident that may have resulted in a fatal infection.

The CT scan also provided the most revealing insight yet into Tut's life. He was well-fed and healthy, but slight, standing 5 feet, 6 inches tall at the time of his death. The scan also showed he had the overbite characteristic of other kings from his family, large incisor teeth and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned.

The unveiling of Tut's mummy comes amid a resurgence in the frenzy over the boy king. A highly publicized museum exhibit traveling the globe drew more than 4 million people during its initial four-city American-leg of the tour. The exhibit will open Nov. 15 in London and later will make a three-city encore tour in the U.S. beginning with the Dallas Museum of Art.

The Egyptian tourism industry is hoping to capitalize on that interest and draw tourists to Luxor to see something they couldn't in traveling exhibit the mummy itself.

The number of tourists who visit Tut's tomb is expected to double to 700 a day now that the mummy will be on display indefinitely, said Mostafa Wazery, who heads the Valley of the Kings for Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities. Most of Egypt's other identified mummies are on display in museums in Luxor and Cairo.

But not every tourist was eager to find out that Tut's mummy was being moved to a modern, see-through case.

"I really think he should be left alone in quiet, in peace," said British tourist Bob Philpotts after viewing Tut's tomb before the mummy was moved on Sunday. "This is his resting place, and he should be left (there)."

Hawass said experts will begin another project to determine the pharaoh's precise royal lineage. It is unclear if he is the son or a half brother of Akhenaten, the "heretic" pharaoh who introduced a revolutionary form of monotheism to ancient Egypt and was the son of Amenhotep III.

Sunday's unveiling ensured the boy pharaoh would remain eternal, said Hawass.

"I can assure you that putting this mummy in this case, this showcase, can make the golden boy live forever," he said.

Photo 1 of 6

The face of the linen-wrapped mummy of King Tut is seen in his new glass case in his underground tomb in the famed Valley of the Kings in Luxor, Egypt Sunday, Nov. 4, 2007. The mummy of the 19-year-old pharaoh, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a century, was placed in a climate-controlled glass box in the tomb, with only the face and feet showing under the linen covering. (AP Photo/Ben Curtis)

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23563|2007-11-05 09:45:23|Tjetti Asaru|Yet again, the physical evidence shows the Egyptians were Black|

King Tut on disply. Black man. I am salivating for a Eurocentric response...a nice green griffin-like response. Please.... please someone Eurocentric, just say that the King Tut face is a Negroid looking Caucasoid....just say the word Admixture. Please? Just activate me.

http://video.msn.com/?mkt=en-

us&brand=msnbc&tab=m5&rf=http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/21623825/page/2/&fg=&from=00&vid=ce1da0cb-e162-4f14-a057-

b190abc2da7f&playlist=videoByTag:mk:us:vs:0>tag:News\_Editors%

20Picks:ns:MSNVideo\_Top\_Cat:ps:10:sd:-1:ind:1:ff:8A

| 23564|2007-11-05 12:05:24|Peter Gray|Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|

Further research on what exactly?

Peter

P

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: boogie_down_black@yahoo.com

Date: Fri, 2 Nov 2007 11:24:21 -0700

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple

i dont recall from what source but i had once heard that the trojan war was a battle between the wooly haired ethiopians against the straigh-haired ethiopian and the story was passed down to the hellenics. i guess further research will prove valuable.

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Particularly, since the term Ethiopia had gotten bandied about so much. Also, since it is believed that the Homer narration is taken from oral tradition it is reasonable to assume that specificity is the first casualty.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>>

>> Does anyone know if Memnon Hotep is the Memnon mentioned in the

>> Trojan War or in other Greek literature? His reign is about the >> same time as the Trojan War is supposed to have occurred, I believe.

>> HTP,

>> Mahari

>>

>

> The Memnon in Homer is called the King of Ethiopia, but I guess there > still could be a connection. According to Herodotus, Memnon founded > the city of Susa in Persia.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Mananala

>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!

| 23565|2007-11-05 13:20:04|cristofori whitakara|Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple|

on who actually fought in the war. hollywood produced a megamovie about this event.

hollywood has a major influence on how people think of events from the past. there were no cushite/kushite/african/ethiopian et al characters in their movie. however when research is done on the event one comes across ethiopian characters. i guess further research will prove valuable.

Peter Gray wrote:

Further research on what exactly?

Peter

P

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

From: boogie_down_black@yahoo. com

Date: Fri, 2 Nov 2007 11:24:21 -0700

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Unearthing Amenhotep III's Temple

i dont recall from what source but i had once heard that the trojan war was a battle between the woolly haired ethiopians against the straigh-haired ethiopian and the story was passed down to the hellenics. i guess further research will prove valuable.

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Particularly, since the term Ethiopia had gotten bandied about so much. Also, since it is believed that the Homer narration is taken from oral tradition it is reasonable to assume that specificity is the first casualty.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > Does anyone know if Memnon Hotep is the Memnon mentioned in the

> > Trojan War or in other Greek literature? His reign is about the > > same time as the Trojan War is supposed to have occurred, I believe.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

>

> The Memnon in Homer is called the King of Ethiopia, but I guess there > still could be a connection. According to Herodotus, Memnon founded > the city of Susa in Persia.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Mananala

>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around <http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23566|2007-11-05 13:54:33|cristofori whitakara|( african chinese) dr. winters and all|
i met a lady from the ivory coast who spoke manding and i just had to show her dr. clyde winter's work. she identified with the language he wrote of. does this prove his findings?

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23567|2007-11-05 18:13:17|arumese|Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display|
These images might make one suspect that the fantastical Caucasoid reconstruction currently circulating was a preemptive attempt at damage control in anticipation of the Black African-looking face of the King shown in these newly released pictures.

Fred

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, lloyd spivey wrote:

>

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: K. Loganathan

> To: akandabaratam@egroups.com; agamicpsychology@egroups.com;
meykandar@egroups.com; Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Sunday, November 4, 2007 8:23:03 PM

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> <http://ap.google.com/article/ALeqM5il0ZJBzzRK-iUB-Q0b8AaAwnkVqAD8SN1L881> Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display By ANNA JOHNSON ?
5 hours ago

> LUXOR, Egypt (AP) ? King Tut's buck-toothed face was unveiled Sunday for the first time in public ? more than 3,000 years after the youngest and most famous pharaoh to rule ancient Egypt was shrouded in linen and buried in his golden underground tomb.

> Archeologists carefully lifted the fragile mummy out of a quartz sarcophagus decorated with stone-carved protective goddesses, momentarily pulling aside a beige covering to reveal a leathery black body.

> The linen was then replaced over Tut's narrow body so only his face and tiny feet were exposed, and the 19-year-old king, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a > century, was moved to a simple glass climate-controlled case to keep it from turning to dust.

> "I can say for the first time that the mummy is safe and the mummy is well preserved, and at the same time, all the tourists who will enter this tomb will be able to see the face of Tutankhamun for the first time," Egypt's antiquities chief Zahi Hawass said from inside the hot and sticky tomb.

> "The face of the golden boy is amazing. It has magic and it has mystery," he added.

> Hawass said scientists began restoring the badly damaged mummy more than two years ago. Much of the body is broken into 18 pieces ? damage sustained when British archaeologist Howard Carter first discovered it 85 years ago, took it from its tomb and tried to pull off the famous golden mask, Hawass said.

> But experts fear a more recent phenomenon ? mass tourism ? is further deteriorating Tut's mummy. Thousands of tourists visit the underground chamber every month, > and Hawass said within 50 years the mummy could dissolve into dust.

> "The humidity and heat caused by ... people entering the tomb and their breathing will change the mummy to a powder. The only good thing (left) in this mummy is the face. We need to preserve the face," said Hawass, who wore his signature Indiana Jones-style tan hat.

> The mystery surrounding King Tutankhamun ? who ruled during the 18th dynasty and ascended to the throne at age 8 ? and his glittering gold tomb has entranced ancient Egypt fans since Carter first discovered the hidden tomb, revealing a trove of fabulous gold and precious stone treasures and propelling the once-forgotten pharaoh into global stardom.

> He wasn't Egypt's most powerful or important king, but his staggering treasures, rumors of a mysterious curse that plagued Carter and his team ? debunked by experts long ago ? and several books and TV documentaries dedicated to Tut have added to his intrigue.

>

> Archeologists in recent years have tried to resolve lingering questions over how he died and his precise royal lineage. In 2005, scientists removed Tut's mummy from his tomb and placed it into a portable CT scanner for 15 minutes to obtain a three-dimensional image. The scans were the first done on an Egyptian mummy.

> The results ruled out that Tut was violently murdered ? but stopped short of definitively concluding how he died around 1323 B.C. Experts, including Hawass, suggested that days before dying, Tut badly broke his left thigh, an apparent accident that may have resulted in a fatal infection.

> The CT scan also provided the most revealing insight yet into Tut's life. He was well-fed and healthy, but slight, standing 5 feet, 6 inches tall at the time of his death. The scan also showed he had the overbite characteristic of other kings from his family, large incisor teeth and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned.

> The

> unveiling of Tut's mummy comes amid a resurgence in the frenzy over the boy king. A highly publicized museum exhibit traveling the globe drew more than 4 million people during its initial four-city American-leg of the tour. The exhibit will open Nov. 15 in London and later will make a three-city encore tour in the U.S. beginning with the Dallas Museum of Art.

> The Egyptian tourism industry is hoping to capitalize on that interest and draw tourists to Luxor to see something they couldn't in traveling exhibit ? the mummy itself.

> The number of tourists who visit Tut's tomb is expected to double to 700 a day now that the mummy will be on display indefinitely, said Mostafa Wazery, who heads the Valley of the Kings for Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities. Most of Egypt's other identified mummies are on display in museums in Luxor and Cairo.

> But not every tourist was eager to find out that Tut's mummy was being moved to a modern, see-through > case.

> "I really think he should be left alone in quiet, in peace," said British tourist Bob Philpotts after viewing Tut's tomb before the mummy was moved on Sunday. "This is his resting place, and he should be left (there)."

> Hawass said experts will begin another project to determine the pharaoh's precise royal lineage. It is unclear if he is the son or a half brother of Akhenaten, the "heretic" pharaoh who introduced a revolutionary form of monotheism to ancient Egypt and was the son of Amenhotep III.

> Sunday's unveiling ensured the boy pharaoh would remain eternal, said Hawass.

> "I can assure you that putting this mummy in this case, this showcase, can make the golden boy live forever," he said.

>

> Photo 1 of 6

> The face of the linen-wrapped mummy of King Tut is seen in his new glass case in his underground tomb in the famed Valley of the Kings in Luxor, Egypt Sunday, Nov. 4, 2007. The mummy of the 19-year-old pharaoh, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a century, was placed in a climate-controlled glass box in the tomb, with only the face and feet showing under the linen covering. (AP

> Photo/Ben Curtis)

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23568|2007-11-05 18:26:57|arumese|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

$$\succ$$

> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal other peoples civilisations?

All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown exactly what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability to mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the Western world.

Fred

$$>$$

> To: Ta_Seti@...: pmanansala@...: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59

+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>
>
>
>

>
> French version vs. the real thing.

>
> Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the public for the first time.

> We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.

> A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the mummy onto a wooden stretcher.

> Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, shrivelled body of the boy king.

> It was a rare and incredible moment.

>

> See how Tutankhamun looked then and now

> Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras, saying: "The only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is the face and the legs.

> "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we can say that the mummy is going to be safe."

> The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

> As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn erode the tombs and all that lies within.

> Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian museum long ago, the mummy was not.

> In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask,

the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come and visit his tomb.

> So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus and

put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.

> Iconic symbol

> For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one of the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.

> At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists rashly declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept this and together with his team spent many years following clues around this crumbling valley.

> On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of Tutankhamun.

> More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb was discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthral. Now his fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____

> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live

Hotmail

> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

>

| 23569|2007-11-05 18:45:12|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>>

>>

>> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still > believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal > other peoples civilisations?

>

> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go > back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown exactly > what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability to > mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the > Western world.

>

>

I keep remembering that from the rise of Christian and particularly Germanic Europe non-whites were almost entirely absent from artistic,
non-literary representation.

It was not until about the 12th century or a little earlier that we begin seeing very slowly the depiction of non-whites in art particularly in heraldry.

Even for many centuries after this time, non-white peoples still were mostly depicted as monstrous types without realism until about Renaissance times.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23570|2007-11-05 18:47:14|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>
> >
>
> I keep remembering that from the rise of Christian and particularly > Germanic Europe non-whites were almost entirely absent from artistic,
> non-literary representation.
>
>

And if one compares this to the world of Muslim art, it's totally different.

Turkic, Persian, Mongol and Ottoman art depicted the gamut of "racial" types with great accuracy.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23571|2007-11-05 19:01:37|kungfuhustle|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|
It's no ones fault but own for continuing to play this game by their rules.

As long as we attempt to work within their system you can always expect to face failure and frustration. The deck is heavily stacked.
Perhaps one day we'll learn to assemble and cultivate our own game and rules. I'm not holding my breathe. We are unorganized and impotent to compete at their level until we bring the required pieces together to make a difference. Until then, you can expect more of the same.

-----Original Message-----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

Date: Tue, 06 Nov 2007 02:45:11 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

> >

> >

> > This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still > believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal
> other peoples civilisations?

>

> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go > back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown exactly > what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability to > mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the > Western world.
>
>

I keep remembering that from the rise of Christian and particularly Germanic Europe non-whites were almost entirely absent from artistic,
non-literary representation.

It was not until about the 12th century or a little earlier that we begin seeing very slowly the depiction of non-whites in art
particularly in heraldry.

Even for many centuries after this time, non-white peoples still were mostly depicted as monstrous types without realism until about Renaissance times.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23572|2007-11-05 19:59:29|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display|

Attachments :

Indeed - but many will continue to live the lie and carry on with business as usual.
How sad!

Dr. Gloria T. Emeagwali
Prof. of History and African Studies
History Department
Central Connecticut State University
1615 Stanley Street
New Britain
CT 06050.
www.africahistory.net
www.africaonline.com
African History
www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html
Africa Update

- > Archeologists carefully lifted the fragile mummy out of a quartz sarcophagus decorated with stone-carved protective goddesses, momentarily pulling aside a beige covering to reveal a leathery black body.
- > The linen was then replaced over Tut's narrow body so only his face and tiny feet were exposed, and the 19-year-old king, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a
- > century, was moved to a simple glass climate-controlled case to keep it from turning to dust.
- > "I can say for the first time that the mummy is safe and the mummy is well preserved, and at the same time, all the tourists who will enter this tomb will be able to see the face of Tutankhamun for the first time," Egypt's antiquities chief Zahi Hawass said from inside the hot and sticky tomb.
- > "The face of the golden boy is amazing. It has magic and it has mystery," he added.
- > Hawass said scientists began restoring the badly damaged mummy more than two years ago. Much of the body is broken into 18 pieces - damage sustained when British archaeologist Howard Carter first discovered it 85 years ago, took it from its tomb and tried to pull off the famous golden mask, Hawass said.
- > But experts fear a more recent phenomenon - mass tourism - is further deteriorating Tut's mummy. Thousands of tourists visit the underground chamber every month,
- > and Hawass said within 50 years the mummy could dissolve into dust.
- > "The humidity and heat caused by ... people entering the tomb and their breathing will change the mummy to a powder. The only good thing (left) in this mummy is the face. We need to preserve the face," said Hawass, who wore his signature Indiana Jones-style tan hat.
- > The mystery surrounding King Tutankhamun - who ruled during the 18th dynasty and ascended to the throne at age 8 - and his glittering gold tomb has entranced ancient Egypt fans since Carter first discovered the hidden tomb, revealing a trove of fabulous gold and precious stone treasures and propelling the once-forgotten pharaoh into global stardom.
- > He wasn't Egypt's most powerful or important king, but his staggering treasures, rumors of a mysterious curse that plagued Carter and his team - debunked by experts long ago - and several books and TV documentaries dedicated to Tut have added to his intrigue.
- >
- > Archeologists in recent years have tried to resolve lingering questions over how he died and his precise royal lineage. In 2005, scientists removed Tut's mummy from his tomb and placed it into a portable CT scanner for 15 minutes to obtain a three-dimensional image. The scans were the first done on an Egyptian mummy.

> The results ruled out that Tut was violently murdered - but stopped short of definitively concluding how he died around 1323 B.C. Experts, including Hawass, suggested that days before dying, Tut badly broke his left thigh, an apparent accident that may have resulted in a fatal infection.

> The CT scan also provided the most revealing insight yet into Tut's life. He was well-fed and healthy, but slight, standing 5 feet, 6 inches tall at the time of his death. The scan also showed he had the overbite characteristic of other kings from his family, large incisor teeth and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned.

> The

> unveiling of Tut's mummy comes amid a resurgence in the frenzy over the boy king. A highly publicized museum exhibit traveling the globe drew more than 4 million people during its initial four-city American-leg of the tour. The exhibit will open Nov. 15 in London and later will make a three-city encore tour in the U.S. beginning with the Dallas Museum of Art.

> The Egyptian tourism industry is hoping to capitalize on that interest and draw tourists to Luxor to see something they couldn't in traveling exhibit - the mummy itself.

> The number of tourists who visit Tut's tomb is expected to double to 700 a day now that the mummy will be on display indefinitely, said Mostafa Wazery, who heads the Valley of the Kings for Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities. Most of Egypt's other identified mummies are on display in museums in Luxor and Cairo.

> But not every tourist was eager to find out that Tut's mummy was being moved to a modern, see-through

> case.

> "I really think he should be left alone in quiet, in peace," said British tourist Bob Philpotts after viewing Tut's tomb before the mummy was moved on Sunday. "This is his resting place, and he should be left (there)."

> Hawass said experts will begin another project to determine the pharaoh's precise royal lineage. It is unclear if he is the son or a half brother of Akhenaten, the "heretic" pharaoh who introduced a revolutionary form of monotheism to ancient Egypt and was the son of Amenhotep III.

> Sunday's unveiling ensured the boy pharaoh would remain eternal, said Hawass.

> "I can assure you that putting this mummy in this case, this showcase, can make the golden boy live forever," he said.

>

> Photo 1 of 6

> The face of the linen-wrapped mummy of King Tut is seen in his new glass case in his underground tomb in the famed Valley of the Kings in Luxor, Egypt Sunday, Nov. 4, 2007. The mummy of the 19-year-old pharaoh, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a century, was placed in a climate-controlled glass box in the tomb, with only the face and feet showing under the linen covering. (AP

> Photo/Ben Curtis)

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> http://mail . yahoo.com

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23573|2007-11-05 20:18:23|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

You really don't have any idea why?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>

>

> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal other peoples civilisations?

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: pmanansala@...: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59 +0000 > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>

>

>

>

>

> French version vs. the real thing.

>

> Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the public for the first time.

> We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.

> A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the

mummy onto a wooden stretcher.

> Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, shrivelled body of the boy king.

> It was a rare and incredible moment.

>

> See how Tutankhamun looked then and now

> Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras, saying: "The only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is the face and the legs.

> "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we can say that the mummy is going to be safe."

> The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

> As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn erode the tombs and all that lies within.

> Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian museum long ago, the mummy was not.

> In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come and visit his tomb.

> So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus and put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.

> Iconic symbol

> For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one of the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.

> At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists rashly declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept this and together with his team spent many years following clues around this crumbling valley.

> On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of Tutankhamun.

> More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb was discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthral. Now his fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

>

>

> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live
Hotmail
> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>
>
| 23574|2007-11-05 20:28:33|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|
    >>They can't see it anyway. The ability to

Point of reference observe all of the current fantasy movies and tv shows displaying white superhumans doing such fantastical things. When you consider the endless overwhelming lies spewed about over the years and currently it's kind of amusing --- in a creepy evil kind of way.

HTP,
Mahari

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:
> >
> >
> > This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still > believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal
> other peoples civilisations?
>
> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go > back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown exactly
> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability

to > mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in
the > Western world.
>
> Fred
>
>
>
>>
>> To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59
> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> French version vs. the real thing.
>>
>> Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small > group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief > archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to
the > public for the first time.
>> We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof
> and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.
>> A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the
> mummy onto a wooden stretcher.
>> Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's > body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, > shrivelled body of the boy king.
>> It was a rare and incredible moment.
>>
>> See how Tutankhamun looked then and now
>> Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy > into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras, saying: "The > only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is

> the face and the legs.
> > "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will
be > completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we > can say that the mummy is going to be safe."
> > The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity > from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley
> of the Kings.
> > As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers
every > day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn > erode the tombs and all that lies within.
> > Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian > museum long ago, the mummy was not.
> > In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, > the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also > threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come
> and visit his tomb.
> > So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus
and
> put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.
> > Iconic symbol
> > For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination > around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it > was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one
of
> the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.
> > At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists
rashly
> declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of > the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept
> this and together with his team spent many years following clues > around this crumbling valley.
> > On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that > would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of > Tutankhamun.
> > More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb
was > discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthral. Now

his > fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

---

> > The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live

> Hotmail

> > <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

> >

>

| 23575|2007-11-05 20:55:54|Tjetti Asaru|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

Well Game Over. Their house of cards come a tumblin down. They're out there kidnapping kids in Chad to "adopt" in France. Their game is over. You know Zawi Hawass was having heart palpitations when he had to uncover tha mummy and let those cameras roll.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> It's no ones fault but own for continuing to play this game by their > rules.

> As long as we attempt to work within their system you can always expect

> to face failure and frustration. The deck is heavily stacked.

> Perhaps one day we'll learn to assemble and cultivate our own game
and > rules. I'm not holding my breathe. We are unorganized and impotent

to > compete at their level until we bring the required pieces together

to > make a difference. Until then, you can expect more of the same.

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Paul Kekai Manansala

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

> Date: Tue, 06 Nov 2007 02:45:11 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>>>

>>>

>>> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
>> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still >> believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal >> other peoples civilisations?

>>

>> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the >> fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go

>> back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being >> revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown
exactly

>> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric >> scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being >> confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability
to

>> mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in
the >> Western world.

>>

>>

>

> I keep remembering that from the rise of Christian and particularly > Germanic Europe non-whites were almost entirely absent from artistic,

> non-literary representation.

>

> It was not until about the 12th century or a little earlier that we > begin seeing very slowly the depiction of non-whites in art > particularly in heraldry.

>

> Even for many centuries after this time, non-white peoples still were

> mostly depicted as monstrous types without realism until about > Renaissance times.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23576|2007-11-05 20:55:55|Tjetti Asaru|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

Well as long as we continue to acknowledge the power of their fantasies, we give their fantasies power. I don't do that. I remind them of the objective error in how they interpret and present their fantasies and I get nothing but pleasure watching them contradict themselves. From "Caucasoid's with Negroid Admixture" to classifying modern day biracial people as "black" and ancient "bi-racial" types as a part of a greater Caucasoid supergroup. It's all an easy matter to turn their fantasies against them.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>>>

>>>

>>> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
>> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still >> believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal >> other peoples civilisations?

>>

>> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the >> fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go

>> back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being >> revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown

exactly

>> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric >> scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being >> confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability to >> mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in

the >> Western world.

>>

>>

>

> I keep remembering that from the rise of Christian and particularly > Germanic Europe non-whites were almost entirely absent from artistic,

> non-literary representation.
>
> It was not until about the 12th century or a little earlier that we > begin seeing very slowly the depiction of non-whites in art > particularly in heraldry.
>
> Even for many centuries after this time, non-white peoples still

were

> mostly depicted as monstrous types without realism until about > Renaissance times.

>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala

>
| 23577|2007-11-05 21:07:42|kungfuhustle|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|
Possession is 9/10th of their law.
Tomorrow will be a new day and we ain't got one mummy, temple, or scroll.
We do have Bill Cosby though.

-----Original Message-----

From: Tjetti Asaru <the\_osirica@yahoo.com>
Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
Date: Tue, 06 Nov 2007 03:43:34 -0000
Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Well Game Over. Their house of cards come a tumblin down. They're out there kidnapping kids in Chad to "adopt" in France. Their game is over. You know Zawi Hawass was having heart palpitations when he had to uncover the mummy and let those cameras roll.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> It's no one's fault but own for continuing to play this game by their > rules.
> As long as we attempt to work within their system you can always expect
> to face failure and frustration. The deck is heavily stacked.
> Perhaps one day we'll learn to assemble and cultivate our own game
and > rules. I'm not holding my breathe. We are unorganized and impotent
to > compete at their level until we bring the required pieces together

to > make a difference. Until then, you can expect more of the same.

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Paul Kekai Manansala

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

> Date: Tue, 06 Nov 2007 02:45:11 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>>>

>>>

>>> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance

>> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still

>> believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal

>> other peoples civilisations?

>>

>> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the >> fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go

>> back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being >> revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown exactly >> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric

>> scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being >> confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability

to

>> mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the >> Western world.

>>

>>

>

> I keep remembering that from the rise of Christian and particularly

> Germanic Europe non-whites were almost entirely absent from artistic,

> non-literary representation.

>

> It was not until about the 12th century or a little earlier that we

> begin seeing very slowly the depiction of non-whites in art > particularly in heraldry.

>

> Even for many centuries after this time, non-white peoples still were

> mostly depicted as monstrous types without realism until about > Renaissance times.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23578|2007-11-05 23:10:10|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

Well, to take possession of the black Kemetic culture and claim it as their own is their best card. If they were to admit to conquering the culture and murdering the black owners of the culture it would put them in an even more difficult situation with the rest of black Afrika with whom they are pretending to be friends and allies. To inform the backwoods uneducated black populace that they stole their greatest known (or perhaps the world's greatest) civilization and subsequently sold them into slavery while they wallow in its wealth might not bode well for future political relations. So they lie about who they really were.

It is interesting that the bible calls the Arabs and the jews brothers and they both are in the same position of pretending to be friends of the blacks as they steal their culture from them and - figuratively at a minimum - enslave them. We mustn't forget that Israel was allies with the racist apartheid S. Afrikan regime who enslaved the whole black country.

I liken that situation (on-going for 2000 years, at least) to what is happening to the Afrikan American cultures now (on-going for almost the last 100 years) such as jazz, rock n roll, r&b, rap, etc. Jazz, blues, rock n roll and r&b are now pre-empted by whites and spread throughout the world. And I suspect that most people of the world do not know that these art forms were created by blacks.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>

>

> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal other peoples civilisations?

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: pmanansala@...: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59
+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- > French version vs. the real thing.
- >
- > Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- > In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the public for the first time.
- > We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.
- > A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the mummy onto a wooden stretcher.
- > Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, shrivelled body of the boy king.
- > It was a rare and incredible moment.
- >
- > See how Tutankhamun looked then and now
- > Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras, saying: "The only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is the face and the legs.
- > "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we can say that the mummy is going to be safe."
- > The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.
- > As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn erode the tombs and all that lies within.
- > Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian museum long ago, the mummy was not.
- > In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask,

the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come and visit his tomb.

> So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus and put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.

> Iconic symbol

> For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one of the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.

> At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists rashly declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept this and together with his team spent many years following clues around this crumbling valley.

> On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of Tutankhamun.

> More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb was discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthrall. Now his fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live Hotmail

> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

>

| 23579|2007-11-06 07:21:24|Anthony Whitaker|Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display|
Good point!

Anthony

----- Original Message -----

From: arumese

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Monday, November 5, 2007 9:13:15 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

These images might make one suspect that the fantastical Caucasoid reconstruction currently circulating was a preemptive attempt at damage control in anticipation of the Black African-looking face of the King shown in these newly released pictures.

Fred

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, lloyd spivey wrote:

>

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: K. Loganathan

> To: akandabaratam@egroups.com; agamicpsychology@egroups.com; meikandar@egroups.com; Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Sunday, November 4, 2007 8:23:03 PM

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> <http://ap.google.com/article/ALeqM5il0ZJBzzRK-iUB-Q0b8AaAwnkVqAD8SN1L881> Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display By ANNA JOHNSON

5 hours ago

> LUXOR, Egypt (AP) King Tut's buck-toothed face was unveiled Sunday for the first time in public more than 3,000 years after the youngest and most famous pharaoh to rule ancient Egypt was shrouded in linen and buried in his golden underground tomb.

> Archeologists carefully lifted the fragile mummy out of a quartz sarcophagus decorated with stone-carved protective goddesses, momentarily pulling aside a beige covering to reveal a leathery black body.

> The linen was then replaced over Tut's narrow body so only his face and tiny feet were exposed, and the 19-year-old king, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a > century, was moved to a simple glass climate-controlled case to keep it from turning to dust.

> "I can say for the first time that the mummy is safe and the mummy is well preserved, and at the same time, all the tourists who will enter this tomb will be able to see the face of Tutankhamun for the first time," Egypt's antiquities chief Zahi Hawass said from inside the hot and sticky tomb.

> "The face of the golden boy is amazing. It has magic and it has mystery," he added.

> Hawass said scientists began restoring the badly damaged mummy more than two years ago. Much of the body is broken into 18 pieces damage sustained when British archaeologist Howard Carter first discovered it 85 years ago, took it from its tomb and tried to pull off the famous golden mask, Hawass said.

> But experts fear a more recent phenomenon mass tourism is further deteriorating Tut's mummy. Thousands of tourists visit the underground chamber every month, > and Hawass said within 50 years the mummy could dissolve into dust.

> "The humidity and heat caused by ... people entering the tomb and their breathing will change the mummy to a powder. The only good thing (left) in this mummy is the face. We need to preserve the face," said Hawass, who wore his signature Indiana Jones-style tan hat.

> The mystery surrounding King Tutankhamun who ruled during the 18th dynasty and ascended to the throne at age 8 and his glittering gold tomb has entranced ancient Egypt fans since Carter first discovered the hidden tomb, revealing a trove of fabulous gold and precious stone treasures and propelling the once-forgotten pharaoh into global stardom.

> He wasn't Egypt's most powerful or important king, but his staggering treasures, rumors of a mysterious curse that plagued Carter and his team debunked by experts long ago and several books and TV documentaries dedicated to Tut have added to his intrigue.

>

> Archeologists in recent years have tried to resolve lingering questions over how he died and his precise royal lineage. In 2005, scientists removed Tut's mummy from his tomb and placed it into a portable CT scanner for 15 minutes to obtain a three-dimensional image. The scans were the first done on an Egyptian mummy.

> The results ruled out that Tut was violently murdered but stopped short of definitively concluding how he died around 1323 B.C. Experts, including Hawass, suggested that days before dying, Tut badly broke his left thigh, an apparent accident that may have resulted in a fatal infection.

> The CT scan also provided the most revealing insight yet into Tut's life. He was well-fed and healthy, but slight, standing 5 feet, 6 inches tall at the time of his death. The scan also showed he had the overbite characteristic of other kings from his family, large incisor teeth and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned.

> The

> unveiling of Tut's mummy comes amid a resurgence in the frenzy over the boy king. A highly publicized museum exhibit traveling the globe drew more than 4 million people during its initial four-city American-leg of the tour. The exhibit will open Nov. 15 in London and later will make a three-city encore tour in the U.S. beginning with the Dallas Museum of Art.

> The Egyptian tourism industry is hoping to capitalize on that interest and draw tourists to Luxor to see something they couldn't in traveling exhibit the mummy itself.

> The number of tourists who visit Tut's tomb is expected to double to 700 a day now that the mummy will be on display indefinitely, said Mostafa Wazery, who heads the Valley of the Kings for Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities. Most of Egypt's other identified mummies are on display in museums in Luxor and Cairo.

> But not every tourist was eager to find out that Tut's mummy was being moved to a modern, see-through

> case.

> "I really think he should be left alone in quiet, in peace," said British tourist Bob Philpotts after viewing Tut's tomb before the mummy was moved on Sunday. "This is his resting place, and he should be left (there)."

> Hawass said experts will begin another project to determine the pharaoh's precise royal lineage. It is unclear if he is the son or a half brother of Akhenaten, the "heretic" pharaoh who introduced a revolutionary form of monotheism to ancient Egypt and was the son of Amenhotep III.

> Sunday's unveiling ensured the boy pharaoh would remain eternal, said Hawass.

> "I can assure you that putting this mummy in this case, this showcase, can make the golden boy live forever," he said.

>

> Photo 1 of 6

> The face of the linen-wrapped mummy of King Tut is seen in his new glass case in his underground tomb in the famed Valley of the Kings in Luxor, Egypt Sunday, Nov. 4, 2007. The mummy of the 19-year-old pharaoh, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a century, was placed in a climate-controlled glass box in the tomb, with only the face and feet showing under the linen covering. (AP

> Photo/Ben Curtis)

>

>

>

>

| 23580|2007-11-06 09:00:55|Freddie Thompson|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

Kungfuhustle chided:

?It's no ones fault but own for continuing to play this game by their rules.

As long as we attempt to work within their system you can always expect to face failure and frustration. The deck is heavily stacked.

Perhaps one day we'll learn to assemble and cultivate our own game and rules. I'm not holding my breathe. We are unorganized and impotent to compete at their level until we bring the required pieces together to make a difference. Until then, you can expect more of the same.?

Actually it's a blessing in disguise Kungfuhustle. It shows how effective complaining (combined with a little anger and objective research) has been in getting the attention of those in power who have the means to publicly express their contempt for the progress being made against their selfish/racist agenda. We have no choice but to learn to play their game by their rules -- since we have all made the necessary choice to play the game anyway. Everyone who has any amount of real success plays by the set of rules laid out for them, no matter how frustrated they may get. The rules that have been set by Western society to determine what is true in history are not necessarily bad rules. The people who claim to follow them are bad, when they are allowed to ignore those rules under the guise of objective scholarship.

When we learn to master the game they have created -or rather, fight the war they have waged against us- we will learn to beat them at it. This requires that we observe and understand the truth about what they have done in the past, and what they are doing now ? taking note of how their view of the world and themselves has evolved.

The need to complain comes naturally in the process of any form of oppression, and so does feelings of frustration. This eventually brings about action, the pace of which will almost certainly seem to move too slowly in the thinking of the average person. But God and fate have their own time-table -- which will always transcend the frustrations and agendas of man.

What Paul has done in providing this forum (along with many others) is a greater step than one might think toward turning things back to the way they should be. Why get discouraged upon seeing the strength of your enemy when he launches a counter attack? (Don't you realize that this is real warfare?) If anything, it gives you the chance to see where he is weak, where he is strong, where he is right and where he is wrong. You may get pummeled a few times in the process. But that doesn't mean you should give-up and say not enough progress is being made.

In order to defeat the enemy we need the power of objectivity (which necessitates patience with ourselves and the slow process of change) to keep us from falling into the same pits of hypocrisy they keep stumbling around in.

We should not take the things that are happening for granted. The change we would like to see may not happen in our lifetime. But as men like Professor Ampim, Robin Walker, Dr. Winters (and many others who do first-hand research) continue to work with the patience and professionalism that gives us reason to respect their work, they set the stage for present and future generations to be equipped to deal devastating blow after devastating blow to racist Eurocentric scholarship and all of its subtleties.

Fred

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23581|2007-11-06 09:06:33|Ferg|KMT decoded|

Greetings all.

Get ready for the biggest upset in Egyptology.

KMT has been decoded.

Within the next few days I shall be revealing all. If any Eurocentric scholar can prove me wrong, I shall make a donation!

Somo

| 23582|2007-11-06 09:41:17|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display|

I agree. And of course, they had to have been planning this move of the mummy for a long time - giving themselves plenty of time to concoct this reconstruction charade.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Anthony Whitaker wrote:

>

> Good point!

> Anthony

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: arumese

> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Monday, November 5, 2007 9:13:15 PM

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> These images might make one suspect that the fantastical Caucasoid

>

> reconstruction currently circulating was a preemptive attempt at

>

> damage control in anticipation of the Black African-looking face of > the King shown in these newly released pictures.

>

>

>

>

> Fred

[illegible]

>
> >
>
> >
>
> > <http://ap.google.com/article/ALeqM5il0ZJBzzRK-iUB-Q0b8AaAwnkV>
>
> qAD8SN1L881 Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display By ANNA

JOHNSON ?

>
> 5 hours ago
>
> > LUXOR, Egypt (AP) ? King Tut's buck-toothed face was unveiled
>
> Sunday for the first time in public ? more than 3,000 years after

the

>
> youngest and most famous pharaoh to rule ancient Egypt was shrouded
>
> in linen and buried in his golden underground tomb.
>
> > Archeologists carefully lifted the fragile mummy out of a quartz

>
> sarcophagus decorated with stone-carved protective goddesses,
>
> momentarily pulling aside a beige covering to reveal a leathery

black

>
> body.
>
> > The linen was then replaced over Tut's narrow body so only his > face and tiny feet were exposed, and the 19-year-old king, whose life
>

>
> and death has captivated people for nearly a
>
> > century, was moved to a simple glass climate-controlled case to > keep it from turning to dust.
>

>
> > "I can say for the first time that the mummy is safe and the
>
> mummy is well preserved, and at the same time, all the tourists who
>
> will enter this tomb will be able to see the face of Tutankhamun

for
>
> the first time," Egypt's antiquities chief Zahi Hawass said from
>
> inside the hot and sticky tomb.
>
> > "The face of the golden boy is amazing. It has magic and it has
>
> mystery," he added.
>
> > Hawass said scientists began restoring the badly damaged mummy > more than two years ago. Much of the body is broken into 18 pieces ?
>

>
> damage sustained when British archaeologist Howard Carter first > discovered it 85 years ago, took it from its tomb and tried to pull
>
>
> off the famous golden mask, Hawass said.
>
> > But experts fear a more recent phenomenon ? mass tourism ? is > further deteriorating Tut's mummy. Thousands of tourists visit the
>
>
> underground chamber every month,
>
> > and Hawass said within 50 years the mummy could dissolve into dust.

>
> > "The humidity and heat caused by ... people entering the tomb

and
>
> their breathing will change the mummy to a powder. The only good > thing (left) in this mummy is the face. We need to preserve the > face," said Hawass, who wore his signature Indiana Jones-style tan > hat.
>
>

>
>
>> The mystery surrounding King Tutankhamun ? who ruled during the
>
> 18th dynasty and ascended to the throne at age 8 ? and his glittering

>
> gold tomb has entranced ancient Egypt fans since Carter first > discovered the hidden tomb, revealing a trove of fabulous gold and
>
>
> precious stone treasures and propelling the once-forgotten pharaoh
>
> into global stardom.

>
>> He wasn't Egypt's most powerful or important king, but his
>
> staggering treasures, rumors of a mysterious curse that plagued
>
> Carter and his team ? debunked by experts long ago ? and several
>
> books and TV documentaries dedicated to Tut have added to his
>
> intrigue.

>
>>
>
>> Archeologists in recent years have tried to resolve lingering > questions over how he died and his precise royal lineage. In 2005, > scientists removed Tut's mummy from his tomb and placed it into a
>
>
>
> portable CT scanner for 15 minutes to obtain a three-dimensional > image. The scans were the first done on an Egyptian mummy.
>
>
>> The results ruled out that Tut was violently murdered ? but
>
> stopped short of definitively concluding how he died around 1323

B.C.

>
> Experts, including Hawass, suggested that days before dying, Tut
>
> badly broke his left thigh, an apparent accident that may have > resulted in a fatal infection.
>

>
> > The CT scan also provided the most revealing insight yet into
>
> Tut's life. He was well-fed and healthy, but slight, standing 5 feet,

>
> 6 inches tall at the time of his death. The scan also showed he had
>
> the overbite characteristic of other kings from his family, large
>
> incisor teeth and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned.

> > The

>
> > unveiling of Tut's mummy comes amid a resurgence in the frenzy > over the boy king. A highly publicized museum exhibit traveling the
>
>
> globe drew more than 4 million people during its initial four-city
>
> American-leg of the tour. The exhibit will open Nov. 15 in London

and

>
> later will make a three-city encore tour in the U.S. beginning with
>
> the Dallas Museum of Art.

>
> > The Egyptian tourism industry is hoping to capitalize on that
>
> interest and draw tourists to Luxor to see something they couldn't

in

>
> traveling exhibit ? the mummy itself.

>
> > The number of tourists who visit Tut's tomb is expected to double

>
> to 700 a day now that the mummy will be on display indefinitely, said

>
> Mostafa Wazery, who heads the Valley of the Kings for Egypt's

Supreme

>
> Council of Antiquities. Most of Egypt's other identified mummies

are

>
> on display in museums in Luxor and Cairo.

>
> > But not every tourist was eager to find out that Tut's mummy

was

>
> being moved to a modern, see-through
>
> > case.

>
> > "I really think he should be left alone in quiet, in peace,"

said

>
> British tourist Bob Philpotts after viewing Tut's tomb before the > mummy was moved on Sunday. "This is his resting place, and he should
>

>
> be left (there)."
>
> > Hawass said experts will begin another project to determine the > pharaoh's precise royal lineage. It is unclear if he is the son or
>

a

>
> half brother of Akhenaten, the "heretic" pharaoh who introduced a > revolutionary form of monotheism to ancient Egypt and was the son
>

of

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$
 $\gg$
$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>> _____

$$>$$

>> Do You Yahoo!?

$$>$$

> > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

$$>$$

> > <http://mail.yahoo.com>

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$
$$>$$
$$>$$
 $\gamma$  $\angle$  $\angle$  $\nabla$  $\angle$  $\angle$  $\angle$  $\angle$

✓✓

 $\checkmark$

✓✓

✓✓

✓✓

✓✓

✓✓

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

> >

> >

> > This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction- yet many people still > believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal > other peoples civilisations?

>

> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go > back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown exactly > what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability to > mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the > Western world.

>

>

I keep remembering that from the rise of Christian and particularly Germanic Europe non-whites were almost entirely absent from artistic,
non-literary representation.

It was not until about the 12th century or a little earlier that we begin seeing very slowly the depiction of non-whites in art
particularly in heraldry.

Even for many centuries after this time, non-white peoples still were mostly depicted as monstrous types without realism until about Renaissance times.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23584|2007-11-06 10:35:00|kungfuhustle|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|
Thanks for your response.

Kungfuhustle ~~chided~~ remarked:
It's no ones fault but own for continuing to play this game by their rules.

As long as we attempt to work within their system you can always expect to face failure and frustration. The deck is heavily stacked. Perhaps one day we'll learn to assemble and cultivate our own game and rules. I'm not holding my breathe. We are unorganized and impotent to compete at their level until we bring the required pieces together to make a difference. Until then, you can expect more of the same. Actually its a blessing in disguise Kungfuhustle. It shows how effective complaining (combined with a little anger and objective research) has been in getting the attention of those in power who have the means to publicly express their contempt for the progress being made against their selfish/racist agenda.

The agenda is what it has always been, a carefully orchestrated series of universal enveloping constructs meant to achieve a specific set of economic, social, and political goals. The program may be racist, but it is very well organized, very focused, and very well staffed, coordinated, and funded.

IMHO, individual achievements to counter this type of program are akin to dropping pebbles in the ocean. Still, dropping pebbles in the ocean is preferable to doing nothing, but I feel we are capable of so much more with coordinated effort. We have no choice but to learn to play their game by their rules -- since we have all made the necessary choice to play the game anyway. Everyone who has any amount of real success plays by the set of rules laid out for them, no matter how frustrated they may get. The rules that have been set by Western society to determine what is true in history are not necessarily bad rules. The people who claim to follow them are bad, when they are allowed to ignore those rules under the guise of objective scholarship.

The problem I see in attempting to "learn" their game and participate by their rules is, the game is always advancing on many fronts. A milestones are met, new elements are introduced as is true for any long term plan. This is the advantage of pre-planning and long term organization, versus random and unorganized counter-reaction. History is but one element of this networked agenda which ties into other facets of their plan. For me, weather Tut was black, brown, or red has little or no impact on where Africans and the world's blacks will be 100 years from now. When we learn to master the game they have created -or rather, fight the war they have waged against us- we will learn to beat them at it. This requires that we observe and understand the truth about what they have done in the past, and what they are doing now taking note of how their view of the world and themselves has evolved.

Without an organized global plan, how will this information be effectively deployed? Will Oprah carry it on her Book-Of-The-Month club? LOL, just joking. The need to complain comes naturally in the process of any form of oppression, and so does feelings of frustration. This eventually brings about action, the pace of which will almost certainly seem to move too slowly in the thinking of the average person. But God and fate have their own time-table -- which will always transcend the frustrations and agendas of man.

Complaining about small issues is easy. Harnessing the many black PhDs, Generals, Writers, Actors, Sports stars, million/billionaires, scholars into a cohesive structure is the necessary and difficult assignment. We all have to eat, and the majority of us rely on our oppressors to do so. What Paul has done in providing this forum (along with many others) is a greater step than one might think toward turning things back to the way they should be. Why get discouraged upon seeing the strength of your enemy when he launches a counter attack? (Don't you realize that this is real warfare?) If anything, it gives you the chance to see where he is weak, where he is strong, where he is right and where he is wrong. You may get pummeled a few times in the process. But that doesn't mean you should give-up and say not enough progress is being made.

Our oppressors aren't countering, We are, and in an inefficient, unorganized manner. In fact, most of our efforts are assisting and enabling what we are subjected to. Why? Because we display African style tribalism and refuse to develop a comprehensive and inclusive plan.

When I observe whites trekking to an unknown archaeological site, I often observe blacks leading the way, handing over the goods, and even digging and carrying the discovered objects away. We cooperate with our situation simply because, we gotta eat, and because we are unorganized, we offer no alternative. In order to defeat the enemy we need the power of objectivity (which necessitates patience with ourselves and the slow process of change) to keep us from falling into the same pits of hypocrisy they keep stumbling around in.

Whites think at a different level because they have unlimited funding and 50-100 year plans. As soon as we make progress in a specific area, the rules change. For example, when the US passed the civil rights bill they changed the rules by placing white women as "minorities". Today, 75% of minority program benefits are given to white women who have white husbands and white children. By constantly moving the goal posts, those who have no insight to the plan believe they are catching up, until they realize the rules have been changed.

For them, hypocrisy is a small issue relative to survival.

When you visit the casinos in Vegas the odds are fixed with the house. If you play by the rules, the great majority will lose. It's best to enjoy the buffets, and if you bet at all, side bet on the betting player to lose. I believe the 1,000,000,000 to 1 odds of Vegas are much more favorable than this concerted global anti-black plan we're discussing. This is my objective observation. We should not take the things that are happening for granted. The change we would like to see may not happen in our lifetime. But as men like Professor Ampim, Robin Walker, Dr. Winters (and many others who do first-hand research) continue to work with the patience and professionalism that gives us reason to respect their work, they set the stage for present and future generations to be equipped to deal with devastating blow after devastating blow to racist Eurocentric scholarship and all of its subtleties.

I have much respect for individual sacrifice and achievement. All the more reason to place these multi-discipline efforts under a common interface to provide all required activities with the better chance for success and impact.

Don't get me wrong, although it doesn't appear so, I am an optimist. However, although archaeology/Egyptology are not my trained discipline, I still recognize the need for organized structure in this area that ties into other required areas of focus. Otherwise, you have isolated pockets of random activity that in the end, may prove ultimately to be wasted effort. All these efforts should be focused on targeted areas such as below and have defined inter-dependencies;

economics
education (history here)
Media
Enterprise law politics religion psychology

These areas were identified 200 years ago, and although we have many more educated resources available, no global plan is being evaluated or implemented.

I don't fault the white man for his efforts to ensure his survival and dominance. At this point I find fault with blacks worldwide who cooperate, assist, and empower this endeavor. As someone said, you cannot solve a problem by employing the same type of thinking that created it.

Sorry to be off-topic, but I believe it is on-topic.

Lastly, if anyone knows of such a coordinating body, or even a proposed organization, please feel free to share it. I will be very eager to volunteer my time and resources. Fred

Hotep
Meninarmer

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23585|2007-11-06 10:41:31|Peter Gray|Re: KMT decoded|
Somo,

What do you mean: KMT has been decoded? Are you referring to the old debate, black land (nation) vs. black soil? Thanks for your clarification.

Peter

PS Didn't Prof. Manu Ampim recently address this very topic, with respect to the n'wt (crossed lines)determinative?

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk
Date: Tue, 6 Nov 2007 17:06:50 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] KMT decoded

Greetings all.

Get ready for the biggest upset in Egyptology.

KMT has been decoded.

Within the next few days I shall be revealing all. If any Eurocentric scholar can prove me wrong, I shall make a donation!

Somo

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Café Stop by today!

| 23586|2007-11-06 11:40:45|Ferg|Re: KMT decoded|

No I am not referring to the old debate. It has nothing to do with the land or the black soil.
Wait and see.

Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Peter Gray

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Tuesday, November 06, 2007 6:36 PM

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] KMT decoded

Somo,

What do you mean: KMT has been decoded? Are you referring to the old debate, black land (nation) vs. black soil? Thanks for your clarification.

Peter

PS Didn't Prof. Manu Ampim recently address this very topic, with respect to the n'wt (crossed lines)determinative ?

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk

Date: Tue, 6 Nov 2007 17:06:50 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] KMT decoded

Greetings all.

Get ready for the biggest upset in Egyptology.

KMT has been decoded.

Within the next few days I shall be revealing all. If any Eurocentric scholar can prove me wrong, I shall make a donation!

Somo

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Café Stop by today!

| 23587|2007-11-06 15:55:28|noirfist|Re: Ptah/Ta and the Creation of Space-Time|

-Speaking of when Ptah/Ta rose out of the Nun, compare this with the Zulu's Umbilini (Serpent power/boiling water) rising like a coiled surpurt out of the initiates base of the spine to the top of the head during a Sangoma's ritual meditative practices, or the same with the Kung's! (of the Kalahari-the Khoi/San related peoples of southern Africa) Num rising exactly the same as Umbilini! Here is a case where African metaphysics will illuminate countless concepts from 'Nubian-Kemetic' thought, etc. Could the metaphysics contained within the mysteries of the rising of Ptah/Ta be speaking metaphorically/metaphysically about the African process of generating internal energy for healing or self defense? See the works Boiling Energy on the Kung's! mysteries/healing rituals and Song of The Stars by Amazulu Sanusi Credo Mutwa.

-- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> Peace Mahari

>

> I think the more and more people research African languages, the

more is > going to be coming out on how to properly pronounce the words. Not only

> that, but more so how to interpret the philosophy behind the words.

>

> For instance, going along the path you were going, we know "htp" > graphically is a "flat line," while Ptah/Ta is a rising mound [as

if > something was arising from the flat mound].

>

> Ptah means "ever expanding" and land or location. In the beginning

there > was "htp" [peace]. But creation happened when Ptah/Ta rose out of

the > Nun /hTp/. In the kongo this process is called Kala ye Zima (on and off

> /being and non-being).

>

>

> Ptah/Ta and Space-Time

>

> The Theory of Special Relativity was coined by scientist Albert

Einstein

- > in a 1905 paper "On the Electrodynamics of moving bodies." This
- > theory states that observers in an inertial reference frame (in other

- > words sitting still or idle) which are in uniform motion relative

to one

- > another, cannot perform any experiment to determine which one of them is

- > in "absolute motion". The theory postulates that the speed of light
- > would be the same for both observers. In other words, no matter

where

- > the observers are located and how they perceive the event, the laws of

- > the universe are going to be the same regardless.
- >
- > This theory by Einstein later prompted Hermann Minkowski to treat

the 3

- > dimensions of space (height, width, length) and the 1 dimension of

time

- > as a single construct called the "Space-Time Continuum." This
- > made space and time inseparable aspects of our reality.
- >
- > The theory of relativity posits that perception of an event is

relative

- > to your coordinates (location/space) and time of observation of

that

- > event. A social example would posit that how you see the world is based

- > on the time in which you are living and the particular location or
- > culture you belong to. Two people observing the same event, often

times

- > view those events differently because they are viewing it from two
- > different perspectives (locations) based on their upbringing and

frame

> of reference. Any man or woman in a serious relationship can attest to > this fact.

>

> Well this concept of relativity and space-time was already talked

about > and understood in ancient Ta-Merry 5000 years before Einstein. All

one > has to do is take a look at the Mdw Ntr (hieroglyphic) writing and

pay > attention to the creation myths. The Mn-Nfr theology posits that

the God

> Ptah (or Ta) rose out of the Nun (the ocean of consciousness of the > creator). From this event, creation was able to happen. I am

condensing

> this for sake of space, so forgive me.

>

> In Mdw Ntr, you can read words forwards and backwards and they all

mean > something different. The word / Ta / means to create or it could mean

> land. The word / Ta / in reverse is / At / and it means

> "moment." Here we have the fundamentals of space-time and > relativity. Before creation can occur, you need a place to create:

that > would be / Ta / or Ptah rising out of the Nun. At the moment /

Ta / (a > place) was created, time was automatic (its reverse).

>

> When there is total peace /htp/ there is no movement of any kind;

which > also means there is no time. But when Ta formed, it became the space and

> the objects (which has height, width and lengths). It's opposite /at/> becomes the time (moment) necessary for the creation process. They

are > inseparable.

>

> In the physical realm, everything has an opposite. So the creation

of

> Hot makes Cold automatic. The concept of Above makes the concept of > Below automatic. One can't exist without the other: the same with > Space-Time. Before you can create anything, you need a place to put your

> creation. Time is the measure of two or more events. Creation is an > event (including the creation of the place to create in) and

creation

> happens in intervals called time. Here we see the Nile Valley

people

> codifying science in myth, 5000 years before Einstein's Theory of > Relativity and Minkowski's Space-Time Continuum.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com> <<http://www.mochasuite.com>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > This just occurred to me. We know how the Kemau loved to "play"

with

> > words. "HTP" backwards is "PTH". I'm not a linguist so perhaps > > someone who is or has more expertise can stop the speculation > > immediately. But since no vowels were used how do we know

precisely

> > which vowels might go between the consonants?

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

>

| 23588|2007-11-06 15:55:39|cristofori whitakara|Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display| any psychiatrist in this group. we have spoke about them being psychotic....

"Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

Indeed - but many will continue to live the lie and carry on with business as usual.
How sad!

Dr. Gloria T. Emeagwali
Prof. of History and African Studies
History Department
Central Connecticut State University
1615 Stanley Street
New Britain
CT 06050.

www.africahistory.net <<http://www.africahistory.net/>>

www.africaonline.com <<http://www.africaonline.com/>>

African History

www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html <<http://www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html>>

Africa Update

---

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com on behalf of arumese

Sent: Mon 11/5/2007 9:13 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

These images might make one suspect that the fantastical Caucasoid reconstruction currently circulating was a preemptive attempt at damage control in anticipation of the Black African-looking face of the King shown in these newly released pictures.

Fred

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, lloyd spivey wrote:

>

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: K. Loganathan

> To: akandabaratam@egroups.com; agamicpsychology@egroups.com;
meykandar@egroups.com; Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Sunday, November 4, 2007 8:23:03 PM

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display

> <http://ap.google> <<http://ap.google>> . com/article/ ALeqM5il0ZJBzzRK -iUB-Q0b8AaAwnkV
qAD8SN1L881 Egypt Puts King Tut on Public Display By ANNA JOHNSON - 5 hours ago

> LUXOR, Egypt (AP) - King Tut's buck-toothed face was unveiled Sunday for the first time in public - more than 3,000 years after the youngest and most famous pharaoh to rule ancient Egypt was shrouded in linen and buried in his golden underground tomb.

> Archeologists carefully lifted the fragile mummy out of a quartz sarcophagus decorated with stone-carved protective goddesses, momentarily pulling aside a beige covering to reveal a leathery black body.

> The linen was then replaced over Tut's narrow body so only his face and tiny feet were exposed, and the 19-year-old king, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a > century, was moved to a simple glass climate-controlled case to keep it from turning to dust.

> "I can say for the first time that the mummy is safe and the mummy is well preserved, and at the same time, all the tourists who will enter this tomb will be able to see the face of Tutankhamun for the first time," Egypt's antiquities chief Zahi Hawass said from inside the hot and sticky tomb.

> "The face of the golden boy is amazing. It has magic and it has mystery," he added.

> Hawass said scientists began restoring the badly damaged mummy more than two years ago. Much of the body is broken into 18 pieces - damage sustained when British archaeologist Howard Carter first discovered it 85 years ago, took it from its tomb and tried to pull off the famous golden mask, Hawass said.

> But experts fear a more recent phenomenon - mass tourism - is further deteriorating Tut's mummy. Thousands of tourists visit the underground chamber every month,

> and Hawass said within 50 years the mummy could dissolve into dust.

> "The humidity and heat caused by ... people entering the tomb and their breathing will change the mummy to a powder. The only good thing (left) in this mummy is the face. We need to preserve the face," said Hawass, who wore his signature Indiana Jones-style tan hat.

> The mystery surrounding King Tutankhamun - who ruled during the 18th dynasty and ascended to the throne at age 8 - and his glittering gold tomb has entranced ancient Egypt fans since Carter first discovered the hidden tomb, revealing a trove of fabulous gold and precious stone treasures and propelling the once-forgotten pharaoh into global stardom.

> He wasn't Egypt's most powerful or important king, but his staggering treasures, rumors of a mysterious curse that plagued Carter and his team - debunked by experts long ago - and several books and TV documentaries dedicated to Tut have added to his intrigue.

>

> Archeologists in recent years have tried to resolve lingering questions over how he died and his precise royal lineage. In 2005, scientists removed Tut's mummy from his tomb and placed it into a portable CT scanner for 15 minutes to obtain a three-dimensional image. The scans were the first done on an Egyptian mummy.

> The results ruled out that Tut was violently murdered - but stopped short of definitively concluding how he died around 1323 B.C. Experts, including Hawass, suggested that days before dying, Tut badly broke his left thigh, an apparent accident that may have resulted in a fatal infection.

> The CT scan also provided the most revealing insight yet into Tut's life. He was well-fed and healthy, but slight, standing 5 feet, 6 inches tall at the time of his death. The scan also showed he had the overbite characteristic of other kings from his family, large incisor teeth and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned.

> The

> unveiling of Tut's mummy comes amid a resurgence in the frenzy over the boy king. A highly publicized museum exhibit traveling the globe drew more than 4 million people during its initial four-city American-leg of the tour. The exhibit will open Nov. 15 in London and later will make a three-city encore tour in the U.S. beginning with the Dallas Museum of Art.

> The Egyptian tourism industry is hoping to capitalize on that interest and draw tourists to Luxor to see something they couldn't in traveling exhibit - the mummy itself.

> The number of tourists who visit Tut's tomb is expected to double to 700 a day now that the mummy will be on display indefinitely, said

Mostafa Wazery, who heads the Valley of the Kings for Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities. Most of Egypt's other identified mummies are on display in museums in Luxor and Cairo.

> But not every tourist was eager to find out that Tut's mummy was being moved to a modern, see-through
> case.

> "I really think he should be left alone in quiet, in peace," said British tourist Bob Philpotts after viewing Tut's tomb before the mummy was moved on Sunday. "This is his resting place, and he should be left (there)."

> Hawass said experts will begin another project to determine the pharaoh's precise royal lineage. It is unclear if he is the son or a half brother of Akhenaten, the "heretic" pharaoh who introduced a revolutionary form of monotheism to ancient Egypt and was the son of Amenhotep III.

> Sunday's unveiling ensured the boy pharaoh would remain eternal, said Hawass.

> "I can assure you that putting this mummy in this case, this showcase, can make the golden boy live forever," he said.

>

> Photo 1 of 6

> The face of the linen-wrapped mummy of King Tut is seen in his new glass case in his underground tomb in the famed Valley of the Kings in Luxor, Egypt Sunday, Nov. 4, 2007. The mummy of the 19-year-old pharaoh, whose life and death has captivated people for nearly a century, was placed in a climate-controlled glass box in the tomb, with only the face and feet showing under the linen covering. (AP

> Photo/Ben Curtis)

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail> <<http://mail>> . yahoo.com

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

```
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around > http://mail.yahoo.com <http://mail.yahoo.com/>
>
```

Ta_Seti Repository
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2
 Yahoo! Groups Links

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23589|2007-11-06 15:55:45|JASON WOODS|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|
This is not the first time the world has seen the face of Tutanhkamen. Harry Burton took many photo's of the king, including hisactual faceand these pictures have been available for decades. Another veryblatant lie tomanipulate the mediaby Hawassfor financial gain.
Go to the Griffith Institue website and see for yourself.
<http://griffith.ashmus.ox.ac.uk/gri/carter/256-p0814.html>

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Well, to take possession of the black Kemetic culture and claim it as their own is their best card. If they were to admit to conquering the culture and murdering the black owners of the culture it would put them in an even more difficult situation with the rest of black Afrika with whom they are pretending to be friends and allies. To inform the backwoods uneducated black populace that they stole their greatest known (or perhaps the world's greatest) civilization and subsequently sold them into slavery while they wallow in its wealth might not bode well for future political relations. So they lie about who they really were.

It is interesting that the bible calls the Arabs and the jews brothers and they both are in the same position of pretending to be friends of the blacks as they steal their culture from them and - figuratively at a minimum - enslave them. We mustn't forget that Israel was allies with the racist apartheid S. Afrikan regime who enslaved the whole black country.

I liken that situation (on-going for 2000 years, at least) to what is happening to the Afrikan American cultures now (on-going for almost the last 100 years) such as jazz, rock n roll, r&b, rap, etc. Jazz, blues, rock n roll and r&b are now pre-empted by whites and spread throughout the world. And I suspect that most people of the world do not know that these art forms were created by blacks.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>
>
> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
between the mummy and the reconstruction- yet many people still believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal other peoples civilisations?

>
>
> To: Ta_Seti@...: pmanansala@. ...: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59
+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>
>
>
>
>
>
> French version vs. the real thing.
>
> Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the public for the first time.

> We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.

> A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the mummy onto a wooden stretcher.

> Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, shrivelled body of the boy king.

> It was a rare and incredible moment.

>

> See how Tutankhamun looked then and now

> Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras, saying: "The only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is the face and the legs.

> "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we can say that the mummy is going to be safe."

> The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

> As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn erode the tombs and all that lies within.

> Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian museum long ago, the mummy was not.

> In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come and visit his tomb.

> So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus and put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.

> Iconic symbol

> For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one of the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.

> At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists rashly declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept this and together with his team spent many years following clues around this crumbling valley.

> On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of Tutankhamun.

> More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb was discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthral. Now his fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

_____
_____
> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live Hotmail

> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23590|2007-11-06 16:24:32|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ptah/Ta and the Creation of Space-Time|

Wow! This whole process is the same as "Eastern" Kundalini yoga; almost the same as "umbilini". The energy in the chakra is said to be like a coiled snake at the bottom of the spine from which you are supposed to raise it's powerful energy through the spine up to the head.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "noirfist" wrote:

>

> -Speaking of when Ptah/Ta rose out of the Nun, compare this with the > Zulu's Umbilini (Serpent power/boiling water) rising like a coiled > surpurt out of the initiates base of the spine to the top of the > head during a Sangoma's ritual meditative practices, or the same > with the Kung's! (of the Kalahari-the Khoi/San related peoples of > southern Africa) Num rising exactly the same as Umbilini! Here is a > case were African metaphysics will illuminate countless concepts > from 'Nubian-Kemetic' thought, etc. Could the metaphysics contained > within the mysteries of the rising of Ptah/Ta be speaking > metaphorically/metaphysically about the African process of > generating internal energy for healing or self defense? See the > works Boiling Energy on the Kung's! mysteries/healing rituals and > Song of The Stars by Amazulu Sanusi Credo Mutwa.

>

> -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

> wrote:

>>

>> Peace Mahari

>>

>> I think the more and more people research African languages, the

> more is >> going to be coming out on how to properly pronounce the words.

Not

> only

>> that, but more so how to interpret the philosophy behind the words.

>>

>> For instance, going along the path you were going, we know "htp" >> graphically is a "flat line," while Ptah/Ta is a rising mound [as

> if >> something was arising from the flat mound].

>>

>> Ptah means "ever expanding" and land or location. In the beginning

> there >> was "htp" [peace]. But creation happened when Ptah/Ta rose out of

> the >> Nun /hTp/. In the kongo this process is called Kala ye Zima (on > and off

>> /being and non-being).

>>

>>

>> Ptah/Ta and Space-Time

> >
> > The Theory of Special Relativity was coined by scientist Albert > Einstein
> > in a 1905 paper "On the Electrodynamics of moving bodies." This > > theory states that observers in an inertial reference frame (in > other > > words sitting still or idle) which are in uniform motion relative
> to one > > another, cannot perform any experiment to determine which one of > them is > > in "absolute motion". The theory postulates that the speed of light > > would be the same for both observers. In other words, no matter
> where > > the observers are located and how they perceive the event, the > laws of > > the universe are going to be the same regardless.
> >
> > This theory by Einstein later prompted Hermann Minkowski to treat
> the 3
> > dimensions of space (height, width, length) and the 1 dimension
of
> time
> > as a single construct called the "Space-Time Continuum." This > > made space and time inseparable aspects of our reality.
> >
> > The theory of relativity posits that perception of an event is > relative > > to your coordinates (location/space) and time of observation of
> that > > event. A social example would posit that how you see the world is > based > > on the time in which you are living and the particular location or > > culture you belong to. Two people observing the same event, often > times
> > view those events differently because they are viewing it from two > > different perspectives (locations) based on their upbringing and > frame
> > of reference. Any man or woman in a serious relationship can > attest to > > this fact.
> >
> > Well this concept of relativity and space-time was already talked
> about > > and understood in ancient Ta-Merry 5000 years before Einstein.
All

> one >> has to do is take a look at the Mdw Ntr (hieroglyphic) writing
 and > pay >> attention to the creation myths. The Mn-Nfr theology posits that > the God
 >> Ptah (or Ta) rose out of the Nun (the ocean of consciousness of
 the >> creator). From this event, creation was able to happen. I am > condensing
 >> this for sake of space, so forgive me.
 >>
 >> In Mdw Ntr, you can read words forwards and backwards and they all
 > mean >> something different. The word / Ta / means to create or it could > mean
 >> land. The word / Ta / in reverse is / At / and it means
 >> "moment." Here we have the fundamentals of space-time and >> relativity. Before creation can occur, you need a place to create:
 > that >> would be / Ta / or Ptah rising out of the Nun. At the moment / > Ta / (a >> place) was created, time was automatic (its reverse).
 >>
 >> When there is total peace /htp/ there is no movement of any kind;
 > which >> also means there is no time. But when Ta formed, it became the > space and >> the objects (which has height, width and lengths). It's > opposite /at/>> becomes the time (moment) necessary for the creation process.
 They
 > are >> inseparable.
 >>
 >> In the physical realm, everything has an opposite. So the creation
 > of >> Hot makes Cold automatic. The concept of Above makes the concept
 of >> Below automatic. One can't exist without the other: the same with >> Space-Time. Before you can create anything, you need a place to > put your >> creation. Time is the measure of two or more events. Creation is an > > event (including the creation of the place to create in) and > creation > > happens in intervals called time. Here we see the Nile Valley

> people
> > codifying science in myth, 5000 years before Einstein's Theory of > > Relativity and Minkowski's Space-Time Continuum.

> >

> > Asar Imhotep

> > <http://www.mochasuite.com> <<http://www.mochasuite.com>>

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> > >

> > > This just occurred to me. We know how the Kemau loved to "play"

> with

> > > words. "HTP" backwards is "PTH". I'm not a linguist so perhaps > > > someone who is or has more expertise can stop the speculation > > > immediately. But since no vowels were used how do we know

> precisely

> > > which vowels might go between the consonants?

> > > HTP,

> > > Mahari

> > >

> >

>

| 23591|2007-11-06 16:30:06|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

I've seen the photos before but what was so astounding in the article is that it said "see how he really looked" or something to that effect and showed the picture of "Boy George" with a shaved head.

What manipulative dumb--- crap!

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, JASON WOODS

wrote:

>

> This is not the first time the world has seen the face of Tutankhamen. Harry Burton took many photo's of the king, including his actual face and these pictures have been available for decades.

>
> Another very blatant lie to manipulate the media by Hawass for financial gain.

>
> Go to the Griffith Institute website and see for yourself.
>
>
>
>
> <http://griffith.ashmus.ox.ac.uk/gri/carter/256-p0814.html>

>
> Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> Well, to take possession of the black Kemetic culture and claim it as > their own is their best card. If they were to admit to conquering > the culture and murdering the black owners of the culture it would > put them in an even more difficult situation with the rest of black > Afrika with whom they are pretending to be friends and allies. To > inform the backwoods uneducated black populace that they stole

their > greatest known (or perhaps the world's greatest) civilization and > subsequently sold them into slavery while they wallow in its wealth > might not bode well for future political relations. So they lie > about who they really were.
> It is interesting that the bible calls the Arabs and the jews > brothers and they both are in the same position of pretending to be > friends of the blacks as they steal their culture from them and - > figuratively at a minimum - enslave them. We mustn't forget that > Israel was allies with the racist apartheid S. Afrikan regime who > enslaved the whole black country.

>
> I liken that situation (on-going for 2000 years, at least) to what

is > happening to the Afrikan American cultures now (on-going for almost > the last 100 years) such as jazz, rock n roll, r&b, rap, etc. Jazz, > blues, rock n roll and r&b are now pre-empted by whites and spread > throughout the world. And I suspect that most people of the world

do > not know that these art forms were created by blacks.
> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>>

>>

>> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still > believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal
> other peoples civilisations?

>>

>>

>> To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59

> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>> French version vs. the real thing.

>>

>> Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>> In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small

> group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief > archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to

the

> public for the first time.

>> We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low

roof

> and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.

>> A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the > mummy onto a wooden stretcher.

>> Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's > body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, > shrivelled body of the boy king.

> > It was a rare and incredible moment.
> >
> > See how Tutankhamun looked then and now
> > Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy > into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras,

saying: "The

> only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is
> the face and the legs.
> > "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will

be > completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and

we

> can say that the mummy is going to be safe."
> > The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity
> from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley
> of the Kings.
> > As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers

every > day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn > erode the tombs and all that lies within.

> > Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian > museum long ago, the mummy was not.
> > In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, > the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also > threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come

> and visit his tomb.
> > So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus

and

> put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.
> > Iconic symbol
> > For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination > around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it > was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one

of

> the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.
>> At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists

rashly

> declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of > the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept

> this and together with his team spent many years following clues
> around this crumbling valley.
>> On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that > would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of > Tutankhamun.
>> More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb

was > discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthrall. Now

his

> fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>> _____
>> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live
> Hotmail

>> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23592|2007-11-06 17:54:18|YY5192123@AOL.COM|Re: KMT decoded|

Well, i'll look forward to it.....

| 23593|2007-11-06 17:59:12|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I've seen the photos before but what was so astounding in the article

> is that it said "see how he really looked" or something to that > effect and showed the picture of "Boy George" with a shaved head.

>

Tutankhamun must have been able to change colors like a "Karma Chameleon." ;)

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23594|2007-11-07 08:11:57|Freddie Thompson|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

Apparently the assumption is that the present black skin color of the mummy does not represent the presumed white color of the king when he was alive. And since the facial features bare some resemblance in elongation to the fake-contruction, the idea of a likeness is taken for granted. Nevertheless, the subconscious will always recognize that King Tut was an Africoid type individual.

Fred

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I've seen the photos before but what was so astounding in the article

> is that it said "see how he really looked" or something to that > effect and showed the picture of "Boy George" with a shaved head.

>

Tutankhamun must have been able to change colors like a "Karma Chameleon." ;)

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23595|2007-11-07 08:59:58|Anthony Whitaker|Re: KMT decoded|

Me too.

----- Original Message -----

From: "YYS192123@AOL.COM"

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Tuesday, November 6, 2007 12:44:40 PM

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] KMT decoded

Well, i'll look forward to it.....

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23596|2007-11-07 09:19:37|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Freddie Thompson wrote:

>

> Apparently the assumption is that the present black skin color of the mummy does not represent the presumed white color of the king when he was alive. And since the facial features bare some resemblance in elongation to the fake-contruction, the idea of a likeness is taken for granted. Nevertheless, the subconscious will always recognize that King Tut was an Africoid type individual.

>

The reconstruction is, according to the reports, based on cephalometric data from the king, so it should bear some resemblance.

The areas where the reconstruction is speculative involve the thickness and shape of the soft tissue and complexion.

So it's possible to get these types of differences:

African Tutankhamun

Monsieur Tut

Wooden sculpture of Tutankhamun

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23597|2007-11-07 10:24:27|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

But of course! And again we are back to the "caucasoid fantastical".

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > I've seen the photos before but what was so astounding in the article

> > is that it said "see how he really looked" or something to that > > effect and showed the picture of "Boy George" with a shaved head.

> >

>

> Tutankhamun must have been able to change colors like a "Karma

> Chameleon." ;)

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23598|2007-11-07 12:42:12|Ferg|Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

---

Attachments :

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.....kaa.

| 23599|2007-11-07 13:25:12|kungfuhustle|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

Ferg

Thank you.

I have always found issue with the European use and definition of "Black".

Black Black, adv.

~~Sullenly; threateningly; maliciously;~~ so as to produce blackness.

[1913 Webster]

-----Original Message-----

From: Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf

Date: Wed, 7 Nov 2007 20:42:29 -0000

Mailer: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2900.3138

Greetings All. What a happy day!! Here is KMT decoded. KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... Charcoal Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions' enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.....kaa.

| 23600|2007-11-07 14:45:10|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

Ferg, I didn't get the pdf. Would you email it to me? My email address should be available on this page from my reply.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Greetings All.

>

> What a happy day!!

>

> Here is KMT decoded.

>

> KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... Charcoal

>

> Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

>

> enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.....kaa.

>

| 23601|2007-11-07 14:53:06|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

I have also wondered about the "k" sound. According to the bible Kush, Kemet, and K-nan are all supposed to be children of H(K)am. So what does the "k" indicate etymologically? Does it refer to "black" perhaps or "people of the ka"? It seems unlikely that these names for these people - black people - would have no related significance.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Greetings All.

>

> What a happy day!!

>

> Here is KMT decoded.

>

> KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... Charcoal

>

> Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

>

> enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.....kaa.

>

| 23602|2007-11-07 21:12:18|Anthony Whitaker|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

Can you or someone in the group re-send the file. The information came across all jumbled, in a language I can not read.

Thank You

----- Original Message -----

From: Ferg

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Wednesday, November 7, 2007 3:42:29 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .kaa.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>
| 23603|2007-11-07 21:12:30|Anthony Whitaker|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|
Disregard my last request. I am now able to see the file. After I read and meditate on the information I will give a comment.

Thank You for sharing your research.

----- Original Message -----

From: Ferg
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Wednesday, November 7, 2007 3:42:29 PM
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf

Greetings All.
What a happy day!!
Here is KMT decoded.
KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal
Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'
enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .kaa.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>
| 23604|2007-11-08 00:22:17|Mahari Mengistu|IS KING TUT BEING TREATED WITH DIGNITY AND RESPECT?|

I don't think the writer has a full understanding of the current Egyptian culture; however, the last poster is right on.

*****

Where is the dignity in the display of this corpse?

By Philip Henser
Tuesday November 06 2007

The Egyptians have, for millennia, had what seems to us a peculiar attitude to the dead. In ancient times, tombs of noblemen and royalty were invested with considerable resources and treasures to accompany the dead into the afterlife. It could well be imagined that a festival attitude accompanied the sumptuous burials.

In Islamic times, tombs were things to be lived with. No visitor to Cairo should miss out on the astonishing spectacle of the city of the dead. A collection of tombs and funerary complexes attracted first visitors, then permanent residents. These days the city of the dead is indistinguishable from many residential parts of Cairo, with the addition of some stupendous Mamluke funerary architecture. Nobody at all thinks living in this way remotely macabre or strange.

So when we hear about the conscious display of a pharaoh's corpse by the Egyptian authorities, it is tempting to suppress any sense of bad taste in the interests of cultural diversity. Modern Egyptians have a different attitude to death than we do, as indeed did ancient Egyptians. One's immediate response might not be an appropriate one at all.

The flamboyant Zahi Hawass, the head of Egypt's Council of Antiquities, has unveiled the corpse of Tutankhamun himself. The date was to coincide with the 85th anniversary of Howard Carter's discovery of the undisturbed tomb. No doubt, too, the showing of the corpse was intended to drum up some interest in a world-wide touring show of some treasures from Tutankhamun's tomb, about to arrive in London.

There has been some criticism that the 130 objects in the exhibition, including 50 from Tutankhamun's tomb, are less spectacular in reality than anticipated, or remembered from the famous 1972 touring show. Mr Hawass's exuberant display may have been intended to remind the ticket-buyers of the world of some of the mystery of ancient Egypt.

"With his beautiful buck teeth," Mr Hawass said, "the tourists will see a little bit of the smile from the face of the golden boy." The corpse will be placed upright in a glass case in the tomb of the pharaoh, protected from the breath and evaporated sweat of thousands of visitors which presents serious problems of preservation in this fragile and largely enclosed environment.

To me, this looks like a sad and an unattractive object. The body of the 19-year-old boy is blackened into charcoal, his teeth peeping through the mouth. I find it difficult to reconcile any kind of notion of the dignity of death with the idea of putting a dead body, however old, in a glass case for people to pay to stare at. The trappings of Tutankhamun's tomb - the sublime funerary mask and the extraordinary beds and caskets - are one thing. They are the trappings of a civilisation, and don't represent a human being, but rather the nobility of his status. But Tutankhamun's corpse is another matter. That, really, is just a human being.

On the whole, we used only to put dead bodies on display in such a manner to express our contempt for the dead. One thinks of the display of the corpses of Mussolini and Clara Petacci at the end of the Second World War in Milan. Very occasionally, a corpse might be displayed in churches to demonstrate its extraordinary sanctity. Recently, things have started to change, and being remarkable neither for great wickedness or great virtue will no longer preserve you against being put on display. I found it very difficult to come to terms with Gunther von Hagen's travelling show of laminated corpses in undignified positions, believing that the dead ought to be treated better than that.

There is something distasteful about the failure to treat the dead with proper respect, to bury or cremate them with due ceremony. For me, and for many people, the respect due to the dead does not diminish with the decades or the centuries.

Just because there is nobody around to object to the display of a relation's remains in a glass case or in a museum doesn't make it right. I don't think that any curiosity could justify the public display of a dead body for the amusement of the paying public.

We could say that the robust attitude of the Egyptians to this is a product of their particular culture, to which we have no real right to object. That is absolutely true. But the particular culture that we are observing here is not, in my view, a historic one or one rooted deeply in their lives. You can visit the sublime tomb of Barquq in Cairo, but the culture would never have invited you to look at his corpse for the sake of entertainment.

The particular culture which has produced this obscene display is, surely, the one which requires the Egyptians to make as much capital as they possibly can out of their immensely rich cultural patrimony. The country relies enormously on foreign tourism, and, in that region, it is a highly vulnerable source of income. No wonder they have to work hard to create interest; no wonder that dignified and serious people is being driven to display not just their treasures, but their ancestors themselves, against all propriety and decency.

That is the culture that this treatment of the dead comes from; and it is not one of the Egyptians' own creation.

- Philip Henser

Print Article Email Article

It is one thing to show dead body at a museum or just to show Tutanchamun for only one reason... To make even more money with him and his name. Mr. Hawass is using Tutanchamun in a way that makes me feel sick. If people want to visit Tutanchamuns grave they should be able to see pictures of him. There is no need to show his poor body (even most of it is covered).

Posted by antonie | 07.11.07, 13:51 GMT

So based on this arguement, should we remove Clonycavan Man and Oldcroghan Man from the National Museum? Or Tullund Man in Denmark? Or all the Bog Bodies on display arond Europe? Why stop there? Why not every skelleton in every museum that has the indignity to put them on display?

Come on lads, this is a part of history. Although I agree it is slightly macabre to have a dead body on display, it's not like there sticking someone who died a few years ago up there. All these types of displays give us a glimpse into the past and can show us where we came from and some of the things we did to get here. To argue that it is macabre and undignified to put these bodies on view for the public is to argue a type of censorship on history.

Posted by Paul | 06.11.07, 23:35 GMT

Im fascinated with all things to do with Ancient Egypt, and really dont see that displaying the Boy Kings Mummy as distasteful, after all, the greatest Pharoah of them all, Ramsess the Great is on display in the Egyptian Museum, and has been along with many others, for years. People are fascinated by Tutankhamun, and only want to glimpse at him as a part of history and myth. The Ancient Egyptians believed in everlasting life, and one thing for sure is that, Tutankhamun has lived on , and will never be forgotton.

Sharon Gilbert
Dublin.

Posted by Sharon Gilbert | 06.11.07, 15:47 GMT

I thought I was the only person who found the display in bad taste. I would add that the Egyptians today are not the same people who lived there 3000 years ago.

Posted by Lorraine Dawkins | 06.11.07, 14:32 GMT

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23605|2007-11-08 01:13:12|Mahari|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

Very interesting. Good research.

Thank you.

FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....

It is well enough that people of the nation do not understand our banking and monetary system, for if they did, I believe there would be a revolution before tomorrow morning.
Henry Ford (23)

--- On Wed 11/07, Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk> wrote:

From: Ferg [mailto:egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk]
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Date: Wed, 7 Nov 2007 20:42:29 -0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .kaa.

Attachment: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf (224.51KB)

---

No banners. No pop-ups. No kidding.

Make My Way your home on the Web - <http://www.myway.com>

| 23606|2007-11-08 01:33:50|Asar Imhotep|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

I must say I am pleased with this analysis. Some of the conclusions you came to I came to some years ago when I wrote a paper titled, 'What's in a name: The meaning of Km.t.? A few things stand out in regards to your analysis that fits in perfectly with the general philosophy I've come to know regarding Blackness and what it means to indigenous spiritual systems. Although you didn't address the determinatives for KM.T, at some point you will have to.

As I have mentioned in personal correspondences and in my paper, the word KM.T as a national designation for land was non-existent before the 10th dynasty. Before then Ta-Merri was simply called 'Hnw' (the interior). You will have to address why they chose so late to name the land KM.T and also why is the term KM.T primarily associated with spiritual texts? This leads us to a more philosophical orientation than simply a mere empirical observation based on occupations and habits. Also, KM.T has four known determinatives: the irrigated land, people, Ntr, and the Niw.t symbols. The earliest symbol used of the four was the irrigated land.

In Africa, the concept of Blackness is always in association with a process that turns something from one state to another; or is in association with a process of bringing something from the spiritual world to the material world. This is why charcoal is the perfect symbol to represent this change. What we are seeking is evidence of a tradition that would lead to more advance uses of charcoal and a possible philosophical link between the activities associated with the burning process with the realization of the end result due to that process of change (for instance mining ?

the early Nile Valley people were miners. You use charcoal to extract orche for later molding iron and steel).

I have argued that the term KM.T means on one level, ?to come into being.? I think this paper has given evidence for this. We will look at the term ?kalunga? (kaa + lunga) and see if this sheds some more light on this charcoal process of change.

Kalunga is one of the Kongo names for God ? completely complete being (a fire force). As Dr. Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20), ?Kalunga became the symbol for force, vitality, and more, a process and principle for change, all changes on the earth.?

Kalunga is a blackness that is associated with fire. But it is also associated with water. As Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20-21),

?The world, [Nza] became a physical reality floating in kalunga (in the endless water within the cosmic space)?The kalunga, also meaning ocean, is a door and a wall between those two worlds. Kalunga became also the idea of immensity, [sensele/wayawa] that one cannot measure; an exit and entrance, source and origin of life, potentialities [n?kingu-nzambi] the principle god-of-change, the force that continually generates.?

One should note that in the Dagara Cosmology of Burkino Faso, the colors for water is ?blue? and ?black.? Water is seen as the gateway between the realm of the non-ancestral spirits and fire is seen as the gateway to the ancestral realm. Once again we have this blackness associated with an emergence of something: a gateway between two worlds. This also echoes the same tradition as with the Egyptian Nun (and even hidden in the word /nTr/).

Ferg mentioned the following words and phrases:

Kiswahili-Bantu, Kaa, a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live ember

Mbochi, i-kama, to blacken

Tsonga-Bantu, Khala, a piece charcoal
Mongo-Bantu, Wala, place where charcoal is prepared
Rikwangali-Bantu, ekara, a piece of charcoal
Oshinddonga-Bantu, ekala, charcoal
Zulu-Bantu, (li)-lahle, cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.
Chichewa-Bantu, khala, piece of charcoal

The key root of these words is Kala. The word Kala in the Bantu-Kongo means ?to be, to become, to light fire.

?The Kala and kalazima concept itself is associated with blackness and is used as a symbol of emergence of life, the physical world [ku nseke]. The ngunza, spiritual man, is associated with the forces behind this concept and this process. (Fu-Kiau 2001: 26).?

So we have a direct correlation to some of the concepts mentioned in the paper. Also what is important to mention is that the concept of Kala deals with personal growth and maturation. When this process completes, then the name changes to ?takula? and its color is ?red.? Red is the essence of the burning coal. It represents power and leadership [to be a priest].

From the records we know that KM.T was the central home of the ?grand lodge? (as Dr. Ben would say - karnak, saqqara and waset temples). This is the place everyone had to come ?to become? priests. This is the land men and women made their ?transformations? (where they did their initiations) and is more than likely why you mainly see the term KM.T in spiritual texts, not governmental texts. KM.T was the land where you became a priest. Anyone familiar with "pledging" and "crossing the burning sands" should know how to relate heat, fire, wood with transformation of character. This is the symbolic meaning I have come to believe it means (especially since in the Book of the Dead KM.T has the NTR determinative).

I could go on and connect the term with black smithing and even to Heru (who conquered Egypt and was a black smith from Ethiopia according to the Edfu Text). But that would be going into writing a paper and it's 3 in the morning where I'm at. This is definitely going to expand the discussion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. Athelia Henrietta Press, Canada .

Ferg wrote:

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue....

.kaa.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23607|2007-11-08 05:42:47|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|
Interesting reading, Asar.

I thought Diop had argued for the Niw.t determinative (I think of it metaphorically as the "crossroads" or junction) to disprove the translation of Kmt as "black soil" as distinct from "black nation".[the Barbara Mertz school?]And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. So please tell me, when did the charcoal symbol (once argued to represent crocodile skin) appear in the mdw-ntr form of Kmt? I think it was also Diop who said it (charcoal) was the strongest term in the Egyptian language for blackness. Many thanks.

Regards,

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: asar_imhotep@yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 01:33:49 -0800
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

I must say I am pleased with this analysis. Some of the conclusions you came to I came to some years ago when I wrote a paper titled, Whats in a name: The meaning of Km.t. A few things stand out in regards to your analysis that fits in perfectly with the general philosophy I've come to know regarding Blackness and what it means to indigenous spiritual systems. Although you didn't address the determinatives for KM.T, at some point you will have to.

As I have mentioned in personal correspondences and in my paper, the word KM.T as a national designation for land was non-existent before the 10th dynasty. Before then Ta-Merri was simply called Hnw (the interior). You will have to address why they chose so late to name the land KM.T and also why is the term KM.T primarily associated with spiritual texts? This leads us to a more philosophical orientation than simply a mere empirical observation based on occupations and habits. Also, KM.T has four known determinatives: the irrigated land, people, Ntr, and the Niw.t symbols. The earliest symbol used of the four was the irrigated land.

In Africa, the concept of Blackness is always in association with a process that turns something from one state to another; or is in association with a process of bringing something from the spiritual world to the material world. This is why charcoal is the perfect symbol to represent this change. What we are seeking is evidence of a tradition that would lead to more advanced uses of charcoal and a possible philosophical link between the activities associated with the burning process with the realization of the end result due to that process of change (for instance mining the early Nile Valley people were miners. You use charcoal to extract iron for later molding iron and steel).

I have argued that the term KM.T means on one level, to come into being. I think this paper has given evidence for this. We will look at the term kalunga (kaa + lungu) and see if this sheds some more light on this charcoal process of change. Kalunga is one of the Kongo names for God completely complete being (a fire force). As Dr. Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20), Kalunga became the symbol for force, vitality, and more, a process and principle for change, all changes on the earth. Kalunga is a blackness that is associated with fire. But it is also associated with water. As Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20-21),

The world, [Nza] became a physical reality floating in kalunga (in the endless water within the cosmic space)The kalunga, also meaning ocean, is a door and a wall between those two worlds. Kalunga became also the idea of immensity, [sensele/wayawa] that one cannot measure; an exit and entrance, source and origin of life, potentialities [nkingu-nzambi] the principle god-of-change, the force that continually generates.

One should note that in the Dagara Cosmology of Burkino Faso, the colors for water is blue and black. Water is seen as the gateway between the realm of the non-ancestral spirits and fire is seen as the gateway to the ancestral realm. Once again we have this blackness associated with an emergence of something: a gateway between two worlds. This also echoes the same tradition as with the Egyptian Nun (and even hidden in the word /nTr/).

Ferg mentioned the following words and phrases:

Kiswahili-Bantu, Kaa, a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live ember

Mbochi, i-kama, to blacken

Tsonga-Bantu, Khala, a piece charcoal

Mongo-Bantu, Wala, place where charcoal is prepared

Rikwangali-Bantu, ekara, a piece of charcoal

Oshinddonga- Bantu, ekala, charcoal

Zulu-Bantu, (li)-lahle, cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.

Chichewa-Bantu, khala, piece of charcoal

The key root of these words is Kala. The word Kala in the Bantu-Kongo means to be, to become, to light fire.

The Kala and kalazima concept itself is associated with blackness and is used as a symbol of emergence of life, the physical world [ku nseke]. The ngunza, spiritual man, is associated with the forces behind this concept and this process. (Fu-Kiau 2001: 26).

So we have a direct correlation to some of the concepts mentioned in the paper.

Also what is important to mention is that the concept of Kala deals with personal growth and maturation. When this process completes, then the name changes to takula and its color is red. Red is the essence of the burning coal. It represents power and leadership [to be a priest].

From the records we know that KM.T was the central home of the grand lodge (as Dr. Ben would say - karnak, saqqara and waset temples). This is the place everyone had to come to become priests. This is the land men and women made their transformations (where they did their initiations) and is more than likely why you mainly see the term KM.T in spiritual texts, not governmental texts.

KM.T was the land where you became a priest. Anyone familiar with "pledging" and "crossing the burning sands" should know how to relate heat, fire, wood with transformation of character. This is the symbolic meaning I have come to believe it means (especially since in the Book of the Dead KM.T has the NTR determinative) .

I could go on and connect the term with black smithing and even to Heru (who conquered Egypt and was a black smith from Ethiopia according to the Edfu Text). But that would be going into writing a paper and its 3 in the morning where I'm at. This is definitely going to expand the discussion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. Athelia Henrietta Press, Canada.

Ferg wrote:

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .kaa.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around <http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!

| 23608|2007-11-08 05:52:32|Ferg|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

To Asar and all TA Setians

I am always tickled to the moon when someone is pleased with my findings! I would love to read your analysis of KMT. Where can I view it?, Perhaps we could view it on Ta Set?

I've noted all the points you have raised and will be looking into them. With regards to addressing the Niw-t symbol, I am frantically working it out, slowly but steadily and will be shortly saying something about it, hopefully, fingers crossed! a clearer picture will emerge. I am also working on the various interpretations of KMT in their varied forms.

Now that the etymology of KMT has been decoded, could you put your thinking cap on so that we could standardise various terms relating to AE. We now know that the AE called their land KAUMA-TI, THE BLACK. The collective term for the AE would be:

KAUMA-TIWA just as the KAUMA people of Kenya would be collectively known as the WA-KAUMA, the KAUMA people, or belonging to the KAUMA people. The only difference would be WA used as an ending in KAUMA-TI-WA, so called Egyptians, ie all those belonging to the BLACK.

See what you think. I also hope other members of the group would make an input into the correct form of standardising the word for Egyptians. I do appreciate you staying up late in the early hours of the morning! Hope you had a good sleep as I know once my mind becomes active I cannot sleep!

SOMO

----- Original Message -----

From: Asar Imhotep

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 08, 2007 9:33 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

I must say I am pleased with this analysis. Some of the conclusions you came to I came to some years ago when I wrote a paper titled, 'What's in a name: The meaning of Km.t.' A few things stand out in regards to your analysis that fits in perfectly with the general philosophy I've come to know regarding Blackness and what it means to indigenous spiritual systems. Although you didn't address the determinatives for KM.T, at some point you will have to.

As I have mentioned in personal correspondences and in my paper, the word KM.T as a national designation for land was non-existent before the 10th dynasty. Before then Ta-Merri was simply called 'Hnw' (the interior). You will have to address why they chose so late to name the land KM.T and also why is the term KM.T primarily associated with spiritual texts? This leads us to a more philosophical orientation than simply a mere empirical observation based on occupations and habits. Also, KM.T has four known determinatives: the irrigated land, people, Ntr, and the Niw.t symbols. The earliest symbol used of the four was the irrigated land.

In Africa, the concept of Blackness is always in association with a process that turns something from one state to another; or is in association with a process of bringing something from the spiritual world to the material world. This is why charcoal is the perfect symbol to represent this change. What we are seeking is evidence of a tradition that would lead to more advanced uses of charcoal and a possible philosophical link between the activities associated with the burning process with the realization of the end result due to that process of change (for instance mining ? the early Nile Valley people were miners. You use charcoal to extract orche for later molding iron and steel).

I have argued that the term KM.T means on one level, ?to come into being.? I think this paper has given evidence for this. We will look at the term ?kalunga? (kaa + lungu) and see if this sheds some more light on this charcoal process of change.

Kalunga is one of the Kongo names for God ? completely complete being (a fire force). As Dr. Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20), ?Kalunga became the symbol for force, vitality, and more, a process and principle for change, all changes on the earth.?

Kalunga is a blackness that is associated with fire. But it is also associated with water. As Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20-21),

?The world, [Nza] became a physical reality floating in kalunga (in the endless water within the cosmic space)?The kalunga, also meaning ocean, is a door and a wall between those two worlds. Kalunga became also the idea of immensity, [sensele/wayawa] that one cannot measure; an exit and entrance, source and origin of life, potentialities [n?kingu-nzambi] the principle god-of-change, the force that continually generates.?

One should note that in the Dagara Cosmology of Burkino Faso, the colors for water is ?blue? and ?black.? Water is seen as the gateway between the realm of the non-ancestral spirits and fire is seen as the gateway to the ancestral realm.

Once again we have this blackness associated with an emergence of something: a gateway between two worlds. This also echoes the same tradition as with the Egyptian Nun (and even hidden in the word /nTr/).

Ferg mentioned the following words and phrases:

Kiswahili-Bantu, Kaa, a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live ember

Mbochi, i-kama, to blacken

Tsonga-Bantu, Khala, a piece charcoal

Mongo-Bantu, Wala, place where charcoal is prepared

Rikwangali-Bantu, ekara, a piece of charcoal

Oshindonga- Bantu, ekala, charcoal

Zulu-Bantu, (li)-lahle, cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.

Chichewa-Bantu, khala, piece of charcoal

The key root of these words is Kala. The word Kala in the Bantu-Kongo means ?to be, to become, to light fire.

?The Kala and kalazima concept itself is associated with blackness and is used as a symbol of emergence of life, the physical world [ku nseke]. The ngunza, spiritual man, is associated with the forces behind this concept and this process. (Fu-Kiau 2001: 26).?

So we have a direct correlation to some of the concepts mentioned in the paper. Also what is important to mention is that the concept of Kala deals with personal growth and maturation. When this process completes, then the name changes to ?takula? and its color is ?red.? Red is the essence of the burning coal. It represents power and leadership [to be a priest].

From the records we know that KM.T was the central home of the ?grand lodge? (as Dr. Ben would say - karnak, saqqara and waset temples). This is the place everyone had to come ?to become? priests. This is the land men and women made their ?transformations? (where they did their initiations) and is more than likely why you mainly see the term KM.T in spiritual texts, not governmental texts. KM.T was the land where you became a priest. Anyone familiar with "pledging" and "crossing the burning sands" should know how to relate heat, fire, wood with transformation of character. This is the symbolic meaning I have come to believe it means (especially since in the Book of the Dead KM.T has the NTR determinative) .

I could go on and connect the term with black smithing and even to Heru (who conquered Egypt and was a black smith from Ethiopia according to the Edfu Text). But that would be going into writing a paper and it?s 3 in the morning where I?m at. This is definitely going to expand the discussion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasui te.com>

Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. Athelia Henrietta Press, Canada .

Ferg wrote:

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'
enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .kaa.

---

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23609|2007-11-08 06:17:32|Dexter Harper|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|
Ferg,

Could you please send it to me at the following email address?

dharp3r@yahoo.com

Thanks,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>
> Greetings All.
>
> What a happy day!!
>
> Here is KMT decoded.
>
> KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... Charcoal
>
> Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'
>
> enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.....kaa.
>

| 23610|2007-11-08 06:21:35|Peter Gray|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|
Ferg,

This analysis leads to many random associations that might conceivably be linked (for example, the lynchpin of your hypothesis: KAA-->FIREPLACE --> "native kitchen"), but I think that in the absence of a clear methodological linguistic context, it has to remain purely conjectural, not scientific. Two questions:

1. On what basis does KM translate to be "to complete, to bring to an end"?

2. Do you or do you not follow Theophile Obenga's method of distinguishing topographic from genetic linguistic relationships?

Thanks very much.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk
Date: Wed, 7 Nov 2007 20:42:29 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf

Greetings All.
What a happy day!!
Here is KMT decoded.
KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal
Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'
enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .kaa.

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.

Play Now!

| 23611|2007-11-08 06:33:16|Wayne Owens|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

I am a novice in this arena of Afrikan cultural studies but could terms like, Kali-Ma
and

Kaba
have a correlation to this as well?

Ferg wrote:

To Asar and all TA Setians
I am always tickled to the moon when someone is pleased with my findings! I would love to read your analysis of KMT. Where can I view it?, Perhaps we could view it on Ta Set?
I've noted all the points you have raised and will be looking into them. With regards to addressing the Niw-t symbol, I am frantically working it out, slowly but steadily and will be shortly saying something about it, hopefully, fingers crossed! a clearer picture will emerge. I am also working on the various interpretations of KMT in their varied forms.

Now that the etymology of KMT has been decoded, could you put your thinking cap on so that we could standardise various terms relating to AE. We now know that the AE called their land KAUMA-TI, THE BLACK. The collective term for the AE would be:

KAUMA-TIWA just as the KAUMA people of Kenya would be collectively known as the WA-KAUMA, the KAUMA people, or belonging to the KAUMA people. The only difference would be WA used as an ending in KAUMA-TI-WA, so called Egyptians, i.e. all those belonging to the BLACK.

See what you think. I also hope other members of the group would make an input into the correct form of standardising the word for Egyptians. I do appreciate you staying up late in the early hours of the morning! Hope you had a good sleep as I know once my mind becomes active I cannot sleep!
SOMO

----- Original Message -----

From: [Asar Imhotep](mailto:Asar Imhotep)

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 08, 2007 9:33 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

I must say I am pleased with this analysis. Some of the conclusions you came to I came to some years ago when I wrote a paper titled, 'What's in a name: The meaning of Km.t.' A few things stand out in regards to your analysis that fits in perfectly with the general philosophy I've come to know regarding Blackness and what it means to indigenous spiritual systems. Although you didn't address the determinatives for KM.T, at some point you will have to.

As I have mentioned in personal correspondences and in my paper, the word KM.T as a national designation for land was non-existent before the 10th dynasty. Before then Ta-Merri was simply called 'Hnw' (the interior). You will have to address why they chose so late to name the land KM.T and also why is the term KM.T primarily associated with spiritual texts? This leads us to a more philosophical orientation than simply a mere empirical observation based on occupations and habits. Also, KM.T has four known determinatives: the irrigated land, people, Ntr, and the Niw.t symbols. The earliest symbol used of the four was the irrigated land.

In Africa, the concept of Blackness is always in association with a process that turns something from one state to another; or is in association with a process of bringing something from the spiritual world to the material world. This is why charcoal is the perfect symbol to represent this change. What we are seeking is evidence of a tradition that would lead to more advanced uses of charcoal and a possible philosophical link between the activities associated with the burning process with the realization of the end result due to that process of change (for instance mining ? the early Nile Valley people were miners. You use charcoal to extract orche for later molding iron and steel).

I have argued that the term KM.T means on one level, ?to come into being.? I think this paper has given evidence for this. We will look at the term ?kalunga? (kaa + lunga) and see if this sheds some more light on this charcoal process of change.

Kalunga is one of the Kongo names for God ? completely complete being (a fire force). As Dr. Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20), ?Kalunga became the symbol for force, vitality, and more, a process and principle for change, all changes on the earth.?

Kalunga is a blackness that is associated with fire. But it is also associated with water. As Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20-21),

?The world, [Nza] became a physical reality floating in kalunga (in the endless water within the cosmic space)?The kalunga, also meaning ocean, is a door and a wall between those two worlds. Kalunga became also the idea of immensity, [sensele/wayawa] that one cannot measure; an exit and entrance, source and origin of life, potentialities [n?kingu-nzambi] the principle god-of-change, the force that continually generates.?

One should note that in the Dagara Cosmology of Burkino Faso, the colors for water is ?blue? and ?black.? Water is seen as the gateway between the realm of the non-ancestral spirits and fire is seen as the gateway to the ancestral realm. Once again we have this blackness associated with an emergence of something: a gateway between two worlds. This also echoes the same tradition as with the Egyptian Nun (and even hidden in the word /nTr/).

Ferg mentioned the following words and phrases:

Kiswahili-Bantu, Kaa, a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live

ember

Mbochi, i-kama, to blacken

Tsonga-Bantu, Khala, a piece charcoal

Mongo-Bantu, Wala, place where charcoal is prepared

Rikwangali-Bantu, ekara, a piece of charcoal

Oshinddonga- Bantu, ekala, charcoal

Zulu-Bantu, (li)-lahle, cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.

Chichewa-Bantu, khala, piece of charcoal

The key root of these words is Kala. The word Kala in the Bantu-Kongo means ?to be, to become, to light fire.

?The Kala and kalazima concept itself is associated with blackness and is used as a symbol of emergence of life, the physical world [ku nseke]. The ngunza, spiritual man, is associated with the forces behind this concept and this process. (Fu-Kiau 2001: 26).?

So we have a direct correlation to some of the concepts mentioned in the paper. Also what is important to mention is that the concept of Kala deals with personal growth and maturation. When this process completes, then the name changes to ?takula? and its color is ?red.? Red is the essence of the burning coal. It represents power and leadership [to be a priest].

From the records we know that KM.T was the central home of the ?grand lodge? (as Dr. Ben would say - karnak, saqqara and waset temples). This is the place everyone had to come ?to become? priests. This is the land men and women made their ?transformations? (where they did their initiations) and is more than likely why you mainly see the term KM.T in spiritual texts, not governmental texts. KM.T was the land where you became a priest.

Anyone familiar with "pledging" and "crossing the burning sands" should know how to relate heat, fire, wood with transformation of character. This is the symbolic meaning I have come to believe it means (especially since in the Book of the Dead KM.T has the NTR determinative) .

I could go on and connect the term with black smithing and even to Heru (who conquered Egypt and was a black smith from Ethiopia according to the Edfu Text). But that would be going into writing a paper and it's 3 in the morning where I'm at. This is definitely going to expand the discussion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. Athelia Henrietta Press, Canada .

Ferg wrote:

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... .

Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .kaa.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection
around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23612|2007-11-08 06:49:52|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|
Somo:

"Now that the etymology of KMT has been decoded ..." is a highly presumptuous phrase, particularly in the absence of an investigation of niw't . And there is no need to be frantic in trying to work it out -- you only need a sound linguistic method. Sorry I'm not convinced by your hypothesis, but that's all part of being in a discussion group

Also presumptuous are sentences beginning: "We now know that ...".Such statements are risky because any conclusion based on a false premise is automatically rendered invalid.

Just my 2 cents again.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 13:52:37 +0000
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

To Asar and all TA Setians

I am always tickled to the moon when someone is pleased with my findings! I would love to read your analysis of KMT. Where can I view it?, Perhaps we could view it on Ta Set? I've noted all the points you have raised and will be looking into them. With regards to addressing the Niw-t symbol, I am frantically working it out, slowly but steadily and will be shortly saying something about it, hopefully, fingers crossed! a clearer picture will emerge. I am also working on the various interpretations of KMT in their varied forms.

Now that the etymology of KMT has been decoded, could you put your thinking cap on so that we could standardise various terms relating to AE. We now know that the AE called their land KAUMA-TI, THE BLACK. The collective term for the AE would be: KAUMA-TIWA just as the KAUMA people of Kenya would be collectively known as the WA-KAUMA, the KAUMA people, or belonging to the KAUMA people. The only difference would be WA used as an ending in KAUMA-TI-WA, so called Egyptians, i.e. those belonging to the BLACK.

See what you think. I also hope other members of the group would make an input into the correct form of standardising the word for Egyptians. I do appreciate you staying up late in the early hours of the morning! Hope you had a good sleep as I know once my mind becomes active I cannot sleep!

SOMO

----- Original Message -----

From: Asar Imhotep

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 08, 2007 9:33 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

I must say I am pleased with this analysis. Some of the conclusions you came to I came to some years ago when I wrote a paper titled, 'What's in a name: The meaning of Km.t'. A few things stand out in regards to your analysis that fits in perfectly with the general philosophy I've come to know regarding Blackness and what it means to indigenous spiritual systems. Although you didn't address the determinatives for KM.T, at some point you will have to.

As I have mentioned in personal correspondences and in my paper, the word KM.T as a national designation for land was non-existent before the 10th dynasty. Before then Ta-Merri was simply called Hnw (the interior). You will have to address why they chose so late to name the land KM.T and also why is the term KM.T primarily associated with spiritual texts? This leads us to a more philosophical orientation than simply a mere empirical observation based on occupations and habits. Also, KM.T has four known determinatives: the irrigated land, people, Ntr, and the Niw.t symbols. The earliest symbol used of the four was the irrigated land.

In Africa, the concept of Blackness is always in association with a process that turns something from one state to another; or is in association with a process of bringing something from the spiritual world to the material world. This is why charcoal is the perfect symbol to represent this change. What we are seeking is evidence of a tradition that would lead to more advance uses of charcoal and a possible philosophical link between the activities associated with the burning process with the realization of the end result due to that process of change (for instance mining the early Nile Valley people were miners. You use charcoal to extract orche for later molding iron and steel).

I have argued that the term KM.T means on one level, to come into being. I think this paper has given evidence for this. We will look at the term kalunga (kaa + lunga) and see if this sheds some more light on this charcoal process of change.

Kalunga is one of the Kongo names for God completely complete being (a fire force). As Dr. Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20), Kalunga became the symbol for force, vitality, and more, a process and principle for change, all changes on the earth.

Kalunga is a blackness that is associated with fire. But it is also associated with water. As Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20-21),

The world, [Nza] became a physical reality floating in kalunga (in the endless water within the cosmic space)The kalunga, also meaning ocean, is a door and a wall between those two worlds. Kalunga became also the idea of immensity, [sensele/wayawa] that one cannot measure; an exit and entrance, source and origin of life, potentialities [nkingu-nzambi] the principle god-of-change, the force that continually generates.

One should note that in the Dagara Cosmology of Burkino Faso, the colors for water is blue and black. Water is seen as the gateway between the realm of the non-ancestral spirits and fire is seen as the gateway to the ancestral realm. Once again we have this blackness associated with an emergence of something: a gateway between two worlds. This also echoes the same tradition as with the Egyptian Nun (and even hidden in the word /nTr/).

Ferg mentioned the following words and phrases:

Kiswahili-Bantu, Kaa, a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live ember

Mbochi, i-kama, to blacken

Tsonga-Bantu, Khala, a piece charcoal

Mongo-Bantu, Wala, place where charcoal is prepared

Rikwangali-Bantu, ekara, a piece of charcoal

Oshindonga- Bantu, ekala, charcoal

Zulu-Bantu, (li)-lahle, cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.

Chichewa-Bantu, khala, piece of charcoal

The key root of these words is Kala. The word Kala in the Bantu-Kongo means to be, to become, to light fire.

The Kala and kalazima concept itself is associated with blackness and is used as a symbol of emergence of life, the physical world [ku nseke].

The ngunza, spiritual man, is associated with the forces behind this concept and this process. (Fu-Kiau 2001: 26).

So we have a direct correlation to some of the concepts mentioned in the paper. Also what is important to mention is that the concept of Kala deals with personal growth and maturation. When this process completes, then the name changes to takula and its color is red. Red is the essence of the burning coal. It represents power and leadership [to be a priest].

From the records we know that KM.T was the central home of the grand lodge (as Dr. Ben would say - karnak, saqqara and waset temples). This is the place everyone had to come to become priests. This is the land men and women made their transformations (where they did their initiations) and is more than likely why you mainly see the term KM.T in spiritual texts, not governmental texts. KM.T was the land where you became a priest. Anyone familiar with "pledging" and "crossing the burning sands" should know how to relate heat, fire, wood with transformation of character. This is the symbolic meaning I have come to believe it means (especially since in the Book of the Dead KM.T has the NTR determinative) .

I could go on and connect the term with black smithing and even to Heru (who conquered Egypt and was a black smith from Ethiopia according to the Edfu Text). But that would be going into writing a paper and its 3 in the morning where Im at. This is definitely going to expand the discussion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. Athelia Henrietta Press, Canada.

Ferg wrote:

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KA, KA, KA, KA, KA, KA, KA, KA, KA..... . Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .ka.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Cafe Stop by today!

| 23613|2007-11-08 07:11:39|Ferg|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

No its not presumptuous. Can you do better?

I shall deal with you later.

Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Peter Gray

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 08, 2007 2:49 PM

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

Somo:

"Now that the etymology of KMT has been decoded ..." is a highly presumptuous phrase, particularly in the absence of an investigation of niw't . And there is no need to be frantic in trying to work it out -- you only need a sound linguistic method. Sorry I'm not convinced by your hypothesis, but that's all part of being in a discussion group

Also presumptuous are sentences beginning: "We now know that ...".Such statements are risky because any conclusion based on a false premise is automatically rendered invalid.

Just my 2 cents again.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: egyptology@theunit. fsnet.co. uk
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 13:52:37 +0000
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

To Asar and all TA Setians

I am always tickled to the moon when someone is pleased with my findings! I would love to read your analysis of KMT. Where can I view it?, Perhaps we could view it on Ta Set?

I've noted all the points you have raised and will be looking into them. With regards to addressing the Niw-t symbol, I am frantically working it out, slowly but steadily and will be shortly saying something about it, hopefully, fingers crossed! a clearer picture will emerge. I am also working on the various interpretations of KMT in their varied forms. Now that the etymology of KMT has been decoded, could you put your thinking cap on so that we could standardise various terms relating to AE. We now know that the AE called their land KAUMA-TI, THE BLACK. The collective term for the AE would be: KAUMA-TIWA just as the KAUMA people of Kenya would be collectively known as the WA-KAUMA, the KAUMA people, or belonging to the KAUMA people. The only difference would be WA used as an ending in KAUMA-TI-WA, so called Egyptians, ie all those belonging to the BLACK.

See what you think. I also hope other members of the group would make an input into the correct form of standardising the word for Egyptians. I do appreciate you staying up late in the early hours of the morning! Hope you had a good sleep as I know once my mind becomes active I cannot sleep!

SOMO

----- Original Message -----

From: Asar Imhotep

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 08, 2007 9:33 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

I must say I am pleased with this analysis. Some of the conclusions you came to I came to some years ago when I wrote a paper titled, Whats in a name: The meaning of Km.t. A few things stand out in regards to your analysis that fits in perfectly with the general philosophy Ive come to know regarding Blackness and what it means to indigenous spiritual systems. Although you didnt address the determinatives for KM.T, at some point you will have to.

As I have mentioned in personal correspondences and in my paper, the word KM.T as a national designation for land was non-existent before the 10th dynasty. Before then Ta-Merri was simply called Hnw (the interior). You will have to address why they chose so late to name the land KM.T and also why is the term KM.T primarily associated with spiritual texts? This leads us to a more philosophical orientation than simply a mere empirical observation based on occupations and habits. Also, KM.T has four known determinatives: the irrigated land, people, Ntr, and the Niw.t symbols. The earliest symbol used of the four was the irrigated land.

In Africa, the concept of Blackness is always in association with a process that turns something from one state to another; or is in association with a process of bringing something from the spiritual world to the material world. This is why charcoal is the perfect symbol to represent this change. What we are seeking is evidence of a tradition that would lead to more advance uses of charcoal and a possible philosophical link between the activities associated with the burning process with the realization of the end result due to that process of change (for instance mining the early Nile Valley people were miners. You use charcoal to extract orche for later molding iron and steel).

I have argued that the term KM.T means on one level, to come into being. I think this paper has given evidence for this. We will look at the term kalunga (kaa + lunga) and see if this sheds some more light on this charcoal process of change. Kalunga is one of the Kongo names for God completely complete being (a fire force). As Dr. Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20), Kalunga became the symbol for force, vitality, and more, a process and principle for change, all changes on the earth. Kalunga is a blackness that is associated with fire. But it is also associated with water. As Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20-21),

The world, [Nza] became a physical reality floating in kalunga (in the endless water within the cosmic space)The kalunga, also meaning ocean, is a door and a wall between those two worlds. Kalunga became also the idea of immensity, [sensele/wayawa] that one cannot measure; an exit and entrance, source and origin of life, potentialities [nkingu-nzambi] the principle god-of-change, the force that continually generates.

One should note that in the Dagara Cosmology of Burkino Faso, the colors for water is blue and black. Water is seen as the gateway between the realm of the non-ancestral spirits and fire is seen as the gateway to the ancestral realm. Once again we have this blackness associated with an emergence of something: a gateway between two worlds. This also echoes the same tradition as with the Egyptian Nun (and even hidden in the word /nTr/).

Ferg mentioned the following words and phrases:

Kiswahili-Bantu, Kaa, a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live ember

Mbochi, i-kama, to blacken

Tsonga-Bantu, Khala, a piece charcoal

Mongo-Bantu, Wala, place where charcoal is prepared

Rikwangali-Bantu, ekara, a piece of charcoal

Oshinddonga- Bantu, ekala, charcoal

Zulu-Bantu, (li)-lahle, cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.

Chichewa-Bantu, khala, piece of charcoal

The key root of these words is Kala. The word

Kala in the Bantu-Kongo means to be, to become, to light fire.

The Kala and kalazima concept itself is associated with blackness and is used as a symbol of emergence of life, the physical world [ku nseke]. The ngunza, spiritual man, is associated with the forces behind this concept and this process. (Fu-Kiau 2001: 26).

So we have a direct correlation to some of the concepts mentioned in the paper. Also what is important to mention is that the concept of Kala deals with personal growth and maturation. When this process completes, then the name changes to takula and its color is red. Red is the essence of the burning coal. It represents power and leadership [to be a priest].

From the records we know that KM.T was the central home of the grand lodge (as Dr. Ben would say - karnak, saqqara and waset temples). This is the place everyone had to come to become priests. This is the land men and women made their transformations (where they did their initiations) and is more than likely why you mainly see the term KM.T in spiritual texts, not governmental texts. KM.T was the land where you became a priest. Anyone familiar with "pledging" and "crossing the burning sands" should know how to relate heat, fire, wood with transformation of character. This is the symbolic meaning I have come to believe it means (especially since in the Book of the Dead KM.T has the NTR determinative) .

I could go on and connect the term with black smithing and even to Heru (who conquered Egypt and was a black smith from Ethiopia according to the Edfu Text). But that would be going into writing a paper and its 3 in the morning where I'm at. This is definitely going to expand the discussion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. Athelia Henrietta Press, Canada.

Ferg wrote:

Greetings All.

What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.

KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal

Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions' enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.... .kaa.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Café Stop by today!

| 23614|2007-11-08 07:21:17|asar_imhotep|Re: KMT - response to Peter|
Peace Peter

Diop pretty much came to the same conclusion I did, just with a different spin. In Civilization or Barbarism pg 285 he states:

"Etymology of the Word "Chemistry"

The root of the word chemistry is of Egyptian origin, as is already known it comes from kemit = "black," alluding to the long cooking process and the distillations that were customary in Egyptian "laboratories, in order to extract this or that desired product.

We know that this root has proliferated in the other Negro languages, where it has retained the same. In Wolof: hemit = black, to blacken, etc.

The French chemist Claude Louis Berhollet was struck with such admiration for Egyptian scientific knowledge in chemistry that he devoted a paper to them. "

Again we are talking about a process of extraction with the intent of transforming some object from one state to another. It is common all throughout Africa and the term is used metaphorically to represent that process of change. As I mentioned before, Ferg is going to have to deal with the determinatives at some point. But I think he has a good argument and it matches up with all that I know personally about the philosophical uses of the word black.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Interesting reading, Asar.

>

> I thought Diop had argued for the Niw.t determinative (I think of it metaphorically as the "crossroads" or junction) to disprove the translation of Kmt as "black soil" as distinct from "black nation". [the Barbara Mertz school?] And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. So please tell me, when did the charcoal symbol (once argued to represent crocodile skin) appear in the mdw-ntr form of Kmt? I think it was also Diop who said it (charcoal) was the strongest term in the Egyptian language for blackness. Many thanks.

>

> Regards,

>

> Peter

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: asar_imhotep@...: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 01:33:49 -0800 Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

>

>

>

| 23615|2007-11-08 07:32:11|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

Deal with me?

Who the hell are you, some self-appointed high priest? If I state my opinion, and doesn't happen to be affirmative or self-congratulatory like yours, do you become the Ta-Seti czar? And it's not a competition to become the blackest black, so what's with this challenge to "do better"?

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 15:11:40 +0000
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

No its not presumptuous. Can you do better?
I shall deal with you later.
Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Peter Gray
To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Thursday, November 08, 2007 2:49 PM
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

Somo:

"Now that the etymology of KMT has been decoded ..." is a highly presumptuous phrase, particularly in the absence of an investigation of niw't . And there is no need to be frantic in trying to work it out -- you only need a sound linguistic method. Sorry I'm not convinced by your hypothesis, but that's all part of being in a discussion group

Also presumptuous are sentences beginning: "We now know that ...".Such statements arerisky because any conclusionbased on a false premise is automatically rendered invalid.

Just my 2 cents again.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: egyptology@theunit. fsnet.co. uk
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 13:52:37 +0000
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

To Asar and all TA Setians
I am always tickled to the moon when someone is pleased withmy findings! I would love to read your analysis of KMT. Where can I view it?, Perhaps we could view it on Ta Set?

I've noted all the points you have raised and will be looking into them. With regards to addressing the Niw-t symbol, I am frantically working it out, slowly but steadily and will be shortly saying something about it, hopefully, fingers crossed! a clearer picture will emerge. I am also working on the various interpretations of KMT in their varied forms.

Now that the etymology of KMT has been decoded, could you put your thinking cap on so that we could standardise various terms relating to AE. We now know that the AE called their land KAUMA-TI, THE BLACK. The collective term for the AE would be: KAUMA-TIWA just as the KAUMA people of Kenya would be collectively known as the WA-KAUMA, the KAUMA people, or belonging to the KAUMA people. The only difference would be WA used as an ending in KAUMA-TI-WA, so called Egyptians, ie all those belonging to the BLACK.

See what you think. I also hope other members of the group would make an input into the correct form of standardising the word for Egyptians. I do appreciate you staying up late in the early hours of the morning! Hope you had a good sleep as I know once my mind becomes active I cannot sleep!

SOMO

----- Original Message -----

From: Asar Imhotep

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 08, 2007

9:33 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

I must say I am pleased with this analysis. Some of the conclusions you came to I came to some years ago when I wrote a paper titled, Whats in a name: The meaning of Km.t. A few things stand out in regards to your analysis that fits in perfectly with the general philosophy I've come to know regarding Blackness and what it means to indigenous spiritual systems. Although you didn't address the determinatives for KM.T, at some point you will have to. As I have mentioned in personal correspondences and in my paper, the word KM.T as a national designation for land was non-existent before the 10th dynasty. Before then Ta-Merri was simply called Hnw (the interior). You will have to address why they chose so late to name the land KM.T and also why is the term KM.T primarily associated with spiritual texts? This leads us to a more philosophical orientation than simply a mere empirical observation based on occupations and habits.

Also, KM.T has four known determinatives: the irrigated land, people, Ntr, and the Niw.t symbols. The earliest symbol used of the four was the irrigated land.

In Africa, the concept of Blackness is always in association with a process that turns something from one state to another; or is in association with a process of bringing something from the spiritual world to the material world. This is why charcoal is the perfect symbol to represent this change. What we are seeking is evidence of a tradition that would lead to more advance uses of charcoal and a possible philosophical link between the activities associated with the burning process with the realization of the end result due to that process of change (for instance mining the early Nile Valley people were miners. You use charcoal to extract orche for later molding iron and steel).

I have argued that the term KM.T means on one level, to come into being. I think this paper has given evidence for this. We will look at the term kalunga (kaa + lunga) and see if this sheds some more light on this charcoal process of change.

Kalunga is one of the Kongo names for God completely complete being (a fire force). As Dr. Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20), Kalunga became the symbol for force, vitality, and more, a process and principle for change, all changes on the earth.

Kalunga is a blackness that is associated with fire. But it is also associated with water. As Fu-Kiau notes (2001: 20-21),

The world, [Nza] became a physical reality floating in kalunga (in the endless water within the cosmic space)The kalunga, also meaning ocean, is a door and a wall between those two worlds. Kalunga became also the idea of immensity, [sensele/wayawa] that one cannot measure; an exit and entrance, source and origin of life, potentialities [nkingu-nzambi] the principle god-of-change, the force that continually generates.

One should note that in the Dagara Cosmology of Burkino Faso, the colors for water is blue and black.

Water is seen as the gateway between the realm of the non-ancestral spirits and fire is seen as the gateway to the ancestral realm.

Once again we have this blackness associated with an emergence of something: a gateway between two worlds. This also echoes the same tradition as with the Egyptian Nun (and even hidden in the word /nTr/).

Ferg mentioned the following words and phrases:

Kiswahili-Bantu, Kaa, a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live ember

Mbochi, i-kama, to blacken

Tsonga-Bantu, Khala, a piece charcoal

Mongo-Bantu, Wala, place where charcoal is prepared

Rikwangali-Bantu, ekara, a piece of charcoal

Oshinddonga- Bantu, ekala, charcoal

Zulu-Bantu, (li)-lahle, cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.

Chichewa-Bantu, khala, piece of charcoal

The key root of these words is Kala.

The word Kala in the Bantu-Kongo means to be, to become, to light fire.

The Kala and kalazima concept itself is associated with blackness and is used as a symbol of emergence of life, the physical world [ku nseke]. The ngunza, spiritual man, is associated with the forces behind this concept and this process. (Fu-Kiau 2001: 26).

So we have a direct correlation to some of the concepts mentioned in the paper. Also what is important to mention is that the concept of Kala deals with personal growth and maturation. When this process completes, then the name changes to takula and its color is red. Red is the essence of the burning coal. It represents power and leadership [to be a priest].

From the records we know that KM.T was the central home of the grand lodge (as Dr. Ben would say - karnak, saqqara and waset temples). This is the place everyone had to come to become priests. This is the land men and women made their transformations (where they did their initiations) and is more than likely why you mainly see the term KM.T in spiritual texts, not governmental texts. KM.T was the land where you became a priest. Anyone familiar with "pledging" and "crossing the burning sands" should know how to relate heat, fire, wood with transformation of character.

This is the symbolic meaning I have come to believe it means (especially since in the Book of the Dead KM.T has the NTR determinative) .

I could go on and connect the term with black smithing and even to Heru (who conquered Egypt and was a black smith from Ethiopia according to the Edfu Text). But that would be going into writing a paper and its 3 in the morning where I'm at. This is definitely going to expand the discussion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo. Athelia Henrietta Press, Canada.

Ferg wrote:
Greetings All.
What a happy day!!

Here is KMT decoded.
KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA,
KAA, KAA, KAA..... . Charcoal
Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'
enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong,
endure, continue.... .kaa.

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger
Café Stop by today!

---

Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You! Get 'em!

| 23616|2007-11-08 07:43:32|asar_imhotep|Re: KMT - response to Peter II|
(I forgot to answer your second question)

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

> And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. So please tell me, >when did the charcoal symbol (once argued to represent crocodile skin) appear in the mdw-ntr >form of Kmt? I think it was also Diop who said it (charcoal)was the strongest term in the >Egyptian language for blackness.

You can read pages 26-38 of "Kemet and Other Egyptian Terms for Their Land" Ogden Goelet.
It's an article in a book "Ki Baruch Hu: Ancient Near Eastern, Biblical and Judaic Studies in Honor of Baruch A Levine." Here he provides the evidence for its late usage.

Keep in mind I am not saying the word KM.T did not exist, just it was not used as a national designation in any text before the 1st intermediate period. I have always speculated that the 1st intermediate period was really a civil war of some sort and Ta-Merri received it's independence.

Anthony T. Browder in Nile Valley Contributions to Civilization pg. 44 quotes John G. Jackson's work Introduction to African Civilization:

"The Edfu text is an important source document on the early history of the Nile Valley . This famous inscription, found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu, gives an account of the origin of Egyptian civilization. According to this record, civilization was brought from the south by a band of invaders under the leadership of King Horus. (emphasis mine)"

According to Diodorus Siculus, Book III he states:

"They (the Ethiopians) say also that the Egyptians are colonists sent out by the Ethiopians, Osiris ["King of Kings and God of Gods] having been the leader of the colony . . . they add that the Egyptians have received from them, as from authors and their ancestors, the greater part of their laws."

"The Aithiopians [Kushites] say that the Egyptians are settlers from among themselves and that Osiris was the leader of the settlement. The customs of the Egyptians, they say, are for the most part Aithiopian, the settlers having preserved their old traditions."

Remember the name for "KM.T" was originally "Hnw" (the interior). To me this let's us know that it was the "interior" to a colony and thus why it didn't have a national designation. After the first intermediate period, I think, they got their independence from Ta-Nehusu (Ethiopia) and named the land Ta-Merri. Ta-Merri didn't exist as a national designation until this point as well.

Now back to the glyph, take a look at this set of glyphs , and then look at this video clip and pay attention at 52 seconds of the clip to see the similarities between the wood symbol in Km.T and that used in the video clip.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EFPuqnJPXYU&mode=related&search=africa%25>

I bring this up to point out the fact that the early Africans were miners and that they had a cultural basis to draw from to later associate the charred wood symbol with the term Black (as in the case of the Black Land). Finch, in Star of Deep Beginnings, goes on to say on page 26 that:

"Apart from the occasional forest fire started by lightning, charcoal is not naturally occurring; it is produced from wood that has been partially and slowly burned. (emphasis mine)"

It was deliberate and they have a LONG history using charcoal for many purposes. Read the following paper on ancient Subterranean Mining in Africa and things will be more clear:

<http://home.entouch.net/dmd/mining.htm>

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23617|2007-11-08 08:47:39|Agola Kisira|Fw: KING TUT|

----- Forwarded Message -----

From: Agola K. Otero
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com; agolakisira@yahoo.co.uk
Sent: Thursday, 8 November, 2007 11:37:01 AM
Subject: KING TUT

THIS MASK

WOULD NEVER FIT ON THIS FACE (NOTE THE NOSE AND LIPS)

AND THAT FACE OR SKIN TONE WOULD NEVER FIT IN THIS PICTURE

---

This message and any attachments are intended for the named recipient(s) only, and may contain information that is confidential, proprietary, privileged and/or otherwise protected by law. Any unauthorised disclosure, dissemination, copying or other use either in whole or in part, of this message is prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please telephone or email the sender and delete this message and any attachment from your system.

---

| 23618|2007-11-08 09:09:55|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Interesting reading, Asar.

>

> I thought Diop had argued for the Niw.t determinative (I think of it metaphorically as the "crossroads" or junction) to disprove the translation of Kmt as "black soil" as distinct from "black nation". [the Barbara Mertz school?] And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. >

Usually the recognition of the first use of kmt as a national designation is linked with niwt determinative and first appears during the 12th Dynasty.

The opposition of the "black land" to the "red land" earlier during the 11th Dynasty (also in the 10th?) was not national in nature but geographic. The red land could also be incorporated into the nation of Egypt.

The development of the national term is debatable, but it does appear from the Table of Nations discussion earlier on this list that at least it had eventually attained some connection with ideas of ancestry and genetic descent i.e. descent from Horus for the Nubians and Egyptians of the Black Land and from Sekhet of the Syrians and Libyans of the Red Land.

Furthermore, the Nubians and Egyptians are depicted exactly alike at the KV11 Table of Nations scene.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Mananala

| 23619|2007-11-08 09:17:22|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

>

> As I have mentioned in personal correspondences and in my paper, the word KM.T as a national designation for land was non-existent before the 10th dynasty. Before then Ta-Merri was simply called "Hnw" (the interior). You will have to address why they chose so late to name the land KM.T and also why is the term KM.T primarily associated with spiritual texts? This leads us to a more philosophical orientation than simply a mere empirical observation based on occupations and habits. Also, KM.T has four known determinatives: the irrigated land, people, Ntr, and the Niw.t symbols. The earliest symbol used of the four was the irrigated land.

>

>

Asar, the term kmt with the determinative for irrigated land (N23) does not appear to be national but geographic in nature.

Thus, the "Black Land" could represent either Reth (Egyptians) or Nehesu (Nubians) which were different national entities.

Also, the "Red Land" (Dshrt) could represent the different nations of the Aamu (Syrians) and the Tehenu (Libyans).

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23620|2007-11-08 09:22:18|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

> Asar, the term kmt with the determinative for irrigated land (N23) > does not appear to be national but geographic in nature.

>

> Thus, the "Black Land" could represent either Reth (Egyptians) or > Nehesu (Nubians) which were different national entities.

>

Actually Nehesu, Aamu and Tehenu might be more accurately termed as multi-national ethnic designations.

Reth (Rmt) was used at the time exclusively for Egyptians and thus was quasi-national.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23621|2007-11-08 09:29:13|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

Thanks, Paul. By the way, is KV11 that of Ramses III?

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: pmanansala@sbcglobal.net

Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 17:09:51 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Interesting reading, Asar.

>

> I thought Diop had argued for the Niw.t determinative (I think of it metaphorically as the "crossroads" or junction) to disprove the translation of Kmt as "black soil" as distinct from "black nation". [the Barbara Mertz school?] And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. >

Usually the recognition of the first use of kmt as a national designation is linked with niwt determinative and first appears during the 12th Dynasty.

The opposition of the "black land" to the "red land" earlier during the 11th Dynasty (also in the 10th?) was not national in nature but geographic. The red land could also be incorporated into the nation of Egypt.

The development of the national term is debatable, but it does appear from the Table of Nations discussion earlier on this list that at least it had eventually attained some connection with ideas of ancestry and genetic descent i.e. descent from Horus for the Nubians and Egyptians of the Black Land and from Sekhet of the Syrians and Libyans of the Red Land.

Furthermore, the Nubians and Egyptians are depicted exactly alike at the KV11 Table of Nations scene.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Mananala

---

Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You! Get 'em!

| 23622|2007-11-08 09:37:40|Ferg|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

I agree with you. You hit the nail on the head by saying that the Niw-t determinative has connections to ancestry and genetic descent. I shall be writing this up very shortly giving you the very word which describes this.

Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 08, 2007 5:09 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Interesting reading, Asar.

>

> I thought Diop had argued for the Niw.t determinative (I think of it metaphorically as the "crossroads" or junction) to disprove the translation of Kmt as "black soil" as distinct from "black nation". [the Barbara Mertz school?] And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. >

Usually the recognition of the first use of kmt as a national designation is linked with niwt determinative and first appears during the 12th Dynasty.

The opposition of the "black land" to the "red land" earlier during the 11th Dynasty (also in the 10th?) was not national in nature but geographic. The red land could also be incorporated into the nation of Egypt.

The development of the national term is debatable, but it does appear from the Table of Nations discussion earlier on this list that at least it had eventually attained some connection with ideas of ancestry and genetic descent i.e. descent from Horus for the Nubians and Egyptians of the Black Land and from Sekhet of the Syrians and Libyans of the Red Land.

Furthermore, the Nubians and Egyptians are depicted exactly alike at the KV11 Table of Nations scene.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Mananala

| 23623|2007-11-08 09:53:19|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Peter II|
Asar,

Thanks for following up. Unfortunately, WebSense blocks both the youtube and the subterranean mining links in your reply, but I have always been convinced of the northward movement of pharaonic culture during, or as a precursor to, the earliest establishment of unification in Kmt, based on Diodorus below as well as Bruce Williams' thesis. Is there any format that can allow the clip(s) to be sent as attachments? Thanks again.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: asar_imhotep@yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 15:43:30 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

(I forgot to answer your second question)

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:

> And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. So please tell me, >when did the charcoal symbol (once argued to represent crocodile skin) appear in the mdw-ntr >form of Kmt? I think it was also Diop who said it (charcoal)was the strongest term in the >Egyptian language for blackness.

You can read pages 26-38 of "Kemet and Other Egyptian Terms for Their Land" Ogden Goelet. It's an article in a book "Ki Baruch Hu: Ancient Near Eastern, Biblical and Judaic Studies in Honor of Baruch A Levine." Here he provides the evidence for its late usage.

Keep in mind I am not saying the word KM.T did not exist, just it was not used as a national designation in any text before the 1st intermediate period. I have always speculated that the 1st intermediate period was really a civil war of some sort and Ta-Merri received it's independence.

Anthony T. Browder in Nile Valley Contributions to Civilization pg. 44 quotes John G. Jackson's work Introduction to African Civilization:

"The Edfu text is an important source document on the early history of the Nile Valley. This famous inscription, found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu, gives an account of the origin of Egyptian civilization. According to this record, civilization was brought from the south by a band of invaders under the leadership of King Horus. (emphasis mine)"

According to Diodorus Siculus, Book III he states:

"They (the Ethiopians) say also that the Egyptians are colonists sent out by the Ethiopians, Osiris ["King of Kings and God of Gods] having been the leader of the colony . . . they add that the Egyptians have received from them, as from authors and their ancestors, the greater part of their laws."

"The Aithiopians [Kushites] say that the Egyptians are settlers from among themselves and that Osiris was the leader of the settlement. The customs of the Egyptians, they say, are for the most part Aithiopian, the settlers having preserved their old traditions."

Remember the name for "KM.T" was originally "Hnw" (the interior). To me this let's us know that it was the "interior" to a colony and thus why it didn't have a national designation. After the first intermediate period, I think, they got their independence from Ta-Nehusu (Ethiopia) and named the land Ta-Merri. Ta-Merri didn't exist as a national designation until this point as well.

Now back to the glyph, take a look at this set of glyphs , and then look at this video clip and pay attention at 52 seconds of the clip to see the similarities between the wood symbol in Km.T and that used in the video clip.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EFPuqnJPXYU&mode=related&search=africa% 25

I bring this up to point out the fact that the early Africans were miners and that they had a cultural basis to draw from to later associate the charred wood symbol with the term Black (as in the case of the Black Land). Finch, in Star of Deep Beginnings, goes on to say on page 26 that:

"Apart from the occasional forest fire started by lightning, charcoal is not naturally occurring; it is produced from wood that has been partially and slowly burned. (emphasis mine)"

It was deliberate and they have a LONG history using charcoal for many purposes. Read the following paper on ancient Subterranean Mining in Africa and things will be more clear:

<http://home.entouch.net/dmd/mining.htm>

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Windows Live Hotmail and Microsoft Office Outlook together at last. Get it now!

| 23624|2007-11-08 09:59:32|asar_imhotep|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

One of the things we still have to find out conclusively is how many documents do you find the term KM.T used in and also how many of them are spiritual (religious or ethical in nature) versus official government documents? As mentioned by Goelet, Ta-Merri is the name for the country and is used in the official documents, not KM.T. I think he gives one exception. I need to review the work again. But I think this is key to determining how they used this term and what it really meant for the people.

If the term is used primarily by spiritual priests, then we can't assume a layman's perspective on it. We would have to think like priest to connect the philosophy.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>>

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

>

>

> > Asar, the term kmt with the determinative for irrigated land (N23)

> > does not appear to be national but geographic in nature.

>>

> > Thus, the "Black Land" could represent either Reth (Egyptians) or > > Nehesu (Nubians) which were different national entities.

>>

>

>

> Actually Nehesu, Aamu and Tehenu might be more accurately termed as > multi-national ethnic designations.

>

> Reth (Rmt) was used at the time exclusively for Egyptians and thus was > quasi-national.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23625|2007-11-08 10:01:20|asar_imhotep|Subterranean Mining and Religion in Ancient Man|

Subterranean Mining and Religion in Ancient Man

Copyright G.R. Morton 1996.

This may be freely distributed as long as no charge is made and no alterations are made to the text without the prior consent of the author.

<http://home.entouch.net/dmd/mining.htm>

Free Hit Counter Visitors to these pages since 12-29-97

Related Articles:

Religion among the Archaic Hominids

How Could Mankind be 5.5 MYR Old without Fossil Evidence for Him That Long Ago?

Review of Fairweather Eden by Michael Pitts and Mark Roberts

Planning Ahead-article from PSCF

The Homo erectus Genes in Us

The Neandertal Hybrid--evidence of human/Neandertal mating--implications

The Shaman's Cape-Evidence of Religion Among the Neanderthals

Sweat as Part of the Curse--The Curse of a Big Head

The Earliest Evidence of Human Compassion

How Old is Man and When Was He Human?

History of Human Technology

Music Among the Neandertals and Other An

The Earliest Subterranean Mining

Evidence for Neanderthal Ancestry--Implicat

Neanderthal mtDNA Controversy--Implicatio

Neanderthal and Tasmanian Technology Con

Humanity?

The Evolution of Human Birth

Book: Adam, Apes and Anthropology

About the Author

Ordering Information

Theology articles

Geology Articles

Over the past two years, mostly on the evolution reflector, I have presented evidence for behaviors among the ancient hominids which would be considered quite human if it were found today. These data include the earliest art object, a Venus figurine, the Berekhat Ram figurine, which dates to 300,000 years ago. (Morris, 1994, p 186-188), the wooden plank with polish made by either archaic Homo sapiens or Homo erectus, (Belitsky et al, 1991), evidence for the tanning of hides from 1 million years ago (Johanson et al, 1994, p. 163-165; Klein 1989, pp 113-117), warfare or murder among the Neandertal approximately 48,000 years ago (Solecki, 1992, p. 211), and the Australian art dated at 75,000 years ago, which implies boat-building (required to reach Australia) from that remote time. Tonight I am reporting on one of the most complex behaviors yet--subterranean mining. Technically speaking, mining goes back to the appearance of the first flint tools around 2.5 million years ago (Semaw, 1997; Walker and Shipman, 1996, p 176). The collection of cobbles with which to make stone tools is a form of surface mining. Surface mining of this form has occurred continuously since that time for a variety of products. Crystalline rocks suitable for tool manufacture have been continuously mined. The technological expertise of the ancient miners, even in surface mining, is quite intriguing. Mellars (1996, p. 265) writes:

"Turq describes one such major site from this region - that of Lascabannes, located immediately adjacent to a rich flint source on the Senonian outcrop in Lot-et-Garonne. The assemblage is characterized predominantly by a concentration of flint nodules, most of which exhibit signs of deliberate scratching or scoring of the surface (to assess the quality of the flint) followed by preliminary testing of the nodules by occasional flake removals, or more systematic removal of outer (cortical) flakes to reduce the weight of the nodules for transportation from the site. An apparent example of a similar extraction site has been reported briefly by Geneste from the site of Campsegret in the Bergerac region, but has not yet been described in any detail."

The testing of the nodules for quality would seem to mimic what modern geologists do when acquiring raw material of any sort. Quality control is always an important consideration. I have recently become aware of how widespread is the evidence for subsurface mining. Bednarik (1992) describes several subterranean mining sites from the Middle and Upper Paleolithic. These include mining from caves as well as the digging of shafts to reach buried raw material. He further discusses the cognitive abilities required to engage in subterranean mining.

Nazlet Khater 4 is a site in Upper Egypt between Asyut and Sohag, which dates from between 35,100 to 30,360 years BP. A layer of greenish silts and sands is overlain by a chert-rich layer of Nile gravel. Above this level were three layers containing no chert. The chert-rich layer could be seen in outcrop (place where the rock comes to the surface). These miners apparently had the geological understanding to predict where the flint rich layer would go.

They dug a 9-m long, 2-m wide trench as well as 7 vertical shafts to reach the flint layer. This would mean hours of work digging through layers which contained no flint in order to reach the prized flint. What is even more amazing, is what Bednarik (1992, p. 13) says about the miners.

"Some information has been recovered about the people responsible for the quarrying. Numerous lithic artefacts were fashioned from the chert cobbles of the substratum, and they include blades and bifacially trimmed axes. On the summit of a boulder hill 400 m to the north-west, at Nazlet Khater 2 site, two graves were discovered. One contained the outstretched remains of a human, probably a sub-adult male, the other was of a human foetus. The former had been covered with loose aeolian sand and several boulders, some exceeding 0.4 m in diameter. Next to the cranium (an archaic Homo sapiens, op. cit. Fig. 9), a 12 cm-long axe head was found in the grave fill, possessing concave sides for hafting, and matching the axe heads at the nearby mining site in every respect."

According to the definition of archaic Homo sapiens, the miners are not anatomically modern humans (Churchill et al, 1996, p231)!

Could this mining be the result of ancient, Egyptian Dynastic miners? No. The axes found with the miners are not the same type as those found in Dynastic times. Dynastic age graves always bury the body in a contracted position, yet in the burial found at Nazlet Khater 4 the man is laid out in an extended position. And finally, there are no archaic Homo sapiens in ancient Egypt.

But mining in the Nile Valley goes even further back in time. Vermeersch and Paulissen report on four other sites, Qena and Nazlet Safaha, dating to 50,000 years ago, and Nazlet Khater-2 and Beit Allam, which date to 60,000 years ago (Vermeersch and Paulissen, 1989, p. 36). All of these sites were flint quarries.

At Lion Cave in Swaziland, ancient miners cut a tunnel 25 feet wide, 30 feet deep, and 20 ft high. This tunnel was cut into a cliff face 500 feet tall. This is apparently the oldest known mining operation. The activity has been securely dated to go back at least 43,000 years by carbon 14 and probably goes back even further to 70-110,000 years ago. (Dart and Beaumont, 1971, p. 10; Bednarik, 1992, p. 15; Dart and Beaumont, 1967; Vermeersch and Paulissen, 1989, p. 36). Apparently, the mining was terminated when a 5-ton boulder fell from the roof of the tunnel and blocked the entrance. (Dart and Beaumont, 1967, p. 408)

In the case of this mine, it is even known where the ancient miners "mined" their tools. Dart and Beaumont (1967, p. 408) write:

"Quartz, white quartzites, grey and white dappled quartzite, black indurated shales and greenish cherts were the principal materials used by the miners. These rock types occur mostly on a ridge overlooked by, and about 0.25 miles from, the cavern. The exposures there are patently flaked. Dappled grey and white quartzite exposures occur about a mile and more northwest of the site."

Since some like Hugh Ross (1995b) believe that archaic humans were merely an intelligent mammalian species, like the primates, it is important to realize that there are significant differences between what we know from activities at Lion Cave and the activities of chimpanzees. The distance the mining tools were carried is, by far, a greater distance than chimpanzees carry tools. Boesch and Boesch (1984, p. 162) tabulate the distances tools were carried by chimpanzees to crack open nuts to obtain food. 96 percent of the tools were obtained within 200 m of the nut tree. In the mining case, the miners had to have in mind the red ochre back at Lion Cavern a quarter mile away while they spent time manufacturing tools appropriate to the task of breaking the hard, hematite ore. Then they had to remember the ore while they hauled the newly made tools back to the mine for use. And when the tool broke and a new one was required, the miner must remember where the tool mine was, travel there with the idea in mind to make a new tool. In contrast, chimpanzees may remember where rocks suitable for cracking nuts are, but they do not travel so far nor engage in such complex behavior in order to fashion the tool. (In the case of nut cracking, they engage in absolutely no manufacturing work but use the stones as they are found).

The interesting thing about this mine is what was being mined. The ancient peoples were not mining flint, which would be considered useful for obtaining food. Lion cave is a pigment mine. They were mining red ochre, a pigment used by primitive peoples as body paint for their rituals. The amount of material moved is quite impressive. In the literature, I have heard estimates of 50-100 tons. But if the entire cavern carved out by the miners was hematite, I calculate that nearly 2700 tons of material was removed from this site. This is an incredible amount of material for paleolithic man to have removed from the site. Obviously, red ochre was an important item. What was it used for?

Dickson gives a history of the use of red ochre. He writes (Dickson, 1990, pp 42-43):

"Specimens of ochre have been reported from some of the oldest occupation or activity sites known from the Lower Paleolithic period in the Old World, including Bed II at Olduvai Gorge in Tanzania, Ambrona in Spain, Terra Amata in France, and Becov in Czechoslovakia. The use of ochre apparently increases during the Middle Paleolithic period in the Mousterian tradition and becomes common in the Upper Paleolithic period. "Ochre has no apparent practical or technological use until the development of iron metallurgy sometime in the second millennium before Christ when it becomes a principal ore for iron smelting. Nonetheless, many of the Paleolithic period ochre specimens show evidence of having been worked or utilized in some fashion. For example, the two lumps of ochre recovered at Olduvai Gorge show signs of having been struck directly by hammerstone blows (M. Leakey 1971). Howell (1965:129) states that the ochre specimen recovered at Ambrona showed evidence of shaping and trimming, although Butzer (1980:635) asserts this may only be natural cleavage. Still the ochre comes from the same horizon as the famous linear arrangement of elephant tusks and bones and was probably brought to the site by the hominids who are thought to have killed and butchered elephants there. "At Terra Amata, which was occupied around 300,000 B.P., de Lumley (1969:49) reports a number of ochre specimens recovered from the two occupation layers associated with the pole structures uncovered at the site. Specimens of red, yellow, and brown were recovered and the range of color variations suggests the ochre may have been heated. De Lumley also reports that the ends of some of the specimens were worn smooth suggesting they had been used in body painting. "Clearer evidence of ochre use comes from Becov in Czechoslovakia. This cave site, occupied ca.250,000 B. P., yielded a specimen of red ochre that was striated on two faces with marks of abrasion together with a flat rubbing stone with a granular crystalline surface that had been abraded in the center possibly during the preparation of ochre powder (Marshack 1981: 138). Whether or not the rubbing stone was actually used in the preparation of ochre powder is uncertain, but a wide area of the occupation floor from which the ochre lump had been recovered was stained with red ochre powder."

Why was pigment so important to people 70-80,000 and years ago that they would begin the massive mining operation? Why would they heat it to alter its color as Dickson suggests? If archaic Homo sapiens, Neanderthals and Homo erectus were simply intelligent mammals lacking a religion (as Hugh Ross suggests [Ross, 1991, p. 159-160; 1995, p. 2]) then why all the interest in carrying around useless ochre? There can only be one reason. Since ochre (mineral: specularite,  $\text{Fe}_2\text{O}_3$ ) can not be eaten nor used for any utilitarian purpose in a primitive society, art and ritual are the only remaining possibilities. The active mining of ochre for the past 80,000 years is highly indicative of a religious or spiritual sense for that entire time. The occurrence of ochre in Homo erectus sites as far back as 1.5 million years ago, would also argue for ritual among them. This red ochre mine is highly indicative of the ritual and spiritual lives of those who lived between 50 and 100 thousand years ago.

But this may not be the earliest evidence of a desire for pigment. The earliest evidence of a red pigment, a weathered basalt which when rubbed produces red powder, came from Bed II at Olduvai, dated at 1.7 million years ago (Oakley, 1981, p. 206-207)

Neanderthals, by everyone's admission, used ochre and manganese dioxide (a black pigment) to color something. Mellars (1996,p. 370) writes:

"The occurrence of what are almost certainly colouring materials in Middle Palaeolithic contexts is now beyond dispute. The evidence comes in two main forms: first fragments of iron oxide or red ochre which, depending on the source, can provide a range of colours from yellow to deep maroon or red-brown; and black manganese dioxide. Fragments of ochre have now been recorded from at least a dozen different Middle Palaeolithic sites in southwestern France, while the occurrence of manganese dioxide is even more frequent. Evidence that the materials were used as pigments seems difficult to dispute. Many individual fragments show either clear signs of scraping (presumably to yield a powder) or well developed facets on one or more surfaces which suggest that they were applied directly to a hard or soft surface."

With all this use for ochre, it is not surprising to find evidence for mining.

But there is also evidence for flint mining from ancient times.

One cave site in Europe, Bara Bahau, France, shows evidence of pre-upper Paleolithic mining on the walls of the cave. The cave overlooks the Vezere River, and throughout the region there are numerous exposures of chert which show many signs of quarrying. It would be logical to look in the cave for other outcrops of the flint seam.

Examination of the walls of the cave reveal the following sequence of events. First the cherts were mined; many of the cherts left in the wall show evidence of having been hammered in the extraction process. After this there is evidence of finger marks and cave bear claw marks on the wall. Finally, someone painted a pictures of horses, cows, felines bears and cervids on the soft limestone walls above and below the flint. In the process of painting, the fractured flint was incorporated as parts of the eyes, ears or hooves of the animals. There is no further evidence of damage (which mining would cause) to the soft limestone walls. If the mining of the flint had occurred AFTER the painting, the paintings would have been damaged, but they weren't. The paintings cover the evidence of the mining. What age are the pictures? Bednarik, 1992, p. 14 says,

"The mining evidence is most likely of the early Upper Palaeolithic or of the Mousterian (Mousterian occupation evidence is present in the cave). "

The Mousterian is the culture which has clearly been demonstrated to belong to the Neanderthal. Interestingly, one can not say that this mining is definitely due to modern humans even if it were early Upper Paleolithic. As Smith, (1991, p. 224) notes, no modern human fossils have ever been found with the early Upper Paleolithic tools, in spite of a century and a half of searching. The early Aurignacian (Upper Paleolithic) occurs in deposits dated to 35,000 years and greater. Clearly mankind was mining from cave walls prior to the occurrence of the first anatomically modern human in SW France. Modern man is not found in France until 5,000 years later than the artwork. Modern man did not appear in France until 28-30,000 years ago. (Smith, 1991, p. 223) In eastern Europe, the evidence for mining goes even further back in time. Gabori-Csank has reported chert mining from a cave in Hungary in which Mousterian (Neandertal-style) pickaxes were found! Mousterian tools in Europe are always associated with Neanderthals and date prior to 40,000 years B.P. Thus, Neanderthal engaged in subterranean mining. (Gabori-Csank, 1988)

Bednarik (1992, p. 20-21) summarizes the technological and cognitive requirements for subterranean mining.

"Underground mining involves quite a number of both technological and cognitive pre-conditions. To begin with, it requires a preparedness to enter an alien environment which most animal species avoid, or the behavioural flexibility to manage a perhaps genetically determined cortical response pattern to fear of caves. This already provides considerable insights into the level of conscious decision making required in this context. Next, most of the underground work presupposes the availability of artificial lighting, and there is some evidence of lamps and torches having been involved in these quests. It is also obvious from several of the sites that the mining activities must have been team work, involving at least two or three people, who no doubt had to co-ordinate various aspects of their efforts. We know that a variety of mining tools were involved, and we can assume that items such as pointed, perhaps fire-hardened wooden wedges were prepared outside the cave. At a few sites there is evidence of the use of scaffolding, which would imply even more planning. These observations together suggest that fairly complex planning patterns need to be postulated. Finally, some of the caves are of quite difficult access, and the sheer logistics of the mining operations conducted in them must have involved engineering skills of an order of magnitude few archaeologists would be currently prepared to credit any 'pre-Upper Palaeolithic' people with. Not only does the evidence for these abilities permit considerably more insight into the cognitive, intellectual, social and, presumably, linguistic skills of the people concerned than the futile and yet perennial arguments about language ability, the hyoid bone and Broca's area, there is still another factor to be considered. "I began this paper by explaining, in some detail the diagenetic conditions in which sedimentary silicas form, and why they occur primarily as tabular or quasi-tabular deposits. The geological reasons for this are known to us, and we can broadly explain the processes involved. But we have no reason to assume that the early miners were capable of rationalizing about these deposits in quite the same way. Yet the evidence seems to suggest, in some cases, that they were capable of predicting the occurrence and spatial extent of an as yet concealed geological feature. While it may be cognitively easy to follow an exposed seam, it is quite a different matter to undertake a calculated course of action that promises no immediate reward, and whose eventual reward is based entirely on the validity of an abstract prediction. Consider the procedure depicted in Figure 5: once the seam became inaccessible to methods of minimal labour input, a decision was made to remove the massive limestone overburden above the seam. This would have involved hours of back-breaking and most unpleasant work, without any guarantee of a reward- were it not for the expectation that the seam would in fact continue inwards. If it did not, the entire work effort would have been in vain. This implies that the miners were reasonably certain that the seam would continue horizontally. In other words they had the intellectual and cognitive capacity of observing and understanding a geological formation such as a tabular deposit: and they were capable of making an informed prediction with a sufficient degree of conviction to warrant the determined labour expenditure which we find documented."

One should also be aware that Neanderthals are found in rocks dated from 30,000 to 230,000 years ago. If they were capable of mining, then humanity must extend back that far. In the case of archaic Homo sapiens, they go back 500,000 years ago, requiring that humanity extend back that far. Behaviors of this complexity (subterranean mining) are only engaged in by man. There is NO animal example. Apologists who believe that Adam was a recent (Upper Paleolithic Homo sapiens). Such views are contrary to the scientific and theological data available to anyone who wishes to do the proper research. Since there could not be 3 Adams (a Neanderthal Adam, an Archaic Homo sapiens Adam, and an anatomically modern Adam), one must incorporate beings with this type of human activity (Neanderthal and archaic Homo sapiens) into theologically defined man - a being with the image of God.

Behaviors such as I have described here is most certainly NOT incipient human behavior--it is FULLY human. Christians need to realize that when we teach our children that fossil man was mere ape-man, not really human, we are going against the actual evidence of quite human behavior far into the past. This sets our children up for difficulties if and when they ever learn what we have ignored. When apologists make the easy claim that there is no evidence of human behavior from fossil man, they betray the fact that they have not really looked at the available evidence.

Christians should also consider the possibility that my views just might be correct, i.e., that Adam and the Flood were millions of years ago.

References

Bednarik, Robert G., 1992, "Early Subterranean Chert Mining", Artefact 15:11-24

Bednarik, Robert G., 1995, "Reply" Current Anthropology, 36:4 pp. 605-634.

Belitszky, S., et al, "A Middle Pleistocene Wooden Plank with man-made Polish," Journal of Human Evolution, 1991, 20:349-353.

Boesch, C. and H. Boesch, 1984, "Mental Map in Wild Chimpanzees: An Analysis of Hammer Transports for Nut Cracking," Primates, 25(2): 160-170.

Churchill, S. E. et al, 1996. "Morphological Affinities of the Proximal Ulna from Klasies River Main Site: Archaic or Modern?" Journal of Human Evolution, (1996) 31:213-237
Dickson, D. Bruce, 1990. The Dawn of Belief, (Tuscon: The University of Arizona Press)

Dart, R. A. and P. Beaumont, 1967. "Amazing Antiquity of Mining in Southern Africa, Nature, 216:407-408.

Dart, R. A. and P. Beaumont, 1971. "On a Further Radiocarbon Date for Ancient Mining in Southern Africa" South African Journal of Science, January 1971, pp 10-11.

Gabori-Csank, V. 1988, "Une Mine de Silex Paleolithique a Budapest. Hongrie," in H. L. Dibble and A. Montet-White eds. Upper Pleistocene Prehistory of Western Eurasia, pp 141-143. Monograph 54 University Museum. University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

Johanson, Donald C., Lenora Johanson, and Blake Edgar, 1994, Ancestors, (New York: Villard Books).

Klein, Richard G., 1989. The Human Career, (Chicago: The University of Chicago Press).

Mellars, Paul C., 1996. The Neanderthal Legacy, (Princeton: University Press).

Morris, Desmond, 1994. The Human Animal, (New York: Crown Publishing), p. 186-188.

Oakley, K.P., 1981. "Emergence of Higher Thought 3.0-0.2 Ma B.P.", Phil. Trans. R. Soc. Lond. B, 292, 205-211.

Ross, Hugh, 1991, The Fingerprint of God, (Orange: Promise Publishing).

Ross, Hugh, 1995a, "Art and Fabric Shed New Light on Human History," Facts & Faith, 9:3, p.2.

Ross, Hugh, 1995b "Link with Neanderthals Cut by Computer," Facts & Faith, 9:3, 3rd Qtr. 1995, p. 2

Semaw, S., et al, "2.5-Million-year-old stone Tools from Gona Ethiopia," Nature, 385(January 23, 1997), p. 333-336

Smith, Fred H., "The Neandertals: Evolutionary Dead Ends or Ancestors of Modern People?" Journal of Anthropological Research, 47(1991):219-238.

Solecki, Rose L. 1992. "More on Hafted Projectile Points in the Mousterian," Journal of Field Archaeology, 19:207-212.

Vermeersch, P.M. and E. Paulissen, 1989., "The Oldest Quarries Known: Stone Age Miners in Egypt," Episodes, 12:1(March 1989), p. 35-36. Walker, Alan and Pat Shipman, 1996. The Wisdom of the Bones, (New York: Alfred Knopf.)

| 23626|2007-11-08 10:15:53|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|
 --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>
 >
 > Thanks, Paul. Bythe way, is KV11 that of Ramses III?
 >
 >

Yes, if you search the Ta_Seti archives for KV11, you will find some interesting discussion.

Regards,
 Paul Kekai Manansala
 | 23627|2007-11-08 10:35:59|kungfuhustle|Re: KMT - response to Peter II|
 You first have to download the vid from YouTube and convert it to a usable format.
 There are a few "FREE" FLV to AVI/MPEG converters that allow you to accomplish this.
 I have one stored but will need to access my NAS to retrieve it.

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 12:51:07 -0500

Asar,

Thanks for following up. Unfortunately, WebSense blocks both the youtube and the subterranean mining links in your reply, but I have always been convinced of the northward movement of pharaonic culture during, or as a precursor to, the earliest establishment of unification in Kmt, based on Diodorus below as well as Bruce Williams' thesis. Is there any format that can allow the clip(s) to be sent as attachments? Thanks again.

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com

Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 15:43:30 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

(I forgot to answer your second question)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

> And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. So please tell me, >when did the charcoal symbol (once argued to represent crocodile skin) appear in the mdw-ntr >form of Kmt? I think it was also Diop who said it (charcoal)was the strongest term in the >Egyptian language for blackness.

You can read pages 26-38 of "Kemet and Other Egyptian Terms for

Their Land" Ogden Goelet. It's an article in a book "Ki Baruch Hu: Ancient Near Eastern, Biblical and Judaic Studies in Honor of Baruch A Levine." Here he provides the evidence for its late usage.

Keep in mind I am not saying the word KM.T did not exist, just it was not used as a national designation in any text before the 1st intermediate period. I have always speculated that the 1st intermediate period was really a civil war of some sort and Ta-Merri received it's independence.

Anthony T. Browder in Nile Valley Contributions to Civilization pg. 44 quotes John G. Jackson's work Introduction to African Civilization:

"The Edfu text is an important source document on the early history of the Nile Valley. This famous inscription, found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu, gives an account of the origin of Egyptian civilization. According to this record, civilization was brought from the south by a band of invaders under the leadership of King Horus. (emphasis mine)"

According to Diodorus Siculus, Book III he states:

"They (the Ethiopians) say also that the Egyptians are colonists sent out by the Ethiopians, Osiris ["King of Kings and God of Gods] having been the leader of the colony . . . they add that the Egyptians have received from them, as from authors and their ancestors, the greater part of their laws."

"The Aithiopians [Kushites] say that the Egyptians are settlers from among themselves and that Osiris was the leader of the settlement. The customs of the Egyptians, they say, are for the most part Aithiopian, the settlers having preserved their old traditions."

Remember the name for "KM.T" was originally "Hnw" (the interior). To me this let's us know that it was the "interior" to a colony and thus why it didn't have a national designation. After the first intermediate period, I think, they got their independence from Ta-Nehusu (Ethiopia) and named the land Ta-Merri. Ta-Merri didn't exist as a national designation until this point as well.

Now back to the glyph, take a look at this set of glyphs , and then look at this video clip and pay attention at 52 seconds of the clip to see the similarities between the wood symbol in Km.T and that used in the video clip.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EFPuqnJPXYU&mode=related&search=africa%25>

I bring this up to point out the fact that the early Africans were miners and that they had a cultural basis to draw from to later associate the charred wood symbol with the term Black (as in the case of the Black Land). Finch, in Star of Deep Beginnings, goes on to say on page 26 that:

"Apart from the occasional forest fire started by lightning, charcoal is not naturally occurring; it is produced from wood that has been partially and slowly burned. (emphasis mine)"

It was deliberate and they have a LONG history using charcoal for many purposes. Read the following paper on ancient Subterranean Mining in Africa and things will be more clear:

<http://home.entouch.net/dmd/mining.htm>

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Windows Live Hotmail and Microsoft Office Outlook together at last.
Get it now!

| 23628|2007-11-08 12:13:10|asar_imhotep|Re: KMT - response to Peter II|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Asar,

>

> Thanks for following up. Unfortunately, WebSense blocks both the youtube and the subterranean mining links in your reply, but I have always been convinced of the northward movement of pharaonic culture during, or as a precursor to, the earliest establishment of unification in Kmt, based on Diodorus below as well as Bruce Williams' thesis. Is there any format that can allow the clip(s) to be sent as attachments? Thanks again.

>

> Peter

>

I sent the full article to the yahoogroups so they can read. You will have to be mindful of the Christian discussion towards the end. But I don't know how to download the actual video from youtube. I know you can download it if it is posted on Google video.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23629|2007-11-08 13:04:28|asar_imhotep|Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
Peace Ta-Seti

On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken up into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't seen it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from those debates.

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23630|2007-11-08 13:31:05|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
Thanks.

I'll convert them into a form (AVI & MPEG) that can be stored for anyone who wishes to download for a Permanent copy.

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Thu, 08 Nov 2007 21:04:25 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Peace Ta-Seti

On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken up into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't seen it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from those debates.

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23631|2007-11-08 13:37:11|asar_imhotep|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
I would be the first one to request a copy.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Thanks.
> I'll convert them into a form (AVI & MPEG) that can be stored for anyone > who wishes to download for a Permanent copy.
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: asar_imhotep
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7
> Date: Thu, 08 Nov 2007 21:04:25 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> Peace Ta-Seti
>
> On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken up > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't seen > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from those > debates.
>
> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23632|2007-11-08 22:45:45|Anthony Whitaker|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
Would you happen to have the whole film, as these 7 parts only appear to be a portion of this particular Black Athena debate?

Kind Regards

Anthony

----- Original Message -----

From: asar_imhotep

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 8, 2007 4:04:25 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Peace Ta-Seti

On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken up into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't seen it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from those debates.

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23633|2007-11-08 22:45:56|Anthony Whitaker|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

Please disregard prior request. I confused it with another video on Youtube.

Anthony

----- Original Message -----

From: asar_imhotep

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 8, 2007 4:04:25 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Peace Ta-Seti

On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken up into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't seen it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from those debates.

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23634|2007-11-09 03:46:52|Dexter Harper|Re: KMT - response to Peter II|
Peter,

You can download youtube videos using 'Real Player 11'.

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Asar,

>

> Thanks for following up. Unfortunately, WebSense blocks both the youtube and the subterranean mining links in your reply, but I have always been convinced of the northward movement of pharaonic culture during, or as a precursor to, the earliest establishment of unification in Kmt, based on Diodorus below as well as Bruce Williams' thesis. Is there any format that can allow the clip(s) to be sent as attachments? Thanks again.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: asar_imhotep@...: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 15:43:30

+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

>
>
>
>

> (I forgot to answer your second question)

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:> And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. So please tell me, >when did the charcoal symbol (once argued to represent crocodile skin) appear in the mdw-ntr >form of Kmt? I think it was also Diop who said it (charcoal)was the strongest term in the >Egyptian language for blackness. You can read pages 26-38 of "Kemet and Other Egyptian Terms for Their Land" Ogden Goelet. It's an article in a book "Ki Baruch Hu: Ancient Near Eastern, Biblical and Judaic Studies in Honor of Baruch A Levine." Here he provides the evidence for its late usage. Keep in mind I am not saying the word KM.T did not exist, just it was not used as a national designation in any text before the 1st intermediate period. I have always speculated that the 1st intermediate period was really a civil war of some sort and Ta-Merri received it's independence. Anthony T. Browder in Nile Valley Contributions to Civilization pg. 44 quotes John G. Jackson's work Introduction to African Civilization:

>

> "The Edfu text is an important source document on the early history of the Nile Valley. This famous inscription, found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu, gives an account of the origin of Egyptian civilization. According to this record, civilization was brought from the south by a band of invaders under the leadership of King Horus. (emphasis mine)"According to Diodorus Siculus, Book III he states:

>

> "They (the Ethiopians) say also that the Egyptians are colonists sent out by the Ethiopians, Osiris ["King of Kings and God of Gods] having been the leader of the colony . . . they add that the Egyptians have received from them, as from authors and their ancestors, the greater part of their laws."

> "The Aithiopians [Kushites] say that the Egyptians are settlers from among themselves and that Osiris was the leader of the settlement. The customs of the Egyptians, they say, are for the most part Aithiopian, the settlers having preserved their old traditions."Remember the name for "KM.T" was originally "Hnw" (the interior). To me this let's us know that it was the "interior" to a colony and thus why it didn't have a national designation. After the first intermediate period, I think, they got their independence from Ta-Nehusu (Ethiopia) and named the land Ta-Merri. Ta-Merri didn't exist as a national designation until this point as well.

> Now back to the glyph, take a look at this set of glyphs , and then look at this video clip and pay attention at 52 seconds of the clip to see the similarities between the wood symbol in Km.T and that used in the video clip.

>

> http://www.youtube.com/watch?

v=EFPuqnJPXYU&mode=related&search=africa%25

> I bring this up to point out the fact that the early Africans were miners and that they had a cultural basis to draw from to later associate the charred wood symbol with the term Black (as in the case of the Black Land). Finch, in Star of Deep Beginnings, goes on to say on page 26 that:

>

> "Apart from the occasional forest fire started by lightning, charcoal is not naturally occurring; it is produced from wood that has been partially and slowly burned. (emphasis mine)"It was deliberate and they have a LONG history using charcoal for many purposes. Read the following paper on ancient Subterranean Mining in Africa and things will be more

clear:<http://home.entouch.net/dmd/mining.htm> Asar

Imhotep<http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Windows Live Hotmail and Microsoft Office Outlook ? together at last. Get it now.

> http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/outlook/HA102225181033.aspx?

pid=CL100626971033

>

| 23635|2007-11-09 04:51:05|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Peter II|

Thank you, Dexter. Most helpful.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: dharp3r@yahoo.com

Date: Fri, 9 Nov 2007 11:46:51 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

Peter,

You can download youtube videos using 'Real Player 11'.

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Asar,

>

> Thanks for following up. Unfortunately, WebSense blocks both the youtube and the subterranean mining links in your reply, but I have always been convinced of the northward movement of pharaonic culture during, or as a precursor to, the earliest establishment of unification in Kmt, based on Diodorus below as well as Bruce Williams' thesis. Is there any format that can allow the clip(s) to be sent as attachments? Thanks again.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: asar_imhotep@ ...: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 15:43:30
+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

>

>

>

>

> (I forgot to answer your second question)

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:> And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. So please tell me, >when did the charcoal symbol (once argued to represent crocodile skin) appear in the mdw-ntr >form of Kmt? I think it was also Diop who said it (charcoal)was the strongest term in the >Egyptian language for blackness. You can read pages 26-38 of "Kemet and Other Egyptian Terms for Their Land" Ogden Goelet. It's an article in a book "Ki Baruch Hu: Ancient Near Eastern, Biblical and Judaic Studies in Honor of Baruch A Levine." Here he provides the evidence for its late usage. Keep in mind I am not saying the word KM.T did not exist, just it was not used as a national designation in any text before the 1st intermediate period. I have always speculated that the 1st intermediate period was really a civil war of some sort and Ta-Merri received it's independence. Anthony T. Browder in Nile Valley Contributions to Civilization pg. 44 quotes John G. Jackson's work Introduction to African Civilization:

>

> "The Edfu text is an important source document on the early history of the Nile Valley. This famous inscription, found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu, gives an account of the origin of Egyptian civilization. According to this record, civilization was brought from the south by a band of invaders under the leadership of King Horus. (emphasis mine)"According to Diodorus Siculus, Book III he states:

>

> "They (the Ethiopians) say also that the Egyptians are colonists sent out by the Ethiopians, Osiris ["King of Kings and God of Gods] having been the leader of the colony . . . they add that the Egyptians have received from them, as from authors and their ancestors, the greater part of their laws."

> "The Aithiopians [Kushites] say that the Egyptians are settlers from among themselves and that Osiris was the leader of the settlement. The customs of the Egyptians, they say, are for the most part Aithiopian, the settlers having preserved their old traditions." Remember the name for "KM.T" was originally "Hnw" (the interior). To me this let's us know that it was the "interior" to a colony and thus why it didn't have a national designation. After the first intermediate period, I think, they got their independence from Ta-Nehusu (Ethiopia) and named the land Ta-Merri. Ta-Merri didn't exist as a national designation until this point as well.

> Now back to the glyph, take a look at this set of glyphs , and then look at this video clip and pay attention at 52 seconds of the clip to see the similarities between the wood symbol in Km.T and that used in the video clip.

>

> http://www.youtube.com/watch?

v=EFPuqnJPXYU&mode=related&search=africa% 25

> I bring this up to point out the fact that the early Africans were miners and that they had a cultural basis to draw from to later associate the charred wood symbol with the term Black (as in the case of the Black Land). Finch, in Star of Deep Beginnings, goes on to say on page 26 that:

>

> "Apart from the occasional forest fire started by lightning, charcoal is not naturally occurring; it is produced from wood that has been partially and slowly burned. (emphasis mine)"It was deliberate and they have a LONG history using charcoal for many purposes. Read the following paper on ancient Subterranean Mining in Africa and things will be more

clear:<http://home.entouch.net/dmd/mining.htm> Asar

Imhotep<http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Windows Live Hotmail and Microsoft Office Outlook together at last. Get it now.
> http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/outlook/HA102225181033.aspx?
pid=CL100626971033
>

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.

Play Now!

| 23636|2007-11-09 06:51:17|Peter Kaiza|Re: Fw: KING TUT|

Attachments :

Although Egyptian art of this time was highly stylistic, Tutankhamens mask has all the features one could call African:

- 1)Very Thick lips
- 2)Short and Wide nose
- 3) High cheekbones

This is much in contrast to Boy-Goerges Image

Surely, Euro centrist cannot run away from a black Egypt .

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com

From: agolakisira@yahoo.co.uk

Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 16:37:09 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Fw: KING TUT

----- Forwarded Message -----

From: Agola K. Otero

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com; agolakisira@yahoo.co.uk

Sent: Thursday, 8 November, 2007 11:37:01 AM

Subject: KING TUT

THIS MASK

WOULD NEVER FIT ON THIS FACE (NOTE THE NOSE AND LIPS)

AND THAT FACE OR SKIN TONE WOULD NEVER FIT IN THIS PICTURE

---

This message and any attachments are intended for the named recipient(s) only, and may contain information that is confidential, proprietary, privileged and/or otherwise protected by law. Any unauthorised disclosure, dissemination, copying or other use either in whole or in part, of this message is prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please telephone or email the sender and delete this message and any attachment from your system.

---

---

Are you the Quizmaster? Play BrainBattle with a friend now!

| 23637|2007-11-09 07:29:15|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that despite ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of western civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining the intellectual status quo.

I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the ancient Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves black as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact that

Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of western civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat when thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of the stars.

We need an entirely separate education system for African people. We instinctively look at the world different and trying to reconcile our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is a waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data available and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors to forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful place among the members of humanity.

Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> Peace Ta-Seti

>

> On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken up > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't seen > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from those > debates.

>

> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23638|2007-11-09 07:39:20|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of western civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat when thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of the stars.

We need an entirely separate education system for African people.

Totally agree!

meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: elliottandelliottmtg <elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 07:21:14 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that despite ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of western civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining the intellectual status quo.

I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the ancient Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves black as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact that Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of western civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat when thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of the stars.

We need an entirely separate education system for African people. We instinctively look at the world differently and trying to reconcile our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is a waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data available and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors to forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful place among the members of humanity.

Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> Peace Ta-Seti
>
> On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken up > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't seen > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from those > debates.
>
> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>

| 23639|2007-11-09 09:02:29|asar_imhotep|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

The reason why you entertain it is because African people have not accumulated the resources to conduct one's own research teams. As Diop has advocated, we are in dire need of research teams and as of now the European people have the resources to conduct research thoroughly. Not only that, they have the media vehicles to disseminate their findings with any interpretation they feel is valid.

So our own educational vehicle will also have to consist of an economic base that can support primary research teams. Other wise you will still have to rely on European people to supply you with the information: you'll just be interpreting their findings (which is the case now).

We entertain it because, unfortunately, until we have our own National Geographics, History Channels, BBC's, International Newspapers, etc., these people have a virtual monopoly on what is being presented to the masses. And by the time you have accumulated the resources, so much damage would have been done if left unchecked. It is not the most ideal way of dealing with it, but what can you do outside of not having what they have?

It will take years to get where they are at and in the mean time, you have to curb as much as possible with constantly challenging illogical assumptions until we get what they have and we can compete with vigor

in the world of ideas.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
>
> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of western > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat when > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of the > stars.
> We need an entirely separate education system for African people.
>
> Totally agree!
>
> meninarmer
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: elliottandelliottmtg
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7
> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 07:21:14 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that despite > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of western > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining the > intellectual status quo.
>
> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the ancient > Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves black > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact that > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
>
> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of western > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat when > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of the > stars.

 >
 > We need an entirely separate education system for African people.
 > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to reconcile > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is a > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data available > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors to > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful > place among the members of humanity.
 >
 > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
 >
 > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoo.com, "asar_imhotep"
 > wrote:
 > >
 | 23640|2007-11-09 09:10:39|clyde winters|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
 Asar

Thanks for a great post. It is also important to remember that in most of the U.S., few schools teach Afro-American history. This means that unless a student has access to some of the works of J.A.
 Rogers, Diop and DuBois, they will know practically nothing about the ancient history of Blacks.

Clyde

--- asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com> wrote:

> The reason why you entertain it is because African > people have not > accumulated the resources to conduct one's own > research teams. As Diop > has advocated, we are in dire need of research teams
 > and as of now the > European people have the resources to conduct > research thoroughly. Not > only that, they have the media vehicles to > disseminate their findings > with any interpretation they feel is valid.
 >
 > So our own educational vehicle will also have to > consist of an > economic base that can support primary research > teams. Other wise you > will still have to rely on European people to supply

> you with the > information: you'll just be interpreting their > findings (which is the > case now).
>
> We entertain it because, unfortunately, until we > have our own National > Geographics, History Channels, BBC's, International
> Newspapers, etc.,
> these people have a virtual monopoly on what is > being presented to the > masses. And by the time you have accumulated the > resources, so much > damage would have been done if left unchecked. It is > not the most > ideal way of dealing with it, but what can you do > outside of not > having what they have?
>
> It will take years to get where they are at and in > the mean time, you > have to curb as much as possible with constantly > challenging illogical > assumptions until we get what they have and we can > compete with vigor
> in the world of ideas.
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle
> wrote:
>
>
>
>> My question is why do we even entertain the notion > of Eurocentric >> history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African > origins of western >> civilization, then why should we care? They do so > at their own >> intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the > world was flat when

> > thousands of years ago our African ancestors > plotted the paths of the
> > stars.
> > We need an entirely separate education system for > African people.
> >
> > Totally agree!
> >
> > meninarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: elliottandelliottmtg
>
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate
> > Documentary 1-7
> > Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 07:21:14 -0000
> > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
> >
> > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed > the fact, that despite > > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African
> origins of western > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest > in maintaining the > > intellectual status quo.
> >
> > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said
> that the ancient > > Egyptians looked like her and that they only > painted themselves black > > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious > given the fact that > > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that > the table of > > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts > the ancient
> > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
> >
> > My question is why do we even entertain the notion
> of Eurocentric
> > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African > origins of western > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so

> at their own > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the > world was flat when > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors
> plotted the paths of the > > stars.
> >
> > We need an entirely seperate education system for > African people.
> > We instinctively look at the world different and > trying to reconcile > > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and > philosophies is a > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern > factual data available
> > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of > our ancestors to > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to > regain our rightful
> > place among the members of humanity.
> >
> > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
>
> > wrote:
> > >
>
>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23641|2007-11-09 09:26:30|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

This is all true, but symptomatic of lack of organization rather than resources.

The resources, talent, materials, and compelling need exist.

What is missing is, the organization and leadership required to pull it all together.

In Engineering (US), we have the NSBE (National Society Of Black Engineers), of which I belong. However, the group is mostly effective only in mentoring and small funding drives. They (we) are a small imitation of the white led IEEE (member here also), sort of like Black Masons (Prince Hall) are an imitation of Scottish Rites Masonic groups.

None of these black organizations have any cohesion (shared agenda) with the other, while the white groups do.

What is the black equivalent organization for black Egyptology or archaeological professions?

Hotep
Meninarmer

PS. I have converted the Black Athena film to AVI and rejoined each section. The file is ~180MB. Would you like this one or would you prefer I decrease the size by limiting the resolution? I can get the file size down to ~80MB with a smaller screen size and less resolution? Both will exceed the allowable size for attachment on this site.

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 17:02:27 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

The reason why you entertain it is because African people have not accumulated the resources to conduct one's own research teams. As Diop has advocated, we are in dire need of research teams and as of now the European people have the resources to conduct research thoroughly. Not only that, they have the media vehicles to disseminate their findings with any interpretation they feel is valid.

So our own educational vehicle will also have to consist of an economic base that can support primary research teams. Other wise you will still have to rely on European people to supply you with the information: you'll just be interpreting their findings (which is the case now).

We entertain it because, unfortunately, until we have our own National Geographics, History Channels, BBC's, International Newspapers, etc., these people have a virtual monopoly on what is being presented to the masses. And by the time you have accumulated the resources, so much damage would have been done if left unchecked. It is not the most ideal way of dealing with it, but what can you do outside of not having what they have?

It will take years to get where they are at and in the mean time, you have to curb as much as possible with constantly challenging illogical assumptions until we get what they have and we can compete with vigor in the world of ideas.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
>
> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of western > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
when > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of the
> stars.
> We need an entirely separate education system for African people.
>
> Totally agree!
>
> meninarmer
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: elliottandelliottmtg
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7
> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 07:21:14 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
despite > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of western > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining the > intellectual status quo.
>
> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the ancient > Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves black > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact that > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
> nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

>
 > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of western > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
 when > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of the > stars.
 >
 > We need an entirely separate education system for African people.
 > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to reconcile > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is a > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data available > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors to > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful > place among the members of humanity.
 >
 > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
 >
 > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
 > wrote:
 > >
 | 23642|2007-11-09 10:34:12|clyde winters|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|
 Ferg congrats. You have written a very interesting discussion of the term: Kmt. It is important because it supports Asar's frequent discussion of the deepness
 of the Egyptian language and its spiritual foundations

It is interesting that while you supported your interpretation of Kmt, based on Bantu analogies, these terms also find agreement in Dravidian and Malinke Bambara languages. For example, in Dravidian and Malinke, the suffix ?ta/da means ?place?.

Malinke

Ta, ?fire, place,

Ta, ownership

Ta, sacred object?

Dravidian

Kam, house

Itam / etam, place, room

Gibu, house

Kuti, house, abode, home

Cecca, house of leaves

Nakar , house abode

nagaru, house abode

In Malinke-Bambara, we find that charcoal is ?Kami and Kambi?. This corresponds to Dravidian (Tamil) ?Kammi and Kammu? dark and Tamil ?kari? ?charcoal.

In Malinke we have ?ga? or ?fireplace, hearth, fire and etc?. The term ?ka?, land, suffix of possession, hot.

This corresponds to Dravidian ?ka? ?black?, ?kay? ?to grow hot, burn and be warm? and Tamil ?Car? ?shelter? and ?Culli? ?furnace, fireplace?. We also find that the Dravidian and Malinke languages share similar terms for fire ti and ta respectively.

In Dravidian and Malinke the term Ma, is often associated with greatness, master and lord for example

Malinke
Mansa , King
Ma, ruler, master, lord,
Ma, original inhabitants of Wets Africa;
Ma, great, good repute and etc.

Dravidian
Ma, great, black
Mal, ?great man?
Mannan, King, lord
Makinan, chief, lord
Man, earth, world, soil, land
Given these means in Malinke we would read the following:

Ma-ka-ta ?Owners of the sacred land(s)?
Ka-ma-ta ?owners of this sacred place?
Ga-ma-ta, ?owners of the sacred hearth/habitation?

In Dravidian we could say:

Ka ?man-ta ?The black earth/land?.

Ka-ma--itam ?The great Black house ?.

Kam-ma-ta ?The Black house this place?.

It is clear that in Bantu, Egyptian, Dravidian and Mande languages ka- and ga- represented home or an abode. They also recognized kammi, as a term associated with fire, cooking and charcoal; and the term ?ta as an element used to denote a geographical area, locality and etc.

Clyde

--- Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk> wrote:

> Greetings All.
>
> What a happy day!!
>
> Here is KMT decoded.
>
> KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, > KAA..... Charcoal
>
> Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'
>
> enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, > learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure,
> continue.....kaa.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23643|2007-11-09 10:36:00|Asar Imhotep|Re: Black Athena file|

What you can do is upload the full movie onto Google Video. You will have to download and install their Desktop upload in order to upload a file larger than 100 MB. You will also have to register an email address with them.

Visit <http://video.google.com> and on your right hand side you can start the process.

This is the best way to distribute it because from their each individual viewing can simply download the whole video from the site. No need to shrink the file for email or FTP.

Hope this helps

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23644|2007-11-09 10:42:53|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as it goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black intellectual historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But it is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no mistake it has always been a small number of people who have changed the world".

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

wrote:

>

> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that

despite

> ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of western > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining the > intellectual status quo.

>

> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the ancient

> Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves

black

> as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact

that

> Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of

> nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient

> Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

>

>

> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of western

> civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat

when > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of

the

> stars.

>

>

> We need an entirely separate education system for African people.

> We instinctively look at the world differently and trying to

reconcile

> our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is a > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data

available

> and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors to > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful

> place among the members of humanity.

>

>

> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

> wrote:

> >

> > Peace Ta-Seti

> >

> > On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken

up

> > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't

seen

> > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from

those

> > debates.

> >

> > http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100

> >

> > Asar Imhotep

> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

> >

>

| 23645|2007-11-09 11:14:08|clyde winters|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

Hi

There are two groups which study ancient history they are:

International Diop Conference

<http://diopconference.com/>

Association for the Study of Classical African Civilizations

<http://www.ascac.org/>

These groups hold annual conferences. That discuss Egyptian history themes.

Clyde

--- kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

- > This is all true, but symptomatic of lack of
- > organization rather than
- > resources.
- > The resources, talent, materials, and compelling
- > need exist.
- > What is missing is, the organization and leadership
- > required to pull it
- > all together.
- >
- > In Engineering (US), we have the NSBE (National
- > Society Of Black
- > Engineers), of which I belong. However, the group is
- > mostly effective
- > only in mentoring and small funding drives. They
- > (we) are a small
- > imitation of the white led IEEE (member here also),
- > sort of like Black
- > Masons (Prince Hall) are an imitation of Scottish
- > Rites Masonic groups.
- >
- > None of these black organizations have any cohesion
- > (shared agenda) with
- > the other, while the white groups do.

>
> What is the black equivalent organization for black > Egyptology or > archaeological professions?
>
> Hotep
> Meninarmer
>
> PS. I have converted the Black Athena film to AVI > and rejoined each > section. The file is ~180MB. Would you like this one > or would you prefer
> I decrease the size by limiting the resolution? I > can get the file size > down to ~80MB with a smaller screen size and less > resolution? Both will > exceed the allowable size for attachment on this > site.
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate
> Documentary 1-7
> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 17:02:27 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> The reason why you entertain it is because African > people have not > accumulated the resources to conduct one's own
> research teams. As Diop
> has advocated, we are in dire need of research teams
> and as of now the > European people have the resources to conduct > research thoroughly. Not > only that, they have the media vehicles to > disseminate their findings
> with any interpretation they feel is valid.
>
> So our own educational vehicle will also have to > consist of an > economic base that can support primary research > teams. Other wise you > will still have to rely on European people to supply
> you with the > information: you'll just be interpreting their > findings (which is the > case now).

 >
 > We entertain it because, unfortunately, until we > have our own National > Geographics, History Channels, BBC's, International
 > Newspapers, etc.,
 > these people have a virtual monopoly on what is > being presented to the > masses. And by the time you have accumulated the > resources, so much > damage would have been done if left unchecked. It is > not the most > ideal way of dealing with it, but what can you do > outside of not > having what they have?
 >
 > It will take years to get where they are at and in
 > the mean time, you > have to curb as much as possible with constantly > challenging illogical
 > assumptions until we get what they have and we can > compete with vigor
 > in the world of ideas.
 >
 > Asar Imhotep
 > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
 >
 > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle
 > wrote:
 > >
 > >
 > > My question is why do we even entertain the notion
 > > of Eurocentric
 > > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African > > origins of western > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so
 > > at their own > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the > > world was flat
 > > when
 > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors
 > > plotted the paths of the
 > > stars.
 > > We need an entirely separate education system for > African people.

> >
> > Totally agree!
> >
> > meninarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: elliottandelliottmtg
>
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate
> > Documentary 1-7
> > Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 07:21:14 -0000
> > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
> >
> > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed
> the fact, that
> despite > > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African > origins of western > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest
> in maintaining the > > intellectual status quo.
> >
> > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said
> that the ancient > > Egyptians looked like her and that they only > painted themselves black
> > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious
> given the fact that > > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that > the table of > > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts
> the ancient
> > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
> >
> > My question is why do we even entertain the notion
> of Eurocentric
> > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African > origins of western > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so
> at their own
> > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the > world was flat

> when
>> thousands of years ago our African ancestors > plotted the paths of the >> stars.
>>
>> We need an entirely seperate education system for > African people.
>> We instinctively look at the world different and
> trying to reconcile >> our understanding with Eurocentric principles and > philosophies is a >> waste of time. We need to take all the modern > factual data available
>> and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of
> our ancestors to >> forge a new path of enlightenment in order to > regain our rightful
>> place among the members of humanity.
>>
>> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
>
>> wrote:
>>>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23646|2007-11-09 11:39:01|asar_imhotep|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

This is good information. I would like to also point out the that according to the Tervuren's database of Bantu Lexical Reconstructions \(BLR2\) the Proto-Bantu word for "soil, earth, dirt, mud, marsh, be warm was "Taka." Here are the search results:

Search Results

Word taka
LIMIT 100
ORDER ID
Action Search!
DBname ../Data/blr2.txt
Format HTML (easy to read)
Sorted by ID (column 1)

| I                 | Corr | Wor               | Noun   | English                                                        | French                                                          | C | V | T | V | T | C | V | T | V | T | C | V | T | C | V | T | Distri       | Relia  |
|-------------------|------|-------------------|--------|----------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|--------------|--------|
| D                 | _Set | d                 | _Class |                                                                |                                                                 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 2 | 1 | 1 | 2 | 2 | 3 | 3 | 3 | 4 | 4 | 4 | bution       | bility |
| 2740          | 1649 | taka              | 5,(9)  | soil,earth                                                 | sol,terre                                                   | t | a | L |   |   | k | a | L |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   | D J NP S | 3      |
| 40 trv20 425  |      | taka              | 3      | genitals;nudity                                            | sexuelles;nudite                                        | t | a |   |   |   | k | a |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   | C L          | 5      |
| 40 trv22 427  |      | taka              | 3      | tree:Olacaceae:Strombosiopsistetrandra | arbre:Olacaceae:Strombosiopsistetrandra | t | a | L |   |   | k | a | L |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   | C            | 5      |
| 40 trv66 471  |      | puutakani |        | rumple                                                         | froisser,chiffonner                                     | p | u | L | u |   | t | a |   |   | k | a |   | n | i |   |   | H L          | 5      |
| 63 trv47 2737 |      | takadad       |        | honour                                                         | honorer                                                         | t | a | H |   |   | k | a |   |   | d | a |   | d |   |   |   | L M          | 5      |
| 91 trv99 5589 |      | paatakan      |        | be flat                                                        | etre plat                                                       | p | a |   | a |   | t | a |   |   | k | a |   | n |   |   |   | H L          | 5      |
| 96 trv11 6000 |      | taka              | 9      | mud,marsh                                                  | boue,marais                                                 | t | a | L |   |   | k | a | L |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   | E H RS   | 5      |
| 96 trv12 6001 |      | taka              | 9      | dirt                                                           | salete                                                          | t | a |   |   |   | k | a |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   | G M          | 5      |
| 96 trv13 6002 |      | takat             |        | bewarm                                                     | etrechaud                                                   | t | a | L |   |   | k | a |   |   | t |   |   |   |   |   |   | J            | 5      |

9 matches.

I think is strong evidence for a central cultural complex that spread out over time along the central, northeast and western regions of Africa.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahooogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

- >
- > Ferg congrats. You have written a very interesting
- > discussion of the term: Kmt. It is important because
- > it supports Asar's frequent discussion of the deepness
- > of the Egyptian language and its spiritual foundations
- >
- > It is interesting that while you supported your
- > interpretation of Kmt, based on Bantu analogies, these
- > terms also find agreement in Dravidian and Malinke
- > Bambara languages. For example, in Dravidian and
- > Malinke, the suffix ?ta/da means "place".
- > Malinke
- > Ta, `fire, place,
- > Ta, ownership
- > Ta, sacred object'
- >
- > Dravidian
- > Kam, house
- > Itam / etam, place, room
- > Gibu, house
- > Kuti, house, abode, home
- > Cecca, house of leaves
- > Nakar , house abode
- > nagaru, house abode
- >
- > In Malinke-Bambara, we find that charcoal is `Kami
- > and Kambi". This corresponds to Dravidian (Tamil)
- > "Kammi and Kammu' dark and Tamil "kari" `charcoal.
- >
- > In Malinke we have `ga' or `fireplace, hearth, fire
- > and etc'. The term "ka", land, suffix of possession,
- > hot.
- >
- > This corresponds to Dravidian "ka" `black', "kay" `to
- > grow hot, burn and be warm' and Tamil "Car" `shelter'
- > and "Culli" `furnace, fireplace'. We also find that
- > the Dravidian and Malinke languages share similar
- > terms for fire ti and ta respectively.
- >
- > In Dravidian and Malinke the term Ma, is often
- > associated with greatness, master and lord for example

- >
- > Malinke
- > Mansa , King
- > Ma, ruler, master, lord,
- > Ma, original inhabitants of Wets Africa;
- > Ma, great, good repute and etc.
- >
- > Dravidian
- > Ma, great, black
- > Mal, `great man'
- > Mannan, King, lord
- > Makinan, chief, lord
- > Man, earth, world, soil, land
- > Given these means in Malinke we would read the
- > following:
- >
- > Ma-ka-ta `Owners of the sacred land(s)'
- > Ka-ma-ta `owners of this sacred place'
- > Ga-ma-ta, `owners of the sacred hearth/habitation'
- >
- > In Dravidian we could say:
- >
- > Ka ?man-ta `The black earth/land'.
- >
- > Ka-ma--itam `The great Black house '.
- >
- > Kam-ma-ta `The Black house this place'.
- >
- > It is clear that in Bantu, Egyptian, Dravidian and
- > Mande languages ka- and ga- represented home or an
- > abode. They also recognized kammi, as a term
- > associated with fire, cooking and charcoal; and the
- > term ?ta as an element used to denote a geographical
- > area, locality and etc.
- >
- >
- > Clyde

| 23647|2007-11-09 12:17:14|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to access it to add to it or make edits, etc.

We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like. Could we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable information and data ? even have it reviewed by those of us qualified (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps. The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if combined could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley. From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a clear cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-nan in ancient times - as well as India.

The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would be to decide whether the goal is more important than our egos.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as
it

> goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black intellectual > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But

it > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no mistake

> it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > world".

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

>>

>> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
> despite

>> ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of
western >> civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining

the

>> intellectual status quo.

>>

>> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the
ancient

>> Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves
> black

>> as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact

> that
>> Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
>> nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient >> Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
>>
>>
>> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric >> history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of > western >> civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own >> intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
> when >> thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of
> the
>> stars.
>>
>>
>> We need an entirely separte education system for African people.
>> We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
> reconcile >> our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is
> a >> waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
> available
>> and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
> to >> forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful >> place among the members of humanity.
>>
>>
>> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
>> wrote:
>>>
>>> Peace Ta-Seti
>>>
>>> On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is > broken
> up
>>> into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it >>> interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't > seen >>> it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from
> those
>>> debates.

>>>
>>> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
>>>
>>> Asar Imhotep
>>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>>
>>
>

| 23648|2007-11-09 12:55:32|clyde winters|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf]

Hi

Thanks for the information. Hopefully, as time permits you may be able to discover the spiritual significance of these words since, Ka, Ma and Ta often have homophonic meanings in many African languages which relate to the divine.

Clyde

--- asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com> wrote:

> This is good information. I would like to also point > out the that > according to the Tervuren's
>

<<http://www.cbold.ddl.ish-lyon.cnrs.fr/Docs/Tervuren.html>>

> database of
> Bantu Lexical Reconstructions (BLR2)
>

<<http://www.cbold.ddl.ish-lyon.cnrs.fr/CGI/jgspltscrn.cgi?simplifiedbq=blr2\>

> .txt> the Proto-Bantu word for "soil, earth, dirt,
> mud, marsh, be warm
> was "Taka." Here are the search results:

>
>
> Search ResultsWordtaka
> LIMIT100
> ORDERID
> ActionSearch!
> DBname../Data/blr2.txt
> FormatHTML (easy to read)
> Sorted by ID (column 1)
>

IDCorr_SetWordNoun_ClassEnglishFrenchC1V11T11V12T12C2V21T21V22T22C3V3T3C\

> 4V4T4DistributionReliability27401649taka5,(9)soil, > earthsol, terretaL
>
> kaL
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> D J N P S3 4020trv 425taka3genitals; nudityparties
> sexuelles; nuditeta
>
>
> ka
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> C L5 4022trv 427taka3tree: Olacaceae: Strombosiopsis
> tetrandraarbre:
> Olacaceae: Strombosiopsis tetrandrataL
>
> kaL
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> C5 4066trv 471puutakani
> rumplefroisser, chiffonnerpuLu > ta
>
>
> ka
> ni
> H L5 6347trv 2737takadad
> honourhonorerH
>

> ka
>
>
> da > d
>
> L M5 9199trv 5589paatakan
> be flatetre platpa
> a > ta
>
>
> ka > n
>
> H L5 9611trv 6000taka9mud, marshboue, maraistaL
>
> kaL
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> E H R S5 9612trv 6001taka9dirtsaleteta
>
>
> ka
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> G M5 9613trv 6002takat
> be warmetre chaudtaL
>
> ka
>
>
> t
>
>

>
>
> J5
>
> 9 matches.
>
>
> I think is strong evidence for a central cultural > complex that spread > out over time along the central, northeast and > western regions of > Africa.
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters > wrote:
>
>
>> Ferg congrats. You have written a very interesting >> discussion of the term: Kmt. It is important > because >> it supports Asar's frequent discussion of the > deepness
>> of the Egyptian language and its spiritual > foundations
>
>> It is interesting that while you supported your >> interpretation of Kmt, based on Bantu analogies,
> these
>> terms also find agreement in Dravidian and Malinke >> Bambara languages. For example, in Dravidian and >> Malinke, the suffix ?ta/da means "place".
>> Malinke
>> Ta, `fire, place,
>> Ta, ownership
>> Ta, sacred object'
>>
>> Dravidian
>> Kam, house
>> Itam / etam, place, room
>> Gibu, house
>> Kuti, house, abode, home
>> Cecca, house of leaves

> > Nakar , house abode
 > > nagaru, house abode
 > >
 > > In Malinke-Bambara, we find that charcoal is > `Kami
 > > and Kambi". This corresponds to Dravidian (Tamil)
 > > "Kammi and Kammu' dark and Tamil "kari" > `charcoal.
 > >
 > > In Malinke we have `ga' or `fireplace, hearth, > fire
 > > and etc'. The term "ka", land, suffix of > possession,
 > > hot.
 > >
 > > This corresponds to Dravidian "ka" `black',
 > "kay" `to > > grow hot, burn and be warm' and Tamil "Car" > `shelter' > > and "Culli" `furnace, fireplace'. We also find
 > that
 > > the Dravidian and Malinke languages share similar > > terms for fire ti and ta respectively.
 > >
 > > In Dravidian and Malinke the term Ma, is often > > associated with greatness, master and lord for > example
 > >
 > > Malinke
 > > Mansa , King
 > > Ma, ruler, master, lord,
 > > Ma, original inhabitants of Wets Africa;
 > > Ma, great, good repute and etc.
 > >
 > > Dravidian
 > > Ma, great, black
 > > Mal, `great man'
 > > Mannan, King, lord
 > > Makinan, chief, lord
 > > Man, earth, world, soil, land
 > > Given these means in Malinke we would read the > > following:
 > >
 >

=== message truncated ===

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23649|2007-11-09 14:17:36|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
Dr. Winters

Thank you for your response.

There is much to consider regarding direction, prioritization, funding, and time-tables.

An African Proverb:

When the left hand washes the right and the right washes the left, both hands become clean.

Regards,

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: clyde winters <olmec982000@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 9 Nov 2007 11:14:07 -0800 (PST)

Hi

There are two groups which study ancient history they
are:

International Diop Conference

<http://diopconference.com/>

Association for the Study of Classical African Civilizations

<http://www.ascac.org/>

These groups hold annual conferences. That discuss Egyptian history themes.

Clyde

--- kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

- > This is all true, but symptomatic of lack of
- > organization rather than
- > resources.
- > The resources, talent, materials, and compelling
- > need exist.
- > What is missing is, the organization and leadership
- > required to pull it
- > all together.
- >
- > In Engineering (US), we have the NSBE (National
- > Society Of Black
- > Engineers), of which I belong. However, the group is
- > mostly effective
- > only in mentoring and small funding drives. They
- > (we) are a small
- > imitation of the white led IEEE (member here also),
- > sort of like Black
- > Masons (Prince Hall) are an imitation of Scottish
- > Rites Masonic groups.
- >
- > None of these black organizations have any cohesion
- > (shared agenda) with
- > the other, while the white groups do.
- >
- > What is the black equivalent organization for black
- > Egyptology or
- > archaeological professions?
- >
- > Hotep
- > Meninarmer
- >
- > PS. I have converted the Black Athena film to AVI
- > and rejoined each
- > section. The file is ~180MB. Would you like this one
- > or would you prefer
- > I decrease the size by limiting the resolution? I
- > can get the file size
- > down to ~80MB with a smaller screen size and less
- > resolution? Both will
- > exceed the allowable size for attachment on this
- > site.
- >
- > -----Original Message-----

> From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate
> Documentary 1-7
> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 17:02:27 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> The reason why you entertain it is because African > people have not > accumulated the resources to conduct one's own
> research teams. As Diop
> has advocated, we are in dire need of research teams
> and as of now the > European people have the resources to conduct > research thoroughly. Not > only that, they have the media vehicles to > disseminate their findings
> with any interpretation they feel is valid.
>
> So our own educational vehicle will also have to > consist of an > economic base that can support primary research > teams. Other wise you > will still have to rely on European people to supply
> you with the > information: you'll just be interpreting their > findings (which is the > case now).
>
> We entertain it because, unfortunately, until we > have our own National > Geographics, History Channels, BBC's, International
> Newspapers, etc.,
> these people have a virtual monopoly on what is > being presented to the > masses. And by the time you have accumulated the > resources, so much > damage would have been done if left unchecked. It is > not the most > ideal way of dealing with it, but what can you do > outside of not > having what they have?
>
> It will take years to get where they are at and in
> the mean time, you > have to curb as much as possible with constantly > challenging illogical

> assumptions until we get what they have and we can > compete with vigor
> in the world of ideas.
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle
> wrote:
>>
>>
>> My question is why do we even entertain the notion
> of Eurocentric
>> history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African > origins of western >> civilization, then why should we care? They do so
> at their own
>> intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the > world was flat
> when
>> thousands of years ago our African ancestors > plotted the paths of the
>> stars.
>> We need an entirely separate education system for > African people.
>>
>> Totally agree!
>>
>> meninarmer
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: elliottandelliottmtg
>
>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate
> Documentary 1-7
>> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 07:21:14 -0000
>> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>>
>> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed
> the fact, that
> despite

> > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African > origins of western > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest
> in maintaining the > > intellectual status quo.
> >
> > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said
> that the ancient > > Egyptians looked like her and that they only > painted themselves black
> > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious
> given the fact that > > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that > the table of > > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts
> the ancient
> > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
> >
> > My question is why do we even entertain the notion
> of Eurocentric
> > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African > origins of western > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so
> at their own
> > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the > world was flat
> when
> > thousands of years ago our African ancestors
> plotted the paths of the > > stars.
> >
> > We need an entirely separate education system for > African people.
> > We instinctively look at the world different and
> trying to reconcile > > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and > philosophies is a > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern > factual data available
> > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of
> our ancestors to > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to > regain our rightful
> > place among the members of humanity.
> >
> > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
>
> > wrote:
> > >
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23650|2007-11-09 14:28:18|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

All of the reasons you cited, Asar, is precisely why engaging in a debate, concerning African history, with Eurocentrics, is a waste of time.

Are Eurocentrics going to use their resources to thoroughly and honestly explore African history? What a joke! As Dr. Jefferies said in the video, " we must go further then Bernal because he wont go far enough".

And, even in the face of historical or archaeological evidence and adamant opposition, they still refuse to acknowledge the African origins of western civilization. Despite numerous artifacts that clearly portray the ancient Egyptians as black Africans, those enslaved by a Eurocentric mind state, will never accept it as the truth. It is a waste of time.

You pretty much proved my point, that we need a completely separate education system. Whenever you watch Egyptian historical programming, on any of the channels you cited, is it presented from an African perspective? Are the people being portrayed African in appearance? Honestly, do you leave with a sense of pride or are you angered by the attacks against the African biological origin of the ancient Egyptians?

It sounds weak and effeminate to say we have to engage with the Eurocentrics because we don't have another way to express our historical truths. So we must continue to try to convince them of our historical worthiness. Garbage! It is akin to the story of Sisyphus who was condemned to roll a stone up a steep hill for eternity and the stone fell upon him every time he thought he was making progress. It like going to grade school to learn nuclear mechanics, a waste of time.

A far better use of vigor, time and resources would be a grassroots re-education campaign targeting those interested in African history within the African American community.

I think what really is at play, by some, is their longing for acceptance from their oppressors.

Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
wrote:

>

> The reason why you entertain it is because African people have not > accumulated the resources to conduct one's own research teams. As > has advocated, we are in dire need of research teams and as of now

Diop

the > European people have the resources to conduct research thoroughly.

Not > only that, they have the media vehicles to disseminate their findings

> with any interpretation they feel is valid.

>

> So our own educational vehicle will also have to consist of an > economic base that can support primary research teams. Other wise

you > will still have to rely on European people to supply you with the > information: you'll just be interpreting their findings (which is

the > case now).

>

> We entertain it because, unfortunately, until we have our own

National

> Geographics, History Channels, BBC's, International Newspapers, etc.,

> these people have a virtual monopoly on what is being presented to

the > masses. And by the time you have accumulated the resources, so much > damage would have been done if left unchecked. It is not the most > ideal way of dealing with it, but what can you do outside of not > having what they have?

>

> It will take years to get where they are at and in the mean time,

you > have to curb as much as possible with constantly challenging illogical

> assumptions until we get what they have and we can compete with vigor

> in the world of ideas.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>

>>

>> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of

Eurocentric

>> history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of

western

> > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat when > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths

of the

> > stars.

> > We need an entirely separate education system for African

people.

> >

> > Totally agree!

> >

> > meninarmer

> >

> >

> > -----Original Message-----

> > From: elliottandelliottmtg

> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

> > Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 07:21:14 -0000

> > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

> >

> > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that

despite

> > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of

western > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining

the

> > intellectual status quo.

> >

> > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the

ancient

> > Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves

black

> > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact

that

> > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
> > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient > > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
> >
> > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of

Eurocentric

> > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of

western

> > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat when

> > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths

of the

> > stars.

> >

> > We need an entirely separte education system for African

people.

> > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to

reconcile

> > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies

is a > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data

available

> > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors

to > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful

> > place among the members of humanity.

> >

> > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

> > wrote:

> > >

>

| 23651|2007-11-09 14:28:18|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

And I agree with you. We need to separate the sheeps from the goats. We need to rise above eurocentric paradigms and regain our position as intellectual inovators and pacesetters.

If Herodotus, would have told one of our ancestors, that Greece had no African influence, they would have either laughed in his face or checked his head for a fever.

Jason(slave) Issaias(free)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>
> I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as
it > goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black intellectual > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But
it > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no mistake
> it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > world".
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
> wrote:
> >
> > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
> despite > > ample evidnce provided by Bernal of the African origins of western > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaning
the
> > intellectual status quo.
> >
> > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the
ancient > > Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves

> black > > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact
> that
> > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
> > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient > > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
> >
> >
> > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric
> > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of > western
> > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
> when > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths
of
> the > > stars.
> >
> >
> > We need an entirely seperate education system for African
people.
> > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
> reconcile
> > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies
is a > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
> available
> > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
to > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful
> > place among the members of humanity.
> >
> >
> > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > Peace Ta-Seti
> > >
> > > On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken

> up
>>> into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it >>> interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't > seen >>> it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started
from
> those
>>> debates.
>>>
>>> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
>>>
>>> Asar Imhotep
>>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>>
>>
>

| 23652|2007-11-09 14:28:20|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
The need of an Afrocentric curriculum for African-American students is why I am in favor of school vouchers. Who can deny the fact that the American school system had completely failed the African American community? If you look at the statistics, students attending Afrocentric schools have a far greater graduation rate then the African American community at large. Why is that? It is because of the rejection of the BS taught to our students which does not give them a historical context for the need of continuing the legacy of intellectual achievement and excellence. That is why some see learning as a pursuit of whiteness because what is being taught is an endorsement and affirmation of white supremacy.

Every person is created with a purpose and has something to offer the world. An Afrocentric education will allow our students to develop the intellectual and spiritual foundation to become who God created them to be.

Therefore, if Eurocentrics want to deny African history, after spending tens of thousands of dollars for an education, then it is their financial and intellectual loss.

Jason(slave) Issaias(Free)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare

> said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as

> it

> goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black

> intellectual > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But

> it > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no

> mistake

> it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > world".

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

> >

> > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that

> > despite

> > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of

> > western > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining

> > the

> > intellectual status quo.

> >

> > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the

> > ancient

> > Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves

> > black

> > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact

> > that

> > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of

> > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient

> > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

> >

> >

> > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of

> > Eurocentric

> > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of

> > western

> > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat

> when > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths
of
> the > > stars.
> >
> >
> > We need an entirely seperate education system for African
people.
> > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
> reconcile
> > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies
is a > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
> available
> > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
to > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful
> > place among the members of humanity.
> >
> >
> > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > Peace Ta-Seti
> > >
> > > On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken
> up
> > > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > > > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't
> seen > > > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started
from
> those
> > > debates.
> > >
> > > http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
> > >
> > > Asar Imhotep

> > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

> > >

> >

>

| 23653|2007-11-09 14:54:58|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
Mahari

Why would you utilize an open source platform such as Google when you could perhaps cooperate with one of the organizations Dr. Winters has mentioned (Association for the Study of Classical African Civilizations) using their server and a shared document application such as Groove? <http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/groove/default.aspx>

Regarding your statement about ego, is this about individual intellectual property? Is it more effective to prioritize tasks in a group setting where several or more researchers collaborate and share credit?

Regards,

meninarmner

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 20:17:13 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to access it to add to it or make edits, etc.

We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like. Could we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable information and data even have it reviewed by those of us qualified (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps. The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if combined could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley.
>From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a clear cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-nan in ancient times - as well as India.

The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would be to decide whether the goal is more important than our egos.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as
it

> goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black intellectual > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But

it > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no mistake

> it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > world".

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

>>

>> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
> despite

>> ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of
western >> civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining

the

>> intellectual status quo.

>>

>> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the
ancient

>> Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves
> black

>> as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact
> that

>> Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
>> nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient

>> Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

>>

>>

>> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric

> > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of > western > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
> when > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of
> the
> > stars.
> >
> >
> > We need an entirely separte education system for African people.
> > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
> reconcile
> > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is
a > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
> available
> > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
to > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful > > place among the members of humanity.
> >
> >
> > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > Peace Ta-Seti
> > >
> > > On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is broken
> up
> > > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > > > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't > seen > > > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from
> those
> > > debates.
> > >
> > > http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
> > >
> > > Asar Imhotep
> > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> > >

> >

>

| 23654|2007-11-09 14:56:46|Asar Imhotep|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
Peace Elliot

I think you are taking my words out of context. I will try to reiterate my position. As of now we do not collectively have within the research community the funds to support 6 month to a year excavations and the like on the continent. We do not have our own equivalent to a National Geographic publication or channel.

What we are essentially dealing with here is the dissemination of this information to our youth (of African descent) CURRENTLY in the school systems of America. Do we just abandon the mission until we gather the necessary resources to present our history in the manner Europeans do theirs and hope they'll be on board when we get our stuff together?

What I am positing is a simultaneous parallel movement of those continuing the work in the field, regardless if the masses of European scholars agree with the findings, and those who can focus on funding and organization for our own research teams and media outlets. Not all European scholarship is bad. Any conversation with Dr. John Henrike Clark will illuminate why. As of right now, regardless, you are interpreting their work. There are very few, if any, Black research teams. The overwhelming data we have on our history comes from them. We have great African scholars on the continent doing the work, but unless you speak French, it's not accessible to the layman.

People who do primary research don't have time to worry about video equipment, soundtracks, television slots and the like. We want them focused on the work. It is up to the secondary researcher to interpret the data and find unique ways to present it to the public.

At the same time you could have "conscious" individuals who are very business savvy who could over see investment opportunities who in the long run can fund projects that we seek.

I am not against our own educational system. However, you have to keep in mind the time table involved in making that idea come to fruition and what must happen with the youth and layman in the mean time. America is a VERY large place and to organize that type of project on a mass scale will take time.

So I am not in any way trying to convince European people to accept our positions on historical events. I am saying let's utilize the resources at our disposal until we develop our own. The Japanese did it after the defeat of their samurai in the 1800's and after world wars II. They sent their youth to learn the best of what could be learned in Europe and at the same time was taking the information & inventions, improving upon it, and building their own institutions in the process. They didn't stop what they were doing until they got their stuff together.

We don't have to reinvent the wheel. Japanese people, in my opinion, have shown us what could be done by being in their system while simultaneously building ours.

elliottandelliottmtg wrote:

All of the reasons you cited, Asar, is precisely why engaging in a debate, concerning African history, with Eurocentrics, is a waste of time.

Are Eurocentrics going to use their resources to thoroughly and honestly explore African history? What a joke! As Dr. Jefferies said in the video, " we must go further then Bernal because he wont go far enough".

And, even in the face of historical or archaeological evidence and adamant opposition, they still refuse to acknowledge the African origins of western civilization. Despite numerous artifacts that clearly portray the ancient Egyptians as black Africans, those enslaved by a Eurocentric mind state, will never accept it as the truth. It is a waste of time.

You pretty much proved my point, that we need a completely separate education system. Whenever you watch Egyptian historical programming, on any of the channels you cited, is it presented from an African perspective? Are the people being portrayed African in appearance? Honestly, do you leave with a sense of pride or are you angered by the attacks against the African biological origin of the ancient Egyptians?

It sounds weak and effeminate to say we have to engage with the Eurocentrics because we don't have another way to express our historical truths. So we must continue to try to convince them of our historical worthiness. Garbage! It is akin to the story of Sisyphus who was condemned to roll a stone up a steep hill for eternity and the stone fell upon him every time he thought he was making progress. It like going to grade school to learn nuclear mechanics, a waste of time.

A far better use of vigor, time and resources would be a grassroots re-education campaign targeting those interested in African history within the African American community.

I think what really is at play, by some, is their longing for acceptance from their oppressors.

Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23655|2007-11-09 15:02:33|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

Even better, the latest Groove requires no central server. Files may be synced and updated from computer to computer.

<http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/groove/HA101650231033.aspx>

When I last used it 3-4 years ago, it enabled a 40 member team to collaborate on developing a document very well. At that time, it cost about $40/computer. However, it required a server where this version does not. So, you have privacy, file sharing, with live update of modifications.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 20:17:13 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to access it to add to it or make edits, etc.

We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like. Could we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable information and data even have it reviewed by those of us qualified (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps. The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if combined could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley.

>From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a clear

cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-nan in ancient times - as well as India.

The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would be to decide whether the goal is more important than our egos.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as
it

> goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black intellectual > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But

it > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no mistake

> it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > world".

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

>>

>> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
> despite

>> ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of
western >> civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining

the

>> intellectual status quo.

>>

>> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the
ancient

>> Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves
> black

>> as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact
> that

>> Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
>> nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient

>> Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

>>

> >
> > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric > > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of > western > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
> when > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of
> the
> > stars.
> >
> >
> > We need an entirely separte education system for African people.
> > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
> reconcile
> > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is
> a > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
> available
> > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
> to > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful > > place among the members of humanity.
> >
> >
> > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > Peace Ta-Seti
> > >
> > > On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is > broken
> up
> > > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > > > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't > seen > > > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from
> those
> > > debates.
> > >
> > > http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
> > >
> > > Asar Imhotep
> > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

> > >

> >

>

| 23656|2007-11-09 15:03:14|asar_imhotep|Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|
Peace Ta-Seti

In keeping with the previous post showing documentaries, I also posted another documentary titled "Origin of the Sphinx" and it too is broken up into different post (3 this time). Maybe we can get this one copied as well and uploaded to Google.

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13099

It's hosted by "Moses" too. But I think you will be pleased in the direction it is going.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23657|2007-11-09 15:06:13|asar_imhotep|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

I am currently working on updating my website and I am calling it MOCHA-Versity. This is the type of thing I want to include. The documents and essays will be put into a MySQL Database. It will be fully searchable and I think will be a great asset to the central location of information.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Even better, the latest Groove requires no central server. Files may be > synced and updated from computer to computer.

> <http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/groove/HA101650231033.aspx>

> When I last used it 3-4 years ago, it enabled a 40 member team to > collaborate on developing a document very well. At that time, it cost > about $40/computer. However, it required a server where this version > does not. So, you have privacy, file sharing, with live update of > modifications.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7
> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 20:17:13 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought > about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to > its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to > access it to add to it or make edits, etc.
> We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like. Could > we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable > information and data □ even have it reviewed by those of us qualified > (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of > privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps.
> The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if combined > could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the > relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley.
> > From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a clear > cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-
> nan in ancient times - as well as India.
> The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would to decide whether > the goal is more important than our egos.
> HTP,
> Mahari
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>
> > I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare > > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as
> > it > > goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black > > intellectual > > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But
> > it
> > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no > > mistake
> > it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > > world".
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
> > > despite > > > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of

> western >>> civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining
> the >>> intellectual status quo.
>>>
>>> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the
> ancient >>> Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves
>> black
>>> as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact
>> that
>>> Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
>>> nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient >>> Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
>>>
>>>
>>> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric >>> history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of >> western >>> civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own >>> intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
>> when >>> thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of
>> the
>>> stars.
>>>
>>>
>>> We need an entirely separate education system for African people.
>>> We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
>> reconcile
>>> our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is
> a >>> waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
>> available
>>> and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
> to >>> forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful >>> place among the members of humanity.
>>>
>>>
>>> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Peace Ta-Seti

>>>>
>>>> On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is > broken
>> up
>>>> into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it >>>> interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't >> seen >>>> it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from
>> those
>>>> debates.
>>>>
>>>> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
>>>>
>>>> Asar Imhotep
>>>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>>>
>>>
>>
>

| 23658|2007-11-09 15:19:57|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|
While doing some research I was reminded that one of the first Kemetic per-aa's who ruled - during what is called Dynasty 0 - the period of the Scorpion king, was King Ka.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>
> Hi
> Thanks for the information. Hopefully, as time permits
> you may be able to discover the spiritual significance
> of these words since, Ka, Ma and Ta often have > homophonic meanings in many African languages which > relate to the divine.

>
> Clyde

>
> --- asar_imhotep wrote:

>
>> This is good information. I would like to also point >> out the that >> according to the Tervuren's
>>
>> <http://www.cbold.ddl.ish-lyon.cnrs.fr/Docs/Tervuren.html>>
>> database of
>> Bantu Lexical Reconstructions (BLR2)
>>

```

> <http://www.cbold.ddl.ish-lyon.cnrs.fr/CGI/jgspltscrn.cgi?
simplifiedbq=blr2\
> > .txt> the Proto-Bantu word for "soil, earth, dirt,
> > mud, marsh, be warm
> > was "Taka." Here are the search results:
> >
> >
> > Search ResultsWordtaka
> > LIMIT100
> > ORDERID
> > ActionSearch!
> > DBname../Data/blr2.txt
> > FormatHTML (easy to read)
> > Sorted by ID (column 1)
> >
>
IDCorr_SetWordNoun_ClassEnglishFrenchC1V11T11V12T12C2V21T21V22T22C3V3T
3C\ > > 4V4T4DistributionReliability27401649taka5,(9)soil,
> > earthsol, terretaL
> >
> > kaL
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > D J N P S3 4020trv 425taka3genitals; nudityparties
> > sexuelles; nuditeta
> >
> >
> > ka
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > C L5 4022trv 427taka3tree: Olacaceae: Strombosiopsis
> > tetrandraarbre:
> > Olacaceae: Strombosiopsis tetrandrataL
> >

```

> > kaL
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > C5 4066trv 471puutakani
> > rumplefroisser, chiffonnerpuLu
> > ta
> >
> >
> > ka
> > ni
> > H L5 6347trv 2737takadad
> > honourhonoretaH
> >
> > ka
> >
> >
> > da > > d
> >
> > L M5 9199trv 5589paatakan
> > be flatetre platpa
> > a > > ta
> >
> >
> > ka > > n
> >
> > H L5 9611trv 6000taka9mud, marshboue, maraistaL
> >
> > kaL
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > E H R S5 9612trv 6001taka9dirtsaleteta
> >
> >

> > ka
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > G M5 9613trv 6002takat
> > be warmetre chaudtaL
> >
> > ka
> >
> >
> > t
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > J5
> >
> > 9 matches.
> >
> >
> > I think is strong evidence for a central cultural > > complex that spread > > out over time along the central, northeast and > > western regions of > > Africa.
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta.Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters > > wrote:
> > >
> > > Ferg congrats. You have written a very interesting > > > discussion of the term: Kmt. It is important > > because > > > it supports Asar's frequent discussion of the > > > deepness
> > > of the Egyptian language and its spiritual > > foundations

>>>
 >>> It is interesting that while you supported your >>> interpretation of Kmt, based on Bantu analogies,
 >> these
 >>> terms also find agreement in Dravidian and Malinke >>> Bambara languages. For example, in Dravidian and >>> Malinke, the suffix ?ta/da means "place".
 >>> Malinke
 >>> Ta, `fire, place,
 >>> Ta, ownership
 >>> Ta, sacred object'
 >>>
 >>> Dravidian
 >>> Kam, house
 >>> Itam / etam, place, room
 >>> Gibu, house
 >>> Kuti, house, abode, home
 >>> Cecca, house of leaves
 >>> Nakar , house abode
 >>> nagaru, house abode
 >>>
 >>> In Malinke-Bambara, we find that charcoal is >> `Kami
 >>> and Kambi". This corresponds to Dravidian (Tamil)
 >>> "Kammi and Kammu' dark and Tamil "kari"
 >> `charcoal.
 >>>
 >>> In Malinke we have `ga' or `fireplace, hearth,
 >> fire
 >>> and etc'. The term "ka", land, suffix of >> possession,
 >>> hot.
 >>>
 >>> This corresponds to Dravidian "ka" `black',
 >> "kay" `to >>> grow hot, burn and be warm' and Tamil "Car" >> `shelter'
 >>> and "Culli" `furnace, fireplace'. We also find
 >> that
 >>> the Dravidian and Malinke languages share similar >>> terms for fire ti and ta respectively.
 >>>
 >>> In Dravidian and Malinke the term Ma, is often >>> associated with greatness, master and lord for >> example
 >>>

> > > Malinke
> > > Mansa , King
> > > Ma, ruler, master, lord,
> > > Ma, original inhabitants of Wets Africa;
> > > Ma, great, good repute and etc.
> > >
> > > Dravidian
> > > Ma, great, black
> > > Mal, `great man'
> > > Mannan, King, lord
> > > Makinan, chief, lord
> > > Man, earth, world, soil, land
> > > Given these means in Malinke we would read the > > > following:
> > >
> >
> === message truncated ===
>
>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>
| 23659|2007-11-09 15:23:48|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
Much respect Asar

I encourage the research you do and am not attempting to discourage it in any way.

When you say, we don't have this or that, are you really saying; We aren't structured in a way to make these things happen?

What I mean is, today's blacks (African & American) have wealth and will devote that wealth to various activities which have established structure and well defined goals.

An example is, Oprah Winfried's school for girls in South Africa. At some time, someone with a plan approached Oprah and pitched her with a detailed proposal with well defined goals and convinced Oprah to donate $40 million to put the plan in motion. Since Oprah is starting fresh, has any African historian worked with Oprah's group to model a fresh African based history course to this school? It is an fantastic opportunity that a structured group would recognize.

While it is possible for individual researchers working on independent projects to accomplish the same, my feelings are, it is not as powerful as a structured organizational plan. To the sponsor, an individual effort presents greater risk with less payback making it more difficult to secure significant or long-term funding.

As you stated, all European concepts are not faulty, so my question really depends on what your end goals are. To begin something new, or to work to inject a different element into the established status quo. In an organization, this would be one of the defined group goals as defined in the Mission Statement.

Regards,

meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Asar Imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 9 Nov 2007 14:56:45 -0800 (PST)

Peace Elliot

I think you are taking my words out of context. I will try to reiterate my position. As of now we do not collectively have within the research community the funds to support 6 month to a year excavations and the like on the continent. We do not have our own equivalent to a National Geographic publication or channel.

What we are essentially dealing with here is the dissemination of this information to our youth (of African descent) CURRENTLY in the school systems of America. Do we just abandon the mission until we gather the necessary resources to present our history in the manner Europeans do theirs and hope they'll be on board when we get our stuff together?

What I am positing is a simultaneous parallel movement of those continuing the work in the field, regardless if the masses of European scholars agree with the findings, and those who can focus on funding and organization for our own research teams and media outlets. Not all European scholarship is bad. Any conversation with Dr. John Henrike Clark will illuminate why. As of right now, regardless, you are interpreting their work. There are very few, if any, Black research teams. The overwhelming data we have on our history comes from them. We have great African scholars on the continent doing the work, but unless you speak French, it's not accessible to the layman.

People who do primary research don't have time to worry about video equipment, soundtracks, television slots and the like. We want them focused on the work. It is up to the secondary researcher to interpret the data and find unique ways to present it to the public.

At the same time you could have "conscious" individuals who are very business savvy who could over see investment opportunities who in the long run can fund projects that we seek.

I am not against our own educational system. However, you have to keep in mind the time table involved in making that idea come to fruition and what must happen with the youth and layman in the mean time. America is a VERY large place and to organize that type of project on a mass scale will take time.

So I am not in any way trying to convince European people to accept our positions on historical events. I am saying let's utilize the resources at our disposal until we develop our own. The Japanese did it after the defeat of their samurai in the 1800's and after world wars II. They sent their youth to learn the best of what could be learned in Europe and at the same time was taking the information & inventions, improving upon it, and building their own institutions in the process. They didn't stop what they were doing until they got their stuff together.

We don't have to reinvent the wheel. Japanese people, in my opinion, have shown us what could be done by being in their system while simultaneously building ours.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

elliottandelliottmtg <elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com> wrote:

All of the reasons you cited, Asar, is precisely why engaging in a debate, concerning African history, with Eurocentrics, is a waste of time.

Are Eurocentrics going to use their resources to thoroughly and honestly explore African history? What a joke! As Dr. Jefferies said in the video, " we must go further then Bernal because he wont go far enough".

And, even in the face of historical or archaeological evidence and adamant opposition, they still refuse to acknowledge the African origins of western civilization. Despite numerous artifacts that clearly portray the ancient Egyptians as black Africans, those enslaved by a Eurocentric mind state, will never accept it as the truth. It is a waste of time.

You pretty much proved my point, that we need a completely separate education system. Whenever you watch Egyptian historical programming, on any of the channels you cited, is it presented from an African perspective? Are the people being portrayed African in appearance? Honestly, do you leave with a sense of pride or are you angered by the attacks against the African biological origin of the ancient Egyptians?

It sounds weak and effeminate to say we have to engage with the Eurocentrics because we don't have another way to express our historical truths. So we must continue to try to convince them of our historical worthiness. Garbage! It is akin to the story of Sisyphus who was condemned to roll a stone up a steep hill for eternity and the stone fell upon him every time he thought he was making progress. It like going to grade school to learn nuclear mechanics, a waste of time.

A far better use of vigor, time and resources would be a grassroots re-education campaign targeting those interested in African history

within the African American community.

I think what really is at play, by some, is their longing for acceptance from their oppressors.

Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23660|2007-11-09 15:33:43|kungfuhustle|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|
Asar

I uploaded the BA debate to Google video.

The file name is, The Black Athena Debate - All.wmv

After uploading I realized I should have renamed the file, B.A.D. -

Vol1, since it's release is prior to the release of B.A. Vol2.

Anyway, it's there.

meninarmarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 23:03:13 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Peace Ta-Seti

In keeping with the previous post showing documentaries, I also posted another documentary titled "Origin of the Sphinx" and it too is broken up into different post (3 this time). Maybe we can get this one copied as well and uploaded to Google.

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13099

It's hosted by "Moses" too. But I think you will be pleased in the direction it is going.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23661|2007-11-09 15:39:31|Asar Imhotep|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|
Thanks again

I tried doing a search but it is not showing up in the search engine just yet. So you may need to provide the direct link.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

kungfuhustle wrote:

Asar

I uploaded the BA debate to Google video.

The file name is, The Black Athena Debate - All.wmv

After uploading I realized I should have renamed the file, B.A.D. -

Vol1, since it's release is prior to the release of B.A. Vol2.

Anyway, it's there.

meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 23:03:13 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Peace Ta-Seti

In keeping with the previous post showing documentaries, I also posted another documentary titled "Origin of the Sphinx" and it too is broken up into different post (3 this time). Maybe we can get this one copied as well and uploaded to Google.

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13099

It's hosted by "Moses" too. But I think you will be pleased in the direction it is going.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23662|2007-11-09 15:43:55|Asar Imhotep|Afrocentricity and the Black Athena debate website|
Has anyone seen this website before? What is your take if you have?

<http://www.shikanda.net/afrocentrism/index.htm>

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23663|2007-11-09 15:53:28|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Afrocentricity and the Black Athena debate website|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

>

> Has anyone seen this website before? What is your take if you have?

>

>

> <http://www.shikanda.net/afrocentrism/index.htm>

>

Yes, Wim M.J. van Binsbergen was involved in some internet discussions on this subject over the years.

He also recently critiqued some of Stephen Oppenheimer's work during a recent conference.

On the site there is an interesting article on Ifa, Sikidy and other forms of African divination and the mancala board game.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23664|2007-11-09 15:55:58|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> Peace Ta-Seti
>
> In keeping with the previous post showing documentaries, I also posted > another documentary titled "Origin of the Sphinx" and it too is broken > up into different post (3 this time). Maybe we can get this one copied > as well and uploaded to Google.
>
> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13099
>
> It's hosted by "Moses" too. But I think you will be pleased in the > direction it is going.
>

Runoko Rashidi has a lot of videos on YouTube. I haven't seen any yet from our own Clyde Winters but there are a few from Manu Ampim:

http://youtube.com/results?search\_query=%22manu+ampim%22&search=Search

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23665|2007-11-09 16:00:34|kungfuhustle|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|
OK, I just logged onto Google to check the file.

Here's the deal;

1. They changed the file name and added underscores, so the file name is now,
The_Black_Athena_Debate_-_All.wmv.
2. Google pre-screens all uploaded video to ensure they are not porn.
They say it takes about 3-4 hours before the video will show up in a search.
3. Unlike YouTube, Googley haven't provided a direct url link. Will wait to after approval to see if one is available then.

It's there but it takes time for Google to OK it for release. Following that, it should show up in a search.

Hotep

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Asar Imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips

Date: Fri, 9 Nov 2007 15:39:24 -0800 (PST)

Thanks again

I tried doing a search but it is not showing up in the search engine just yet. So you may need to provide the direct link.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

kungfuhustle wrote:

Asar

I uploaded the BA debate to Google video.

The file name is, The Black Athena Debate - All.wmv

After uploading I realized I should have renamed the file, B.A.D. -

Vol1, since it's release is prior to the release of B.A. Vol2.

Anyway, it's there.

meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 23:03:13 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Peace Ta-Seti

In keeping with the previous post showing documentaries, I also posted another documentary titled "Origin of the Sphinx" and it too is broken up into different post (3 this time). Maybe we can get this one copied as well and uploaded to Google.

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13099

It's hosted by "Moses" too. But I think you will be pleased in the direction it is going.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23666|2007-11-09 16:05:10|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

You have a very rich site. I see you must put in 6-8 hours/day there.

Very nice.

M

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 23:06:12 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

I am currently working on updating my website and I am calling it MOCHA-Versity. This is the type of thing I want to include. The documents and essays will be put into a MySQL Database. It will be fully searchable and I think will be a great asset to the central location of information.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Even better, the latest Groove requires no central server. Files may be > synced and updated from computer to computer.

> <http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/groove/HA101650231033.aspx>

> When I last used it 3-4 years ago, it enabled a 40 member team to > collaborate on developing a document very well. At that time, it cost > about $40/computer. However, it required a server where this version > does not. So, you have privacy, file sharing, with live update of > modifications.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 20:17:13 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought > about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to > its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to > access it to add to it or make edits, etc.

> We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like. Could

> we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable > information and data • even have it reviewed by those of us

qualified

> (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of > privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps.

> The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if combined

> could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the > relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley.

> > From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a clear

> cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-

> nan in ancient times - as well as India.

> The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would to decide whether > the goal is more important than our egos.

> HTP,

> Mahari

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare

> > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as

> it

> > goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black

> intellectual > > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But

> it > > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no

> mistake

> > it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > > world".

> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
> > despite
> > > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of
> > western > > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining
> > the
> > > intellectual status quo.
> > >
> > > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the
> > ancient > > > Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves
> > black
> > > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact
> > that
> > > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
> > > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient > > > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
> > >
> > >
> > > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric
> > > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of > > western > > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
> > when > > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of
> > the
> > > stars.
> > >
> > >
> > > We need an entirely separate education system for African people.
> > > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
> > reconcile
> > > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is
> > a > > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
> > available
> > > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
> > to

>>> forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful >>> place among the members of humanity.
>>>
>>>
>>> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Peace Ta-Seti
>>>>
>>>> On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is > broken
> up
>>>> into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it >>>> interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't >> seen >>>> it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from
>> those
>>>> debates.
>>>>
>>>> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
>>>>
>>>> Asar Imhotep
>>>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>>>
>>>
>>
>

| 23667|2007-11-09 16:12:30|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

I admit my ignorance about the possibilities with the other black organizations Dr. Winters mentioned. Certainly, if there could be such an arrangement there that would be even better. And as for individual or group credit and participation that is a decision that must be made by the participants.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Mahari
>
> Why would you utilize an open source platform such as Google when
you > could perhaps cooperate with one of the organizations Dr. Winters
has > mentioned (Association for the Study of Classical African > Civilizations) using their server and a shared document application such > as Groove? <http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/groove/default.aspx>

>

> Regarding your statement about ego, is this about individual > intellectual property? Is it more effective to prioritize tasks in a > group setting where several or more researchers collaborate and share > credit?

>

> Regards,

>

> meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 20:17:13 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought > about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to > its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to > access it to add to it or make edits, etc.

> We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like. Could

> we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable

> information and data □ even have it reviewed by those of us

> qualified

> (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of > privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps.

> The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if > combined

> could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the > relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley.

> >From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a > clear

> cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-

> nan in ancient times - as well as India.

> The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would to decide whether > the goal is more important than our egos.

> HTP,

> Mahari

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare

> > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even

> as

> it

> > goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black

> intellectual > > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But

> it > > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no

> mistake

> > it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > > world".

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that

> > > despite

> > > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of

> > > western > > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining

> > > the

> > > intellectual status quo.

> > >

> > > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the

> > > ancient

> > > Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves

> > > black

> > > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact

> > > that

> > > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of

> > > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient

> > > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

> > >

> > >

> > > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of

> Eurocentric

> > > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of

> > > western

> > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat

> > when > > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of
> > the
> > > stars.
> > >
> > >
> > > We need an entirely separate education system for African people.
> > > We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
> > reconcile
> > > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is
> a > > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
> > available
> > > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
> to > > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful > > > place among the members of humanity.
> > >
> > >
> > > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
> > >
> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > > Peace Ta-Seti
> > > >
> > > > On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is > broken
> > up
> > > > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > > > > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't > > seen > > > > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from
> > those
> > > > debates.
> > > >

> > > http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100

> > >

> > > Asar Imhotep

> > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

> > >

> > >

> >

>

| 23668|2007-11-09 16:19:20|Asar Imhotep|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

I appreciate it. I haven't been updating as of late because I'm working on two other sites (Houston Ministry of Culture & My personal Site). But the MOCHA-Versity site should be up by Mid December. The design is pretty much done, I am just trying to finalize how I want the site organized (how to section it off).

I want to break it down into People of the Discipline, Pre "History", Genetics, Linguistics, Pre-Colonial, TransAtlantic Slave Period, Civil Rights, Black Inventors, Africana Philosophy, Spirituality, Science, etc.

It will allow for the inclusion of keywords when posting the information for easier searches. And I am trying to see if there is a way to include an image database. So it will take some work and I'll be looking for volunteers when done to add creditable material once organized.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

kungfuhustle wrote:

You have a very rich site. I see you must put in 6-8 hours/day there.
Very nice.

M

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 23:06:12 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

I am currently working on updating my website and I am calling it MOCHA-Versity. This is the type of thing I want to include. The documents and essays will be put into a MySQL Database. It will be fully searchable and I think will be a great asset to the central location of information.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Even better, the latest Groove requires no central server. Files may be > synced and updated from computer to computer.

> <http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/groove/HA101650231033.aspx>

> When I last used it 3-4 years ago, it enabled a 40 member team to > collaborate on developing a document very well. At that time, it cost > about $40/computer. However, it required a server where this version > does not. So, you have privacy, file sharing, with live update of > modifications.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 20:17:13 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought > about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to > its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to > access it to add to it or make edits, etc.

> We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like. Could

> we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable > information and data " even have it reviewed by those of us

qualified

> (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of > privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps.

> The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if combined

> could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the > relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley.

> >From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a clear

> cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-

> nan in ancient times - as well as India.

> The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would be to decide whether > the goal is more important than our egos.

> HTP,

> Mahari
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
> >
> > I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare > > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as
> > it > > goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black > > intellectual > > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But
> > it
> > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no > > mistake
> > it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > > world".
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottm tg"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
> > > despite
> > > ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of
> > > western > > > civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining
> > > the
> > > intellectual status quo.
> > >
> > > I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the
> > > ancient > > > Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves
> > > black
> > > as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact
> > > that
> > > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
> > > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient > > > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
> > >
> > >
> > > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric
> > > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of > > > western > > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
> > > when

>>> thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of
>> the
>>> stars.
>>>
>>>
>>> We need an entirely separate education system for African people.
>>> We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
>> reconcile
>>> our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is
> a >>> waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
>> available
>>> and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
> to >>> forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful >>> place among the members of humanity.
>>>
>>>
>>> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Peace Ta-Seti
>>>>
>>>> On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is > broken
>> up
>>>> into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it >>>> interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't >> seen >>>> it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from
>> those
>>>> debates.
>>>>
>>>> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
>>>>
>>>> Asar Imhotep
>>>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>>>
>>>
>>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23669|2007-11-09 16:20:07|clyde winters|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

wrote:

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

> wrote:

> >

> > Peace Ta-Seti

> >

> > In keeping with the previous post showing > documentaries, I also posted > > another documentary titled "Origin of the Sphinx"

> and it too is broken > > up into different post (3 this time). Maybe we can > get this one copied

> > as well and uploaded to Google.

> >

> >

>

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13099

> >

> > It's hosted by "Moses" too. But I think you will > be pleased in the > > direction it is going.

> >

>

>

> Runoko Rashidi has a lot of videos on YouTube. I > haven't seen any yet

> from our own Clyde Winters but there are a few from

> Manu Ampim:

>

>

http://youtube.com/results?search\_query=%22manu+ampim%22&search=Search

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

hi Paul

you're right. Presently I am thinking about changing some of my powerpoint presentations into movies and placing them on the internet.

clyde

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23670|2007-11-09 16:27:06|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

>>Japanese people, in my opinion, have shown us what could be done by being in their system while simultaneously building ours. <<

Asar,

You make good points. And I don't think anything is impossible for us if we unite and focus committedly our efforts. By with regard to the Japanese there is the HUGE advantage of their having their own country and their own culture intact even though their country was in tatters. The importance of culture and ritual cannot be over-estimated. That is why "they" ripped ours from us.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

>

> Peace Elliot

>

> I think you are taking my words out of context. I will try to reiterate my position. As of now we do not collectively have within the research community the funds to support 6 month to a year excavations and the like on the continent. We do not have our own equivalent to a National Geographic publication or channel.

>

> What we are essentially dealing with here is the dissemination of this information to our youth (of African descent) CURRENTLY in the school systems of America. Do we just abandon the mission until we gather the necessary resources to present our history in the manner Europeans do theirs and hope they'll be on board when we get our stuff together?

>

> What I am positing is a simultaneous parallel movement of those continuing the work in the field, regardless if the masses of European scholars agree with the findings, and those who can focus on funding and organization for our own research teams and media outlets. Not all European scholarship is bad. Any conversation with Dr. John Henrike Clark will illuminate why. As of right now, regardless, you are interpreting their work. There are very few, if any, Black research teams. The overwhelming data we have on our history comes from them. We have great African scholars on the continent doing the work, but unless you speak French, it's not accessible to the layman.

>

> People who do primary research don't have time to worry about video equipment, soundtracks, television slots and the like. We want them focused on the work. It is up to the secondary researcher to interpret the data and find unique ways to present it to the public.

>

> At the same time you could have "conscious" individuals who are very business savvy who could over see investment opportunities who in the long run can fund projects that we seek.

>

> I am not against our own educational system. However, you have to keep in mind the time table involved in making that idea come to fruition and what must happen with the youth and layman in the mean time. America is a VERY large place and to organize that type of project on a mass scale will take time.

>

> So I am not in any way trying to convince European people to accept our positions on historical events. I am saying let's utilize the resources at our disposal until we develop our own. The Japanese did it after the defeat of their samurai in the 1800's and after world wars II. They sent their youth to learn the best of what could be learned in Europe and at the same time was taking the information & inventions, improving upon it, and building their own institutions in the process. They didn't stop what they were doing until they got their stuff together.

>

> We don't have to reinvent the wheel. Japanese people, in my opinion, have shown us what could be done by being in their system while simultaneously building ours.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>
> elliottandelliottmtg wrote: All of the reasons you cited, Asar, is precisely why engaging in a > debate, concerning African history, with Eurocentrics, is a waste
of
> time.
>
> Are Eurocentrics going to use their resources to thoroughly and > honestly explore African history? What a joke! As Dr. Jefferies said > in the video, " we must go further then Bernal because he wont go > far enough".
>
> And, even in the face of historical or archaeological evidence and > adamant opposition, they still refuse to acknowledge the African > origins of western civilization. Despite numerous artifacts that > clearly portray the ancient Egyptians as black Africans, those > enslaved by a Eurocentric mind state, will never accept it as the > truth. It is a waste of time.
>
> You pretty much proved my point, that we need a completely separate > education system. Whenever you watch Egyptian historical > programming, on any of the channels you cited, is it presented
from > an African perspective? Are the people being portrayed African in > appearance? Honestly, do you leave with a sense of pride or are
you > angered by the attacks against the African biological origin of
the > ancient Egyptians?
>
>
> It sounds weak and effeminate to say we have to engage with the > Eurocentrics because we don't have another way to express our > historical truths. So we must continue to try to convince them of > our historical worthiness. Garbage! It is akin to the story of > Sisyphus who was condemned to roll a stone up a steep hill for > eternity and the stone fell upon him every time he thought he was > making progress. It like going to grade school to learn nuclear > mechanics, a waste of time.
>
> A far better use of vigor, time and resources would be a grassroots > re-education campaign targeting those interested in African

history

> within the African American community.

>

> I think what really is at play, by some, is their longing for > acceptance from their oppressors.

>

> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23671|2007-11-09 16:28:55|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

Sounds great to me but that's just me.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Even better, the latest Groove requires no central server. Files may be > synced and updated from computer to computer.

> <http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/groove/HA101650231033.aspx>

> When I last used it 3-4 years ago, it enabled a 40 member team to > collaborate on developing a document very well. At that time, it cost

> about $40/computer. However, it required a server where this version > does not. So, you have privacy, file sharing, with live update of > modifications.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 20:17:13 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought > about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to > its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to > access it to add to it or make edits, etc.

> We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like. Could > we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable > information and data □ even have it reviewed by those of us

qualified

> (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of > privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps.

> The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if combined

> could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the > relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley.

> > From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a clear

> cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-

> nan in ancient times - as well as India.

> The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would to decide whether > the goal is more important than our egos.

> HTP,

> Mahari

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare > > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even
as

> it

> > goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black > intellectual > > historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard. But

> it > > is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no > mistake

> > it has always been a small number of people who have changed the > > world".

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
> > wrote:

> > >

>>> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact, that
>> despite >>> ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins of
> western >>> civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining
> the >>> intellectual status quo.
>>>
>>> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that the
> ancient >>> Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves
>> black
>>> as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact
>> that
>>> Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of
>>> nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the ancient >>> Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.
>>>
>>>
>>> My question is why do we even entertain the notion of Eurocentric
>>> history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins of >> western >>> civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own >>> intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat
>> when >>> thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths
of
>> the
>>> stars.
>>>
>>>
>>> We need an entirely separate education system for African
people.
>>> We instinctively look at the world different and trying to
>> reconcile
>>> our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies
is
> a >>> waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data
>> available
>>> and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
> to >>> forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our

rightful

>>> place among the members of humanity.

>>>

>>>

>>> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)

>>>

>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

>>> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> Peace Ta-Seti

>>>>

>>>> On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is > broken

>> up >>>> into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find

it

>>>> interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't

>> seen

>>>> it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started
from

>> those

>>>> debates.

>>>>

>>>> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100

>>>>

>>>> Asar Imhotep

>>>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>>>>

>>>

>>

>

| 23672|2007-11-09 16:36:35|Asar Imhotep|Re: Afrocentricity and the Black Athena debate website|

I appreciate the feedback. Will look through this thoroughly

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

- >
- > Has anyone seen this website before? What is your take if you have?
- >
- >
- > <http://www.shikanda.net/afrocentrism/index.htm>
- >

Yes, Wim M.J. van Binsbergen was involved in some internet discussions on this subject over the years.

He also recently critiqued some of Stephen Oppenheimer's work during a recent conference.

On the site there is an interesting article on Ifa, Sikidy and other forms of African divination and the mancala board game.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23673|2007-11-09 16:41:51|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

How about the possibility of pulling together a couple of reputable scholars a la Dr. Winters to address the governing body of Southern Sudan (not the horrible Sudanese govt) to do primary research there? Perhaps, they would fund such an endeavor. I doubt that Egypt's government would be favorable to black Americans - but who knows? I know it's audacious but remember also South Afrika is very "conscious" and is funding research and preservation of historical books in Mali. They may also be open to such a project to fund. They have a similar history as ours (US) with europeans and know the deal.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

- >
- > Much respect Asar
- >
- > I encourage the research you do and am not attempting to discourage it > in any way.

>
> When you say, we don't have this or that, are you really saying; We > aren't structured in a way to make these things happen?
>
> What I mean is, today's blacks (African & American) have wealth and
will > devote that wealth to various activities which have established > structure and well defined goals.
>
> An example is, Oprah Winfried's school for girls in South Africa. At > some time, someone with a plan approached Oprah and pitched her with a > detailed proposal with well defined goals and convinced Oprah to donate > $40 million to put the plan in motion. Since Oprah is starting fresh,
> has any African historian worked with Oprah's group to model a fresh > African based history course to this school? It is an fantastic > opportunity that a structured group would recognize.
>
> While it is possible for individual researchers working on independent > projects to accomplish the same, my feelings are, it is not as powerful > as a structured organizational plan. To the sponsor, an individual > effort presents greater risk with less payback making it more difficult > to secure significant or long-term funding.
>
> As you stated, all European concepts are not faulty, so my question > really depends on what your end goals are. To begin something new, or to > work to inject a different element into the established status quo.
In > an organization, this would be one of the defined group goals as defined > in the Mission Statement.
>
> Regards,
>
> meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Asar Imhotep
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7
> Date: Fri, 9 Nov 2007 14:56:45 -0800 (PST)
>
> Peace Elliot
>
> I think you are taking my words out of context. I will try to reiterate > my position. As of now we do not collectively have within the research > community the funds to support 6 month to a year excavations and the > like on the continent. We do not have our own equivalent to a National
> Geographic publication or channel.
>
> What we are essentially dealing with here is the dissemination of
this > information to our youth (of African descent) CURRENTLY in the school > systems of America. Do we just abandon the mission until we gather
the > necessary resources to present our history in the manner Europeans
do > theirs and hope they'll be on board when we get our stuff together?
>
> What I am positing is a simultaneous parallel movement of those > continuing the work in the field, regardless if the masses of European > scholars agree with the findings, and those who can focus on funding and > organization for our own research teams and media outlets. Not all > European scholarship is bad. Any conversation with Dr. John Henrike > Clark will illuminate why. As of right now, regardless, you are > interpreting their work. There are very few, if any, Black research > teams. The overwhelming data we have on our history comes from them. We > have great African scholars on the continent doing the work, but unless > you speak French, it's not accessible to the layman.
>
> People who do primary research don't have time to worry about video > equipment, soundtracks, television slots and the like. We want them > focused on the work. It is up to the secondary researcher to interpret
> the data and find unique ways to present it to the public.
>

- [illegible]

> All of the reasons you cited, Asar, is precisely why engaging in
> a > debate, concerning African history, with Eurocentrics, is a > waste of > time.
>
> Are Eurocentrics going to use their resources to thoroughly
and > honestly explore African history? What a joke! As Dr.
Jefferies
> said
> in the video, " we must go further then Bernal because he wont
> go > far enough".
>
> And, even in the face of historical or archaeological evidence
> and > adamant opposition, they still refuse to acknowledge the > African
> origins of western civilization. Despite numerous artifacts
> that > clearly portray the ancient Egyptians as black Africans,
those > enslaved by a Eurocentric mind state, will never accept it
as
> the > truth. It is a waste of time.
>
> You pretty much proved my point, that we need a completely > separate > education system. Whenever you watch Egyptian historical > programming, on any of the channels you cited, is it presented
> from > an African perspective? Are the people being portrayed African
> in > appearance? Honestly, do you leave with a sense of pride or
are
> you > angered by the attacks against the African biological origin of
> the > ancient Egyptians?

>
>
> It sounds weak and effeminate to say we have to engage with
the > Eurocentrics because we don't have another way to express our > historical truths. So we must continue to try to convince them
> of > our historical worthiness. Garbage! It is akin to the story
of > Sisyphus who was condemned to roll a stone up a steep hill
for > eternity and the stone fell upon him every time he thought he
> was > making progress. It like going to grade school to learn nuclear > mechanics, a waste of time.
>
> A far better use of vigor, time and resources would be a > grassroots > re-education campaign targeting those interested in African > history
> within the African American community.
>
> I think what really is at play, by some, is their longing
for > acceptance from their oppressors.
>
> Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
_____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>
| 23674|2007-11-09 16:55:05|Asar Imhotep|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
kungfuhustle wrote:
>> When you say, we don't have this or that, are you really saying; We >> aren't structured in a way to make these things happen?

What I am saying is that right now we do not collectively have the means to do it in comparison to how "White" people are able to present their thesis. I'm not saying we can't do it small...that's what we've been doing. But to do it on a scale that they're able to do it will take some time.

>>

>> What I mean is, today's blacks (African & American) have wealth and will devote that wealth to various activities which have established structure and well defined goals.

>>

From my experience, there is not too many with an enormous amount of wealth who contribute to projects like the kind we are talking about. Outside of Wesley Snipes and Danny Glover, no one is on this level. In my opinion, we need to have people with an African consciousness to go out and get involved in business so we have an "insider" who would be sensitive to the kind of projects people like us propose be done.

Also we need to have key personnel in Black Colleges who could earmark funds for primary research. There is no reason our historically Black Colleges cannot fund major research projects.

And I agree it is about organization. My goal is to have at least one fully funded independent research agency. I've mentioned before that I am working on a documentary called Poet-Trees & Grass-Roots: The unSpoken Word In Poetry. I am documenting on film the evolution of the oral traditions of Africa as a method for transferring historical information, to the many branches in the contemporary art forms. It is full of African history that doesn't get talked about and it is relevant for modern times as it deals with the emerging popularity of spoken word poetry. This is to show them where it comes from, what was it used for, how has it changed, how it hasn't changed.

My second film is going to deal with African Philosophy and Quantum Theory. I want it to be a rival of the "What The Bleep Do We Know." They didn't ask one Black scholar about any of their information and these concepts have been a part of science and philosophy for more than 10,000 years.

So I plan to be one of those vehicles that the information can be disseminated to the masses in a manner that is digestible and entertaining.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23675|2007-11-09 18:48:21|clyde winters|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|
--- kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

- > While it is possible for individual researchers
- > working on independent
- > projects to accomplish the same, my feelings are, it
- > is not as powerful
- > as a structured organizational plan. To the sponsor,
- > an individual
- > effort presents greater risk with less payback
- > making it more difficult
- > to secure significant or long-term funding.

You are right it is hard to change people's ideas but you can make a difference if you try hard.

For example, my decipherment of the Olmec inscriptions indicated that the Olmec people called themselves Xi.
I mentioned this at my Olmec website years ago.

Today many writers have picked up this fact and mention that the name for the Olmec people was Xi.
This is a good example of how doing the research and publicizing facts can impact on writing history.

Below are some of the sites where writers call the Olmecs by their real name Xi :

<http://evertrobes.com/ezine4.004.html>

<http://www.crystalinks.com/olmec.html>

<http://home.wanadoo.nl/dberents/olmeken.htm>

<http://www.delange.org/LaVenta/LaVenta.htm>

<http://www.raceandhistory.com/historicalviews/04022002.htm>

http://ctct.essortment.com/olmecnativeind\_rehp.htm

http://www.olmec.co.nz/abode/getCategoryProducts.do/?siteId\_43/method\_getCategoryProducts/categoryId\_926/resultSetStart\_0/resultSetCount\_10/orderByAttribute\_Position

<http://www.meta->

religion.com/World\_Religions/Ancient\_religions/Central\_america/olmec\_civilization.htm

<http://everything2.com/index.pl?node=Olmec>

<http://www.aaanativearts.com/article1059.html>

http://www.carnaval.com/cityguides/veracruz/vc\_sur.htm

<http://www.tqnyc.org/NYC074011/olmec.htm>

<http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/c/a/2005/08/02/MNG9GE1FLL1.DTL>

<http://timelinesdb.com/listevents.php?fromrec=420>

Clyde

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23676|2007-11-09 18:53:41|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

That's quite a bit of work to create and monitor.

Let me know what OS your server will run and I may be able to suggest a couple possible image managers.

M

-----Original Message-----

From: Asar Imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 9 Nov 2007 16:19:19 -0800 (PST)

I appreciate it. I haven't been updating as of late because I'm working on two other sites (Houston Ministry of Culture & My personal Site). But the MOCHA-Versity site should be up by Mid December. The design is pretty much done, I am just trying to finalize how I want the site organized (how to section it off).

I want to break it down into People of the Discipline, Pre "History", Genetics, Linguistics, Pre-Colonial, TransAtlantic Slave Period, Civil Rights, Black Inventors, Africana Philosophy, Spirituality, Science, etc.

It will allow for the inclusion of keywords when posting the information for easier searches. And I am trying to see if there is a way to include an image database. So it will take some work and I'll be looking for volunteers when done to add creditable material once organized.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

You have a very rich site. I see you must put in 6-8 hours/day there.
Very nice.

M

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 23:06:12 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

I am currently working on updating my website and I am calling it MOCHA-Versity. This is the type of thing I want to include. The documents and essays will be put into a MySQL Database. It will be fully searchable and I think will be a great asset to the central location of information.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Even better, the latest Groove requires no central server.

Files may be

> synced and updated from computer to computer.
> <http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/groove/HA101650231033.aspx>
> When I last used it 3-4 years ago, it enabled a 40 member team

to > collaborate on developing a document very well. At that time, it cost > about $40/computer. However, it required a server where this version

> does not. So, you have privacy, file sharing, with live update

of > modifications.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

> Date: Fri, 09 Nov 2007 20:17:13 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> Since Google has been brought up here is an idea that I've thought > about for awhile. Google has a documents mode when you subscribe to > its Gmail. It allows you enter data and allow other individuals to

> access it to add to it or make edits, etc.

> We've been talking about peer review magazines and the like.

Could

> we not use this option to work together to present mutually agreeable

> information and data " even have it reviewed by those of us qualified

> (with whom I do not include myself). Obviously, there are issues of > privacy and hackers. These issues could be worked out perhaps.

> The information presented by Dr. Winters, Asar, and Ferg if combined

> could be an excellent theme for a book or extended article on the > relationship between K, Ka, KM.T and the peoples of the Nile Valley.

> > From the information I've read I've concluded that there is a clear

> cultural/racial relationship amongst the peoples of Kush, Kemet and K-

> nan in ancient times - as well as India.

> The next challenge and perhaps the biggest would to decide whether > the goal is more important than our egos.

> HTP,

> Mahari

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > I agree with you completely. Power is corrupting. As Shakespeare

> > said "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts ABSOLUTELY". In > > other words power will cling to power no matter how stupid even as

> it >> goes down in flames. And as we work to make a new black > intellectual >> historical concept we should not expect many to come aboard.

But

> it >> is not needed. As Margaret Meade said to paraphrase "make no

> mistake
>> it has always been a small number of people who have changed

the

>> world".
>> HTP,
>> Mahari
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
>> wrote:
>>>
>>> I watched the videos and for me, they confirmed the fact,

that

>> despite >>> ample evidence provided by Bernal of the African origins

of

> western >>> civilization, Eurocentrics have a vested interest in maintaining

> the >>> intellectual status quo.
>>>
>>> I liked the part when the Arab Egyptian woman said that

the

> ancient >>> Egyptians looked like her and that they only painted themselves

>> black >>> as a spiritual representation. This is hilarious given the fact

> > that

> > > Arabs invaded Kemet in the 7th century ad and that the table of > > > nations in the tomb of Ramses III clearly depicts the

ancient

> > > Egyptians black like their Nubian neighbors.

> > >

> > >

> > > My question is why do we even entertain the notion of

Eurocentric

> > > history? If Eurocentrics want to deny the African origins

of

> > western > > > civilization, then why should we care? They do so at their own > > > intellectual peril. Not long ago they believed the world was flat

> > when > > > thousands of years ago our African ancestors plotted the paths of

> > the

> > > stars.

> > >

> > >

> > > We need an entirely seperate education system for African

people.

> > > We instinctively look at the world different and trying

to

> > reconcile

> > > our understanding with Eurocentric principles and philosophies is

> a > > > waste of time. We need to take all the modern factual data

> > available
> > > and apply the spiritual/intellectual principles of our ancestors
> to > > > forge a new path of enlightenment in order to regain our rightful
> > > place among the members of humanity.
> > >
> > >
> > > Jason(Slave) Issaias(Free)
> > >
> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > > Peace Ta-Seti
> > > >
> > > > On my messageboard I posted the Documentary film, which is > broken

> > up > > > > into 7 parts on YouTube, for the Black Athena Debate. I find it > > > > interesting and would love dialogue on it for those who haven't > > seen > > > > it. I figure this is relevant since this group was started from

> > those
> > > > debates.
> > > >
> > > >

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13100
> > > >
> > > > Asar Imhotep
> > > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> > > >
> > >

> >
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23677|2007-11-09 19:15:42|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

I don't doubt that we all have individual skill sets, and accomplishments.

There are many other blacks doing the same, but for whites.

One brother I know developed the Tracking & Data Relay Satellite used to broadcast Space Shuttle missions when in orbit. He developed the system for Johns Hopkins. Every time they televise a shuttle mission, such as a space walk, it uses his system.

Every time you stop at a traffic intersection, you can think of me. I developed the present Traffic Controller deployed across the US, while under contract to CalTrans.

The point is, there are many blacks who can make major contributions to a global black mind-share to accomplish tasks we cannot accomplish alone. All that is required is a need (check), a plan (pending) and a call to arms (pending).

When you consider the many black millionaires from NBA to real estate, an organization with a good plan and should have plenty of potential funding sources.

Perhaps we can set up a dedicated forum to discuss and explore a workable outline, maybe building on the Booker T. model.

M

-----Original Message-----

From: Asar Imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 9 Nov 2007 16:55:02 -0800 (PST)

kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

>> When you say, we don't have this or that, are you really saying; We >> aren't structured in a way to make these things happen?

What I am saying is that right now we do not collectively have the means to do it in comparison to how "White" people are able to present their thesis. I'm not saying we can't do it small...that's what we've been doing. But to do it on a scale that they're able to do it will take some time.

>>

>> What I mean is, today's blacks (African & American) have wealth and

will devote that wealth to various activities which have established structure and well defined goals.

>>

>From my experience, there is not too many with an enormous amount of wealth who contribute to projects like the kind we are talking about. Outside of Wesley Snipes and Danny Glover, no one is on this level. In my opinion, we need to have people with an African consciousness to go out and get involved in business so we have an "insider" who would be sensitive to the kind of projects people like us propose be done.

Also we need to have key personnel in Black Colleges who could earmark funds for primary research. There is no reason our historically Black Colleges cannot fund major research projects.

And I agree it is about organization. My goal is to have at least one fully funded independent research agency. I've mentioned before that I am working on a documentary called Poet-Trees & Grass-Roots: The unSpoken Word In Poetry. I am documenting on film the evolution of the oral traditions of Africa as a method for transferring historical information, to the many branches in the contemporary art forms. It is full of African history that doesn't get talked about and it is relevant for modern times as it deals with the emerging popularity of spoken word poetry. This is to show them where it comes from, what was it used for, how has it changed, how it hasn't changed.

My second film is going to deal with African Philosophy and Quantum Theory. I want it to be a rival of the "What The Bleep Do We Know." They didn't ask one Black scholar about any of their information and these concepts have been a part of science and philosophy for more than 10,

000 years.

So I plan to be one of those vehicles that the information can be disseminated to the masses in a manner that is digestible and entertaining.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23678|2007-11-09 19:24:52|kungfuhustle|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

Dr. Winters

I share your pain.

In my career, I have often found myself 2-3 years ahead of my "superiors".

It's the same as the janitor at Ford who suggested putting radios in automobiles.

The engineers thought it was a bad idea until he put one in his car and everybody wanted one.

As I recall, Henry Ford rewarded the brother with a $4 bonus on top of his janitor's pay.

I have noted your Olmec research, and also note the increase in it becoming mainstream.

M

-----Original Message-----

From: clyde winters <olmec982000@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7

Date: Fri, 9 Nov 2007 18:48:19 -0800 (PST)

--- kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

> While it is possible for individual researchers
> working on independent

- > projects to accomplish the same, my feelings are, it
- > is not as powerful
- > as a structured organizational plan. To the sponsor,
- > an individual
- > effort presents greater risk with less payback
- > making it more difficult
- > to secure significant or long-term funding.

You are right it is hard to change people's ideas but you can make a difference if you try hard.

For example, my decipherment of the Olmec inscriptions indicated that the Olmec people called themselves Xi. I mentioned this at my Olmec website years ago.

Today many writers have picked up this fact and mention that the name for the Olmec people was Xi. This is a good example of how doing the research and publicizing facts can impact on writing history.

Below are some of the sites where writers call the Olmecs by their real name Xi :

<http://evertrobes.com/ezone4.004.html>

<http://www.crystalinks.com/olmec.html>

<http://home.wanadoo.nl/dberents/olmeken.htm>

<http://www.delange.org/LaVenta/LaVenta.htm>

<http://www.raceandhistory.com/historicalviews/04022002.htm>

http://ctct.essortment.com/olmecnativeind\_rehp.htm

http://www.olmec.co.nz/abode/getCategoryProducts.do/?siteId\_43/method\_getCategoryProducts/\_categoryId\_926/resultSetStart\_0/resultSetCount\_10/orderByAttribute\_Position

http://www.meta-religion.com/World\_Religions/Ancient\_religions/Central\_america/olmec\_civilization.htm

<http://everything2.com/index.pl?node=Olmec>

<http://www.aaanativearts.com/article1059.html>

http://www.carnaval.com/cityguides/veracruz/vc\_sur.htm

<http://www.tqnyc.org/NYC074011/olmec.htm>

<http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/c/a/2005/08/02/MNG9GE1FLL1.DTL>

<http://timelinesdb.com/listevents.php?fromrec=420>

Clyde

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23679|2007-11-09 21:28:11|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)|

Attachments :

I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black, War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a Master Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point

I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:

' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of how the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor. You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even distributed anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial grants and the German scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.

..... Only after the truth about Nazi extermination became known did the American eugenics movement fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from eugenics to genetics.....As I explored the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the Third Reich but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'

James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became Director in 1968, and President in 1994.

Gloria Emeagwali

| 23680|2007-11-09 21:37:21|Asar Imhotep|Re: Black Athena Debate Documentary 1-7|

For this I may be leaning towards a Linux server

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

kungfuhustle wrote:

That's quite a bit of work to create and monitor.
Let me know what OS your server will run and I may be able to suggest a couple possible image managers.

M

---

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23681|2007-11-10 04:10:51|clyde winters|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold
Spring Harbor (Off top|
Hi Gloria

Thanks. This explains why much of the genetics research continues to spread white supremism while pretending "races" do not exist.

Clyde

--- "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)"
<emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu> wrote:

>
>
> I recently came across an interesting introductory > piece in a text written by Edwin Black, > War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's > Campaign to Create a Master
> Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I > thought I would consult it to see if there was > direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and > the founders of South African apartheid. At that > point
> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well > this excerpt really attracted my attention:
>

> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the > sad truth of how > the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors
> at > Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at
> the Carnegie
> Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring
> Harbor.
> You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime,
> the Carnegie
> Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex > enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime
> and even distributed > anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high > schools.And you will see > the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' > massive financial grants and the German > scientific establishment that began the eugenic > program that were
> finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.
> ..... Only after the truth about > Nazi extermination > became known did the American eugenics movement > fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to > change the name from > eugenics to > genetics.....As I
> explored the history of eugenics, however, I soon > discovered that > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not > hatched in the Third Reich
> but on Long Island decades earlier- and then > transplanted to Germany.'
>
>
> James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, > became Director in > 1968, and President in 1994.
>
> Gloria Emeagwali
>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23682|2007-11-10 04:31:23|Peter Gray|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

This is great material, Gloria. My thanks as well. I wish there were some way to force the very media who make a living sensationalising the race issue to examine/debate such a historical thesis. Of course, it would be called "conspiracy theory" and somehow deflected from the scene.

And if you go to Fort Detrick today, (I was last there in 1989/90), you may still notice the proliferation of German surnames on the research scientists' office doors.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: olmec982000@yahoo.com

Date: Sat, 10 Nov 2007 04:10:50 -0800

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Hi Gloria

Thanks. This explains why much of the genetics research continues to spread white supremism while pretending "races" do not exist.

Clyde

--- "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)"

<emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu> wrote:

>

>

> I recently came across an interesting introductory

> piece in a text written by Edwin Black,

> War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's

> Campaign to Create a Master

> Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I > thought I would consult it to see if there was > direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and > the founders of South African apartheid. At that > point

> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well

> this excerpt really attracted my attention:
>
> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the > sad truth of how > the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors
> at > Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at
> the Carnegie
> Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring
> Harbor.
> You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime,
> the Carnegie
> Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex > enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime
> and even distributed > anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high > schools. And you will see > the links between the Rockefeller Foundations'
> massive financial grants and the German > scientific establishment that began the eugenic
> program that were
> finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.
> ..... Only after the truth about > Nazi extermination
> became known did the American eugenics movement > fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to > change the name from > eugenics to > genetics.... ..... As I > explored the history of eugenics, however, I soon > discovered that > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not > hatched in the Third Reich
> but on Long Island decades earlier- and then > transplanted to Germany.'
>
>
> James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, > became Director in > 1968, and President in 1994.
>
> Gloria Emeagwali
>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!
| 23683|2007-11-10 05:47:32|asar_imhotep|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> OK, I just logged onto Google to check the file.
>
> Here's the deal;
>
> 1. They changed the file name and added underscores, so the file name is > now,
> The_Black_Athena_Debate_-_All.wmv.
>
> 2. Google pre-screens all uploaded video to ensure they are not porn.
> They say it takes about 3-4 hours before the video will show up in a > search.
>
> 3. Unlike YouTube, Google haven't provided a direct url link. Will wait > to after approval to > see if one is available then.
>
> It's there but it takes time for Google to OK it for release. Following > that, it should show up in a search.
>
> Hotep
> Meninarmer

I don't think they approved it yet. I still can't pull it up.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23684|2007-11-10 05:49:49|kungfuhustle|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold
Spring Harbor (Off top|
Gloria

Thank you posting this.

Believe it or not, the sterilization program is still being implemented by The Planned Parenthood and Southern Christian Associations. They continued openly in states from Virginia to Florida up until well into the 1970s.

I was shocked after researching this a few years ago, at the dramatic effect drugs, alcohol, AIDS, incarceration, and blind obedience have had on the US black birth rate.

According to CDC reports, birthrate for US black women in the last 30 years has decreased approx. 40-50%, from 190 births/10,000 to 101/10,000 annually. For comparison, Hispanic women birthrates stand firm at ~202/10,000 and white women at ~90/10,000.

After reviewing these reports, I have to say I was/am quite concerned.
<http://www.cdc.gov/nchs/products/pubs/pubd/hestats/prelimbirths05/prelimbirths05.htm>

The state of North Carolina continued their eugenics by law up to 1974. They continued the program in spite of the law being repealed. Here is the apology from the governor.

http://www.kaisernetwork.org/daily\_reports/rep\_index.cfm?hint=2&DR\_ID=15106

Unity=Strength

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Emeagwali, Gloria (History) <emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Date: Sat, 10 Nov 2007 00:28:08 -0500

I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black, War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a Master Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:

' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of how the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor. You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even distributed anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial grants and the German scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were finished by Mengele at Auschwitz. .... Only after the truth about Nazi extermination became known did the American eugenics movement fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from eugenics to genetics.....As I explored the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the Third Reich but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'

James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became Director in 1968, and President in 1994.

Gloria Emeagwali

| 23685|2007-11-10 08:34:09|David VeLar|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

Yes, I been learning about Cold Spring Harbor. They play an important role in one of the fictional books I am writing. Now I hear about Cold Spring Harbor every week, so the whole publicity is killing the wow factor in my story.

"Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black, War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a Master Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:

' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of how the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie

Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor. You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even distributed anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial grants and the German scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.

..... Only after the truth about Nazi extermination became known did the American eugenics movement fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from eugenics to genetics.... As I explored the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the Third Reich but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'

James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became Director in 1968, and President in 1994.

Gloria Emeagwali

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23686|2007-11-10 08:34:09|David VeLar|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|
If races exist, how do we define them?

Peter Gray wrote:

This is great material, Gloria. My thanks as well. I wish there were some way to force the very media who make a living sensationalising the race issue to examine/debate such a historical thesis. Of course, it would be called "conspiracy theory" and somehow deflected from the scene.

And if you go to Fort Detrick today, (I was last there in 1989/90), you may still notice the proliferation of German surnames on the research scientists' office doors.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: olmec982000@ yahoo.com
Date: Sat, 10 Nov 2007 04:10:50 -0800
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Hi Gloria

Thanks. This explains why much of the genetics research continues to spread white supremism while pretending "races" do not exist.

Clyde

--- "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)"
<emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu> wrote:

>
>
> I recently came across an interesting introductory > piece in a text written by Edwin Black,
> War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's > Campaign to Create a Master
> Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I > thought I would consult it to see if there was > direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and > the founders of South African apartheid. At that > point
> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well
> this excerpt really attracted my attention:
>
> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the > sad truth of how > the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors
> at > Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at
> the Carnegie
> Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring
> Harbor.
> You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime,
> the Carnegie
> Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex > enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime
> and even distributed > anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high > schools. And you will see

> the links between the Rockefeller Foundations'
> massive financial grants and the German > scientific establishment that began the eugenic
> program that were
> finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.
> ..... Only after the truth about > Nazi extermination
> became known did the American eugenics movement > fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to > change the name from > eugenics to > genetics.... ..... As I > explored the history of eugenics, however, I soon > discovered that > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not > hatched in the Third Reich
> but on Long Island decades earlier- and then > transplanted to Germany.'
>
>
> James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, > became Director in > 1968, and President in 1994.
>
> Gloria Emeagwali
>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around <http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23687|2007-11-10 08:52:48|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> This is great material, Gloria. My thanks as well. I wish there were some way to force the very media who make a living sensationalising the race issue to examine/debate such a historical thesis. Of course, it would be called "conspiracy theory" and somehow deflected from the scene.

>

> And if you go to Fort Detrick today,( I was last there in 1989/90), you may still notice the proliferation of German surnames on the research scientists' office doors.

>

>

When you get down to it, modern ideas of race really have their roots in Germanic nationalism. European aristocracy has been overwhelmingly Germanic and even specifically German since the time of the Frankish Empire of Charlemagne.

For example, the English royal family is rooted in Saxony, Germany. Not just from the old Anglo-Saxon invaders, but even more recently Queen Victoria's mother and husband where from Saxe-Coburg-Gotha in Germany, and she spoke German as her first language. The Hanover line from which the current Windsor line traces its legitimacy springs from Saxe-Coburg.

The creation of a "white race" helped establish ideas of Germanic superiority, with whites supposedly as the supreme race and Germanics as the supreme white nationality.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23688|2007-11-10 08:54:24|matt mercer|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

Thank you to all for acknowledging this "off-topic" subject. Although I am convinced that this subject is of the deepest importance , as you may remember my post earlier about eugenics and me growing up in Carlisle, Pa. You can look up Carlisle on Wikipedia. The Native American Industrial School which was built on the Army War College base there shows just how long and deep the roots of eugenics are in this country.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Carlisle\_Indian\_Industrial\_School

An anecdotal story I read while researching this story noted That Pratt would ride around Carlisle in a gilded golden chariot with his pick of the crop, the indian children, dressed neatly in their custom made uniforms, like a premonition of Hitler to come. His counterpart, Marion Mathers of the New England cotton Mathers was also a disturbing presence to say the least.

My concern, is that the Masonic and Rosicrucian "cleansing" methods of this era were so convoluted and intertwined with endeavors such as this that what we are looking at is an entire body of "Egyptian" teaching and history that was integrated into not only methodology of handling native Americans but also the creation of the wider educational infrastructure at large. And knowing, through my research at the historical society there in Carlisle that the sequential and biographical information of each child that was processed there and the methods used to "cleanse and readjust" them are still available at the library of Congress in Washington DC, I wonder how many and much of these types of source materials Hitler and his regime had access to. The Pueblo people of New Mexico are still loathe to even say the name "Carlisle" because for them it is Auschwitz for children. And I think it's a sad reflection of this country's neglect in facing the past and dealing with education. Sometimes I wish the Jewish communities would reach out to the Native Americans and help build acknowledgment of their holocaust so that they can be recognized by the world community both academically and intellectually. Maybe American ADD is more of real intelligent intervention and supplemental restitution of all of these wide gaps in historical education that are not addressing the common heritage that the last few generations here barely know exist. This form of cultivated cognitive degeneration is clearly represented in generational gaps between all ethnic lines and communities, I mean from ADD to Alzheimer's. Americans seem to have a problem paying attention to and outmoded curriculum vitae and remembering life as a whole.

I believe this whole issue is deserving of real in depth academic study, especially in tracking the whole eugenics to Nazi relationship and their family Tree.

Many blessings and gratitude for all of your works,

Matt Mercer

kungfuhustle wrote:

Gloria

Thank you posting this.

Believe it or not, the sterilization program is still being implemented by The Planned Parenthood and Southern Christian Associations. They continued openly in states from Virginia to Florida up until well into the 1970s.

I was shocked after researching this a few years ago, at the dramatic effect drugs, alcohol, AIDS, incarceration, and blind obedience have had on the US black birth rate.

According to CDC reports, birthrate for US black women in the last 30 years has decreased approx. 40-50%, from 190 births/10,000 to 101/10,000 annually. For comparison, Hispanic women birthrates stand firm at ~202/10,000 and white women at ~90/10,000.

After reviewing these reports, I have to say I was/am quite concerned.

<http://www.cdc.gov/nchs/products/pubs/pubd/hestats/prelimbirths05/prelimbirths05.htm>

The state of North Carolina continued their eugenics by law up to 1974. They continued the program in spite of the law being repealed. Here is the apology from the governor.

http://www.kaiserwork.org/daily\_reports/rep\_index.cfm?hint=2&DR\_ID=15106

Unity=Strength

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Emeagwali, Gloria (History) <emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Date: Sat, 10 Nov 2007 00:28:08 -0500

I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black, War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a Master Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:

' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of how the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor. You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even distributed anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial grants and the German scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were finished by Mengele at Auschwitz. .... Only after the truth about Nazi extermination became known did the American eugenics movement fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from eugenics to genetics.... ..... As I explored the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the Third Reich but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'

James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became Director in 1968, and President in 1994.

Gloria Emeagwali

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23689|2007-11-10 11:19:43|Asar Imhotep|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

cllyde winters wrote:

Hi

Thanks for the information. Hopefully, as time permits you may be able to discover the spiritual significance of these words since, Ka, Ma and Ta often have homophonic meanings in many African languages which relate to the divine.

Clyde

*****

I will most definitely be looking into this. I will say off the back that I can see that words dealing with the concept of change seem to always start with /k/ in African languages.

Dr. Theophile Obenga (1995) has already pointed out the cognates for the word Ma (in reference to MAA.T) in his work A Lost Tradition: African Philosophy in World History:

"Maat is the leading concept in the heart of Classical Egyptian society which was precisely built upon the pursuit of knowledge and happiness. To know was the real foundation and fundamental pursuit of Egyptian civilization. Knowledge and wisdom -- the essence of Classical Egyptian philosophy -- were the utmost ramifications of the wonderful concept of Maat.

Since the time of Classical Egypt, the word/concept Maat, "truth," can be found everywhere in Black Africa. It is a key concept throughout the entirety of African culture. The following chart illustrates the fundamental role of Maat as it [sic] manifested in the language of various African ethnic groups:"

|                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
|-------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Ancient Egyptian                                | : maat , truth; maa , "true"                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Coptic (Egypt)                                  | : me , mee , mee , mie , mei , mei , meei , "truth" "justice," and also "truthful," righteous"                                                            |
| Caffino (Cushitic, Ethiopia)                    | : moyo , "motive," "reason" (truth and reason are inseparable)                                                                                                                                      |
| Kongo (Congo)                                   | : moyo , "life," "soul," "mind" (same semantic field)                                                                                                                                               |
| Ngbaka (Central African Republic)               | : ma , magic medicine (in order to know the truth)                                                                                                                                                  |
| Fang (Equatorial Guinea, South Cameroon, Gabon) | : mye , mie , "pure" ( tabe mye , "to be physically and morally pure")                                                                                                                |
| Mpongwe (Gabon)                                 | : mya , "to know" the truth ( mya re insome , "the self- knowledge," which the Delphic oracle also enjoined: gnothi seauton )                                                         |
| Yoruba (Nigeria)                                | : mo , "to know" the truth (knowledge)                                                                                                                                                              |
| Hausa (Nigeria)                                 | : ma , "in fact," "indeed" (affirmative truth: ni ma na ji , "I in fact heard it")                                                                                                           |
| Mada (North Cameroon)                           | : mat , "genie," "goblin" (semantic specialization)                                                                                                                                                 |
| Nuer (Nilotic, Sudan)                           | : mat , "total," "sum up"; "forces" ( ro mat , "to join forces with." Maat is indeed the total of all virtues, all forces as ideals to guide man in his personal and spiritual life). |

The essence of /ma/ in African languages is "truth," "purity," "law" "fundamental essence of a thing."

I would also like to point out that in the amongst the Akan the word "MMAra" means "Divine Law." Compare with the Kemetic MAA.t which is also represented as divine law. As mentioned in previous post, the /t/ may not be pronounced in a lot of Kemetic words as they are simply markers to make the written form feminine.

I also found a Proto-Bantu meaning of the word /ta/ to mean "name." Who knows how significant that may be in the future.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23690|2007-11-10 11:24:42|asar_imhotep|Re: KMT - Reply to Dr. Winters|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

>

>

>

> clyde winters olmec982000@... wrote: Hi

> Thanks for the information. Hopefully, as time permits

> you may be able to discover the spiritual significance

> of these words since, Ka, Ma and Ta often have > homophonic meanings in many African languages which > relate to the divine.

>

I will most definitely be looking into this. I will say off the back that I can see that words dealing with the concept of change seem to always start with /k/ in African languages.

Dr. Theophile Obenga (1995) has already pointed out the cognates for the word Ma (in reference to MAA.T) in his work A Lost Tradition: African Philosophy in World History:

"Maat is the leading concept in the heart of Classical Egyptian society which was precisely built upon the pursuit of knowledge and happiness. To know was the real foundation and fundamental pursuit of Egyptian civilization. Knowledge and wisdom -- the essence of Classical Egyptian philosophy -- were the utmost ramifications of the wonderful concept of Maat.

Since the time of Classical Egypt, the word/concept Maat, "truth," can be found everywhere in Black Africa. It is a key concept throughout the entirety of African culture. The following chart illustrates the fundamental role of Maat as it [sic] manifested in the language of various African ethnic groups:"

|                                                 |                                                                                           |
|-------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Ancient Egyptian                                | :maat, truth; maa, "true"                                                                 |
| Coptic (Egypt)                                  | :me, mee, mee, mie, mei, mei, meei, "truth""justice," and also "truthful," righteous" |
| Caffino (Cushitic, Ethiopia)                    | :moyo, "motive," "reason" (truth and reason are inseparable)                              |
| Kongo (Congo)                                   | :moyo, "life," "soul," "mind" (same semantic field)                                       |
| Ngbaka (Central African Republic)               | :ma, magic medicine (in order to know the truth)                                          |
| Fang (Equatorial Guinea, South Cameroon, Gabon) | :mye, mie, "pure" (tabe mye, "to be physically and morally pure")                         |
| Mpongwe (Gabon)                                 | :mya, "to know" the truth (mya re insome, "the                                            |

|                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
|-----------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|                       | self- knowledge," which the Delphic oracle also enjoined: gnothi seauton )                                                                                                                 |
| Yoruba (Nigeria)      | :mo, "to know" the truth (knowledge)                                                                                                                                                              |
| Hausa (Nigeria)       | :ma, "in fact," "indeed" (affirmative truth: ni ma na ji , "I in fact heard it")                                                                                                           |
| Mada (North Cameroon) | :mat, "genie," "goblin" (semantic specialization)                                                                                                                                                 |
| Nuer (Nilotic, Sudan) | :mat, "total," "sum up"; "forces" ( ro mat , "to join forces with." Maat is indeed the total of all virtues, all forces as ideals to guide man in his personal and spiritual life). |

The essence of /ma/ in African languages is "truth," "purity," "law" "fundamental essence of a thing."

I would also like to point out that in the amongst the Akan the word "MMAra" means "Divine Law." Compare with the Kemetic MAA.t which is also represented as divine law. As mentioned in previous post, the /t/ may not be pronounced in a lot of Kemetic words as they are simply markers to make the written form feminine.

I also found a Proto-Bantu meaning of the word /ta/ to mean "name." Who knows how significant that may be in the future.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23691|2007-11-10 13:47:47|asar_imhotep|Trying to find Egyptian Transliteration Font| Does anyone know how I can get a hold of the CCER Egyptian Transliteration font for PC? The website doesn't seem to be up any more and I need to get a hold of the font. Your help is greatly appreciated.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23692|2007-11-10 20:23:13|asar_imhotep|Re: Trying to find Egyptian Transliteration Font| Okay, I finally found the correct site at <http://www.ccer.nl/>. I downloaded the font, but it doesn't seem to help me. I started looking at some Hieroglyphic software and came across a GlyphoText. I don't like it because you can't export as a word document and when you export as an image, it exports these large glyphs and unusable in a paper.

Does anyone have a recommendation for some Hieroglyphic Software? It seems like the ones associated with <http://www.ccer.nl/> are no longer available. Any help is appreciated.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> Does anyone know how I can get a hold of the CCER Egyptian > Transliteration font for PC? The website doesn't seem to be up any > more and I need to get a hold of the font. Your help is greatly > appreciated.

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23693|2007-11-10 21:07:14|clyde winters|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold
Spring Harbor (Off top|

--- David VeLar <the\_osirica@yahoo.com> wrote:

> If races exist, how do we define them?

Scientists seeking to explain the variability among populations compare the unique and diverse genes associated with self-identified racial groups, and geographical populations to characterize groups of humans into racial groups.

Clyde

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23694|2007-11-10 21:07:26|clyde winters|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold
Spring Harbor (Off top|

--- David VeLar <the\_osirica@yahoo.com> wrote:

> If races exist, how do we define them?

Scientists seeking to explain the variability among populations compare the unique and diverse genes associated with self-identified racial groups, and geographical populations to characterize groups of humans into racial groups.

Clyde

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23695|2007-11-10 21:07:41|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

Can this file be uploaded to the group, or reposted as just plain text in a message, for those that were not able to pick up the attachment from being set to special notices only? Thank you. Peace.

Divine Ruler Equality Allah

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Greetings All.

>

> What a happy day!!

>

> Here is KMT decoded.

>

> KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA, KAA..... Charcoal

>

> Eurocentrics: 'Open your eyes to wider dimensions'

>

> enjoy, read, reflect, think, question, motivate, learn, rejoice, stay strong, endure, continue.....kaa.

>

| 23696|2007-11-10 21:55:28|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Trying to find Egyptian Transliteration Font|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

>

> Does anyone have a recommendation for some Hieroglyphic Software? It > seems like the ones associated with <http://www.ccer.nl/> are no longer > available. Any help is appreciated.

>

>

Asar, I haven't tried it but here's one source for Windows:

<http://www.osirisweb.com/egypt/glyphs/glyph.zip>

There appears to be a better selection of (free) Egyptian hieroglyphic fonts for Mac.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23697|2007-11-10 23:21:12|asar_imhotep|Re: Trying to find Egyptian Transliteration Font|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> Asar, I haven't tried it but here's one source for Windows:

>

> <http://www.osirisweb.com/egypt/glyphs/glyph.zip>

>

> There appears to be a better selection of (free) Egyptian hieroglyphic > fonts for Mac.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

I appreciate it, but I have those fonts already. As stated in a follow-up email, I am now looking for a better Hieroglyphic software that will allow me export the glyphs in a size that matches the font size on the documents I am producing.

I am trying out this GlyphoText software and it creates the mdw nTr images, but I can't past them in word and I can't export into word. I can only export as an image and I can't control the size of the export (they export too large).

I also tried in times past the WinGlyph Demo, but I can't seem to find it any more. So I am looking for software like the one's mentioned above where I can position the glyphs like I would using the Manuel de Codage script. The glyphs need to look professional (print worthy) and not just compiled free experimental fonts. Also with those free fonts you do not get a lot of the glyphs and there is no way to know what to press to get a certain font as you have to switch between the four sets of fonts manually.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23698|2007-11-11 06:36:41|Alex van Deelen|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|
Paul,

- > For example, the English royal family is rooted in Saxony,
- > Germany. Not just from the old Anglo-Saxon invaders,
- > but even more recently Queen Victoria's mother and
- > husband where from Saxe-Coburg-Gotha in Germany,
- > and she spoke German as her first language. The
- > Hanover line from which the current Windsor line traces
- > its legitimacy springs from Saxe-Coburg.

Which reminds me of the old Blackadder Goes Forth series with Rowan Atkinson (Mr. Bean), Hugh Laurie (House) and Stephen Frye set in WWI. Atkinson is interrogating Laurie.

Laurie says: "Traitor? I'm as British as the queen!"
Atkinson replies: "So your grandfather is a German, your father is a German, and you are married to a German?".

In Holland, a lot of the aristocracy (especially the Charlemagne era landed aristocracy, as opposed to the 19th century monied aristocracy) is German (not just 'Germanic').

And of course most of the monarchies are German - Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, etc.

- > The creation of a "white race" helped establish ideas
- > of Germanic superiority, with whites supposedly as
- > the supreme race and Germanics as the supreme
- > white nationality.

There was also this belief in the 'long skulled' (aristocratic, cerebral) versus the 'round skulled' (dimwitted, peasant, but loyal) - which of course comes back in stories like The Man From Lamancha (Don Quixote vs Sancho Panza), Sherlock Holmes (Holmes vs Watson).

I thought it was an odd obsession, but I never connected that until recently with the ever returning belief of scientific racists that everything is about brain size and cranial volume.

Cheers,

Alex

| 23699|2007-11-11 06:44:38|Alex van Deelen|Re: Microsoft Word - KMT.pdf|

- > "Maat is the leading concept in the heart of Classical Egyptian society
- > which was precisely built upon the pursuit of knowledge and happiness.
- > To know was the real foundation and fundamental pursuit of Egyptian
- > civilization. Knowledge and wisdom -- the essence of Classical
- > Egyptian philosophy -- were the utmost ramifications of the
- > wonderful concept of Maat.
- > Since the time of Classical Egypt, the word/concept
- > Maat, "truth," can be found everywhere in Black
- > Africa. It is a key concept throughout the entirety of
- > African culture. The following chart illustrates the
- > fundamental role of Maat as it [sic] manifested
- > in the language of various African ethnic groups:"

I don't know enough about all African philosophy, so please correct me.

However. It struck me that in Western thinking heaven and hell are places. Hell is a fiery place below the earth, while heaven is some pleasant place in the clouds/the sky.

In African philosophy, good and evil are conditions. Heaven is harmony, while hell/evil is dissonance.

Am I correct in this, and does this place Ancient Egypt well within the African sphere of thought?

Alex

| 23700|2007-11-11 06:48:22|sincere1906|Egyptian Sues US Govt Over "Race"|

Does anyone recall the 1990s case or incident (because I'm not certain if it reached the courts) where an Egyptian immigrant sued/took the US govt to task for classifying him as "white." For reasons of affirmative action he wanted to be classified as "African-American/black." His facial features tended more so towards Anwar Sadat than Hosni Mubarak. If anyone recalls the case/incident, would appreciate it if you'd post something on it.

Regards

Sin

| 23701|2007-11-11 06:57:17|sincere1906|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

And yet in the US, Germans were not always considered "white"--not in the sense that Anglo Saxons were, even if they (Anglo Saxons) had obvious Germanic roots. Early German migrants were called everything from "swarthy" to "barbaric"---somewhere near the much maligned "Celt." It took a while for them to become seen as "white"--much as it took a while for Greeks and Armenians to become "Caucasian," which could differ or coincide with "white."

see Jacobson, Matthew Frye. Whiteness of a Different Color: European Immigrants and the Alchemy of Race (1998).

explores the often contradictory notions of western "whiteness" and/or "Caucasian" identity that have cropped up in the past two centuries.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

> >

> >

> > This is great material, Gloria. My thanks as well. I wish there

were > some way to force the very media who make a living sensationalising

the > race issue to examine/debate such a historical thesis. Of course,

it > would be called "conspiracy theory" and somehow deflected from the > scene.

> >

> > And if you go to Fort Detrick today,( I was last there in 1989/90),

> you may still notice the proliferation of German surnames on the > research scientists' office doors.

> >

> >

>

> When you get down to it, modern ideas of race really have their roots in

- > Germanic nationalism.
- > European aristocracy has been overwhelmingly Germanic and even
- > specifically German since the time of the Frankish Empire of
- > Charlemagne.
- >
- > For example, the English royal family is rooted in Saxony,

Germany. Not

- > just from the old Anglo-Saxon invaders, but even more recently Queen
- > Victoria's mother and husband were from Saxe-Coburg-Gotha in

Germany,

- > and she spoke German as her first language. The Hanover line from

which

- > the current Windsor line traces its legitimacy springs from Saxe-

Coburg.

- >
- > The creation of a "white race" helped establish ideas of Germanic
- > superiority, with whites supposedly as the supreme race and

Germanics as

- > the supreme white nationality.

>

- > Regards,
- > Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23702|2007-11-11 07:17:06|sincere1906|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

"If the ideology of the eugenic standpoint emerged more or less logically and gradually from the mid-nineteenth century scientific and political arguments regarding racial stocks and their inherent qualities, the apparatus of eugenics as a presence on the American scene rose rather dramatically after the turn of the century. In 1904 the Carnegie Institution put up money to open a Station for the Study of Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, under the direction of Charles Davenport. Davenport himself was among the enthusiastic supporters within the scientific community who felt that, to paraphrase the historian Daniel Kevles, "nationality" was primarily a function of "race," and "race" was the prime determinant of behavior. "The idea of a 'melting pot' belongs to a pre-Mendelian age," Davenport wrote to one colleague, showing his hand on the immigration question. "Now we recognize that characters are inherited as units and do not readily break up." In the ensuing years, under Davenport's direction, the station at Cold Spring Harbor provided critical institutional focus to the eugenics movement, serving both as a major intellectual and material resource and as a dispenser of information and data.

--Jacobson, Matthew F. Whiteness of a Different Color: European Immigrants and the Alchemy of Race. (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1998), 78.

primary footnote:

--Kevles, Daniel J. In the Name of Eugenics: Genetics and the Uses of Human Heredity. (University of California Press, 1986).

What is most ironic is that much of this research dealt with proving that wide swaths of European immigrants (Italians, Spaniards, Irish, varied Eastern Europeans, etc) were not actually "white." It's not until the extremes of the Nazi movement that American "race-ologists" began backing away from earlier assertions, proclaiming that perhaps all such peoples were "white" after all.

Sin

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

>
>
>

> I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black,

> War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a

Master

> Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was > direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point

> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:

>

> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of how

- > the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at
- > Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie
- > Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor.
- > You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie
- > Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex
- > enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even distributed

- > anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see

- > the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial grants and the German

- > scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were
- > finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.
- > ..... Only after the truth about Nazi extermination

- > became known did the American eugenics movement
- > fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from
- > eugenics to genetics.....As I explored

the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that

- > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the Third Reich

- > but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'

- >
- >

- > James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became

Director in

- > 1968, and President in 1994.

>

- > Gloria Emeagwali

>

| 23703|2007-11-11 07:22:43|sincere1906|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

related:

Friday, October 19, 2007

The Pervasive Nature of Scientific Racism

<http://morpheusrevolutions.blogspot.com/2007/10/pervasive-nature-of-scientific-racism.html>

This week the London's Science Museum canceled a lecture by Nobel Prize-winning geneticist James Watson?part of the two-man team that first constructed the model of the DNA double helix?after the scientist told a newspaper that Africans and Europeans had different levels of intelligence. Watson provoked widespread outrage when his comments were released in a Sunday Times interview, which quoted the 79-year-old American as saying he was "inherently gloomy about the prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours ? whereas all the testing says not really." Watson would add, "people who have to deal with black employees find this not true."

This isn't the first time Watson's comments have stirred controversy. As the UK Independent catalogued, the Nobel prize-winner has had a series of controversial statements. In one instance, he suggested women should have the right to abortions if tests could determine their children would be homosexual. In 2000 at a speech at the University of California, Berkeley, he claimed a link between skin color and sex drive, showing slides of bikini-clad women and asserting that higher doses of melanin was responsible for the stereotype of the "Latin Lover."

Most news reports state that people are "shocked" by Watson's comments. Outrage comes next, along with his dismissal as a "crazed." More often than not, he is described as "controversial." Even with a repeated history of such rhetoric however, Watson's historical standing assures that he is invited to speak to large audiences, and still sought out for interviews. As a 1990 article in the journal Science noted: "To many in the scientific community, Watson has long been something of a wild man, and his colleagues tend to hold their collective breath whenever he veers from the script." Translated: Many fear that Watson may dredge up the often closeted stain on the discipline of "rationality and reason"?scientific racism.

Today mostly thought of as debunked, "race science" was once taken as a normal part of academic and scientific discourse. One of its early progenitors in the modern era was probably none other than American founding father Thomas Jefferson, who in his Notes on the State of Virginia deduced from his "observations" that blacks exhibited a childlike simplicity, a wild imagination, an incapacity to reason and an inability to create artistry comparable to whites?for which he would single out black poet Phillis Wheatley for particular criticism. Jefferson would go on to make reference to the "disagreeable odour" of blacks and claim that "the Oran-ootan (Orangutan)" had a preference "for the black women over those of his own species." Around the same time the naturalist Edward Long in his work A History of Jamaica, would compare black Africans to "dogs" and make the claim that black women sought out monkeys and baboons to "embrace" to gratify their raging sexual passions. Racism was not out of ordinary in the era of Jefferson and Long, during which time the slave trade in African bodies was booming and building up the wealth of the Western world. Yet both men were some of the early few who were beginning to assert that black inferiority was a "natural" state, that could be backed up by scientific observation. In a methodology fraught with irony, the same naturalism that would allow Jefferson to deduce the "natural rights" of man, was used to assert that some men, and women, were "naturally" inferior. Blacks were no longer simply "barbarous" due to a degradation of civilization in a jungle climate, or because they had not been introduced to the "light of Christianity." Rather blacks were inferior to whites and distinctly different on a "natural" biological level that could not be overcome, and that could be backed up by what Long would assert was "matter endued with thought and reason!"

Modern scientific racism was being given birth.

Nurtured within the developing scientific disciplines of its day, it would come to typify European notions towards blacks and those deemed as inferior "others." By the late 19th century it had ascended to the top of the white supremacy rationale ladder, churning out myriad theories that claimed a scientific basis as to the inferiority of non-whites, and blacks in particular. As far back as the early 1800s, black bodies would be cut open and studied as exotic specimens, to be passed around and examined for scientific inquiry by the likes of George Cuvier?regarded as the founder of modern day comparative anatomy. Such was the fate of 'Sara' Baartman?the Khoi woman dubbed the "Hottentot Venus" who was paraded through London and Paris on a leash. Upon her death?following a descent into prostitution through which she contracted syphilis?Cuvier made a plaster cast of her body, dissected her and preserved her organs, including her genitals and brain, in bottles of formaldehyde. Her skeleton and bottled remains were displayed at the Muséum de l'Homme in Paris until 1974, until public pressure sent them to a back room away from sight. The museum did not return her remains until 2002.

And Baartman's case was hardly unique.

From 1845 to 1849, scientific racism allowed Dr. Marion Sims, the father of modern gynecology, to carry out horrific medical experiments on the genitals of unwilling and un-anesthetized slave women. Scientific racism would allow numerous such ethical violations in the name of medicine upon black bodies?from the U.S. government's Tuskegee experiment to other notorious acts carried out by slave owners, the armed forces, the CIA, prisons, and private institutions. The sheer scope of these atrocities is only now becoming understood, through groundbreaking studies such as Dr. Harriet A. Washington's work, Medical Apartheid: The Dark History of Medical Experimentation on Black Americans from Colonial Times to the Present.

And scientific racism was not confined to medicine. It seemed to find a place in any field dedicated to the study of humanity. Proto-anthropologist and naturalist Samuel G. Morton would create an entire field by which human skulls were measured for racial markers of intelligence, ushering what many see as the definitive modern age of scientific racism. In none other than the pages of the now well-respected Scientific American, was an article in the early 1900s on "Congo pygmies," who were described as "small, apelike, elfish creatures, furtive and mischievous." It went on to state that these smallish Africans "closely parallel the brownies and goblins of our fairy tales.." and "live in the dense tangled forests in absolute savagery while they exhibit many ape-like features in their bodies...." Little surprise then that in 1906 Ota Benga, a so-called "pygmie" duped into leaving his African homeland with claims of payment and fortune, would be locked into a cage at the Bronx zoo, to be displayed as a type of ape.

Scientific racism would eventually merge with the related and now rogue?but at one time en vogue?branch of biology known as eugenics. Postulated by Sir Francis Galton in 1865, eugenics proposed that human behavioral traits?and talents?could be discerned through hereditary analysis. Eugenics would assert that certain undesirable traits could be eliminated from the human species. At times seemingly concerned with general matters as height and illness, eugenics also had a more sinister side?asserting that some humans needed to be eliminated (or sterilized) in order to better the species. The targets for sterilization included the mentally challenged, the physically deformed, the poor, the ill and?naturally?the more "undesirable races." In the U.S. this would result in everything from stricter immigration laws to limit more "inferior whites" (normally the Irish or Eastern Europeans), and the tightening of anti-miscegenation laws that became tied to black lynching. Some 60,000 people in the U.S. alone may have been coercively sterilized in a campaign author Edwin Black termed, the War Against the Weak.

While not all scientists were hardcore eugenicists who believed in mass sterilization or extermination, for many race science and the belief in "weaker humans" was taken as a matter of fact. Scientific racism, even in its least malign form, thus permeated the discipline not as a fringe element but as part of the mainstream discourse. From President Woodrow Wilson to women's reproductive activist Margaret Sanger, all stratum of society embraced elements of eugenics (to varying degrees) as a way to strengthen the human race?most especially, the white Nordic variant. Sanger for instance may have believed that some humans were "the defective progeny resulting from irresponsible and unintelligent breeding," but strongly condemned any attempts at forced sterilization. Ironically the pinnacle of eugenicist theory and scientific racism coincided with its demise. One of its biggest admirers was none other than Adolf Hitler, who endorsed the theories and applications of eugenicists in Europe and America for his Nazi ideology. After the world witnessed the use of scientific racism in the Third Reich to create an Aryan master race and to justify the extermination of millions, race science and eugenics saw a precipitous decline. Sanger herself was so horrified by the Nazi excesses she backed away from earlier endorsements of eugenics, but would still advocate it as an individual and voluntary decision.

But, as Dr. Watson reminds us, race science and eugenics never truly died out. Nobel Prize winner Hank Shockley in the 1970s, converting to eugenics later in life, became a staunch advocate for the belief that the less intelligent (which in his mind, by default, included blacks) should be given incentives to not breed with other humans. Mimicking scientific racism and eugenics, 60 Minutes commentator Andy Rooney in 1990 would assert that, "blacks have watered down genes because the less intelligent ones are the ones that have the most children." In 1995 scientific racism's boldest modern public salvo was launched with Richard J. Herrnstein and Charles Murray's The Bell Curve, which linked IQ to race with blacks being deemed as naturally inferior. Though sparking controversy and condemnation, the book was also widely touted in the mainstream media as at the least a legitimate topic of discussion. Malcolm Browne of the New York Times would be so deferential in his review of the book, many took it as an endorsement. Today foundations like the well-monied Pioneer Fund openly advocate for race science, and advocate for changes in public policy based on scientific understandings of race.

What Dr. Watson and the history of scientific racism does is put a lie to the myth that racism is the domain of the uneducated, the ignorant and misinformed. The sad but hard reality is that racism is bigger than a disgruntled white underclass in hoods and sheets or nooses that proliferate as warnings and "pranks." Racism has a much more permeable, lasting and influential presence in the institutions, structures and culture of our society?where true power resides. And it has a long history of infecting even those among us who 'claim' to have the biggest and best of brains.

| 23704|2007-11-11 07:28:24|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

>

> In Holland, a lot of the aristocracy (especially the > Charlemagne era landed aristocracy, as opposed to > the 19th century monied aristocracy) is German > (not just 'Germanic').

>

> And of course most of the monarchies are German - > Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, etc.

>

And many former dynasties. The old Tsar was German on both the male and female line.

Even the Capets of France from whom the King of Spain traces his line claimed Frankish descent (from Belgium) and were constantly intermarrying with Germans.

>

> There was also this belief in the 'long skulled' (aristocratic, > cerebral) versus the 'round skulled' (dimwitted, peasant, > but loyal) - which of course comes back in stories like > The Man From Lamancha (Don Quixote vs Sancho > Panza), Sherlock Holmes (Holmes vs Watson).

>

That probably irked southern Germans like Bavarians and Austrians, actually the majority of Germans, who are round-headed as opposed to long-headed northern Germans like the Saxons and Prussians.

The Hapsburg Dynasty of Austria and the Holy Roman Empire was classically described as "round-faced" although that doesn't necessarily mean they were round-headed.

The Slavs are overwhelmingly round-headed with the Czechs claimed as the most round-headed people in the world.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23705|2007-11-11 08:49:54|Asar Imhotep|Re: Egyptian Sues US Govt Over "Race"|
<http://www.archives.gov/publications/prologue/2002/summer/immigration-law-3.html#nt60>

"The case of Mostafa Hefny is a good example. In 1997 in Detroit, Michigan, Egyptian immigrant Hefny filed suit against the US government for classifying him as racially white when he was obviously black. This classification resulted from use of the obsolete Office of Management and Budget Directive #15, "Race and Ethnic Standards for Federal Statistics and Administrative Reporting," which classified Egyptians as white. Egyptians had long been considered eligible for naturalization by the courts, and the reader will recall how the Board of Immigration Appeals' 1941 reconsideration of the Thind decision in the Sharif case declared natives of the cradles of Western Civilization to be "white persons." In the early twentieth century, classification of Egyptians as white opened the door to their naturalization and no doubt other opportunities. But in 1997, Hefny complained this same classification made him ineligible for opportunities and benefits available only to minorities. Clearly, late twentieth-century changes in "common understanding" continue to add new dimensions to official-and unofficial-classifications of race.60"

FOOTNOTE

"Black or white? Egyptian immigrant fights for black classification," CNN, July 16, 1997. Hefny's story, as reported on www.cnn.com and in Jet magazine, included Hefny's contention that it was the INS who classified him so under an "INS Bulletin." Calls to this writer in the early 1990s raised the issue and led to a merry chase with bizarre results. INS never issued such a bulletin; in fact, INS did not issue guidance regarding race after 1952. Rather, the guilty document was Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Circular A-46, Directive #15, first issued on May 3, 1974. It seems the directive was not well received and was revised May 12, 1977, then finally rescinded by OMB on April 13, 1978. The OMB stressed that the directive was obsolete, had not been in effect for two decades, and was not available. Continued searching turned up one copy of the directive still at hand in the Census Bureau. Hefny encountered the directive in use by his state government in the 1980s."

*****

I was unable to find an update on the case to see if it went to court. No case number is readily available.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

sincere1906 wrote:

Does anyone recall the 1990s case or incident (because I'm not certain if it reached the courts) where an Egyptian immigrant sued/took the US govt to task for classifying him as "white." For reasons of affirmative action he wanted to be classified as "African-American/ black." His facial features tended more so towards Anwar Sadat than Hosni Mubarak. If anyone recalls the case/incident, would appreciate it if you'd post something on it.

Regards

Sin

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23706|2007-11-11 09:49:28|Ferg|niw-t decoded|

Greetings All.

NIW-T has been decoded!. Stay tuned!

In a few days time I shall be revealing the etymology of the determinative, niw-t
Somo

| 23707|2007-11-11 09:56:45|asar_imhotep|Re: KMT - Reply to Alex|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

> I don't know enough about all African philosophy, so please > correct me.

>

> However. It struck me that in Western thinking heaven and hell > are places. Hell is a fiery place below the earth, while heaven > is some pleasant place in the clouds/the sky.

>

> In African philosophy, good and evil are conditions. Heaven > is harmony, while hell/evil is dissonance.

>

> Am I correct in this, and does this place Ancient Egypt > well within the African sphere of thought?

>

> Alex

>

I can't say that the idea equivalent to the Biblical heaven or hell is a universal African philosophical concept. But the earliest attestation of a "paradise" and "hell" as a location for righteous and unrighteous souls respectively can be found amongst the early Ta-Merrian thought.

Diop presents us with the concept and image in Civilization or Barbarism pgs. 331-332. If the person on earth satisfied the criteria (a positive on all of the 42 Admonitions to MAA.t in the Rau Nu Prt M Hrw), then this person's soul gained the Aaru or Aar, a garden protected by an iron wall with several gates, and a river running through it. This was the place of the "blessed spirits." It was also called Amenti. If you were an impious soul and did not meet the criteria, you were sent to a fiery place to be tortured.

A depiction of the scene can be viewed in the Seti I tomb of the 19th Dynasty. I couldn't find a picture on the net with the tomb depiction and the image is too crude to scan from Diop's work (it's in Black and White). Diop (1991: 332) goes on to state:

"Figure 75: Hell in the Egyptian religion represented in the tomb of Seti I, father of Rameses II (XIX Dynasty, 1300 B.C.). A monstrous snake uses the coils of its body to form a hideous bridge hanging in space, above hell, whose jailers stir the flames. Death, on the right hand side, facing the snake's mouth, is held in space only by its past actions on Earth in order to cross this bridge and reach paradise. If Good wins out, he is saved. If not, he will be thrown into the flames of hell, which will devour him. This certainly is Islam's siratal moustakhima, 1700 years before the birth of the prophet Muhammad and one can grasp the undeniable historical connection that exists between the Egyptian ancestral religion and the revealed religions. One might have reproduced also the tribunal of Osiris (Aras in Islam), the day of the Last Judgment. (Photo by the author)"

In most African spiritual systems there is no concept of hell as a location. Your actions on earth will determine the conditions you live in (whether in this lifetime or the next). For instance, in Ifa, man is to come to earth a total of 8 times. Each time the spirit incarnates he/she is to complete 12 steps. If the human being does not complete these 12 steps in each lifetime, they are to return back and start the process over again.

In traditional African societies, individual man and nations have what the Congeese call Tuzingu [rolls of life]. These rolls, or tapes, imprint or record of man's deeds. This applies to nations (communities) as a whole as well. This gives us an implication that there is such a thing as a national or communal spirit that is subject to the same social laws as individuals. On the day of "judgement" each person will see his roll of life [luzingu] unfold and speak loudly before the "great judge" [kalunga, Nzambi]. Depending on the outcome, or weighing of your soul, you either reincarnate to see if you can get it right this time, or you become a part of the living universal energy that permeates creation. Compare this with the Egyptian and Judaic "Tree of Life" (Diop 1991:333) - again on the Seti I tomb)

Now some don't necessarily see a final location after death, just an endless series of reincarnations as different types of beings (as for some sects in Ifa believe - Ode Remo). But all in all, you have fortune and misfortune and they both manifest in your lifetime (or next incarnation).

References:

Diop, Cheikh Anta (1991). Civilization or Barbarism: An Authentic Anthropology, Lawrence Hill. Brooklyn, New York

Fu-Kiau, K. Bunseki. (2001). African Cosmology of the Bantu-Kongo: Principles of Life & Living. Athelia Henrietta Press. Canada

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23708|2007-11-11 10:42:16|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

The dolichocephalic Teutonic race is Protestant, the brachycephalic Celto-Slavic race is either Roman Catholic or Greek Orthodox. In the first, individualism, wilfulness, self-reliance, independence, are strongly developed; the second is submissive to authority and conservative in instincts.

-- Isaac Taylor, The Origin of the Aryans, 1889

Interestingly, the extreme long-heads of Nordics has its closest match with the dolichocephaly of sub-Saharan Africans and the dark Dravidians of South India.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23709|2007-11-11 10:58:48|Djehuti Sundaka|On American Soil|

On American Soil

How Justice Became a Casualty of WWII

by Jack Hamann

<http://www.jackhamann.com/books.html>

The sun had not yet risen on August 15, 1944 when two U.S. Army military policemen discovered the lifeless body of Guglielmo Olivotto. The gruesome scene made little sense: Olivotto was an Italian prisoner of war; he had apparently been lynched. His corpse was strung from a rope tied to an obstacle course at the base of a wooded bluff on sprawling military installation called Fort Lawton, located just north of downtown Seattle. Olivotto's body had no cuts or bruises; there was little sign of struggle.

Three months later, the opening gavel fell on what would become the Army's largest and longest court-martial of World War II. Forty-three soldiers, all of them African American, were accused of rioting; three of the soldiers were on trial for their lives, charged with the murder of Private Olivotto. The Army prosecutor was Leon Jaworski, one of the most famous lawyers in American history. Two defense attorneys were given just ten days to prepare for the trial of all forty-three men, including those facing the death penalty. It was the first and only time in American history that a "mob" of black men had gone on trial for the alleged lynching of a white man.

The murder of an enemy soldier on American soil caught the attention of luminaries like President Franklin Roosevelt and future Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall and stirred international concerns about the treatment of prisoners of war in American custody. The trial played a role in eventual decisions to desegregate the U.S. armed services and revise the military's code of justice. Despite the size and scope of the court-martial, many questions about the prosecution, the defendants and the fairness of the trial lingered for decades.

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!

| 23710|2007-11-11 14:37:39|Matthew|I have finished my first translation of the Shefa_Tal into heiroglyph|

<http://ph.groups.yahoo.com/group/reharachty/photos/browse/2195>

Here is a link to my Yahoo group. I just worked out a very pleasing translation of the Shefa_tal which I found on "Hebrew for Christians", a most excellent resource site, transcribing the classical Hebrew letters on the fingers into the pictographic or heiroglyphic cousin forms. This old teaching is like a reflection of every yoga teaching I believe was transmitted and shared between all of the cultures of the ancient world. This version of the Yoga Sutra Mudra Nyasa Tantra is of great interest because it is through the Hebrew/"Egyptian" lineage. Imagine that this is not only a meditation but a song and a dance like the Thai Dancers pay homage to Quan Yin. I am still working on this aspect but have included a very simple song on the palms of my translation, which is "The Gentle Light of the Voice of the Moon." I believe this was taught to people in times of great strife and conflict and warfare as a way to help preserve healing on a universal level and promote self-determination. Forgive my strange chicken scratch, I am not a very talented artist, but please pay attention to how the sequence of gestures from the left to the right hand are moving in this poetry form, like a pot(left) to seeds(right) and your choice to cultivate (life).

This reminds of Bes, and his dancers tattooed with a cat image, protection given from Bast, and it reminds of Ausar and Ptah as generational brothers, or Tehuti and Chnum, maybe as lovers. I think it is hard for us to imagine the depths of the conflicts of the ancient world for all the histories that have been mutilated on the alter or thrown away into the abyss, for even in cinema we are left with glorifications of supreme sacrifice and victory like in "300", where the bad guy, Xerxes is just a overinflated "Prince" archetype, or "The Passion of Christ", where the fever of religious conflict and spiritual illness escape reality's hands once again for the sentimental and obtuse consumer. The deep devotion and courage of all of the diverse communities that had to survive co-existing with these mega star societies is still a long list of names on the tomb of the unknown soldier. I found the film Asoka, about Lord Asoka and his brother from the Hindu dynasties, to be the only vital historically based docu-drama that had any valid truth to share. But movies and cinema are not a replacement for education even though they can enhance it greatly.

With all these discussions about eugenics and the effect these heinous practices have had on the world at large, I find it appropriate to focus on the roots of the shared field of healing that all societies must embrace at some stage, and language and expression are a shared medicine of mutual cognitive sustainable growth . Many tribal cultures reflect that word and song and gesture and dance are one fluid expression of a complex system of intelligence, and Egypt from the most ancient of days is a reflection of this legacy. Like the string game, like the shell game, these forms are thankfully still recognizable and deserve to be revitalized by a wider circle of devoted students.

Enjoy,
Matt Mercer
JAH

| 23711|2007-11-11 18:47:14|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James
Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

Attachments :

Thanks for the eugenics references. I certainly intend to look at them. I thought the blog was quite illuminating.

When I checked the index of Edward Hooper's, The River- A Journey to the source of HIV and AIDS, Little Brown, 2000 there were no references to Cold Spring Harbor or James Watson.

The story was different, though, for Leonard Horowitz, Emerging Viruses-AIDS & Ebola, Tetrahedron, 1999. One of the documented interviews with Leonard cited in the text, went as follows:

< Robert: Ahh...Its out of Cold Springs Harbor, that's the other great biowarfare palace. It's the Eugenics Institute.
Cold Springs is in upstate New York.....Anyway Cold Spring Harbor put out a big thing on MMMV, that is 'maximally monstrous malignant virus' and then they gave all the characteristics. And they talked about what it would take to produce this kind of virus And of course all the characteristics are exactly those of the AIDS virus except for one thing, and that is aerosolized transmission- which we believe is potentially possible.....'>

But Watson, then at the Medical Legal Foundation, was in no way implicated in the text.

There were a lot of references to Merck and Litton Bionetics, though.

GE

Dr. Gloria T. Emeagwali
Prof. of History and African Studies
History Department

Central Connecticut State University
1615 Stanley Street
New Britain
CT 06050.

www.africahistory.net <<http://www.africahistory.net/>>

www.africaonline.com <<http://www.africaonline.com/>>

African History

www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html <<http://www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html>>

Africa Update

---

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com on behalf of sincere1906

Sent: Sun 11/11/2007 10:17 AM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

"If the ideology of the eugenic standpoint emerged more or less logically and gradually from the mid-nineteenth century scientific and political arguments regarding racial stocks and their inherent qualities, the apparatus of eugenics as a presence on the American scene rose rather dramatically after the turn of the century. In 1904 the Carnegie Institution put up money to open a Station for the Study of Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, under the direction of Charles Davenport. Davenport himself was among the enthusiastic supporters within the scientific community who felt that, to paraphrase the historian Daniel Kevles, "nationality" was primarily a function of "race," and "race" was the prime determinant of behavior. "The idea of a 'melting pot' belongs to a pre-Mendelian age," Davenport wrote to one colleague, showing his hand on the immigration question. "Now we recognize that characters are inherited as unites and do not readily break up." In the ensuing years, under Davenport's direction, the station at Cold Spring Harbor provided critical institutional focus to the eugenics movement, serving both as a major intellectual and material resource and as a dispenser of information and data.

--Jacobson, Matthew F. Whiteness of a Different Color: European Immigrants and the Alchemy of Race. (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1998), 78.

primary footnote:

--Kevles, Daniel J. In the Name of Eugenics: Genetics and the Uses of Human Heredity. (University of California Press, 1986).

What is most ironic is that much of this research dealt with proving that wide swaths of European immigrants (Italians, Spaniards, Irish, varied Eastern Europeans, etc) were not actually "white." It's not until the extremes of the Nazi movement that American "race-ologists" began backing away from earlier assertions, proclaiming that perhaps all such peoples were "white" after all.

Sin

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

>

>

>

> I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black,

> War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a

Master

> Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was

> direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point

> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:

>

> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of

how

> the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at

> Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie

> Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor.

> You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie

> Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex

> enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even

distributed

> anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see

> the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial

grants and the German

> scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were

> finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.

> ..... Only after the truth about Nazi

extermination

> became known did the American eugenics movement

> fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from > eugenics to genetics.....As I explored

the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the Third Reich

> but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'

>

>

> James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became

Director in > 1968, and President in 1994.

>

> Gloria Emeagwali

>

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23712|2007-11-12 07:23:36|Alex van Deelen|Egyptian Sues US Govt Over "Race"|

> Does anyone recall the 1990s case or incident (because

> I'm not certain if it reached the courts) where an Egyptian

> immigrant sued/took the US govt to task for classifying > him as "white." For reasons of affirmative action he wanted > to be classified as "African-American/black." His facial > features tended more so towards Anwar Sadat than

- > Hosni Mubarak. If anyone recalls the case/incident,
- > would appreciate it if you'd post something on it.
- >
- > Regards
- >
- > Sin

<http://www.cnn.com/US/9707/16/racial.suit/index.html>

Black or white? Egyptian immigrant fights for black classification
July 16, 1997
Web posted at: 4:22 a.m. EDT (0822 GMT)
From Correspondent Joan MacFarlane

DETROIT (CNN) -- An Egyptian immigrant is suing the U.S. government because they've told him he's white when his entire life he's been black.
| 23713|2007-11-12 08:10:04|kungfuhustle|Re: Egyptian Sues US Govt Over "Race"|
They'll lose, based on 1970s cases where people of Mexican heritage appealed for the same, and were denied.
The ruling is questionable since white women are classified as minorities and presently receive the majority (>75%) of U.S. based minority set-aside program awards. So, the classification is not solely determined by skin color, but the person must also show their group has been economically suppressed by mainstream social practices.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Alex van Deelen <avdeelen@wanadoo.nl>
Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re:Egyptian Sues US Govt Over "Race"
Date: Mon, 12 Nov 2007 16:19:52 +0100
Mailer: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1409

- > Does anyone recall the 1990s case or incident (because
- > I'm not certain if it reached the courts) where an Egyptian
- > immigrant sued/took the US govt to task for classifying
- > him as "white." For reasons of affirmative action he wanted
- > to be classified as "African-American/black." His facial
- > features tended more so towards Anwar Sadat than
- > Hosni Mubarak. If anyone recalls the case/incident,
- > would appreciate it if you'd post something on it.

>
> Regards
>
> Sin

<http://www.cnn.com/US/9707/16/racial.suit/index.html>

Black or white? Egyptian immigrant fights for black classification

July 16, 1997

Web posted at: 4:22 a.m. EDT (0822 GMT)

>From Correspondent Joan MacFarlane

DETROIT (CNN) -- An Egyptian immigrant is suing the U.S. government because they've told him he's white when his entire life he's been black.

| 23714|2007-11-12 08:39:26|asar_imhotep|KemMiou Videos|
Peace Ta-Seti

In my usual fashion of scouring the internet for good video documentaries, I came across a gold mine in the organization and collection of African centered video clips and documentaries. The only disadvantage of this collection is that an overwhelming majority of the videos are in French. They have very good lectures by Dr. Ivan Van Sertima, Dr. Theophile Obenga, Molefi Kente Asante, Maulana Karenga and many others. They have a whole collection on African origins of civilizations and its information.

I encourage those who have the time to check it out. All I can say is that the French are doing it over there and I think we can use their efforts as a model to revive and disseminate new findings. The categories for the videos are as follows:

Africa
African Origins
Afrocentricity
Ancient Africa
Apartheid
Black Panther Party
Colonization
Diaspora
Education & Conscientisation
Françafrique
History
Imperial Africa

Kamitophobia
Kemet
Mythical Africa
Nation Of Islam
Our Warriors
Racism & Discrimination
Religion & Spirituality
Slavery
Tales, Art & theatre
White Ferocity
Ads & Promotional
Health
Music & Dance
Policy
Science & Technology
Society & Media
Sport & Entertainment

KemMiou Video

<http://video.kemmiou.com/index.php>

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23715|2007-11-12 11:38:00|Peter Gray|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

This is a great topic. I am still trying to determine whether or not the following excerpt is from an "urban legend" type of document -- one that has been circulating for years now, and I'd appreciate any feedback on the validity of the document (supposedly HB [House Bill] 15090):

UNITED STATES SENATE LIBRARY

DEPT. OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1970

HEARINGS BEFORE A SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

NINETY-FIRST CONGRESS

FIRST SESSION

HB15090 [PART 5]

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Department of the Army

Statement of Director, Advanced Research Project Agency

Statement of Director, Defense Research and Engineering

Tuesday, July 1, 1969

SYNTHETIC BIOLOGICAL AGENTS

"There are two things about the biological agent field that I would like to mention. One is the possibility of technological surprise. Molecular biology is a field that is advancing very rapidly and eminent biologists believe that within 5 to 10 years it [will] be possible to produce a synthetic biological agent, an agent that does not naturally exist and for which no natural immunity could have been acquired.

Mr. Sikes: Are we doing any work in that field?

Dr. MacArthur: We are not.

Mr. Sikes: Why not? Lack of money or lack of interest?

Dr. MacArthur: Certainly not lack of interest.

Mr. Sikes: Would you provide for our records information on what would be required, what the advantages of such a program would be, and the time and cost involved?

Dr. MacArthur: We will be very happy to.

The information follows:

The dramatic progress being made in the field of molecular biology led us to investigate the relevance of this field of science to biological warfare. A small group of experts considered this matter and provided the following observations:

1. All biological agents up to the present time are representatives of naturally occurring disease, and are thus known by scientists throughout the world. They are easily available to qualified scientists for research, either for offensive or defensive purposes.
2. Within the next 5 to 10 years, it would be possible to make a new infective microorganism which could differ in certain important aspects from any known disease-causing organisms. Most important of these is that it might be refractory to the immunological and therapeutic processes upon which we depend to maintain our relative freedom from infectious disease.
3. A research program to explore the feasibility of this could be implemented in approximately 5 years [NOTE TIME FRAME] at a total cost of $10 million.
4. It would be very difficult to establish such a program. Molecular biology is a relatively new science. There are not many highly competent scientists in the field; almost all are in university laboratories, and they are generally adequately supported from sources other than DoD. However, it was considered possible to initiate an adequate program through the research National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council (NAS-NRC). The matter was discussed with the NAS-NRC and tentative plans were made to initiate the program. However, decreasing funds in CB [chemical/biological warfare], growing criticism of the CB program, and our reluctance to involve the NAS-NRC in such a controversial [*] endeavor have led us to postpone it for the past 2 years.

* It is a highly controversial issue and there are many who believe that such research should not be undertaken lest it lead to another method of massive killing of large populations. On the other hand, without the sure scientific knowledge that such a weapon is possible, and an understanding of the ways it could be done, there is little that can be done to devise defensive measures. Should an enemy develop it, there is little doubt that this is an important area of potential military inferiority in which there is no adequate research program.

I am hoping some of our Ta-Seti members may recognise this excerpt and can provide some feedback. Many thanks.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu
Date: Sun, 11 Nov 2007 21:47:12 -0500
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Thanks for the eugenics references. I certainly intend to look at them. I thought the blog was quite illuminating.

When I checked the index of Edward Hooper's, The River- A Journey to the source of HIV and AIDS, Little Brown, 2000 there were no references to Cold Spring Harbor or James Watson.

The story was different, though, for Leonard Horowitz, Emerging Viruses-AIDS & Ebola, Tetrahedron, 1999. One of the documented interviews with Leonard cited in the text, went as follows: < Robert: Ahh...Its out of Cold Springs Harbor, that's the other great biowarfare palace. It's the Eugenics Institute.

Cold Springs is in upstate New York.....Anyway Cold Spring Harbor put out a big thing on MMMV, that is 'maximally monstrous malignant virus' and then they gave all the characteristics. And they talked about what it would take to produce this kind of virus And of course all the characteristics are exactly those of the AIDS virus except for one thing, and that is aerosolized transmission- which we believe is potentially possible.....'>

But Watson, then at the Medical Legal Foundation, was in no way implicated in the text.

There were a lot of references to Merck and Litton Bionetics, though.
GE

Dr. Gloria T. Emeagwali
Prof. of History and African Studies
History Department
Central Connecticut State University
1615 Stanley Street
New Britain
CT 06050.
www.africahistory.net
www.africaonline.com
African History
www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html
Africa Update

---

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com on behalf of sincere1906
Sent: Sun 11/11/2007 10:17 AM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

"If the ideology of the eugenic standpoint emerged more or less logically and gradually from the mid-nineteenth century scientific and political arguments regarding racial stocks and their inherent qualities, the apparatus of eugenics as a presence on the American scene rose rather dramatically after the turn of the century. In 1904 the Carnegie Institution put up money to open a Station for the Study of Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, under the direction of Charles Davenport. Davenport himself was among the enthusiastic supporters within the scientific community who felt that, to paraphrase the historian Daniel Kevles, "nationality" was primarily a function of "race," and "race" was the prime determinant of behavior. "The idea of a 'melting pot' belongs to a pre-Mendelian age," Davenport wrote to one colleague, showing his hand on the immigration question. "Now we recognize that characters are inherited as unites and do not readily break up." In the ensuing years, under Davenport's direction, the station at Cold Spring Harbor provided critical institutional focus to the eugenics movement, serving both as a major intellectual and material resource and as a dispenser of information and data.

--Jacobson, Matthew F. Whiteness of a Different Color: European Immigrants and the Alchemy of Race. (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1998), 78.

primary footnote:

--Kevles, Daniel J. In the Name of Eugenics: Genetics and the Uses of Human Heredity. (University of California Press, 1986).

What is most ironic is that much of this research dealt with proving that wide swaths of European immigrants (Italians, Spaniards, Irish, varied Eastern Europeans, etc) were not actually "white." It's not until the extremes of the Nazi movement that American "race-ologists" began backing away from earlier assertions, proclaiming that perhaps all such peoples were "white" after all.

Sin

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

>

>

>

> I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black,

> War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a Master

> Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was > direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point

> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:

>

> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of how

> the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at

> Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie

> Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor.

> You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie

> Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex

> enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even distributed > anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see > the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial grants and the German

> scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were

> finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.

> ..... Only after the truth about Nazi extermination

> became known did the American eugenics movement

> fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from > eugenics to genetics.....As I explored the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the Third Reich > but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'

>

>

> James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became Director in > 1968, and President in 1994.

>

> Gloria Emeagwali

>

Yahoo! Groups Links

To visit your group on the web, go to:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/

Your email settings:

Individual Email | Traditional

To change settings online go to:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/join

(Yahoo! ID required)

To change settings via email:

mailto:Ta\_Seti-digest@yahoogroups.com

mailto:Ta\_Seti-fullfeatured@yahoogroups.com

To unsubscribe from this group, send an email to:

Ta\_Seti-unsubscribe@yahoogroups.com

Your use of Yahoo! Groups is subject to:

<http://docs.yahoo.com/info/terms/>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sub>é</sub> Stop by today!
| 23716|2007-11-12 12:45:16|kungfuhustle|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold
Spring Harbor (Off top)|
Peter

You might consult back transcripts of "Tony Brown's Journal" of the same time period.

In one episode Mr. Brown hosted a show with 15 research doctors who came out and stated the reality of their work on this program.

Pn PBS, they presented the official Statement Of Work, printed on U.S.

Department Of Defense letterhead, requesting information on development of a specific bio-agent that attacked the human immunity system.

These doctors went on to testify the development of the AIDS virus in response to this SOW, and funded by the US DoD using a tainted Polo vaccine.

This site speaks more to this.

http://www.newmediaexplorer.org/sepp/2005/09/24/aids\_made\_in\_america\_journal\_of\_degenerative\_diseases.htm

You may find this 2000 presentation helpful in understanding what is actually available today, and the dedication being brought to bare on the issue of development of ethnic specific Biotech.

http://www.upmc-biosecurity.org/website/events/2000\_symposium-2/poste/trans\_post.html

Malodorants

Malodorant agents (stink bombs) have existed since the Second World War. Attempts were made as late as 1966 to develop malodorants that target particular ethnic groups.

Why would somebody patent the odor of human feces? In June 2001, Ecological Technologies Corporation, a small Texas company run by a retired US Navy Commander and former Naval Laboratories researcher (13) obtained US patent 6,242,489 on malodorant compositions. Ecological Technologies claims the use of organic sulfur compounds and skatole the compound that makes feces stink to produce the perfect stink bomb. The rationale behind the invention is clarified in the patent:

The use of obnoxious olfactory stimuli to control and/or modify human behavior in this way is an attractive concept for modern warfare. Heretofore malodorant compositions have been too toxic for use when seeking to incapacitate and/or disperse an individual, or group of individuals (14)

Malodorants are high on the list of non-lethal research priorities. US strategists have concluded that odor-producing chemicals "are likely to be permitted under the CWC. (15) The Joint Non-Lethal Weapons Program sponsors a project that investigates odorants and their effects on behavior. It can be used for riot control, to clear facilities, to deny an area, or as a taggant. (16) At the US Army Edgewood Chemical Biological Center in Maryland, sophisticated experiments were performed to identify the most obnoxious smells, one of which turned out to be US Government Standard Bathroom Odor. (17)

The Ringworm Children

http://www.infowars.com/articles/world/israel\_the\_ringworm\_children.htm

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Date: Mon, 12 Nov 2007 14:34:58 -0500

This is a great topic. I am still trying to determine whether or not the following excerpt is from an "urban legend" type of document -- one that has been circulating for years now, and I'd appreciate any feedback on the validity of the document (supposedly HB [House Bill] 15090):

UNITED STATES SENATE LIBRARY

DEPT. OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1970

HEARINGS BEFORE A SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
NINETY-FIRST CONGRESS
FIRST SESSION

HB15090 [PART 5]

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Department of the Army

Statement of Director, Advanced Research Project Agency

Statement of Director, Defense Research and Engineering

Tuesday, July 1, 1969

SYNTHETIC BIOLOGICAL AGENTS

"There are two things about the biological agent field that I would like to mention. One is the possibility of technological surprise. Molecular biology is a field that is advancing very rapidly and eminent biologists believe that within 5 to 10 years it [will] be possible to produce a synthetic biological agent, an agent that does not naturally exist and for which no natural immunity could have been acquired.

Mr. Sikes: Are we doing any work in that field?

Dr. MacArthur: We are not.

Mr. Sikes: Why not? Lack of money or lack of interest?

Dr. MacArthur: Certainly not lack of interest.

Mr. Sikes: Would you provide for our records information on what would be required, what the advantages of such a program would be, and the time and cost involved?

Dr. MacArthur: We will be very happy to.

The information follows:

The dramatic progress being made in the field of molecular biology led us to investigate the relevance of this field of science to biological warfare. A small group of experts considered this matter and provided the following observations:

1. All biological agents up to the present time are representatives of naturally occurring disease, and are thus known by scientists throughout the world. They are easily available to qualified scientists for research, either for offensive or defensive purposes.

2. Within the next 5 to 10 years, it would be possible to make a new infective microorganism which could differ in certain important aspects from any known disease-causing organisms. Most important of these is that it might be refractory to the immunological and therapeutic processes upon which we depend to maintain our relative freedom from infectious disease.

3. A research program to explore the feasibility of this could be implemented in approximately 5 years [NOTE TIME FRAME] at a total cost of $10 million.

4. It would be very difficult to establish such a programme. Molecular biology is a relatively new science. There are not many highly competent scientists in the field; almost all are in university laboratories, and they are generally adequately supported from sources other than DoD. However, it was considered possible to initiate an adequate program through the research National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council (NAS-NRC).

The matter was discussed with the NAS-NRC and tentative plans were made to initiate the program. However, decreasing funds in CB [chemical/biological warfare], growing criticism of the CB program, and our reluctance to involve the NAS-NRC in such a controversial [*] endeavor have led us to postpone it for the past 2 years.

* It is a highly controversial issue and there are many who believe that such research should not be undertaken lest it lead to another method of massive killing of large populations. On the other hand, without the sure scientific knowledge that such a weapon is possible, and an understanding of the ways it could be done, there is little that can be done to devise defensive measures. Should an enemy develop it, there is little doubt that this is an important area of potential military inferiority in which there is no adequate research program.

I am hoping some of our Ta-Seti members may recognise this excerpt and can provide some feedback. Many thanks.

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu

Date: Sun, 11 Nov 2007 21:47:12 -0500

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Thanks for the eugenics references. I certainly intend to look at them. I thought the blog was quite illuminating.

When I checked the index of Edward Hooper's, The River- A Journey to the source of HIV and AIDS, Little Brown, 2000 there were no references to Cold Spring Harbor or James Watson.

The story was different, though, for Leonard Horowitz, Emerging Viruses-AIDS & Ebola, Tetrahedron, 1999. One of the documented interviews with Leonard cited in the text, went as follows:

< Robert: Ahh...Its out of Cold Springs Harbor, that's the other great biowarfare palace. It's the Eugenics Institute. Cold Springs is in upstate New York.....Anyway Cold Spring Harbor put out a big thing on MMMV, that is 'maximally monstrous malignant virus' and then they gave all the characteristics. And they talked about what it would take to produce this kind of virus And of course all the characteristics are exactly those of the AIDS virus except for one thing, and that is aerosolized transmission- which we believe is potentially possible.....'>

But Watson, then at the Medical Legal Foundation, was in no way implicated in the text.

There were a lot of references to Merck and Litton Bionetics, though.

GE

Dr. Gloria T. Emeagwali
Prof. of History and African Studies
History Department
Central Connecticut State University
1615 Stanley Street
New Britain
CT 06050.
www.africahistory.net
www.africaonline.com
African History
www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html
Africa Update

---

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com on behalf of sincere1906
Sent: Sun 11/11/2007 10:17 AM
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

"If the ideology of the eugenic standpoint emerged more or less logically and gradually from the mid-nineteenth century scientific and political arguments regarding racial stocks and their inherent qualities, the apparatus of eugenics as a presence on the American scene rose rather dramatically after the turn of the century. In 1904 the Carnegie Institution put up money to open a Station for the Study of Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, under the direction of Charles Davenport. Davenport himself was among the enthusiastic supporters within the scientific community who felt that, to paraphrase the historian Daniel Kevles, "nationality" was primarily a function of "race," and "race" was the prime determinant of behavior. "The idea of a 'melting pot' belongs to a pre-Mendelian age," Davenport wrote to one colleague, showing his hand on the immigration question. "Now we recognize that characters are inherited as unites and do not readily break up." In the ensuing years, under Davenport's direction, the station at Cold Spring Harbor provided critical institutional focus to the eugenics movement, serving both as a major intellectual and material resource and as a dispenser of information and data.

--Jacobson, Matthew F. Whiteness of a Different Color: European Immigrants and the Alchemy of Race. (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1998), 78.

primary footnote:

--Kevles, Daniel J. In the Name of Eugenics: Genetics and the Uses of Human Heredity. (University of California Press, 1986).

What is most ironic is that much of this research dealt with proving that wide swaths of European immigrants (Italians, Spaniards, Irish, varied Eastern Europeans, etc) were not actually "white." It's not until the extremes of the Nazi movement that American "race-ologists" began backing away from earlier assertions, proclaiming that perhaps all such peoples were "white" after all.

Sin

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

>

>

>

> I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in

a

text written by Edwin Black,

> War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a

Master

> Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would

consult it to see if there was > direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders

of South African apartheid. At that point

> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt

really attracted my attention:

>

> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth

of

how

> the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at

> Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie

> Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor.

> You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie

> Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex

> enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even

distributed > anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you

will see > the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial

grants and the German > scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were

> finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.
> ..... Only after the truth about Nazi

extermination

> became known did the American eugenics movement > fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name

from > eugenics to genetics.....As I explored

the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in

the

Third Reich

> but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'

>

>

> James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became

Director in > 1968, and President in 1994.

>

> Gloria Emeagwali

>

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sub>é</sub> Stop
by today!

| 23717|2007-11-12 14:31:59|asar_imhotep|Kemet - Black Civilization (important video)|
I think this video is important for everyone to see. It's only 30 minutes but I think it will give those a firm foundation into some of the dialogue that has been happening here for the past couple of weeks who may not have the necessary background to follow everything. Shows like this are rare and of course are not seen on National Geographic or the History Channel. Take a look at it and see how some of what has been talked about here relates to the subject matter in recent discussions (especially with KaaUma/Kmt discussion).

<http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-6056288267287312439&hl=en>

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

*****

Kemet - Black Civilization

Why did the people in the Sahara migrate and where did they go?

Where did the people come from that populated the Egypt of the pharaohs... Tout and how many thousands of year did this Egypt exist?

How did the Greeks describe the Egyptians and where they came from? Why did the Kush Nation decline according to Davidson and where did many of its population migrate to?

How does Davidson summarize the relationship between the interior people of Africa and the great civilization of ancient Egypt?

| 23718|2007-11-12 14:36:15|Asar Imhotep|Bantu Cosmology & The Origins of Egyptian Civilization (lecture)|

If you cannot view this html email, please visit

http://www.houstonministryofculture.com/events/index.php?do=/public/event/view/id\_92/

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.
| 23719|2007-11-12 14:42:29|kungfuhustle|Re: Kemet - Black Civilization (important video)|
Asar

Thanks for the video link.

You most likely have these links already, but others may find them useful.

KMT Magazine Quarterly
<http://www.egyptology.com/kmt/>
Provides up to date info on current digs

Various Links from Reeder Egyptology.com
<http://www.egyptology.com/reeder/links.html>

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Kemet - Black Civilization (important video)

Date: Mon, 12 Nov 2007 22:31:54 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

I think this video is important for everyone to see. It's only 30 minutes but I think it will give those a firm foundation into some of the dialogue that has been happening here for the past couple of weeks who may not have the necessary background to follow everything. Shows like this are rare and of course are not seen on National Geographic or the History Channel. Take a look at it and see how some of what has been talked about here relates to the subject matter in recent discussions (especially with KaaUma/Kmt discussion).

<http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-6056288267287312439&hl=en>

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

*****

Kemet - Black Civilization

Why did the people in the Sahara migrate and where did they go?

Where did the people come from that populated the Egypt of the pharaohs... Tout and how many thousands of year did this Egypt exist?

How did the Greeks describe the Egyptians and where they came from?
Why did the Kush Nation decline according to Davidson and where did many of its population migrate to?

How does Davidson summarize the relationship between the interior people of Africa and the great civilization of ancient Egypt?

| 23720|2007-11-12 22:13:47|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

As James Watson's name has come up I thought I'd add a little trivia. Our local PBS station in LA just ran an interview of Watson who was pushing his book "Avoid Boring People" (or some such name). One could tell by the answers to the questions put to him that he is really a closet Nazi (or maybe not closeted). He doesn't like beaurocracy, doesn't like waiting, walking slow, doesn't like working for anyone else, etc.

I didn't catch the whole interview so I don't know if the hostess, Val Zavala provided background on him or not. She was merely cordial to him but nonetheless I was surprised he was on with so little confrontation. Nothing was discussed regarding his racial views. If his racial views were not addressed I wonder if that was journalistically responsible. Likely he made that a condition of his interview.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> This is a great topic. I am still trying to determine whether or not the following excerpt is from an "urban legend" type of document - one that has been circulating for years now, and I'd appreciate any feedback on the validity of the document (supposedly HB [House Bill] 15090):

>

> UNITED STATES SENATE LIBRARY

>

> DEPT. OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1970

>

> HEARINGS BEFORE A SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

>

> HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

> NINETY-FIRST CONGRESS

> FIRST SESSION

>

> HB15090 [PART 5]

>

> REEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

> Department of the Army

> Statement of Director, Advanced Research Project Agency

> Statement of Director, Defense Research and Engineering

>

> Tuesday, July 1, 1969

> SYNTHETIC BIOLOGICAL AGENTS

>

> "There are two things about the biological agent field that I would like to mention. One is the possibility of technological surprise.

Molecular biology is a field that is advancing very rapidly and eminent biologists believe that within 5 to 10 years it [will] be possible to produce a synthetic biological agent, an agent that does not naturally exist and for which no natural immunity could have been acquired.

>

> Mr. Sikes: Are we doing any work in that field?

> Dr. MacArthur: We are not.

> Mr. Sikes: Why not? Lack of money or lack of interest?

> Dr. MacArthur: Certainly not lack of interest.

> Mr. Sikes: Would you provide for our records information on what would be required, what the advantages of such a program would be, and the time and cost involved?

> Dr. MacArthur: We will be very happy to.

>

> The information follows:

>

> The dramatic progress being made in the field of molecular biology led us to investigate the relevance of this field of science to biological warfare. A small group of experts considered this matter and provided the following observations:

>

> 1. All biological agents up to the present time are representatives of naturally occurring disease, and are thus known by scientists throughout the world. They are easily available to qualified scientists for research, either for offensive or defensive purposes.

>

> 2. Within the next 5 to 10 years, it would be possible to make a new infective microorganism which could differ in certain important aspects from any known disease-causing organisms. Most important of these is that it might be refractory to the immunological and therapeutic processes upon which we depend to maintain our relative freedom from infectious disease.

>

> 3. A research program to explore the feasibility of this could be implemented in approximately 5 years [NOTE TIME FRAME] at a total cost of $10 million.

>

> 4. It would be very difficult to establish such a programme. Molecular biology is a relatively new science. There are not many highly competent scientists in the field; almost all are in university laboratories, and they are generally adequately supported from sources other than DoD. However, it was considered possible to initiate an adequate program through the research National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council (NAS-NRC).

> The matter was discussed with the NAS-NRC and tentative plans were made to initiate the program. However, decreasing funds in CB [chemical/biological warfare], growing criticism of the CB program, and our reluctance to involve the NAS-NRC in such a controversial [*] endeavor have led us to postpone it for the past 2 years.

>

> * It is a highly controversial issue and there are many who believe that such research should not be undertaken lest it lead to another method of massive killing of large populations. On the other hand, without the sure scientific knowledge that such a weapon is possible, and an understanding of the ways it could be done, there is little that can be done to devise defensive measures. Should an enemy develop it, there is little doubt that this is an important area of potential military inferiority in which there is no adequate research program.

>

> I am hoping some of our Ta-Seti members may recognise this excerpt and can provide some feedback. Many thanks.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: emeagwali@...: Sun, 11 Nov 2007 21:47:12 - 0500Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

>

>

> Thanks for the eugenics references. I certainly intend to look at them. I thought the blog was > quite illuminating.

>

> When I checked the index of Edward Hooper's, The River- A Journey to the source of HIV and AIDS, > Little Brown, 2000 there were no references to Cold Spring Harbor or James Watson.

>

> The story was different, though, for Leonard Horowitz, Emerging Viruses-AIDS & Ebola, Tetrahedron,1999. One of the > documented interviews with Leonard cited in the text, went as follows:

>

> < Robert: Ahh...Its out of Cold Springs Harbor, that's the other great biowarfare palace. It's the Eugenics Institute.

> Cold Springs is in upstate New York.....Anyway Cold Spring Harbor put out a big thing on MMMV, that is

> 'maximally monstrous malignant virus' and then they gave all the characteristics. And they talked about > what it would take to produce this kind of virus
And of course all the characteristics are exactly those of the > AIDS virus except for one thing, and that is aerosolized transmission- which we believe is potentially > possible.....'>
>
> But Watson, then at the Medical Legal Foundation, was in no way implicated in the text.
>
> There were a lot of references to Merck and Litton Bionetics, though.
>
> GE
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Dr. Gloria T. Emeagwali
>
> Prof. of History and African Studies
> History Department
> Central Connecticut State University
> 1615 Stanley Street
> New Britain
> CT 06050.
> www.africahistory.net
> www.africaonline.com
> African History
> www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html
> Africa Update
>
>
>
> From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com on behalf of sincere1906Sent: Sun 11/11/2007 10:17 AMTo: Ta_Seti@...: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)
>
> http://www.cafemessenger.com/info/info\_sweetstuff2.html?
ocid=TXT_TAGLM_OctWltagline
>

| 23721|2007-11-13 00:56:44|asar_imhotep|Judgement Day - Intelligent Design On Trial (on NOVA tonight)|
Peace Ta-Seti

Just wanted to inform you of something a bit off topic, but I think interesting given the minds on this forum. On the show NOVA on PBS tonight they will be airing a documentary about the trial of teaching Evolution at school.

This would be a good grounds for discussion. Here is the link to find out more information about the debate:

<http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/nova/id/>

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23722|2007-11-13 05:33:20|Peter Gray|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top)|
Thank you Meninarmer,

About 6 months ago, I contacted Tony Brown's Journal (in NYC) to try and get a copy of TB's interview with Gary Null, in which the only case of a human being who went from HIV sero-positive to sero-negative was presented. They remembered the video, but did not have it available (??), which I found strange. I'm still interested in chasing own this video, ever since lending it to a medical doctor friend and never seeing it again. It was broadcast (on Howard U's TV channel) many years ago.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: shalomic@nc.rr.com
Date: Mon, 12 Nov 2007 15:45:14 -0500
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Peter

You might consult back transcripts of "Tony Brown's Journal" of the same time period.

In one episode Mr. Brown hosted a show with 15 research doctors who came out and stated the reality of their work on this program.

Pn PBS, they presented the official Statement Of Work, printed on U.S. Department Of Defense letterhead, requesting information on development of a specific bio-agent that attacked the human immunity system.

These doctors went on to testify the development of the AIDS virus in response to this SOW, and funded by the US DoD using a tainted Polo vaccine.

This site speaks more to this.

http://www.newmediaexplorer.org/sepp/2005/09/24/aids\_made\_in\_america\_journal\_of\_degenerative\_diseases.htm

You may find this 2000 presentation helpful in understanding what is actually available today, and the dedication being brought to bare on the issue of development of ethnic specific Biotech.

http://www.upmc-biosecurity.org/website/events/2000\_symposium-2/poste/trans\_post.html

Malodorants

Malodorant agents (stink bombs) have existed since the Second World War. Attempts were made as late as 1966 to develop malodorants that target particular ethnic groups.

Why would somebody patent the odor of human feces? In June 2001, Ecological Technologies Corporation, a small Texas company run by a retired US Navy Commander and former Naval Laboratories researcher (13) obtained US patent 6,242,489 on malodorant compositions. Ecological Technologies claims the use of organic sulfur compounds and skatole the compound that makes feces stink to produce the perfect stink bomb. The rationale behind the invention is clarified in the patent:

The use of obnoxious olfactory stimuli to control and/or modify human behavior in this way is an attractive concept for modern warfare. Heretofore malodorant compositions have been too toxic for use when seeking to incapacitate and/or disperse an individual, or group of individuals (14)

Malodorants are high on the list of non-lethal research priorities. US strategists have concluded that odor-producing chemicals "are likely to be permitted under the CWC. (15) The Joint Non-Lethal Weapons Program sponsors a project that investigates odorants and their effects on behavior. It can be used for riot control, to clear facilities, to deny an area, or as a taggant. (16) At the US Army Edgewood Chemical Biological Center in Maryland, sophisticated experiments were performed to identify the most obnoxious smells, one of which turned out to be US Government Standard Bathroom Odor. (17)

The Ringworm Children

http://www.infowars.com/articles/world/israel\_the\_ringworm\_children.htm

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Date: Mon, 12 Nov 2007 14:34:58 -0500

This is a great topic. I am still trying to determine whether or not the following excerpt is from an "urban legend" type of document -- one that has been circulating for years now, and I'd appreciate any feedback on the validity of the document (supposedly HB [House Bill] 15090):

UNITED STATES SENATE LIBRARY

DEPT. OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1970

HEARINGS BEFORE A SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
NINETY-FIRST CONGRESS
FIRST SESSION

HB15090 [PART 5]

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION
Department of the Army
Statement of Director, Advanced Research Project Agency
Statement of Director, Defense Research and Engineering

Tuesday, July 1, 1969
SYNTHETIC BIOLOGICAL AGENTS

"There are two things about the biological agent field that I would like to mention. One is the possibility of technological surprise. Molecular biology is a field that is advancing very rapidly and eminent biologists believe that within 5 to 10 years it [will] be possible to produce a synthetic biological agent, an agent that does not naturally exist and for which no natural immunity could have been acquired.

Mr. Sikes: Are we doing any work in that field?

Dr. MacArthur: We are not.

Mr. Sikes: Why not? Lack of money or lack of interest?

Dr. MacArthur: Certainly not lack of interest.

Mr. Sikes: Would you provide for our records information on what would be required, what the advantages of such a program would be, and the time and cost involved?

Dr. MacArthur: We will be very happy to.

The information follows:

The dramatic progress being made in the field of molecular biology led us to investigate the relevance of this field of science to biological warfare. A small group of experts considered this matter and provided the following observations:

1. All biological agents up to the present time are representatives of naturally occurring disease, and are thus known by scientists throughout the world. They are easily available to qualified scientists for research, either for offensive or defensive purposes.
2. Within the next 5 to 10 years, it would be possible to make a new infective microorganism which could differ in certain important aspects from any known disease-causing organisms. Most important of these is that it might be refractory to the immunological and therapeutic processes upon which we depend to maintain our relative freedom from infectious disease.
3. A research program to explore the feasibility of this could be implemented in approximately 5 years [NOTE TIME FRAME] at a total cost of $10 million.
4. It would be very difficult to establish such a program. Molecular biology is a relatively new science. There are not many highly competent scientists in the field; almost all are in university laboratories, and they are generally adequately supported from sources other than DoD. However, it was considered possible to initiate an adequate program through the research National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council (NAS-NRC).
The matter was discussed with the NAS-NRC and tentative plans were made to initiate the program. However, decreasing funds in CB [chemical/biological warfare], growing criticism of the CB program, and our reluctance to involve the NAS-NRC in such a controversial [*] endeavor have led us to postpone it for the past 2 years.

* It is a highly controversial issue and there are many who believe that such research should not be undertaken lest it lead to another method of massive killing of large populations. On the other hand, without the sure scientific knowledge that such a weapon is possible, and an understanding of the ways it could be done, there is little that can be done to devise defensive measures. Should an enemy develop it, there is little doubt that this is an important area of potential military inferiority in which there is no adequate research program.

I am hoping some of our Ta-Seti members may recognise this excerpt and can provide some feedback. Many thanks.

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu
Date: Sun, 11 Nov 2007 21:47:12 -0500
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Thanks for the eugenics references. I certainly intend to look at them. I thought the blog was quite illuminating.

When I checked the index of Edward Hooper's, The River- A Journey to the source of HIV and AIDS, Little Brown, 2000 there were no references to Cold Spring Harbor or James Watson.

The story was different, though, for Leonard Horowitz, Emerging Viruses-AIDS & Ebola, Tetrahedron, 1999. One of the documented interviews with Leonard cited in the text, went as follows:

< Robert: Ahh...Its out of Cold Springs Harbor, that's the other great biowarfare palace. It's the Eugenics Institute. Cold Springs is in upstate New York..... .Anyway Cold Spring Harbor put out a big thing on MMMV, that is 'maximally monstrous malignant virus' and then they gave all the characteristics. And they talked about what it would take to produce this kind of virus And of course all the characteristics are exactly those of the AIDS virus except for one thing, and that is aerosolized transmission- which we believe is potentially possible.... .....' >

But Watson, then at the Medical Legal Foundation, was in no way implicated in the text.

There were a lot of references to Merck and Litton Bionetics, though.

GE

Dr. Gloria T. Emeagwali
Prof. of History and African Studies
History Department
Central Connecticut State University
1615 Stanley Street
New Britain
CT 06050.
www.africahistory.net
www.africaonline.com
African History
www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html
Africa Update

---

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com on behalf of sincere1906
Sent: Sun 11/11/2007 10:17 AM
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

"If the ideology of the eugenic standpoint emerged more or less logically and gradually from the mid-nineteenth century scientific and political arguments regarding racial stocks and their inherent qualities, the apparatus of eugenics as a presence on the American scene rose rather dramatically after the turn of the century. In 1904

the Carnegie Institution put up money to open a Station for the Study of Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, under the direction of Charles Davenport. Davenport himself was among the enthusiastic supporters within the scientific community who felt that, to paraphrase the historian Daniel Kevles, "nationality" was primarily a function of "race," and "race" was the prime determinant of behavior. "The idea of a 'melting pot' belongs to a pre-Mendelian age," Davenport wrote to one colleague, showing his hand on the immigration question. "Now we recognize that characters are inherited as unites and do not readily break up." In the ensuing years, under Davenport's direction, the station at Cold Spring Harbor provided critical institutional focus to the eugenics movement, serving both as a major intellectual and material resource and as a dispenser of information and data.

--Jacobson, Matthew F. Whiteness of a Different Color: European Immigrants and the Alchemy of Race. (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1998), 78.

primary footnote:

--Kevles, Daniel J. In the Name of Eugenics: Genetics and the Uses of Human Heredity. (University of California Press, 1986).

What is most ironic is that much of this research dealt with proving that wide swaths of European immigrants (Italians, Spaniards, Irish, varied Eastern Europeans, etc) were not actually "white." It's not until the extremes of the Nazi movement that American "race-ologists" began backing away from earlier assertions, proclaiming that perhaps all such peoples were "white" after all.

Sin

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

>

>

>

> I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black,

> War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a

Master

> Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was

> direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point

> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:

>

> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of

how

> the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at

> Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie

> Institution's eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor.

> You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie

> Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex

> enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even distributed > anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see

> the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial

grants and the German

> scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were

> finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.

> ..... Only after the truth about Nazi

extermination

- > became known did the American eugenics movement
- > fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from
- > eugenics to genetics..... As I explored
- the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that
- > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the
- Third Reich
- > but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'
- >
- >
- > James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became Director in
- > 1968, and President in 1994.
- >
- > Gloria Emeagwali
- >

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sub>é</sub> Stop by today!

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sub>é</sub> Stop by today!
| 23723|2007-11-13 07:29:32|zetter_74|African Lacustrine Bantu connection with egypt/civilisation|
A very interesting article....

Great achievements of our fore fathers during the era of gods kings

BY AMANI ATHAR

Last Sunday, we published an article of the era of gods. This era started with King Rumeza, nicknamed Rumezamilyango. He was nicknamed so, for his role in developing families that became the Rwanda, Uganda and Sudan today.

Also in one of the previous articles, the writer explained how the African map was during this era, a period that coincides with great achievements by our fore fathers.

The southern part of Africa, including Tanzania and the all part southern of Tanzania was known as Buha. Buha was divided into Northern Buha (Buha bwa Ruguru) and Southern Buha (Buha bw'efo). Bungerengere was a part of Tanzania and Kenya, near Kilimanjaro.

Earlier, Rwanda was known as Buhanga; Buganda was known as Bungere; Toro, Ankole and Nyoro were in Gala. Gala also was divided into Gala of Ndurwa (Including Northern Rwanda, Nkole and Mpororo) and Ndurwa of Butumbi (Northern part of Uganda). Butumbi was in today's Sudan.

The part of Africa that includes Somalia, Ethiopia, and Eritrea was known as I Bwega (Abega's home), the famous Beja civilization. What we know today as Egypt was known by Rwandan oral history as I Kami and its people as Abanyakami.

Contemporary scholars believe that all sciences originated from Egypt; although many old scholars believed that all sciences originated from the Greeks.

This is so common that almost all books we read start with Greeks or Egypt, every time a science topic comes up.

When you read these books, they usually imply that the Greeks and Egyptians pre- dated all other people when it comes to science.

However, I believe that if Cheick Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga (scholars) had been born in Rwanda and learnt about our Ibitekerezo and our Imigani and Rwandan folklore, they would have written books that bring the birth of civilization in our countries, especially in Rwanda, and Uganda. Since Sudan civilization came after Buhanga (Rwanda) and Bungere (Ugandan), while civilization Egyptian civilization rose Sudan.

If fact, in Kinyarwanda Buhanga means residence of science; Butumbi means residence of black, while Bungeri means residence of pastoralists.

All this part of the African Continent was under the era of God's kings. The first Gods King was Rumezamilyango and one of the last kings was Rugambanabato. (Refer to our last issue)

The birth of civilization is not actually in Egypt, but in what is known as Rwanda and Uganda today.

A prominent historian called Yosef ben Jochanan, in his article untitled the Nile Valley Civilization and the Spread of the African Culture wrote in a document (The Papyrus of Hunifer) that "we came from the beginning of the Nile, where God Hapi dwells, at the foothills of the mountains of the moon." "We" meaning the Egyptians, came from the beginning of the Nile.

Where is the beginning of the Nile? Where God does dwells? It was believed that the farthest point of the beginning of the Nile was in Uganda.

Today, researchers have found that the farthest point of the beginning of the Nile is in Rwanda. The discovery was made by a team led by South African Peter Meredith and Hendri Coetzee in April 2005.

This team became the first to navigate the most remote source of the Nile.

They said that the farthest source of the Nile was Akagera River, which starts as the Rukarara in Nyungwe forest in Rwanda.

On March 31, 2006, a second group of explores from Britain and New Zealand led by Neil McGrigor confirmed these findings and claimed to be the first to sail the River Nile, its mouth (Egypt) to its true source deep in Rwanda's Nyungwe rainforest.

Another important thing to note here is, Rwanda is the only country in the world where God Hapi dwells (Imana y'u Rwanda); the Supreme God and the God of gods.

This Empire governed by God's kings is today known as the Batembuzi Empire. It seems that this empire was still in existence by 1589, perhaps with another name. Giovanni Botero says that it was named the Nyamwezi Empire.

Here is what George Sandart wrote in his "Court de droit coutumier": "We know that, according to Botero, Portuguese heard for the first time in 1589 about the existence of a vast Empire of a triangular form and having Abyssinia as the Northern boarder, Monomatapa as its Southern boarder and the Congo as the Northern East boarder."

We are not sure that these boarders cited by Botero were right, but, what we are certain of is that this Batembuzi Empire dominated most part of Africa described by Giovanni Botero.

Kibariro, as the father of knowledge

After Cheick Anta Diop proved that the civilization started in Africa, especially in Egypt, there is a belief that the Egyptian Pharaoh named Thoth was the first to teach calculations concerning heavens, that he taught the science of the stars and the earth; that he is the reckoner of times and of seasons. He is the one who balances every work on every branch of knowledge.

However, in the previous articles, the writer has written about a man known in Rwanda as Kibariro. He is known in Rwanda as Thoth as described by Egyptian literature.

Kibariro taught people all the science attributed to Thoth. Thoth is also known as Djehuty, Djouti, Tehuti and Zehutu. Is there any similarity with the Rwandan "Intiti?" Yes, it has.

In a discussion the writer had with one elder who was at the National University of Rwanda by the time Father Kagame Alexis was a lecturer there, this elder told him that one day, all intellectuals of that period met at Sierra Hotel in Kigali, today Sierra restaurant.

The meeting aimed at discussing a subject entitled "Tresor de la Nation Rwanda" or the treasure of the Rwandan nation.

It was found out that the Egyptian Dhehuty, the real name of Thoth was linguistically the same as Intiti and that the animal representing Thoth was used in the ancient Rwanda to represent science.

Whether there is any linguistic relation between Djehuty and "Intiti" or not, what is known in Rwanda is that Kibariro is the founder of all sciences. He is the founder of Mathematics; he founded the calendar; he is the master of all names. He gave people names; he named all animals and he is the author of all knowledge for Rwandans.

Another important thing to know is that the oral history of Rwanda has it that Ibis; the representation of Pharaoh Djehuty, is also a representation of knowledge in Rwanda. Those who are familiar with the Rwandan tradition know a song called "Nyirabarazana".

Nyirabarazana is a Kinyarwanda word for Ibis. This song is about a father who is talking to a child named Nyirabarazana. The father tells the child that her mother died.

That when the mother died, she carried something named ikinyoro. Young men liked to touch it, while young girls feared it.

The father tells his child (possibly a daughter), that he is going to travel in far to study science. And at that period, science was studied at Buhanga (home of knowledge.) The daughter waited for his father, who never came back.

Since then, the bird " Nyirabarazana" represents knowledge. It is said that when a child is born and this bird visited, the newborn became a master of knowledge.

Kibariro is a word that came from the verb "kubara", meaning to count. Actually Kibariro is a nickname to recognize his innovation. His real name was Gahiriro.

He taught people to count; he taught them to use the calendar. In Kinyarwanda, the calendar bears his name.

"Inyuguti" (which also has a linguistic similarity with the name Djehuty) meaning number and is related to Kibariro, the founder of numbers.

As we said early in our previous article, Kibariro made the first mummification. He mummified King Gahima thousands of years before the Egyptians mummified their pharaohs. Kibariro taught our women to count their menstruation cycles using the calendar he founded many years before Egyptians founded their lunar calendar.

Historians generally ignore the history of sub Saharan countries. It seems that all science, by surprise emerged from Egypt for some historians and in Greece for others.

However, the truth is that Egypt marks the end of African civilization and the beginning of the Greek civilization.

This is very important for any historian to understand because most of Egyptologists forget about other countries, especially Rwanda, Uganda, Tanzania and Sudan.

In fact, the beginning of sciences and civilizations starts with Kibariro, nicknamed, Icyotamakara cy'i Buhanga; meaning the great black living at the residence of sciences.

By the way, Djehuty was given the name of Thoth by the Greek. His original name is Djehuty not Thoth.

The first pyramids

We always hear that pyramids were constructed only in Egypt. Rarely do we hear that there are pyramids in Sudan, formerly Butumbi, because before the coming of Arabs, there was no Sudan.

Egyptian pyramids are the largest, but they are not the first pyramids. The first pyramids were built in Butumbi by our ancestor. Remember our article about the rise of Babanda.

Butumbi was developed by Sabugabo, when he met there a King named Kajuga. Kajuga is a name we still give people here in Rwanda.

The first mathematic sign

Mathematics and Geometry are wrongly attributed to Greeks. Especially Pythagoras and Thales.

But, Cheick Anta Diop succeeded in destroying that myth. He was able to show that the Greek scientists xeroxed all what they wrote from Egypt.

What Cheick Anta Diop did not know is that Kibariro was then copied by Egyptian and named him Djehuty. and that Kibariro is the father of all the science attributed to Djehuty. Kibariro preceded the existence of Djehuty.

One of the ancient sign of mathematics is not in Egypt but in our region. It is the Ishango Bone. Ishango Bone is the oldest table of prime numbers.

It was discovered in the African area of Ishango, which was centered near the headwaters of the Nile River at Lake Edward (now on the border between modern-day Uganda and Congo) (Remember also that this part of Africa has been founded by Rucyaba, the grand son of Gihanga.)

The lakeside Ishango, with a population of 20,000 years ago may have been the first counting societies, but it lasted only a few hundred years before being buried by a volcanic eruption.

The artifact was first estimated to originate between 9000 BC and 6500 BC. However, the dating of the site where it was discovered was re-evaluated, and is now believed to have been more than 20,000 years old.

The first fortresses built on earth

When you discuss with historians, it seems that the first fortresses were built in Europe. It seems that Africa has never built fortresses.

However, the first fortresses built on the earth are said to be found in Africa. Think about Bigo bya Mugeni and the Buhen fortresses, just to name few. The two fortresses are achievements of our forefathers.

One was built in Bungeri by the grand son of Musindi. The second was built in Butumbi (Remember that it is Gihanga's son named Sabugabo who helped this part of Africa, when he met there a King named Kajuga.

Kajuga is a name still given to Rwandan people) in the early time of the world civilization.

Both fortresses predate the construction of the first Egyptian pyramid and before the Great Wall of China. In Europe, there was no single fortress in this era. By the way, the first oldest boat is the Dufuma Dugout, found in Northern Nigeria.

"I would like to say that Rwanda's history I am writing about today is our history. A history that doesn't show our forefathers as primitive.

Not the history that will enslave our minds, but the history that will set us free. It is the history that once Patrice Lumumba said that was full of glorious achievement".

The writer emphasises.

The author is a Rwandan Independent Researcher, historian and writer.

amthr@yahoo.com

| 23724|2007-11-13 09:12:15|Marc Taylor|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

Hi, my name is Marc, ive been a member of the group for quite some time. I really enjoy reading the postings and information but this is my first time posting. ive been reading the topics on eugenics, I read about eugenics years ago...

I believe the US government (fed and/or state level) engaged (and is still engaging) in some type of eugenic experimentation or specific operations on inner city/urban youth starting in the late 1970's to themid 1980's -until current. To include African Americans, Latinos, poorer Whites and other immigrants. At this time I just cant prove it.I am a 45 yr. old African American male and I used to be a middle school math teacher at a magnet school (thus you know I have a million stories)... but theres definitely something going on in the public schools across this country especially in the urban areas, and its not just socioeconomic or family breakdown related. A large percentage (not all) of the younger population have been * GENETICALLY MODIFIED *, they arenear imbecilic and autistic in nature. This is not meant to be any type of joke. They are remaining this way after leaving middle school and high school well into their mid 20's. I believe hardcore rap and changing culture have only contributed to or compounded current youth behavioral and thinking patterns. but there is definitely a synthetic driver behind current youth behavior. I have talked to other brotherswho are math and science teachers at other schools (the more intellectual and 'woke' types) and they concur by all means..., but most of the 'old school' status quoteachers just pass it off as "johnny can do better, he just doesnt apply himself"... if anyonehas any input on this, I would love to share.... (believe me, this is not a conspiracy theory topic - the numbers are too large now to ignore)...

eter Gray wrote:

This is a great topic. I am still trying to determine whether or not the following excerpt is from an "urban legend" type of document -- one that has been circulating for years now, and I'd appreciate any feedback on the validity of the document (supposedly HB [House Bill] 15090):

UNITED STATES SENATE LIBRARY

DEPT. OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1970

HEARINGS BEFORE A SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
NINETY-FIRST CONGRESS
FIRST SESSION

HB15090 [PART 5]

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION
Department of the Army
Statement of Director, Advanced Research Project Agency

Tuesday, July 1, 1969

SYNTHETIC BIOLOGICAL AGENTS

"There are two things about the biological agent field that I would like to mention. One is the possibility of technological surprise. Molecular biology is a field that is advancing very rapidly and eminent biologists believe that within 5 to 10 years it [will] be possible to produce a synthetic biological agent, an agent that does not naturally exist and for which no natural immunity could have been acquired.

Mr. Sikes: Are we doing any work in that field?

Dr. MacArthur: We are not.

Mr. Sikes: Why not? Lack of money or lack of interest?

Dr. MacArthur: Certainly not lack of interest.

Mr. Sikes: Would you provide for our records information on what would be required, what the advantages of such a program would be, and the time and cost involved?

Dr. MacArthur: We will be very happy to.

The information follows:

The dramatic progress being made in the field of molecular biology led us to investigate the relevance of this field of science to biological warfare. A small group of experts considered this matter and provided the following observations:

1. All biological agents up to the present time are representatives of naturally occurring disease, and are thus known by scientists throughout the world. They are easily available to qualified scientists for research, either for offensive or defensive purposes.
2. Within the next 5 to 10 years, it would be possible to make a new infective microorganism which could differ in certain important aspects from any known disease-causing organisms. Most important of these is that it might be refractory to the immunological and therapeutic processes upon which we depend to maintain our relative freedom from infectious disease.
3. A research program to explore the feasibility of this could be implemented in approximately 5 years [NOTE TIME FRAME] at a total cost of $10 million.
4. It would be very difficult to establish such a programme. Molecular biology is a relatively new science. There are not many highly competent scientists in the field; almost all are in university laboratories, and they are generally adequately supported from sources other than DoD. However, it was considered possible to initiate an adequate program through the research National Academy of Sciences-National Research council (NAS-NRC).

The matter was discussed with the NAS-NRC and tentative plans were made to initiate the program. However, decreasing funds in CB [chemical/biological warfare], growing criticism of the CB program, and our reluctance to involve the NAS-NRC in such a controversial [*]endeavor have led us to postpone it for the past 2 years.

* It is a highly controversial issue and there are many who believe that such research should not be undertaken lest it lead to another method of massive killing of large populations. On the other hand, without the sure scientific knowledge that such a weapon is possible, and an understanding of the ways it could be done, there is little that can be done to devise defensive measures. Should an enemy develop it, there is little doubt that this is an important area of potential military inferiority in which there is no adequate research program.

I am hoping some of our Ta-Seti members may recognise this excerpt and can provide some feedback. Many thanks.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: emeagwali@mail. ccsu.edu
Date: Sun, 11 Nov 2007 21:47:12 -0500
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

Thanks for the eugenics references. I certainly intend to look at them. I thought the blog was quite illuminating.

When I checked the index of Edward Hooper's, The River- A Journey to the source of HIV and AIDS, Little Brown, 2000 there were no references to Cold Spring Harbor or James Watson.

The story was different, though, for Leonard Horowitz, Emerging Viruses-AIDS & Ebola, Tetrahedron, 1999. One of the documented interviews with Leonard cited in the text, went as follows:

< Robert: Ahh...Its out of Cold Springs Harbor, that's the other great biowarfare palace. It's the Eugenics Institute. Cold Springs is in upstate New York..... .Anyway Cold Spring Harbor put out a big thing on MMMV, that is 'maximally monstrous malignant virus' and then they gave all the characteristics. And they talked about what it would take to produce this kind of virus And of course all the characteristics are exactly those of the AIDS virus except for one thing, and that is aerosolized transmission- which we believe is potentially possible.... ..'>

But Watson, then at the Medical Legal Foundation, was in no way implicated in the text.

There were a lot of references to Merck and Litton Bionetics, though.

GE

Dr. Gloria T. Emeagwali
Prof. of History and African Studies
History Department
Central Connecticut State University
1615 Stanley Street
New Britain
CT 06050.
www.africahistory.net
www.africaonline.com
African History
www.ccsu.edu/afstudy/archive.html
Africa Update

---

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com on behalf of sincere1906

Sent: Sun 11/11/2007 10:17 AM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off topic)

"If the ideology of the eugenic standpoint emerged more or less logically and gradually from the mid-nineteenth century scientific and political arguments regarding racial stocks and their inherent qualities, the apparatus of eugenics as a presence on the American scene rose rather dramatically after the turn of the century. In 1904 the Carnegie Institution put up money to open a Station for the Study of Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, under the direction of Charles Davenport. Davenport himself was among the enthusiastic supporters within the scientific community who felt that, to paraphrase the historian Daniel Kevles, "nationality" was primarily a function of "race," and "race" was the prime determinant of behavior. "The idea of a 'melting pot' belongs to a pre-Mendelian age," Davenport wrote to one colleague, showing his hand on the immigration question. "Now we recognize that characters are inherited as unites and do not readily break up." In the ensuing years, under

Davenport's direction, the station at Cold Spring Harbor provided critical institutional focus to the eugenics movement, serving both as a major intellectual and material resource and as a dispenser of information and data.

--Jacobson, Matthew F. Whiteness of a Different Color: European Immigrants and the Alchemy of Race. (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1998), 78.

primary footnote:

--Kevles, Daniel J. In the Name of Eugenics: Genetics and the Uses of Human Heredity. (University of California Press, 1986).

What is most ironic is that much of this research dealt with proving that wide swaths of European immigrants (Italians, Spaniards, Irish, varied Eastern Europeans, etc) were not actually "white." It's not until the extremes of the Nazi movement that American "race-ologists" began backing away from earlier assertions, proclaiming that perhaps all such peoples were "white" after all.

Sin

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

>
>
>
> I recently came across an interesting introductory piece in a text written by Edwin Black, > War Against the Weak- Eugenics and America's Campaign to Create a Master Race, 2003. The book was lying on my shelf and I thought I would consult it to see if there was > direct or indirect information linking the Nazis and the founders of South African apartheid. At that point
> I really was not thinking about James Watson. Well this excerpt really attracted my attention:
>
> ' .....Within these pages you will discover the sad truth of how
> the scientific rationales that drove killer doctors at > Auschwitz were first concocted on Long Island at the Carnegie Institution' s eugenic enterprise at Cold Spring Harbor.
> You will see that during the prewar Hitler regime, the Carnegie Institution, through its Cold Spring Harbor complex > enthusiastically propagandized for the Nazi regime and even distributed > anti-Semitic Nazi party films to American high schools. And you will see > the links between the Rockefeller Foundations' massive financial grants and the German > scientific establishment that began the eugenic program that were > finished by Mengele at Auschwitz.
> ..... Only after the truth about Nazi extermination

> became known did the American eugenics movement
> fade. American eugenic institutions rushed to change the name from > eugenics to genetics..... As I explored
the history of eugenics, however, I soon discovered that > the Nazi principle of Nordic superiority was not hatched in the Third Reich
> but on Long Island decades earlier- and then transplanted to Germany.'
>
>
> James Watson studied at Cold Spring Harbor in 1948, became Director in > 1968, and President in 1994.
>
> Gloria Emeagwali
>

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

To visit your group on the web, go to:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/

Your email settings:

Individual Email | Traditional

To change settings online go to:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/join

(Yahoo! ID required)

To change settings via email:

mailto:Ta\_Seti-digest@yahoogroups.com

mailto:Ta\_Seti-fullfeatured@yahoogroups.com

To unsubscribe from this group, send an email to:

Ta_Seti-unsubscribe @yahoogroups.com

Your use of Yahoo! Groups is subject to:

<http://docs.yahoo.com/info/terms/>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Café Stop by today!

- > They'll lose, based on 1970s cases where people of
- > Mexican heritage appealed for the same, and were
- > denied. The ruling is questionable since white women
- > are classified as minorities and presently receive the
- > majority (>75%) of U.S. based minority set-aside
- > program awards. So, the classification is not solely
- > determined by skin color, but the person must also
- > show their group has been economically suppressed
- > by mainstream social practices.
- >
- > Meninarmer

Considering the proliferation of Hispanic women at for instance MSNBC, CNN, Fox News, etc. I get your point. Obviously this is the racists 'out' of choice when it comes to 'diversity'.

(And bless them because they seem to be good and anti-racist people on the whole, so I'm not criticizing them at all. But you have to wonder whether for instance CNN management can't (refuses to) find more Black employees, considering they are located in Atlanta, Washington DC and New York.)

What was the impact of scientific racism and eugenics on these classifications?

They seem to be very old North African = Hamitic, Northeast Africa = Hamitic, etc.

Alex

| 23726|2007-11-13 23:52:46|Mahari Mengistu|SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika about Afrika and Afrikans.

=====

Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now, When?

Published by the government of Zimbabwe

The Herald (Harare)

Bishop Trevor Manhanga

TWO incidents took place this year, a couple of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and opinions some in the white west have about us, as we strive for economic empowerment and emancipation.

The first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.

In what can only be described as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner feelings of a very high standing public figure, Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man has never really entered history.

"The African peasant who for centuries has lived according to the seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time via the endless repetition of the same actions and the same words.

"In this mentality, where everything always starts over again, there is no place for human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this man never projects himself into the future, it never occurs to him to break free from the repetition and invent a destiny for himself.

"This, if you will allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's problem.

"Africa's challenge is to enter history more fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever repeating and going over things, and to free itself from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to realise that the golden age that it always harks back to will never return, for the simple reason that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that its present is permeated with nostalgia for the paradise lost of its childhood.

"Africa's problem is that it judges its present according to a wholly imaginary notion of original purity that no one could ever hope to revive.

"Africa's challenge should not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make the present more bearable, but to invent a future with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa has a right to be happy just like all the other continents of the world."

The deafening silence from the African continent and its leadership in allowing Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on African soil, but also at an institution of higher learning, and get away with it has been most disturbing.

How can the collective leadership of the African continent, have remained silent in the face of this very provocative and insulting opinion of Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its people is without empirical validation, downright condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with the contempt it deserves.

One would have expected at the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist remarks from none other than the AU, or other regional African bodies such as SADC or ECOWAS. I have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans.

If there has been a response, then perhaps I have not seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's racist diatribe have been few and far between, and among the few I have encountered is one in the October issue of New African magazine, where the editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's speech said:

"I don't know about you just now, but I am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing here with a confused man with a confused speech. Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those glorious empires of yore right across the continent? When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's European ancestors were still living in caves. They didn't know what a window was! And he has the temerity to insult us and our ancestors?"

There is doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so, because such outright disdain for Africa and its people cannot be left unchallenged.

What Sarkozy needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants of these "African peasants who live by the seasons" were part of France's World Cup winning team, when France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory serves me right, the team looked like a typical African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of Caucasian faces. So much for people who are supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by Sarkozy.

The second incident took place in the USA, and relates to an article written by an eminent scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson, who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on Long Island New York, USA, resigned after controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting black people are less intelligent than whites.

Watson (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it into one of the world's leading genetics research institutes. His problems, which led to his retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not really."

To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory through their president, said Watson's comments have no connection with research activity at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently disagree" with Watson's statements.

The lab moved swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative responsibilities as chancellor leading to his subsequent resignation.

Why do I make reference to these two incidents that have taken place on two continents by two different people, under two different conditions?

Reference must be made to them, because they reveal the underlying hostile and racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and Watson are not ordinary run of the mill, intellectually challenged people. On the contrary, one is the president of a key industrialised Western European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate and respected scientist.

The question must be asked then, if people of such high standing and respectability in western society have such a deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the problem we face is much greater than we ever imagined.

Theses were not off the cuff, slip of the tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were well thought out and delivered, and even if there is ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no matter how vigorous an attempt to do so.

I mention these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because it is imperative that there is an understanding by all of us, that we should work to prove that the two gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner that provides them with ammunition, to buttress their racist stereotypical opinions.

There are three things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted opinions.

The first is to ensure that the agricultural season currently upon us yields the fruits we anticipate and desperately need.

It is not too late to make the clarion call to all those on agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of the land reform programme, or have always been on the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch of available arable land, and make this the, "mother of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts as Sarkozy and Watson wrong.

We must show that we can use the land we have. We can make use of the farming implements that have just been delivered to some of our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser mortals, that we are industrious, responsible people.

We must be constantly aware that there are many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, (both qualitatively and quantitatively), that the white former farmers used to. It is for this reason that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of liberation, when those who fought for the emancipation of the nation reminded each other in the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy: "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound)."

That is the reality we face today and every one of us must not flinch from the task ahead.

The second is to ensure that the up coming national elections are conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open and transparent manner.

Those who cannot bring themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can solve their own problems, (and we are well on our way to doing that), will leave no stone unturned to find reasons to try to isolate us.

For this reason every political party and candidate that will contest next year's election must realise that the elections are more than just electing a President, a Member of Parliament, a Senator, a Councillor, it is about Zimbabwe.

It is about putting Zimbabwe first, and that means ensuring that we conduct the elections in a manner that will unify the nation, give us all the opportunity discover what unites us (and there is much more that unites us than divides us), rather than add fuel to the fires of division.

Not only must the elections be conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, but there will also be a great responsibility on the electorate to elect those who unite not those who divide, doers not sitters, people who have a vision for a great and prosperous Zimbabwe, not people who cannot see beyond tomorrow.

It is important therefore for all political parties that will present candidates to the electorate, to assist the process by putting forward credible candidates, who will be a credit to both their party, and their nation if elected.

Zimbabwe has a plethora of intellectually astute, morally upright people who have a well-documented track record.

These are the people who should be put forward before the electorate, and that will give the electorate a group of topnotch candidates from which to choose those who will spearhead the turnaround and take off of our nation.

Finally, we need to unite, from all sectors in the nation, in a call for the lifting of sanctions. We need to collectively begin the campaign now for the lifting of sanctions, of whatever form, currently imposed on the nation and some of our leaders.

Those who have imposed sanctions of whatever form on us need to be told, we are of one mind on this issue -- they must be lifted.

The sanctions are neither smart nor targeted and have run their course. We need not wait for the completion of the electoral process next year, to begin the rebuilding of the nation and its economy, and part of the rebuilding process starts with the lifting of the embargo that has been placed on the nation.

Regardless of one's political affiliation, or of one's previous position on the issue of sanctions, we must all agree that sanctions have no use right now, other than to perpetuate the suffering of the people of Zimbabwe.

The church community must speak for the lifting of sanctions, the business community must do the same, those in civic society must join the call, and finally the political parties must unite and pass a resolution in both houses of the legislature for the lifting of sanctions, so that the entire world knows that the people of Zimbabwe are speaking with one voice, and that voice declares that sanctions must be lifted.

If these three things can be done I have no doubt that we will be well on the way for the take off we so desperately need.

The beauty of what needs to be done, is that it is all well within our powers to do so. We can work the land and ensure a bountiful harvest. We can prepare for, and conduct elections in an atmosphere free of violence and intimidation.

We can unite as a nation, and present a common front to the world on the issue of the lifting of sanctions. We can do all of these things.

The question is, will we rise to the challenge and do them? Only the people of Zimbabwe themselves can answer that question, but I have great faith, that reason will triumph over unreasonableness, hope will triumph over despair and love will triumph over hatred. We can do it, I know we can.

IBishop Manhanga is the Presiding Bishop of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Zimbabwe and the Chairman of the Heads of Christian Denominations. He writes this article in his personal capacity.

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23727|2007-11-14 05:07:36|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Peter II|
Thanks, Asar.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: asar_imhotep@yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 20:13:08 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:

>
>
> Asar,
>
> Thanks for following up. Unfortunately, WebSense blocks both the youtube and the subterranean mining links in your reply, but I have always been convinced of the northward movement of pharaonic culture during, or as a precursor to, the earliest establishment of unification in Kmt, based on Diodorus below as well as Bruce Williams' thesis. Is there any format that can allow the clip(s) to be sent as attachments? Thanks again.
>
> Peter
>

I sent the full article to the yahoogroups so they can read. You will have to be mindful of the Christian discussion towards the end. But I don't know how to download the actual video from youtube. I know you can download it if it is posted on Google video.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.
Play Now!

| 23728|2007-11-14 05:12:18|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Peter II|
Thanks, shaomic.

I will try to download one such converter.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: shalomic@nc.rr.com
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 13:35:57 -0500
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

You first have to download the vid from YouTube and convert it to a usable format.
There are a few "FREE" FLV to AVI/MPEG converters that allow you to accomplish this.
I have one stored but will need to access my NAS to retrieve it.

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>
Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 12:51:07 -0500

Asar,

Thanks for following up. Unfortunately, WebSense blocks both the youtube and the subterranean mining links in your reply, but I have always been convinced of the northward movement of pharaonic culture during, or as a precursor to, the earliest establishment of unification in Kmt, based on Diodorus below as well as Bruce Williams' thesis. Is there any format that can allow the clip(s) to be sent as attachments?
Thanks again.

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 15:43:30 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Peter II

(I forgot to answer your second question)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

> And I had no idea it was as late as the 10th. dynasty that it came into use. So please tell me, >when did the charcoal symbol (once argued to represent crocodile skin) appear in the mdw-ntr >form of Kmt? I think it was also Diop who said it (charcoal)was the strongest term in the >Egyptian language for blackness.

You can read pages 26-38 of "Kemet and Other Egyptian Terms for

Their Land" Ogden Goelet. It's an article in a book "Ki Baruch Hu: Ancient Near Eastern, Biblical and Judaic Studies in Honor of Baruch A Levine." Here he provides the evidence for its late usage.

Keep in mind I am not saying the word KM.T did not exist, just it was not used as a national designation in any text before the 1st intermediate period. I have always speculated that the 1st intermediate period was really a civil war of some sort and Ta-Merri received it's independence.

Anthony T. Browder in Nile Valley Contributions to Civilization pg. 44 quotes John G. Jackson's work Introduction to African Civilization:

"The Edfu text is an important source document on the early history of the Nile Valley. This famous inscription, found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu, gives an account of the origin of Egyptian civilization. According to this record, civilization was brought from the south by a band of invaders under the leadership of King Horus. (emphasis mine)"

According to Diodorus Siculus, Book III he states:

"They (the Ethiopians) say also that the Egyptians are colonists sent out by the Ethiopians, Osiris ["King of Kings and God of Gods] having been the leader of the colony . . . they add that the Egyptians have received from them, as from authors and their ancestors, the greater part of their laws."

"The Aithiopians [Kushites] say that the Egyptians are settlers from among themselves and that Osiris was the leader of the settlement. The customs of the Egyptians, they say, are for the most part Aithiopian, the settlers having preserved their old traditions."

Remember the name for "KM.T" was originally "Hnw" (the interior). To me this let's us know that it was the "interior" to a colony and thus why it didn't have a national designation. After the first intermediate period, I think, they got their independence from Ta-Nehusu (Ethiopia) and named the land Ta-Merri. Ta-Merri didn't exist as a national designation until this point as well.

Now back to the glyph, take a look at this set of glyphs , and then look at this video clip and pay attention at 52 seconds of the clip to see the similarities between the wood symbol in Km.T and that used in the video clip.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EFPuqnJPXYU&mode=related&search=africa% 25

I bring this up to point out the fact that the early Africans were miners and that they had a cultural basis to draw from to later associate the charred wood symbol with the term Black (as in the case of the Black Land). Finch, in Star of Deep Beginnings, goes on to say on page 26 that:

"Apart from the occasional forest fire started by lightning, charcoal is not naturally occurring; it is produced from wood that has been partially and slowly burned. (emphasis mine)"

It was deliberate and they have a LONG history using charcoal for many purposes. Read the following paper on ancient Subterranean Mining in Africa and things will be more clear:

<http://home.entouch.net/dmd/mining.htm>

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Windows Live Hotmail and Microsoft Office Outlook together at last.
Get it now!

---

Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You! Get 'em!

| 23729|2007-11-14 05:20:55|Peter Gray|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

Thanks, Paul.

I had in fact visited the tomb (in 1995) in search of the "Table of Nations" relief as described by Champollion the Younger (Diop quotes Champollion's 13th. letter in The African Origin of Civilization), but failed to recognise it. Guess I needed a guide.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: pmanansala@sbcglobal.net
Date: Thu, 8 Nov 2007 18:15:50 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: KMT - response to Ferg

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thanks, Paul. By the way, is KV11 that of Ramses III?

>

>

Yes, if you search the Ta_Seti archives for KV11, you will find some interesting discussion.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You! Get 'em!
| 23730|2007-11-14 05:21:24|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|
Mahari

I would like to say, I am surprised by Sarkozy's comments, but I cannot.

Unfortunately, I cannot say I am surprised by the lack of response by Africa's leaders either, although, I find fault in this lack of unified reaction, much more than Sarkozy's view of Africans.

Clearly, the white nations (US, UK, Germany, Israel, Russia, France, Australia) who have been at war or disagreement with each other for centuries are now aligning, and their rhetoric and actions make it perfectly clear of their intentions towards the world's people of color.

If Africa continues to fall for the lie and fail to unite, our past will not matter and certainly not save us from being victimized by white people's consolidated plans for the future.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika about Afrika and Afrikans.

=====

Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now, When?

Published by the government of Zimbabwe

The Herald (Harare)

Bishop Trevor Manhanga

TWO incidents took place this year, a couple of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and opinions some in the white west have about us, as we strive for economic empowerment and emancipation.

The first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.

In what can only be described as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner feelings of a very high standing public figure, Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man has never really entered history.

"The African peasant who for centuries has lived according to the seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time via the endless repetition of the same actions and the same words.

"In this mentality, where everything always starts over again, there is no place for human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this man never projects himself into the future, it never occurs to him to break free from the repetition and invent a destiny for himself.

"This, if you will allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's problem.

"Africa's challenge is to enter history more fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever repeating and going over things, and to free itself from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to realise that the golden age that it always harks back to will never return, for the simple reason that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that its present is permeated with nostalgia for the paradise lost of its childhood.

"Africa's problem is that it judges its present according to a wholly imaginary notion of original purity that no one could ever hope to revive.

"Africa's challenge should not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make the present more bearable, but to invent a future with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa has a right to be happy just like all the other continents of the world."

The deafening silence from the African continent and its leadership in allowing Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on African soil, but also at an institution of higher learning, and get away with it has been most disturbing.

How can the collective leadership of the African continent, have remained silent in the face of this very provocative and insulting opinion of Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its people is without empirical validation, downright condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with the contempt it deserves.

One would have expected at the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist remarks from none other than the AU, or other regional African bodies such as SADC or ECOWAS. I have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans.

If there has been a response, then perhaps I have not seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's racist diatribe have been few and far between, and among the few I have encountered is one in the October issue of New African magazine, where the editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's speech said:

"I don't know about you just now, but I am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing here with a confused man with a confused speech. Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those glorious empires of yore right across the continent? When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's European ancestors were still living in caves. They didn't know what a window was! And he has the temerity to insult us and our ancestors?"

There is doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so, because such outright disdain for Africa and its people cannot be left unchallenged.

What Sarkozy needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants of these "African peasants who live by the seasons" were part of France's World Cup winning team, when France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory serves me right, the team looked like a typical African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of Caucasian faces. So much for people who are supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by Sarkozy.

The second incident took place in the USA, and relates to an article written by an eminent scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson, who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on Long Island New York, USA, resigned after controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting black people are less intelligent than whites.

Watson (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it into one of the world's leading genetics research institutes. His problems, which led to his retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not really."

To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory through their president, said Watson's comments have no connection with research activity at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently disagree" with Watson's statements.

The lab moved swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative responsibilities as chancellor leading to his subsequent resignation.

Why do I make reference to these two incidents that have taken place on two continents by two different people, under two different conditions?

Reference must be made to them, because they reveal the underlying hostile and racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and Watson are not ordinary run of the mill, intellectually challenged people. On the contrary, one is the president of a key industrialised Western European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate and respected scientist.

The question must be asked then, if people of such high standing and respectability in western society have such a deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the problem we face is much greater than we ever imagined.

Theses were not off the cuff, slip of the tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were well thought out and delivered, and even if there is ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no matter how vigorous an attempt to do so.

I mention these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because it is imperative that there is an understanding by all of us, that we should work to prove that the two gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner that provides them with ammunition, to buttress their racist stereotypical opinions.

There are three things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted opinions.

The first is to ensure that the agricultural season currently upon us yields the fruits we anticipate and desperately need.

It is not too late to make the clarion call to all those on agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of the land reform programme, or have always been on the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch of available arable land, and make this the, "mother of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts as Sarkozy and Watson wrong.

We must show that we can use the land we have. We can make use of the farming implements that have just been delivered to some of our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser mortals, that we are industrious, responsible people.

We must be constantly aware that there are many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, (both qualitatively and quantitatively), that the white former farmers used to. It is for this reason that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of liberation, when those who fought for the emancipation of the nation reminded each other in the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy: "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound)."

That is the reality we face today and every one of us must not flinch from the task ahead.

The second is to ensure that the up coming national elections are conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open and transparent manner.

Those who cannot bring themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can solve their own problems, (and we are well on our way to doing that), will leave no stone unturned to find reasons to try to isolate us.

For this reason every political party and candidate that will contest next year's election must realise that the elections are more than just electing a President, a Member of Parliament, a Senator, a Councillor, it is about Zimbabwe.

It is about putting Zimbabwe first, and that means ensuring that we conduct the elections in a manner that will unify the nation, give us all the opportunity discover what unites us (and there is much more that unites us than divides us), rather than add fuel to the fires of division.

Not only must the elections be conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, but there will also be a great responsibility on the electorate to elect those who unite not those who divide, doers not sitters, people who have a vision for a great and prosperous Zimbabwe, not people who cannot see beyond tomorrow.

It is important therefore for all political parties that will present candidates to the electorate, to assist the process by putting forward credible candidates, who will be a credit to both their party, and their nation if elected.

Zimbabwe has a plethora of intellectually astute, morally upright people who have a well-documented track record.

These are the people who should be put forward before the electorate, and that will give the electorate a group of topnotch candidates from which to choose those who will spearhead the turnaround and take off of our nation.

Finally, we need to unite, from all sectors in the nation, in a call for the lifting of sanctions. We need to collectively begin the campaign now for the lifting of sanctions, of whatever form, currently imposed on the nation and some of our leaders.

Those who have imposed sanctions of whatever form on us need to be told, we are of one mind on this issue -- they must be lifted.

The sanctions are neither smart nor targeted and have run their course. We need not wait for the completion of the electoral process next year, to begin the rebuilding of the nation and its economy, and part of the rebuilding process starts with the lifting of the embargo that has been placed on the nation.

Regardless of one's political affiliation, or of ones previous position on the issue of sanctions, we must all agree that sanctions have no use right now, other than to perpetuate the suffering of the people of Zimbabwe.

The church community must speak for the lifting of sanctions, the business community must do the same, those in civic society must join the call, and finally the political parties must unite and pass a resolution in both houses of the legislature for the lifting of sanctions, so that the entire world knows that the people of Zimbabwe are speaking with one voice, and that voice declares that sanctions must be lifted.

If these three things can be done I have no doubt that we will be well on the way for the take off we so desperately need.

The beauty of what needs to be done, is that it is all well within our powers to do so. We can work the land and ensure a bountiful harvest. We can prepare for, and conduct elections in an atmosphere free of violence and intimidation.

We can unite as a nation, and present a common front to the world on the issue of the lifting of sanctions. We can do all of these things.

The question is, will we rise to the challenge and do them? Only the people of Zimbabwe themselves can answer that question, but I have great faith, that reason will triumph over unreasonableness, hope will triumph over despair and love will triumph over hatred. We can do it, I know we can.

IBishop Manhanga is the Presiding Bishop of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Zimbabwe and the Chairman of the Heads of Christian Denominations. He writes this article in his personal capacity.

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23731|2007-11-14 07:13:53|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Well, if African political leaders will not declare these men persona non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: mahari@myway.com

Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika about Afrika and Afrikans.

=====

Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now, When?

Published by the government of Zimbabwe

The Herald (Harare)

Bishop Trevor Manhanga

TWO incidents took place this year, a couple of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and opinions some in the white west have about us, as we strive for economic empowerment and emancipation.

The first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.

In what can only be described as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner feelings of a very high standing public figure, Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man has never really entered history.

"The African peasant who for centuries has lived according to the seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time via the endless repetition of the same actions and the same words.

"In this mentality, where everything always starts over again, there is no place for human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this man never projects himself into the future, it never occurs to him to break free from the repetition and invent a destiny for himself.

"This, if you will allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's problem.

"Africa's challenge is to enter history more fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever repeating and going over things, and to free itself from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to realise that the golden age that it always harks back to will never return, for the simple reason that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that its present is permeated with nostalgia for the paradise lost of its childhood.

"Africa's problem is that it judges its present according to a wholly imaginary notion of original purity that no one could ever hope to revive.

"Africa's challenge should not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make the present more bearable, but to invent a future with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa has a right to be happy just like all the other continents of the world."

The deafening silence from the African continent and its leadership in allowing Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on African soil, but also at an institution of higher learning, and get away with it has been most disturbing.

How can the collective leadership of the African continent, have remained silent in the face of this very provocative and insulting opinion of Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its people is without empirical validation, downright condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with the contempt it deserves.

One would have expected at the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist remarks from none other than the AU, or other regional African bodies such as SADC or ECOWAS. I have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans.

If there has been a response, then perhaps I have not seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's racist diatribe have been few and far between, and among the few I have encountered is one in the October issue of New African magazine, where the editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's speech said:

"I don't know about you just now, but I am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing here with a confused man with a confused speech. Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those glorious empires of yore right across the continent? When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's European ancestors were still living in caves. They didn't know what a window was! And he has the temerity to insult us and our ancestors?"

There is doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so, because such outright disdain for Africa and its people cannot be left unchallenged.

What Sarkozy needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants of these "African peasants who live by the seasons" were part of France's World Cup winning team, when France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory serves me right, the team looked like a typical African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of Caucasian faces. So much for people who are supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by Sarkozy.

The second incident took place in the USA, and relates to an article written by an eminent scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson, who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on Long Island New York, USA, resigned after controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting black people are less intelligent than whites.

Watson (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it into one of the world's leading genetics research institutes. His problems, which led to his retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not really."

To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory through their president, said Watson's comments have no connection with research activity at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently disagree" with Watson's statements.

The lab moved swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative responsibilities as chancellor leading to his subsequent resignation.

Why do I make reference to these two incidents that have taken place on two continents by two different people, under two different conditions?

Reference must be made to them, because they reveal the underlying hostile and racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and Watson are not ordinary run of the mill, intellectually challenged people. On the contrary, one is the president of a key industrialised Western European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate and respected scientist.

The question must be asked then, if people of such high standing and respectability in western society have such a deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the problem we face is much greater than we ever imagined.

Theses were not off the cuff, slip of the tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were well thought out and delivered, and even if there is ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no matter how vigorous an attempt to do so.

I mention these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because it is imperative that there is an understanding by all of us, that we should work to prove that the two gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner that provides them with ammunition, to buttress their racist stereotypical opinions.

There are three things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted opinions.

The first is to ensure that the agricultural season currently upon us yields the fruits we anticipate and desperately need.

It is not too late to make the clarion call to all those on agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of the land reform programme, or have always been on the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch of available arable land, and make this the, "mother of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts as Sarkozy and Watson wrong.

We must show that we can use the land we have. We can make use of the farming implements that have just been delivered to some of our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser mortals, that we are industrious, responsible people.

We must be constantly aware that there are many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, (both qualitatively and quantitatively) , that the white former farmers used to. It is for this reason that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of liberation, when those who fought for the emancipation of the nation reminded each other in the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy: "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound)."

That is the reality we face today and every one of us must not flinch from the task ahead.

The second is to ensure that the up coming national elections are conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open and transparent manner.

Those who cannot bring themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can solve their own problems, (and we are well on our way to doing that), will leave no stone unturned to find reasons to try to isolate us.

For this reason every political party and candidate that will contest next year's election must realise that the elections are more than just electing a President, a Member of Parliament, a Senator, a Councillor, it is about Zimbabwe.

It is about putting Zimbabwe first, and that means ensuring that we conduct the elections in a manner that will unify the nation, give us all the opportunity discover what unites us (and there is much more that unites us than divides us), rather than add fuel to the fires of division.

Not only must the elections be conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, but there will also be a great responsibility on the electorate to elect those who unite not those who divide, doers not sitters, people who have a vision for a great and prosperous Zimbabwe, not people who cannot see beyond tomorrow.

It is important therefore for all political parties that will present candidates to the electorate, to assist the process by putting forward credible candidates, who will be a credit to both their party, and their nation if elected.

Zimbabwe has a plethora of intellectually astute, morally upright people who have a well-documented track record.

These are the people who should be put forward before the electorate, and that will give the electorate a group of topnotch candidates from which to choose those who will spearhead the turnaround and take off of our nation.

Finally, we need to unite, from all sectors in the nation, in a call for the lifting of sanctions. We need to collectively begin the campaign now for the lifting of sanctions, of whatever form, currently imposed on the nation and some of our leaders.

Those who have imposed sanctions of whatever form on us need to be told, we are of one mind on this issue -- they must be lifted.

The sanctions are neither smart nor targeted and have run their course. We need not wait for the completion of the electoral process next year, to begin the rebuilding of the nation and its economy, and part of the rebuilding process starts with the lifting of the embargo that has been placed on the nation.

Regardless of one's political affiliation, or of ones previous position on the issue of sanctions, we must all agree that sanctions have no use right now, other than to perpetuate the suffering of the people of Zimbabwe.

The church community must speak for the lifting of sanctions, the business community must do the same, those in civic society must join the call, and finally the political parties must unite and pass a resolution in both houses of the legislature for the lifting of sanctions, so that the entire world knows that the people of Zimbabwe are speaking with one voice, and that voice declares that sanctions must be lifted.

If these three things can be done I have no doubt that we will be well on the way for the take off we so desperately need.

The beauty of what needs to be done, is that it is all well within our powers to do so. We can work the land and ensure a bountiful harvest. We can prepare for, and conduct elections in an atmosphere free of violence and intimidation.

We can unite as a nation, and present a common front to the world on the issue of the lifting of sanctions. We can do all of these things.

The question is, will we rise to the challenge and do them? Only the people of Zimbabwe themselves can answer that question, but I have great faith, that reason will triumph over unreasonableness, hope will triumph over despair and love will triumph over hatred. We can do it, I know we can.

IBishop Manhanga is the Presiding Bishop of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Zimbabwe and the Chairman of the Heads of Christian Denominations. He writes this article in his personal capacity.

===

HTP,
Mahari

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.
Play Now!

| 23732|2007-11-14 07:16:09|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: KMT - response to Ferg|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thanks, Paul.

>

> I had in fact visited the tomb (in 1995) in search of the "Table of Nations" relief as described by Champollion the Younger (Diop quotes Champollion's 13th. letter in The African Origin of Civilization), but failed to recognise it. Guess I needed a baksheesh guide.

>
>

Or you could take the Manu Ampim guided tour ;) .

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23733|2007-11-14 07:25:25|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Sarkozy had a lot of nerve making a speech like that at Cheikh Anta Diop University.

The neoconservatives in the U.S. cheered when Sarkozy beat out his "leftist" opponent in France's last election.

There is a battle in Europe, and also in the U.S., between the left and the right raging fiercely.

In my view, people of color need to weigh in on this regardless of their views on the system as a whole. I support progressive views regardless of the fact that many leaders of progressive movements are far from perfect in their racial or other viewpoints.

That's the nature of politics, you work with what's available.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23734|2007-11-14 07:51:02|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to react.

However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK, Cuba,....and all other nations with black presence that are experiencing open hostility, denial of contribution, and planned elimination.

What are we to do?

We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400 years ago, yet we are even more deceived into playing their game and setting ourselves up for defeat and elimination then ever before. With everything, there is a trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the choices we make.

It seems the more educated we become, the more vested we are into maintaining status quo.

We understand that we must unite, but we do not.

We understand the destructiveness of cocaine distribution, Gangsta Rap, black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah, Jordan, 50cents, TD Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to support it financially, spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.

We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are intentional countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in development of future follow-on programs that will do the same.

I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and energies focused on crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on picketing, protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks who do not have our best interests at heart 24/7/365.

- Make the Africa leaders and their people accountable.
- Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same as the promises he's made the Jews and whites.
- Make black voters aware there is something dysfunctional and insane about voting for a candidate because of skin color, and not because of the content of what they will do for you.
- Make black police and other black law enforcement accountable when they assist in killing or betraying their own.
- Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have sold their people's interests for financial reward.
- Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist in developing, maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites promote of blacks worldwide.
- Educate blacks on the realities of world economics, and how it is used to place blacks into a state of entropy.

Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we did not allow it. Examine your choices.

What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good question.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500

Well, if African political leaders will not declare these men persona non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika about Afrika and Afrikans.

=====

Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now, When?

Published by the government of Zimbabwe

The Herald (Harare)

Bishop Trevor Manhanga

TWO incidents took place this year, a couple of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and opinions some in the white west have about us, as we strive for economic empowerment and emancipation.

The first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.

In what can only be described as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner feelings of a very high standing public figure, Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man has never really entered history.

"The African peasant who for centuries has lived according to the seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time via the endless repetition of the same actions and the same words.

"In this mentality, where everything always starts over again, there is no place for human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this man never projects himself into the future, it never occurs to him to break free from the repetition and invent a destiny for himself.

"This, if you will allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's problem.

"Africa's challenge is to enter history more fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever repeating and going over things, and to free itself from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to realise that the golden age that it always harks back to will never return, for the simple reason that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that its present is permeated with nostalgia for the paradise lost of its childhood.

"Africa's problem is that it judges its present according to a wholly imaginary notion of original purity that no one could ever hope to revive.

"Africa's challenge should not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make the present more bearable, but to invent a future with

the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa has a right to be happy
just like all the other continents of the world."

The deafening silence from the African continent and its leadership in allowing Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only
on African soil, but also at an institution of higher learning, and get away with it has been most disturbing.

How can the collective leadership of the African continent,
have remained silent in the face of this very provocative and insulting opinion of Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its people
is without empirical validation, downright condescendingly racist,
and
must be dismissed with the contempt it deserves.

One would have expected at the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist remarks from none other than the AU, or other regional African bodies such as Sadc or Ecowas. I have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans.

If there has been a response, then perhaps I have not seen it.
Voices
of indignation against Sarkozy's racist diatribe have been few
and far between, and among the few I have encountered is one in the October issue of New African magazine, where the editor Baffour
Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's speech said:

"I don't know about you just now, but I am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing here with a confused man with a confused speech. Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those glorious empires of yore right across the continent? When our ancestors had built the great pyramids

in Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's European ancestors were still living in caves. They didn't know what a window was! And he has the temerity to insult us and our ancestors?"

There is doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so, because such outright disdain for Africa and its people cannot be left unchallenged.

What Sarkozy needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants
of these "African peasants who live by the seasons" were part of France's World Cup winning team, when France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory serves me right, the team looked like a typical African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of Caucasian faces. So much for people who are supposedly locked in a time warp
and prisoners to the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused
by Sarkozy.

The second incident took place in the USA, and relates to an article
written by an eminent scholar and Nobel laureate James D.
Watson.
Watson, who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on Long Island New York,
USA, resigned after controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting black people are less intelligent than whites.

Watson (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it into one of the world's leading genetics research institutes. His problems, which led to his retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not really."

To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory through their president, said Watson's comments have no connection with research activity at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently disagree" with Watson's statements.

The lab moved swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative responsibilities as chancellor leading to his subsequent resignation.

Why do I make reference to these two incidents that have taken place on two continents by two different people, under two different conditions?

Reference must be made to them, because they reveal the underlying hostile and racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and Watson are not ordinary run of the mill, intellectually challenged people. On the contrary, one is the president of a key industrialised Western European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate and respected scientist.

The question must be asked then, if people of such high standing and respectability in western society have such a deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the problem we face is much greater than we ever imagined.

Theses were not off the cuff, slip of the tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were well thought out and delivered, and even if there is ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no matter how vigorous an attempt to do so.

I mention these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because it is imperative that there is an understanding by all of us, that we should work to prove that the two gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner that provides them with ammunition, to buttress their racist stereotypical opinions.

There are three things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted opinions.

The first is to ensure that the agricultural season currently upon us yields the fruits we anticipate and desperately need.

It is not too late to make the clarion call to all those on agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of the land reform programme, or have always been on the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch of available arable land, and make this the, "mother of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts as Sarkozy and Watson wrong.

We must show that we can use the land we have. We can make use of the farming implements that have just been delivered to some of our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser mortals, that we are industrious, responsible people.

We must be constantly aware that there are many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, (both qualitatively and quantitatively), that the white former farmers used to. It is for this reason that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of liberation, when those who fought for the emancipation of the nation reminded each other in the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy: "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound)."

That is the reality we face today and every one of us must not flinch from the task ahead.

The second is to ensure that the up coming national elections are conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open and transparent manner.

Those who cannot bring themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can solve their own problems, (and we are well on our way to doing that), will leave no stone unturned to find reasons to try to isolate us.

For this reason every political party and candidate that will contest next year's election must realise that the elections are more than just electing a President, a Member of Parliament, a Senator, a Councillor, it is about Zimbabwe.

It is about putting Zimbabwe first, and that means ensuring that we conduct the elections in a manner that will unify the nation, give us all the opportunity discover what unites us (and there is much more that unites us than divides us), rather than add fuel to the fires of division.

Not only must the elections be conducted in an atmosphere free

of violence, but there will also be a great responsibility on the electorate to elect those who unite not those who divide, doers
not sitters, people who have a vision for a great and prosperous
Zimbabwe, not people who cannot see beyond tomorrow.

It is important therefore for all political parties that will present
candidates to the electorate, to assist the process by putting forward credible candidates, who will be a credit to both their party, and their nation if elected.

Zimbabwe has a plethora of intellectually astute, morally upright
people who have a well-documented track record.

These are the people who should be put forward before the electorate,
and that will give the electorate a group of topnotch candidates
from which to choose those who will spearhead the turnaround and take off
of our nation.

Finally, we need to unite, from all sectors in the nation, in a call for the lifting of sanctions. We need to collectively begin the campaign now for the lifting of sanctions, of whatever form, currently imposed on the nation and some of our leaders.

Those who have imposed sanctions of whatever form on us need to
be told, we are of one mind on this issue -- they must be lifted.

The sanctions are neither smart nor targeted and have run their course. We need not wait for the completion of the electoral process
next year, to begin the rebuilding of the nation and its economy, and part of the rebuilding process starts with the lifting of the embargo
that has been placed on the nation.

Regardless of one's political affiliation, or of ones previous position on the issue of sanctions, we must all agree that sanctions have no use right now, other than to perpetuate the suffering of

the people of Zimbabwe.

The church community must speak for the lifting of sanctions,
the business community must do the same, those in civic society must join the call, and finally the political parties must unite and pass
a resolution in both houses of the legislature for the lifting of sanctions, so that the entire world knows that the people of Zimbabwe
are speaking with one voice, and that voice declares that sanctions
must be lifted.

If these three things can be done I have no doubt that we will
be well on the way for the take off we so desperately need.

The beauty of what needs to be done, is that it is all well within our powers to do so. We can work the land and ensure a bountiful harvest. We can prepare for, and conduct elections in an atmosphere
free of violence and intimidation.

We can unite as a nation, and present a common front to the world on the issue of the lifting of sanctions. We can do all of these things.

The question is, will we rise to the challenge and do them? Only
the people of Zimbabwe themselves can answer that question, but I have great faith, that reason will triumph over unreasonableness, hope will triumph over despair and love will triumph over hatred. We can do it, I know we can.

IBishop Manhanga is the Presiding Bishop of the Pentecostal

Assemblies of Zimbabwe and the Chairman of the Heads of Christian
Denominations. He writes this article in his personal capacity.

===

HTP,
Mahari

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power. Play Now!
| 23735|2007-11-14 08:00:34|clyde winters|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Great points. If you let people get away with doing nothing--that's exactly what they do.

Clyde

--- kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

- > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
- > react.
- > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
- > Cuba,....and all
- > other nations with black presence that are
- > experiencing open hostility,
- > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
- >
- > What are we to do?
- > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
- > years ago, yet we are
- > even more deceived into playing their game and
- > setting ourselves up for
- > defeat and elimination then ever before. With
- > everything, there is a
- > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the
- > choices we make.
- >
- > It seems the more educated we become, the more
- > vested we are into
- > maintaining status quo.
- >
- > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
- > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine

- > distribution, Gangsta Rap,
- > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
- > Jordan, 50cents, TD
- > Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
- > support it financially,
- > spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
- > We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
- > intentional
- > countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
- > development of future
- > follow-on programs that will do the same.
- >
- > I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
- > energies focused on
- > crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
- > picketing,
- > protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
- > who do not have our
- > best interests at heart 24/7/365.
- >
- > -Make the Africa leaders and their people
- > accountable.
- > -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
- > as the promises he's
- > made the Jews and whites.
- > -Make black voters aware there is something
- > dysfunctional and insane
- > about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
- > and not because of
- > the content of what they will do for you.
- > -Make black police and other black law enforcement
- > accountable when they
- > assist in killing or betraying their own.
- > -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
- > sold their people's
- > interests for financial reward.
- > -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
- > in developing,
- > maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
- > promote of blacks
- > worldwide.
- > -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
- > and how it is used
- > to place blacks into a state of entropy.
- >
- > Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we

> did not allow it.
> Examine your choices.
>
> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
> question.
>
> Meninarmer
>
>
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>
> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
> these men persona
> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on > Africa to fall? Thanks
> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: mahari@myway.com
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
>
> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in > Afrika about Afrika
> and

> Afrikans.
> =====
> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
> When?
>
> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>
> The Herald (Harare)
>
> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>
> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
> of months and two
> continents apart, yet interrelated in that > they revealed the
> battle
> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans > encounter in the face of
> the
> stereotypical, and downright racist > attitudes and opinions some
> in
> the white west have about us, as we strive
> for economic > empowerment
> and emancipation.
>
> The first incident took place in Dakar
> Senegal on July 20 2007
> and
> relates to the speech given by the President
> of France Nicolas
> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>
> In what can only be described as a most > unfortunate revelation
> of the
> inner feelings of a very high standing
> public figure, Sarkozy
> had
> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
> "The tragedy of
> Africa
> is that the African man has never really > entered history.
>

> "The African peasant who for centuries has > lived according to
> the
> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
> with nature, has only
> known
> the eternal renewal of time via the endless > repetition of the > same
> actions and the same words.
>
> "In this mentality, where everything always > starts over again,
> there
> is no place for human adventure nor for any
> idea of
> progress...this
> man never projects himself into the future,
> it never occurs to
> him to
> break free from the repetition and invent a > destiny for himself.
>
> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
> to say it, is > Africa's
> problem.
>
> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more > fully.... Africa's > challenge is to stop forever repeating and
> going over things,
> and to
> free itself from the myth of the eternal > renewal. It is to > realise
> that the golden age that it always harks
> back to will never
> return,
> for the simple reason that it never > existed.... Africa's problem
>

=== message truncated ===

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23736|2007-11-14 08:29:25|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Well said, Paul.

This [making his speech at Cheikh Anta Diop Univ.] is the supreme insult.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: pmanansala@sbcglobal.net

Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 15:25:24 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Sarkozy had a lot of nerve making a speech like that at Cheikh Anta Diop University.

The neoconservatives in the U.S. cheered when Sarkozy beat out his "leftist" opponent in France's last election.

There is a battle in Europe, and also in the U.S., between the left and the right raging fiercely.

In my view, people of color need to weigh in on this regardless of their views on the system as a whole. I support progressive views regardless of the fact that many leaders of progressive movements are far from perfect in their racial or other viewpoints.

That's the nature of politics, you work with what's available.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You! Get 'em!

| 23737|2007-11-14 09:36:52|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Dr. Winters

Thank you for your response.

Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native American, and other histories.

Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done to others to maintain their position.

IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I am tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is nothing else to learn in this area.

For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys from the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the drug trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their actions, and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them instead to become strong black men.

Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL, University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music (Brittany Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.

They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready to do more.

Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a business to enlighten blacks about the realities of money.

I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as alternatives to the worthless dollar.

<http://www.kastleandhawke.com>

I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on silver, and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of silver money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully help turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times within the black community.

Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar is now valued at upwards of $390/coin?

I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open accounts in Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax dollars you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures. Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world where the US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America, Citi Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.

It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a portion of my ambition.

No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend on our own commitments.

Regards,

MeniNarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: clyde winters <olmec982000@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)

Great points. If you let people get away with doing nothing--that's exactly what they do.

Clyde

--- kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

- > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
- > react.
- > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
- > Cuba,....and all
- > other nations with black presence that are
- > experiencing open hostility,
- > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
- >
- > What are we to do?
- > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
- > years ago, yet we are
- > even more deceived into playing their game and
- > setting ourselves up for
- > defeat and elimination then ever before. With
- > everything, there is a
- > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the
- > choices we make.
- >

- > It seems the more educated we become, the more
- > vested we are into
- > maintaining status quo.
- >
- > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
- > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
- > distribution, Gangsta Rap,
- > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
- > Jordan, 50cents, TD
- > Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
- > support it financially,
- > spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
- > We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
- > intentional
- > countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
- > development of future
- > follow-on programs that will do the same.
- >
- > I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
- > energies focused on
- > crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
- > picketing,
- > protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
- > who do not have our
- > best interests at heart 24/7/365.
- >
- > -Make the Africa leaders and their people
- > accountable.
- > -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
- > as the promises he's
- > made the Jews and whites.
- > -Make black voters aware there is something
- > dysfunctional and insane
- > about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
- > and not because of
- > the content of what they will do for you.
- > -Make black police and other black law enforcement
- > accountable when they
- > assist in killing or betraying their own.
- > -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
- > sold their people's
- > interests for financial reward.
- > -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
- > in developing,
- > maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
- > promote of blacks

> worldwide.
> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
> and how it is used
> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>
> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
> did not allow it.
> Examine your choices.
>
> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
> question.
>
> Meninarmer
>
>
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>
> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
> these men persona
> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on > Africa to fall? Thanks
> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: mahari@myway.com
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
>
> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in > Afrika about Afrika
> and > Afrikans.
> =====
> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
> When?
>
> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>
> The Herald (Harare)
>
> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>
> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
> of months and two
> continents apart, yet interrelated in that > they revealed the
> battle
> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
> encounter in the face of
> the
> stereotypical, and downright racist > attitudes and opinions some
> in
> the white west have about us, as we strive
> for economic
> empowerment
> and emancipation.
>
> The first incident took place in Dakar
> Senegal on July 20 2007
> and
> relates to the speech given by the President
> of France Nicolas
> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>
> In what can only be described as a most > unfortunate revelation
> of the
> inner feelings of a very high standing
> public figure, Sarkozy
> had

> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
> "The tragedy of
> Africa
> is that the African man has never really
> entered history.
>
> "The African peasant who for centuries has
> lived according to
> the
> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
> with nature, has only
> known
> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
> repetition of the
> same
> actions and the same words.
>
> "In this mentality, where everything always > starts over again,
> there
> is no place for human adventure nor for any
> idea of
> progress...this
> man never projects himself into the future,
> it never occurs to
> him to
> break free from the repetition and invent a
> destiny for himself.
>
> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
> to say it, is > Africa's
> problem.
>
> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
> fully.... Africa's > challenge is to stop forever repeating and
> going over things,
> and to
> free itself from the myth of the eternal > renewal. It is to
> realise
> that the golden age that it always harks
> back to will never
> return,
> for the simple reason that it never > existed.... Africa's problem

>

=== message truncated ===

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23738|2007-11-14 11:42:20|kungfuhustle|Do clones have human rights?|

It will be interesting to see how clones are designated legally once they are soon introduced into society.

Will they be crafted as duplicates or replacements (improved versions) of their original versions.

http://news.independent.co.uk/sci\_tech/article3152325.ece

Israel just announced their breakthrough in growing human brains and working towards transferring information from one brain to another. Of course, this research is being funded by US taxpayers through DoD/Darpa based research grants.

http://www.theregister.co.uk/2007/06/07/the\_men\_with\_two\_brains/

<http://scitation.aip.org/getabs/servlet/GetabsServlet?prog=normal&id=PLEEE8000075000005050901000001&idtype=cvips&gifs=Yes>

Israel has already stated their intentions of implanting these brains into military robots to create first generation cyborgs.

<http://www.defensenews.com/story.php?F=2803275&C=mideast>

Are these developments related?

MeniNarmer

| 23739|2007-11-14 12:11:57|Asar Imhotep|Re: Judgement Day - Intelligent Design On Trial (on NOVA tonight)|

Did anyone check this out?

asar_imhotep wrote:

Peace Ta-Seti

Just wanted to inform you of something a bit off topic, but I think interesting given the minds on this forum. On the show NOVA on PBS tonight they will be airing a documentary about the trial of teaching Evolution at school.

This would be a good grounds for discussion. Here is the link to find out more information about the debate:

<http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/nova/id/>

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.
| 23740|2007-11-14 15:24:56|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

I am not surprised at their lack of vigorous opposition. In fact, it fits all too well into their most recent collective personalities. I am on the verge of being in favor of Afrikan-Americans, who have consistently backed them, telling them that they had better get it together. It has been about 25 years since they acquired their independence. And even though I know they are still economically enslaved by europeans they could at least show some balls and have some faith in their own potential and the potential of their people. Their people are quickly losing faith in them as they are leaving in droves.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Well, if African political leaders will not declare these men persona non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>

> Peter

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: mahari@...: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

>

>

>

> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika about Afrika and Afrikans.=====Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now, When?Published by the government of Zimbabwe The Herald (Harare) Bishop Trevor ManhangaTWO incidents took place this year, a couple of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and opinions some in the white west have about us, as we strive for economic empowerment and emancipation. The first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University. In what can only be described as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner feelings of a very high standing public figure, Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man has never really entered history." "The African peasant who for centuries has lived according to the seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time via the endless repetition of the same actions and the same words." "In this mentality, where everything always starts over again, there is no place for human adventure nor for any idea of progress... this man never projects himself into the future, it never occurs to him to break free from the repetition and invent a destiny for himself." "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's problem." "Africa's challenge is to enter history more fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever repeating and going over things, and to free itself from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to realise that the golden age that it always harks back to will never return, for the simple reason that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that its present is permeated with nostalgia for the paradise lost of its childhood." "Africa's problem is that it judges its present according to a wholly imaginary notion of original purity that no one could ever hope to revive." "Africa's challenge should not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make the present more bearable, but to invent a future with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa has a right to be happy just like all the other continents of the world." "The deafening silence from the African continent and its leadership in allowing Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on African soil, but also at an institution of higher learning, and get away with it has been most disturbing. How can the collective leadership of the African continent, have remained silent in the face of this very provocative and insulting opinion of Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its people is without empirical validation, downright condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with the contempt it deserves. One would have expected at the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist remarks from none other than the AU, or other regional African bodies such as SADC or ECOWAS. I have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans. If there has been a response, then perhaps I have not seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's racist diatribe have been few and far between, and among the few I have encountered is one in the October issue of New African magazine, where the editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's speech said: "I don't know about you just now, but I am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing here with a confused man with a confused speech. Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those glorious empires of yore right across the continent? When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's European ancestors were still living in caves. They didn't know what a window was! And he has the temerity to insult us and our ancestors?" There is doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so, because such outright disdain for Africa and its people cannot be left unchallenged. What Sarkozy needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants of these "African peasants who live by the seasons" were part of France's World Cup winning team, when France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory serves me right, the team looked like a typical African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of Caucasian faces. So much for people who are supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by Sarkozy. The second incident took place in the USA, and relates to an article written by an eminent scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson, who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on Long Island New York, USA, resigned after controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting black people are less intelligent than whites. Watson (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it into one of the world's leading genetics research institutes. His problems, which led to his retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not really." To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory through their president, said Watson's comments have no connection with research activity at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently disagree" with Watson's statements. The lab moved swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative responsibilities as chancellor leading to his subsequent resignation. Why do I make reference to these two incidents that have taken place on two continents by two different people, under two different conditions? Reference must be made to them, because they reveal the underlying hostile and racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and Watson are not ordinary run of the mill, intellectually challenged people. On the contrary, one is the president of a key industrialised Western European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate and respected scientist. The question must be asked then, if people of such high standing and respectability in western society have such a deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the problem we face is much greater than we ever imagined. These were not off the cuff, slip of the tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were well thought out and delivered, and even if there is ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no matter how vigorous an attempt to do so. I mention these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because it is imperative that there is an understanding by all of us, that we should work to prove that the two gentlemen, and others who may share their sentiments are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner that provides them with ammunition, to buttress their racist stereotypical opinions. There are three things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted opinions. The first is to ensure that the agricultural season currently upon us yields the fruits we anticipate and desperately need. It is not too late to make the clarion call to all those on agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of the land reform programme, or have always been on the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch of available arable land, and make this the, "mother of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts as Sarkozy and Watson wrong. We must show that we can use the land we have. We can make use of the farming implements that have just been delivered to some of our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser mortals, that we are industrious, responsible people. We must be constantly aware that there are many more Sarkozys and Watsons who firmly believe that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, (both qualitatively and quantitatively), that the white former farmers used to. It is for this reason that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of liberation, when those who fought for the emancipation of the nation reminded each other in the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy: "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound)." That is the reality we face today and every one of us must not flinch from the task ahead. The second is to ensure that the upcoming national elections are conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open and transparent manner. Those who cannot bring themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can solve their own problems, (and we are well on our way to doing that), will leave no stone unturned to find reasons to try to isolate us. For this reason every political party and candidate that will contest next year's election must realise that the elections are more than just electing a President, a Member of Parliament, a Senator, a Councillor, it is about Zimbabwe. It is about putting Zimbabwe first, and that means ensuring that we conduct the elections in a manner that will unify the nation, give us all the opportunity discover what unites us (and there is much more that unites us than divides us), rather than add fuel to the fires of division. Not only must the elections be conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, but there will also be a great responsibility on the electorate to elect those who unite not those who divide, doers not sitters, people who have a vision for a great and prosperous Zimbabwe, not people who cannot see beyond tomorrow. It is important therefore for all political parties that will present candidates to the electorate, to assist the process by putting forward credible candidates, who will be a credit to both their party, and their nation if elected. Zimbabwe has a plethora of intellectually astute, morally upright people who have a well-documented track record. These are the people who should be put forward before the electorate, and that will give the electorate a group of topnotch candidates from which to choose those who will spearhead the turnaround and take off of our nation. Finally, we need to unite, from all sectors in the nation, in a call for the lifting of sanctions. We need to collectively begin the campaign now for the lifting of sanctions, of whatever form, currently imposed on the nation and some of our leaders. Those who have imposed sanctions of whatever form on us need to be told, we are of one mind on this issue -- they must be lifted. The sanctions are neither smart nor targeted and have run their course. We need not wait for the completion of the electoral process next year, to begin the rebuilding of the nation and its economy, and part of the rebuilding process starts with the lifting of the embargo that has been placed on the nation. Regardless of one's political affiliation, or of one's previous position on the issue of sanctions, we must all agree that sanctions have no use right now, other than to perpetuate the suffering of the people of Zimbabwe. The church community must speak for the lifting of sanctions, the business community must do the same, those in civic society must join the call, and finally the political parties must unite and pass a resolution in both houses of the legislature for the lifting of sanctions, so that the entire world knows that the people of Zimbabwe are speaking with one voice, and that voice declares that sanctions must be lifted. If these three things can be done I have no doubt that we will be well on the way for the take off we so desperately need. The beauty of what needs to be done, is that it is all well within our powers to do so. We can work the land and ensure a bountiful harvest. We can prepare for, and conduct elections in an atmosphere free of violence and intimidation. We can unite as a nation, and present a common front to the world on the issue of the lifting of sanctions. We can do all of these things. The question is, will we rise to the challenge and do them? Only the people of Zimbabwe themselves can answer that question, but I have great faith, that reason will triumph over unreasonableness, hope will triumph over despair and love will triumph over hatred. We can do it, I know we can. Bishop Manhanga is the Presiding Bishop of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Zimbabwe and the Chairman of the Heads of Christian Denominations. He writes this article in his personal capacity.===HTP,Mahari

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
_____

> Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.

> http://club.live.com/star\_shuffle.aspx?
icid=starshuffle_wlmailtextlink_oct

>

| 23741|2007-11-14 15:28:18|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Paul,

I'm not the least surprised at him either. If you recall during the revolt of the muslim youth he called them "scum" and reacted very harshly. He is an incredibly arrogant man and arrogance breeds injustice.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> Sarkozy had a lot of nerve making a speech like that at Cheikh Anta

Diop

> University.

>

> The neoconservatives in the U.S. cheered when Sarkozy beat out his "leftist" opponent in France's last election.

>

> There is a battle in Europe, and also in the U.S., between the left

and > the right raging fiercely.

>

> In my view, people of color need to weigh in on this regardless of

their > views on the system as a whole. I support progressive views regardless > of the fact that many leaders of progressive movements are far from > perfect in their racial or other viewpoints.

>

> That's the nature of politics, you work with what's available.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23742|2007-11-14 15:32:39|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Agreed... A Greed.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to react.

> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK, Cuba,...and
all > other nations with black presence that are experiencing open hostility,

> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.

>

> What are we to do?

> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400 years ago, yet we
are > even more deceived into playing their game and setting ourselves up

for > defeat and elimination then ever before. With everything, there is a > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the choices we make.

>

> It seems the more educated we become, the more vested we are into > maintaining status quo.

>

> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.

> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine distribution, Gangsta Rap, > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah, Jordan, 50cents, TD

> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to support it financially,

> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.

- > We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are intentional
- > countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in development of future
- > follow-on programs that will do the same.
- >
- > I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and energies focused on
- > crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on picketing,
- > protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks who do not have
- our
- > best interests at heart 24/7/365.
- >
- > -Make the Africa leaders and their people accountable.
- > -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same as the promises
- he's
- > made the Jews and whites.
- > -Make black voters aware there is something dysfunctional and insane
- > about voting for a candidate because of skin color, and not because
- of
- > the content of what they will do for you.
- > -Make black police and other black law enforcement accountable when
- they
- > assist in killing or betraying their own.
- > -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have sold their
- people's
- > interests for financial reward.
- > -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist in developing,
- > maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites promote of
- blacks
- > worldwide.
- > -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics, and how it is
- used
- > to place blacks into a state of entropy.
- >
- > Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we did not allow
- it.
- > Examine your choices.
- >
- > What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good question.
- >
- > Meninarmer
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- > -----Original Message-----
- > From: Peter Gray
- > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>
> Well, if African political leaders will not declare these men persona
> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on Africa to fall?
Thanks
> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: mahari@...
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
>
> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika about Afrika
> and > Afrikans.
> =====
> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now, When?
>
> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>
> The Herald (Harare)
>
> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>
> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple of months and two > continents apart, yet interrelated in that they revealed the
> battle
> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of
> the > stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and opinions some

> in > the white west have about us, as we strive for economic > empowerment
> and emancipation.
>
> The first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July 20 2007
> and > relates to the speech given by the President of France Nicolas
> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>
> In what can only be described as a most unfortunate revelation
> of the > inner feelings of a very high standing public figure, Sarkozy
> had > this to say of Africa and Africans, in part: "The tragedy of > Africa
> is that the African man has never really entered history.
>
> "The African peasant who for centuries has lived according
to
> the > seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with nature, has only
> known > the eternal renewal of time via the endless repetition of the
> same
> actions and the same words.
>
> "In this mentality, where everything always starts over again,
> there > is no place for human adventure nor for any idea of
> progress...this > man never projects himself into the future, it never occurs
to
> him to > break free from the repetition and invent a destiny for himself.
>
> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa to say it, is > Africa's

> problem.
>
> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more fully....
Africa's
> challenge is to stop forever repeating and going over things,
> and to > free itself from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to
> realise > that the golden age that it always harks back to will never
> return, > for the simple reason that it never existed.... Africa's problem
> is > that its present is permeated with nostalgia for the paradise > lost of > its childhood.
>
> "Africa's problem is that it judges its present according to a > wholly > imaginary notion of original purity that no one could ever hope
> to > revive.
>
> "Africa's challenge should not be to invent a past, however > mythical;
> to make the present more bearable, but to invent a future
with
> the > means it has at its disposal.... For Africa has a right to be > happy
> just like all the other continents of the world."
>
> The deafening silence from the African continent and its > leadership > in allowing Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only
> on > African soil, but also at an institution of higher learning, and > get > away with it has been most disturbing.

>
> How can the collective leadership of the African continent,
> have > remained silent in the face of this very provocative and > insulting > opinion of Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its people
> is > without empirical validation, downright condescendingly racist,
> and > must be dismissed with the contempt it deserves.
>
> One would have expected at the very least a rebuttal of > Sarkozy's
> racist remarks from none other than the AU, or other regional > African
> bodies such as Sadc or Ecowas. I have been surprised at the lack > of a > groundswell of rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans.
>
> If there has been a response, then perhaps I have not seen
it.
> Voices > of indignation against Sarkozy's racist diatribe have been few
> and > far between, and among the few I have encountered is one in
the
> October issue of New African magazine, where the editor
Baffour
> Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's speech said:
>
> "I don't know about you just now, but I am doing my utmost
to > calm > down! For we are dealing here with a confused man with a > confused
> speech. Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors > doing in > Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those glorious empires of yore
> right

> across the continent? When our ancestors had built the great > pyramids
> in Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's European
> ancestors were still living in caves. They didn't know what a > window > was! And he has the temerity to insult us and our ancestors?"
>
> There is doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so, because
> such > outright disdain for Africa and its people cannot be left > unchallenged.
>
> What Sarkozy needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants
> of > these "African peasants who live by the seasons" were part
of > France's World Cup winning team, when France hosted the soccer > showcase? If my memory serves me right, the team looked like a > typical African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of Caucasian > faces. So much for people who are supposedly locked in a time
> warp
> and prisoners to the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused
> by > Sarkozy.
>
> The second incident took place in the USA, and relates to an > article
> written by an eminent scholar and Nobel laureate James D.
> Watson.
> Watson, who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was
the > chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on Long Island
New > York,
> USA, resigned after controversy erupted over comments he made > suggesting black people are less intelligent than whites.

>
> Watson (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering
the > structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory as > director
> in 1968 and helped build it into one of the world's leading > genetics > research institutes. His problems, which led to his retirement,
> arose > from comments he was quoted as having said on October 14 in
the > Sunday Times of London, that he is "inherently gloomy about
the > prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies are based > on the > fact that their intelligence is the same as ours -- whereas all
> the > testing says, not really."
>
> To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory through
their > president, said Watson's comments have no connection with > research > activity at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently disagree"
> with > Watson's statements.
>
> The lab moved swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative > responsibilities as chancellor leading to his subsequent > resignation.
>
> Why do I make reference to these two incidents that have taken > place
> on two continents by two different people, under two different > conditions?
>
> Reference must be made to them, because they reveal the > underlying > hostile and racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with

> the > global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and Watson are

not > ordinary run of the mill, intellectually challenged people.

On

> the

> contrary, one is the president of a key industrialised

Western

> European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate and > respected > scientist.

>

> The question must be asked then, if people of such high standing

> and > respectability in western society have such a deprecating > opinion of > Africa and Africans, then the problem we face is much greater > than we > ever imagined.

>

> Theses were not off the cuff, slip of the tongue comments.

On

> the > contrary, the comments were well thought out and delivered, and > even > if there is ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended > damage has > been done, and cannot be retracted, no matter how vigorous an > attempt > to do so.

>

> I mention these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because it

> is > imperative that there is an understanding by all of us, that we > should work to prove that the two gentleman, and others who may > share > their sentiments are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a > manner > that provides them with ammunition, to buttress their racist > stereotypical opinions.

>
> There are three things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans
> that > will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted opinions.
>
> The first is to ensure that the agricultural season currently > upon us
> yields the fruits we anticipate and desperately need.
>
> It is not too late to make the clarion call to all those on > agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of the land > reform > programme, or have always been on the land, A1 or A2 farmers,
> to > fully use every inch of available arable land, and make this > the, "mother of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people > wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts as Sarkozy
> and > Watson wrong.
>
> We must show that we can use the land we have. We can make use
> of the > farming implements that have just been delivered to some of our > farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our African compatriots, > to show that we are not lesser mortals, that we are > industrious, > responsible people.
>
> We must be constantly aware that there are many more Sarkozy's
> and > Watson's who firmly believe that we are incapable producing the > kinds > of crops, (both qualitatively and quantitatively), that the > white > former farmers used to. It is for this reason that we must turn

> to > the rallying cry of the war of liberation, when those who fought
> for > the emancipation of the nation reminded each other in the face
> of a > well armed and intransigent enemy: "Iwe neni tine basa (we are > duty-> bound)."
>
> That is the reality we face today and every one of us must not > flinch
> from the task ahead.
>
> The second is to ensure that the up coming national elections
> are > conducted in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open
and > transparent manner.
>
> Those who cannot bring themselves to face the reality that > Zimbabweans can solve their own problems, (and we are well
on > our way > to doing that), will leave no stone unturned to find reasons to > try > to isolate us.
>
> For this reason every political party and candidate that will > contest
> next year's election must realise that the elections are more > than > just electing a President, a Member of Parliament, a Senator, a

> Councillor, it is about Zimbabwe.
>
> It is about putting Zimbabwe first, and that means ensuring that
> we > conduct the elections in a manner that will unify the nation, > give us > all the opportunity discover what unites us (and there is much
> more > that unites us than divides us), rather than add fuel to the > fires of > division.
>
> Not only must the elections be conducted in an atmosphere free
> of > violence, but there will also be a great responsibility on the > electorate to elect those who unite not those who divide, doers
> not > sitters, people who have a vision for a great and prosperous > Zimbabwe, not people who cannot see beyond tomorrow.
>
> It is important therefore for all political parties that will > present
> candidates to the electorate, to assist the process by putting > forward credible candidates, who will be a credit to both their > party, and their nation if elected.
>
> Zimbabwe has a plethora of intellectually astute, morally > upright
> people who have a well-documented track record.
>
> These are the people who should be put forward before the
> electorate,
> and that will give the electorate a group of topnotch candidates
> from > which to choose those who will spearhead the turnaround and take > off

> of our nation.

>

> Finally, we need to unite, from all sectors in the nation, in a

> call > for the lifting of sanctions. We need to collectively begin

the > campaign now for the lifting of sanctions, of whatever form,

> currently imposed on the nation and some of our leaders.

>

> Those who have imposed sanctions of whatever form on us need to > be > told, we are of one mind on this issue -- they must be lifted.

>

> The sanctions are neither smart nor targeted and have run
their > course. We need not wait for the completion of the electoral > process

> next year, to begin the rebuilding of the nation and its > economy, and

> part of the rebuilding process starts with the lifting of the > embargo

> that has been placed on the nation.

>

> Regardless of one's political affiliation, or of ones previous > position on the issue of sanctions, we must all agree that

> sanctions

> have no use right now, other than to perpetuate the suffering of

> the > people of Zimbabwe.

>

> The church community must speak for the lifting of sanctions,

> the > business community must do the same, those in civic society must

> join

> the call, and finally the political parties must unite and pass

> a > resolution in both houses of the legislature for the lifting of > sanctions, so that the entire world knows that the people of

> Zimbabwe

> are speaking with one voice, and that voice declares that > sanctions

> must be lifted.

>

> If these three things can be done I have no doubt that we will

> be

> well on the way for the take off we so desperately need.

>

> The beauty of what needs to be done, is that it is all well

> within

> our powers to do so. We can work the land and ensure a > bountiful

> harvest. We can prepare for, and conduct elections in an > atmosphere

> free of violence and intimidation.

>

> We can unite as a nation, and present a common front to the > world on > the issue of the lifting of sanctions. We can do all of these > things.

>

> The question is, will we rise to the challenge and do them?

Only

> the > people of Zimbabwe themselves can answer that question, but

I

> have > great faith, that reason will triumph over unreasonableness,

> hope

> will triumph over despair and love will triumph over hatred. We > can > do it, I know we can.

>

> IBishop Manhanga is the Presiding Bishop of the Pentecostal

> Assemblies of Zimbabwe and the Chairman of the Heads of

> Christian

> Denominations. He writes this article in his personal capacity.

> ===

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble

> challenge with star power. Play Now!

>

| 23743|2007-11-14 15:34:22|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

There is something actually sinister about it and very much in line,
I believe, with his character - or lack thereof.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Well said, Paul.

>

> This [making his speech at Cheikh Anta Diop Univ.] is the supreme insult.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: pmanansala@...: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 15:25:24
+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

>

>

>

> Sarkozy had a lot of nerve making a speech like that at Cheikh Anta Diop University. The neoconservatives in the U.S. cheered when Sarkozy beat out his "leftist" opponent in France's last election. There is a battle in Europe, and also in the U.S., between the left and the right raging fiercely. In my view, people of color need to weigh in on this regardless of their views on the system as a whole. I support progressive views regardless of the fact that many leaders of progressive movements are far from perfect in their racial or other viewpoints. That's the nature of politics, you work with what's available. Regards, Paul Kekai Manansala

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You!

> http://www.reallivemoms.com?ocid=TXT\_TAGHM&loc=us

>

| 23744|2007-11-14 15:44:34|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.

Congrats.

Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika where so much gold is located.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Dr. Winters

>

> Thank you for your response.

>

> Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native American,

> and other histories.

> Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done to others to maintain their position.

> IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I am tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is nothing > else to learn in this area.

>

> For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys from > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the drug > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their actions, > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them instead to > become strong black men.

> Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain

> positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL,

> University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music (Brittany > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.

> They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their > friends and peers, are alone. Many pf them state, they are ready to do > more.

>

> Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a business to > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.

>

> I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as alternatives

> to the worthless dollar.

> <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>

> I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on silver,

> and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of silver

> money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully help > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times within the > black community.

>

> Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar is > now valued at upwards of$390/coin?

>

> I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open accounts in

> Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax dollars

> you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.

> Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world where the

> US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America, Citi

> Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
>
> It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a
portion of > my ambition.
>
> No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
on
> our own commitments.
>
> Regards,
>
> MeniNarmer
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: clyde winters
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
>
> Great points. If you let people get away with doing > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
>
> Clyde
>
> --- kungfuhustle wrote:
>
>> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
>> react.
>> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
>> Cuba,....and all
>> other nations with black presence that are
>> experiencing open hostility,
>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
>>
>> What are we to do?
>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
>> years ago, yet we are
>> even more deceived into playing their game and
>> setting ourselves up for
>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With
>> everything, there is a
>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the

> > choices we make.
> >
> > It seems the more educated we become, the more
> > vested we are into
> > maintaining status quo.
> >
> > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
> > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
> > distribution, Gangsta Rap,
> > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
> > Jordan, 50cents, TD
> > Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
> > support it financially,
> > spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
> > We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
> > intentional
> > countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
> > development of future
> > follow-on programs that will do the same.
> >
> > I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
> > energies focused on
> > crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
> > picketing,
> > protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
> > who do not have our
> > best interests at heart 24/7/365.
> >
> > -Make the Africa leaders and their people
> > accountable.
> > -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
> > as the promises he's
> > made the Jews and whites.
> > -Make black voters aware there is something
> > dysfunctional and insane
> > about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
> > and not because of
> > the content of what they will do for you.
> > -Make black police and other black law enforcement
> > accountable when they
> > assist in killing or betraying their own.
> > -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
> > sold their people's
> > interests for financial reward.
> > -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
> > in developing,

>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>> promote of blacks
>> worldwide.
>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>> and how it is used
>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>
>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>> did not allow it.
>> Examine your choices.
>>
>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>> question.
>>
>> Meninarmer
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: Peter Gray
>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>
>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>> these men persona
>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >> Africa to fall? Thanks
>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>
>> Peter
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
_____
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> From: mahari@...
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000

> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
> > GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> > MYTH.....
> >
> > French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in > > Afrika about Afrika
> > and > > Afrikans.
> > =====
> > Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
> > When?
> >
> > Published by the government of Zimbabwe
> >
> > The Herald (Harare)
> >
> > Bishop Trevor Manhanga
> >
> > TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
> > of months and two
> > continents apart, yet interrelated in that > > they revealed the
> > battle
> > we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
> > encounter in the face of
> > the
> > stereotypical, and downright racist > > attitudes and opinions some
> > in
> > the white west have about us, as we strive
> > for economic
> > empowerment
> > and emancipation.
> >
> > The first incident took place in Dakar
> > Senegal on July 20 2007
> > and
> > relates to the speech given by the President
> > of France Nicolas
> > Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
> >
> > In what can only be described as a most > > unfortunate revelation
> > of the
> > inner feelings of a very high standing
> > public figure, Sarkozy

> > had
> > this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
> > "The tragedy of
> > Africa
> > is that the African man has never really
> > entered history.
> >
> > "The African peasant who for centuries has
> > lived according to
> > the
> > seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
> > with nature, has only
> > known
> > the eternal renewal of time via the endless
> > repetition of the
> > same
> > actions and the same words.
> >
> > "In this mentality, where everything always
> > starts over again,
> > there
> > is no place for human adventure nor for any
> > idea of
> > progress...this
> > man never projects himself into the future,
> > it never occurs to
> > him to
> > break free from the repetition and invent a
> > destiny for himself.
> >
> > "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
> > to say it, is
> > Africa's
> > problem.
> >
> > "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
> > fully.... Africa's > > challenge is to stop forever repeating and
> > going over things,
> > and to
> > free itself from the myth of the eternal
> > renewal. It is to
> > realise
> > that the golden age that it always harks
> > back to will never
> > return,

> > for the simple reason that it never > > existed.... Africa's problem
> >

> === message truncated ===

>

>

> _____
> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>

| 23745|2007-11-14 15:46:14|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Well, what wise person invited him to speak in the first place?

LOL, they could have had Farrakhan. :)

Of course, that would have pissed off many Jews and Whites, but which would you prefer, pissing off whites/Jews, or being pissed off yourself.

As I said, it's all about choices, and the indignation we'll endure, to maintain status quo.

Wisdom

MeniNarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
MYTH.....

Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:34:20 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

There is something actually sinister about it and very much in line,
I believe, with his character - or lack thereof.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Well said, Paul.

>

> This [making his speech at Cheikh Anta Diop Univ.] is the supreme insult.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: pmanansala@...: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 15:25:24

+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

>

>

>

> Sarkozy had a lot of nerve making a speech like that at Cheikh Anta Diop University. The neoconservatives in the U.S. cheered when Sarkozy beat out his "leftist" opponent in France's last election. There is a battle in Europe, and also in the U.S., between the left and the right raging fiercely. In my view, people of color need to weigh in on this regardless of their views on the system as a whole. I support progressive views regardless of the fact that many leaders of progressive movements are far from perfect in their racial or other viewpoints. That's the nature of politics, you work with what's available. Regards, Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You!

> http://www.reallivemoms.com?ocid=TEXT\_TAGHM&loc=us

>

| 23746|2007-11-14 15:51:00|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Judgement Day - Intelligent Design On Trial (on NOVA tonight)|

Yes, I did. And the whole program just further defined the real character of "these people". I won't define them further for fear of upsetting some people. They are supposed to be so upstanding yet their whole case was based on a lie!

In some ways this reminds me of the early days of Christianity when they invaded Kemet, whose culture was learned and liberal, and destroyed the temples, iconography, statues and literature.

I'll post a portion of a book written by Osman on this event.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

>

> Did anyone check this out?

>

> asar_imhotep wrote: Peace Ta-Seti

>
> Just wanted to inform you of something a bit off topic, but I think > interesting given the minds on this forum. On the show NOVA on PBS > tonight they will be airing a documentary about the trial of teaching > Evolution at school.

>
> This would be a good grounds for discussion. Here is the link to find > out more information about the debate:

> <http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/nova/id/>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

> -----

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>

| 23747|2007-11-14 15:55:20|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

You know, MeniNarmer, I think it has less to do with the status quo than with the desire to be accepted, to be a part of. There seems to be the "peer pressure" effect.

The way I view my life is if whites approve of me I wonder what I am doing wrong.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Well, what wise person invited him to speak in the first place?

> LOL, they could have had Farrakhan. :)

> Of course, that would have pissed off many Jews and Whites, but
which > would you prefer, pissing off whites/Jews, or being pissed off yourself.

> As I said, it's all about choices, and the indignation we'll endure, to > maintain status quo.

>
> Wisdom
>
> MeniNarmer
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:34:20 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> There is something actually sinister about it and very much in line,
> I believe, with his character - or lack thereof.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:
>>
>>
>> Well said, Paul.
>>
>> This [making his speech at Cheikh Anta Diop Univ.] is the supreme > insult.
>>
>> Peter
>>
>>
>>
>> To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 15:25:24
> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS
A
> MYTH.....
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Sarkozy had a lot of nerve making a speech like that at Cheikh
Anta > Diop University. The neoconservatives in the U.S. cheered when Sarkozy

> beat out his "leftist" opponent in France's last election. There is > a battle in Europe, and also in the U.S., between the left and the > right raging fiercely. In my view, people of color need to weigh in
on > this regardless of their views on the system as a whole. I support > progressive views regardless of the fact that many leaders of > progressive movements are far from perfect in their racial or other > viewpoints. That's the nature of politics, you work with what's > available. Regards, Paul Kekai Manansala

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

---

 Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You!

>> http://www.reallivemoms.com?ocid=TEXT\_TAGHM&loc=us

>>

>

| 23748|2007-11-14 16:03:00|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Mahari

Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as fast as I like.

I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even
that took $12K out of MY pocket.

http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the bankers.

Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.

This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal Reserve.

Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.

<http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>

The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.

Hotep
Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
Congrats.

Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika where so much gold is located.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Dr. Winters
>
> Thank you for your response.
>
> Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native American,
> and other histories.
> Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done to
> others to maintain their position.
> IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I am > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is nothing
> else to learn in this area.
>
> For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
from
> the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the drug > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their actions,
> and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them instead
to
> become strong black men.
> Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain
> positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL,

- > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music (Brittany
- > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.
- > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their
- > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready to do
- > more.
- >
- > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a business to
- > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
- >
- > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as alternatives
- > to the worthless dollar.
- > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>
- > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on silver,
- > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of silver
- > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will
- > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully help
- > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times within the
- > black community.
- >
- > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar is
- > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
- >
- > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open accounts in
- > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and
- > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax dollars
- > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.
- > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world where the
- > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America, Citi
- > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
- >
- > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a portion of
- > my ambition.

>
> No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
on
> our own commitments.
>
> Regards,
>
> MeniNarmer
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: clyde winters
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
>
> Great points. If you let people get away with doing > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
>
> Clyde
>
> --- kungfuhustle wrote:
>
>> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
>> react.
>> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
>> Cuba,....and all
>> other nations with black presence that are
>> experiencing open hostility,
>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
>>
>> What are we to do?
>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
>> years ago, yet we are
>> even more deceived into playing their game and
>> setting ourselves up for
>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With
>> everything, there is a
>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the >> choices we make.
>>
>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>> vested we are into
>> maintaining status quo.

> >
> > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
> > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
> > distribution, Gangsta Rap,
> > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
> > Jordan, 50cents, TD
> > Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
> > support it financially,
> > spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
> > We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
> > intentional
> > countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
> > development of future
> > follow-on programs that will do the same.
> >
> > I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
> > energies focused on
> > crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
> > picketing,
> > protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
> > who do not have our
> > best interests at heart 24/7/365.
> >
> > -Make the Africa leaders and their people
> > accountable.
> > -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
> > as the promises he's
> > made the Jews and whites.
> > -Make black voters aware there is something
> > dysfunctional and insane
> > about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
> > and not because of
> > the content of what they will do for you.
> > -Make black police and other black law enforcement
> > accountable when they
> > assist in killing or betraying their own.
> > -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
> > sold their people's
> > interests for financial reward.
> > -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
> > in developing,
> > maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
> > promote of blacks
> > worldwide.
> > -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
> > and how it is used

>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>
>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>> did not allow it.
>> Examine your choices.
>>
>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>> question.
>>
>> Meninarmer
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: Peter Gray
>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>
>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>> these men persona
>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >> Africa to fall? Thanks
>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>
>> Peter
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
_____
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> From: mahari@...
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>> MYTH.....
>>
>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in

> > Afrika about Afrika
> > and > > Afrikans.
> > =====
> > Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
> > When?
> >
> > Published by the government of Zimbabwe
> >
> > The Herald (Harare)
> >
> > Bishop Trevor Manhanga
> >
> > TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
> > of months and two
> > continents apart, yet interrelated in that > > they revealed the
> > battle
> > we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
> > encounter in the face of
> > the
> > stereotypical, and downright racist > > attitudes and opinions some
> > in
> > the white west have about us, as we strive
> > for economic
> > empowerment
> > and emancipation.
> >
> > The first incident took place in Dakar
> > Senegal on July 20 2007
> > and
> > relates to the speech given by the President
> > of France Nicolas
> > Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
> >
> > In what can only be described as a most > > unfortunate revelation
> > of the
> > inner feelings of a very high standing
> > public figure, Sarkozy
> > had
> > this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
> > "The tragedy of
> > Africa
> > is that the African man has never really

> > entered history.
> >
> > "The African peasant who for centuries has
> > lived according to
> > the
> > seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
> > with nature, has only
> > known
> > the eternal renewal of time via the endless
> > repetition of the
> > same
> > actions and the same words.
> >
> > "In this mentality, where everything always
> > starts over again,
> > there
> > is no place for human adventure nor for any
> > idea of
> > progress...this
> > man never projects himself into the future,
> > it never occurs to
> > him to
> > break free from the repetition and invent a
> > destiny for himself.
> >
> > "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
> > to say it, is
> > Africa's
> > problem.
> >
> > "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
> > fully.... Africa's > > challenge is to stop forever repeating and
> > going over things,
> > and to
> > free itself from the myth of the eternal
> > renewal. It is to
> > realise
> > that the golden age that it always harks
> > back to will never
> > return,
> > for the simple reason that it never > > existed.... Africa's problem
> >
> === message truncated ===
>

> _____
> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>
| 23749|2007-11-14 16:15:32|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|
Mahari

Yes, I agree, that is part of it.
Also, a certain level of education provides you with a certain level of income.
A high 6-8 figure income changes the reality of your perception of life.
Some, wish for nothing more then to sustain it, at all costs, not realizing it can be sustained by other means in service to your own.
Prior to integration, we used to understand this.

Ubuntu
Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----
From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>
Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
MYTH.....
Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:55:18 -0000
Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

You know, MeniNarmer, I think it has less to do with the status quo than with the desire to be accepted, to be a part of. There seems to be the "peer pressure" effect.
The way I view my life is if whites approve of me I wonder what I am doing wrong.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>
> Well, what wise person invited him to speak in the first place?
> LOL, they could have had Farrakhan. :)
> Of course, that would have pissed off many Jews and Whites, but
which > would you prefer, pissing off whites/Jews, or being pissed off yourself.

> As I said, it's all about choices, and the indignation we'll endure, to > maintain status quo.
>
> Wisdom
>
> MeniNarmer
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:34:20 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> There is something actually sinister about it and very much in
line,
> I believe, with his character - or lack thereof.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:
>>
>>
>> Well said, Paul.
>>
>> This [making his speech at Cheikh Anta Diop Univ.] is the supreme > insult.
>>
>> Peter
>>
>>
>>
>> To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 15:25:24
> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS
A
> MYTH.....
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> Sarkozy had a lot of nerve making a speech like that at Cheikh
Anta

> Diop University. The neoconservatives in the U.S. cheered when Sarkozy
> beat out his "leftist" opponent in France's last election. There is > a battle in Europe, and also in the U.S., between the left and the > right raging fiercely. In my view, people of color need to weigh in
on > this regardless of their views on the system as a whole. I support > progressive views regardless of the fact that many leaders of > progressive movements are far from perfect in their racial or other > viewpoints. That's the nature of politics, you work with what's > available. Regards, Paul Kekai Manansala

>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

>> Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You!

>> http://www.reallivemoms.com?ocid=TEXT\_TAGHM&loc=us

>>

>

| 23750|2007-11-14 17:12:25|the_osaris|Gebelbarka l house of amun & the Ka ba laand the heberu|

These are some post that I took from the paut neteru forum and the the Magi forum

Messages Help

Message # Search: Advanced Start Topic

Geb el bar ka l : the house of amun/matrix Message List

Reply | Forward | Delete Message #1182 of 1187 < Prev | Next >

Ancient Nubia:Geb El Bar Ka_l :The house of amun

1.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dXUwy9y5heY>

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HMjo-udUsPQ>

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EFPUqnJPXYU>

Kabala

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qkl2mfiB6jQ>

THE Ka Ba La of the ancient heberu part2: & the temple of orphma

The kaballah verses Ka ba la

Corrections

KETER the demon crown of the father of haylal

Correction = KETA the origin word that was altered the sand Still used in EWE

Ateh is vibrated in bringing down the light derived from ATE of the gen language which means divine spirit(male) in that
language

Malkuth; a demon /siphroth original word aramic mal khu ta taken from three words

Ma khu Ta :nubian egiption(ke me te people)

Gibbor a demon light also a perverted version of the true word' Gibbor: the name of the elder who came from the constellation of Gibbor (yahweh Gibbor) today Gibbor is still used by EWE as one of the 16 Constellations of the ancient Heberu system

Gedula demon also perverted version of Gedul(yahweh gedul)

YHVH left to right represent the sum of all the demonic deities
it is the perverted version
the all demon which carries Oogpo the demon eye (en ha Ra;the evil eye) which is seen on some money.the opposition to The all ancestral deities H.....(later)

so yhvH Gibbor means demon hierarchical force of strength be careful of the words you use.

KETA

GEDUL GIBBOR

MA KHU PTA

()

this is a construction of the true version of the false words used
Although the name were changed to the demonds and disagreeable replaced the nubian dieties by the armygoshen being raziell (reptilian) the structure was taken from the nubians especially of shar al mar who was shelomone nigus refered biblically as king solomon. the one who had absorbed all the re 's of the sun

later we will go into the heberu egiptians groups that were called ke me te people such as togbo ewe etcwho used a different approach to the tree verses the tamreians.

YHVH FROM LEFT TO WRITE REPRESENTS THE TOTAL SUM AND HIRECICAL
FORCE OF THE DEMON DIETIES
SO CALLING ON YHVH GIBBOR WOULD BE CALLING ON THE TOTAL DEMON
HIRECICAL FORCE OF STRENGHT.

In the\_paut\_neteru@yahoo.com, "aken_nan_yah"
wrote:

>

- > The word Ka Ba La is an ancient nubian term
- > ka -spirit
- > ba = soul
- > la = feminine divinity.
- > the tree that produces life and regulates it. Today the kabala

used

- > in the outer world is and alteration of the tree of life used by
- > the Ancient Heberu sects and clans. The nomades travelling through
- > the nubian teritory copyed and picked up the doctrine those
- > forgieners passing through the heberu teritory called themselves
- > HEBREWS, They were not nubians(heberuor Ibri) so hebrew is a dialect

- > of different heberu languages hebrew is not a language..There were
- > 13 heberu tribes some
- > were ,the ,falash,Gen,igbo,ewe,dei,krahn,kru,etc some parts of the
- > story called the 10 commandments in the bible were taken from the
- > Heberu's mainly the KWA group called Krahn who journed from upper

- > Nile region under the supervision of the grand deity who they
- > referred to as Youshua, they had made a British (pack) with there
- > grand deity a (contract) and carried it with them were they journeyed

- > which would taken them to Liberia before they scattered the
- > story the contract is falsely referred to as the 10 commandments and
- > was carried in the arc (arc of the covenant about the enemies)

unable

- > to pass the Red Sea and falling in the Red Sea was the story

about

- > the tree in the way that Youshua put down. the 12th tribe was the
- > falasha (t'obian Ebus) associated with Rastafare it was one of the
- > tribes not twelve tribes.
- > Ka ba la = Nubian divinities
- > Kabbalah = Demon Lord (the Djel) Antichrist.

YHVH is not interchangeable with Yahweh

- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >

>

- > the\_paut\_neteru@yahoo.com, "aken__yah"

> wrote:

>>

- >> Geb El Bar Ka L : The being has matured and has become a house

- > for
- >>
- >> the inner_science to awake (conscience) Amun. The conscience
- >>
- >> deceives, con, it was the false conscience that resulted from the
- > false
- >>
- >> teaching we were given it is there to mislead and deceive.
- >>
- >> <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R74ERRtyK9E>
- >> <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wTbqWnq9-yE>

> >
>

THE Ka Ba La of the ancient heberu part2: & the temple of orphma

The kaballah verses Ka ba la

Corrections

KETER the demond crown of the father of haylal

Correction = KETA the origin word that was altered the the first or highest sand

Stilled used in EWE

Ateh is vibrated in bringing down the light derived from

ATE of the gen language which me divine spirit(male) in that language

Malkuth; a demon /sipheroth original word aramic mal khu ta taken from three words

Ma khu Ta :nubian egiption(ke me te people)

Gibbora p demon light also a perverted version of the true word'

Gibbor: the name of the elder who came from the constellation oof Gibbor (yahweh Gibbor) today Gibbor is still used by EwE as one of the 16 Constillations of the ancient Heberu system

Gedula demon also perverted version of

Gedul(yahweh gedul)

YHVH left to right represent the sum of all the demonic dieties

it is the perverted version

the all demon

which caries Oogpo the demon eye (en ha Ra;the evil eye) which is seen on some money.the oposition to

The all ancestral dieties H.....(later)

so yhvH Gibbor means demon hirakical force of strenght be carful of the words you use.

KETA

GEDUL GIBBOR

MA KHU PTA

()

this is a construction of the true version of the false words used
Although the name were changed to the demonds and disagreeable replaced the nubian dieties by the armygoshen being raziel (reptilian) the structure was taken from the nubians especially of shar al mar who was shelomone nigus refered biblically as king solomon. the one who had absorbed all the re 's of the sun

later we will go into the heberu egiptians groups that were called ke me te people such as togbo ewe etcwho used a different approach to the tree verses the tamreians.

YHVH FROM LEFT TO WRITE REPRESENTS THE TOTAL SUM AND HIRECICAL
FORCE OF THE DEMON DIETIES

SO CALLING ON YHVH GIBBOR WOULD BE CALLING ON THE TOTAL DEMON
HIRECICAL FORCE OF STRENGHT.

| 23751|2007-11-14 18:59:48|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Mahari

>

> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>

> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as > fast as I like.

>

> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even > that took $12K out of MY pocket.

> http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

>

> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the

> bankers.

> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.

> This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal > Reserve.

> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.

> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>

>

> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points

> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.

>

> Hotep

> Meninarmer

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A > MYTH.....

> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.

> Congrats.

> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika > where so much gold is located.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>>
>> Dr. Winters
>>
>> Thank you for your response.
>>
>> Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native
> American,
>> and other histories.
>> Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done
to
>> others to maintain their position.
>> IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I
am >> tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is > nothing
>> else to learn in this area.
>>
>> For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
> from >> the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the drug >> trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
>> and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
instead
> to
>> become strong black men.
>> Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain
>> positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL, >> University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany
>> Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.
>> They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their >> friends and peers, are alone. Many pf them state, they are ready
to > do
>> more.
>>

> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives
> > to the worthless dollar.
> > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >
> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a
> portion of
> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on

> > our own commitments.
> >
> > Regards,
> >
> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> > MYTH.....
> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
> >
> > Great points. If you let people get away with doing > > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
> >
> > Clyde
> >
> > --- kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
> > > react.
> > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
> > > Cuba,...and all
> > > other nations with black presence that are
> > > experiencing open hostility,
> > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
> > >
> > > What are we to do?
> > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
> > > years ago, yet we are
> > > even more deceived into playing their game and
> > > setting ourselves up for
> > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With
> > > everything, there is a
> > > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the > > > choices we make.
> > >
> > > It seems the more educated we become, the more
> > > vested we are into
> > > maintaining status quo.
> > >
> > > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
> > > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine

>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we

>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>>
>>> Peter
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
_____
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> From: mahari@
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>>
>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>> Afrika about Afrika
>>> and
>>> Afrikans.

> > > =====
> > > Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
> > > When?
> > >
> > > Published by the government of Zimbabwe
> > >
> > > The Herald (Harare)
> > >
> > > Bishop Trevor Manhanga
> > >
> > > TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
> > > of months and two
> > > continents apart, yet interrelated in that
> > > they revealed the
> > > battle
> > > we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
> > > encounter in the face of
> > > the
> > > stereotypical, and downright racist > > > attitudes and opinions some
> > > in
> > > the white west have about us, as we strive
> > > for economic
> > > empowerment
> > > and emancipation.
> > >
> > > The first incident took place in Dakar
> > > Senegal on July 20 2007
> > > and
> > > relates to the speech given by the President
> > > of France Nicolas
> > > Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
> > >
> > > In what can only be described as a most > > > unfortunate revelation
> > > of the
> > > inner feelings of a very high standing
> > > public figure, Sarkozy
> > > had
> > > this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
> > > "The tragedy of
> > > Africa
> > > is that the African man has never really
> > > entered history.
> > >
> > > "The African peasant who for centuries has

>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem
>>>
>> === message truncated ===
>>
>>
>> _____
>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

> >

>

| 23752|2007-11-14 20:36:29|IMJs@webtv.net|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Off top|

I've been gathering together info on this and built these pages a few years ago.... A man named Boyd E. Graves seems to have amassed the most damning evidence. [his website is on the Aids origins pages below]

IMJ

Eugenics: Made In America!

http://community-2.webtv.net/Down\_For\_Knowledge/EugenicsMadeIn/index.html

Aids Origins

http://community-2.webtv.net/Down\_For\_Knowledge/AIDSOrgins/

| 23753|2007-11-14 21:40:05|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

>>Prior to integration, we used to understand this.<<

Did we "understand" it or was it that we had no other choice at the time?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Mahari

>

> Yes, I agree, that is part of it.

> Also, a certain level of education provides you with a certain level of > income.

> A high 6-8 figure income changes the reality of your perception of life.

> Some, wish for nothing more then to sustain it, at all costs, not > realizing it can be sustained by other means in service to your own.

> Prior to integration, we used to understand this.

>

> Ubuntu

> Meninarmer

>

>

>

>

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:55:18 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> You know, MeniNarmer, I think it has less to do with the status quo > than with the desire to be accepted, to be a part of. There seems to > be the "peer pressure" effect.
> The way I view my life is if whites approve of me I wonder what I
am
> doing wrong.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>
>> Well, what wise person invited him to speak in the first place?
>> LOL, they could have had Farrakhan. :)
>> Of course, that would have pissed off many Jews and Whites, but
> which >> would you prefer, pissing off whites/Jews, or being pissed off > yourself.
>> As I said, it's all about choices, and the indignation we'll > endure, to >> maintain status quo.
>>
>> Wisdom
>>
>> MeniNarmer
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: Mahari Mengistu
>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:34:20 -0000
>> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>>
>> There is something actually sinister about it and very much in > line,

>> I believe, with his character - or lack thereof.
>> HTP,
>> Mahari
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:
>>>
>>>
>>> Well said, Paul.
>>>
>>> This [making his speech at Cheikh Anta Diop Univ.] is the supreme >> insult.
>>>
>>> Peter
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 15:25:24
>> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS
> A
>> MYTH.....
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Sarkozy had a lot of nerve making a speech like that at Cheikh
> Anta
>> Diop University.The neoconservatives in the U.S. cheered when > Sarkozy
>> beat out his "leftist" opponent in France's last election. There
is >> a battle in Europe, and also in the U.S., between the left and
the >> right raging fiercely.In my view, people of color need to weigh in
> on >> this regardless of their views on the system as a whole. I support
>> progressive views regardless of the fact that many leaders of >> progressive movements are far from perfect in their racial or other >> viewpoints.That's the nature of politics, you work with what's >> available.Regards,Paul Kekai Manansala
>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You!

>>> http://www.reallivemoms.com?ocid=TXT\_TAGHM&loc=us

>>>

>>

>

| 23754|2007-11-14 22:54:30|clyde winters|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

I remember back at University when we studied the Scramble for Africa. Issues of debt, tribalism and etc. were all used as reasons for the take over of Africa. It appears to me that if African leaders don't watch out colonialism may rise its ugly head again.

Clyde

--- Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com> wrote:

>

> Well, if African political leaders will not declare > these men persona non grata, what are we to do now
> -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a most > illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>

> Peter

>

>

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.comFrom:

> mahari@myway.comDate: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11

> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

>

>

>

> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika
> about Afrika and

> Afrikans.=====Zimbabwe: Putting Zim

> First - If Not Now, When?Published by the government

> of Zimbabwe The Herald (Harare)Bishop Trevor

> ManhangaTWO incidents took place this year, a couple > of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated
> in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and > indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the > stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and > opinions some in the white west have about us, as we > strive for economic empowerment and emancipation. The > first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July > 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the > President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh
> Anta Diop University. In what can only be described > as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner > feelings of a very high standing public figure, > Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in > part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man > has never really entered history." "The African > peasant who for centuries has lived according to the > seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with > nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time > via the endless repetition of the same actions and > the same words." "In this mentality, where everything > always starts over again, there is no place for > human adventure nor for any idea of progress... this > man never projects himself into the future, it never > occurs to him to break free from the repetition and > invent a destiny for himself." "This, if you will > allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's > problem." "Africa's challenge is to enter history more > fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever > repeating and going over things, and to free itself
> from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to > realise that the golden age that it always harks
> back to will never return, for the simple reason > that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that > its present is permeated with nostalgia for the > paradise lost of its childhood." "Africa's problem is > that it judges its present according to a wholly > imaginary notion of original purity that no one > could ever hope to revive." "Africa's challenge should > not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make > the present more bearable, but to invent a future > with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa > has a right to be happy just like all the other > continents of the world." "The deafening silence from > the African continent and its leadership in allowing > Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on

> African soil, but also at an institution of higher > learning, and get away with it has been most > disturbing. How can the collective leadership of the > African continent, have remained silent in the face > of this very provocative and insulting opinion of > Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its > people is without empirical validation, downright > condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with > the contempt it deserves. One would have expected at > the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist > remarks from none other than the AU, or other > regional African bodies such as SADC or ECOWAS. I > have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of > rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans. If > there has been a response, then perhaps I have not > seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's > racist diatribe have been few and far between, and > among the few I have encountered is one in the > October issue of New African magazine, where the > editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's > speech said: "I don't know about you just now, but I > am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing > here with a confused man with a confused speech.
> Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors > doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those > glorious empires of yore right across the continent?
> When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in > Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's > European ancestors were still living in caves. They > didn't know what a window was! And he has the > temerity to insult us and our ancestors?" There is > doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so,
> because such outright disdain for Africa and its > people cannot be left unchallenged. What Sarkozy > needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants > of these "African peasants who live by the seasons"
> were part of France's World Cup winning team, when > France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory > serves me right, the team looked like a typical > African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of > Caucasian faces. So much for people who are > supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to > the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by > Sarkozy. The second incident took place in the USA, > and relates to an article written by an eminent > scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson,

> who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was > the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on > Long Island New York, USA, resigned after > controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting > black people are less intelligent than whites. Watson > (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering > the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour
> Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it > into one of the world's leading genetics research > institutes. His problems, which led to his > retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as > having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of > London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the > prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies > are based on the fact that their intelligence is the > same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not > really." To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour > Laboratory through their president, said Watson's > comments have no connection with research activity
> at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently > disagree" with Watson's statements. The lab moved > swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative > responsibilities as chancellor leading to his > subsequent resignation. Why do I make reference to > these two incidents that have taken place on two > continents by two different people, under two > different conditions? Reference must be made to them, > because they reveal the underlying hostile and > racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with > the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and > Watson are not ordinary run of the mill,
> intellectually challenged people. On the contrary,
> one is the president of a key industrialised Western > European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate > and respected scientist. The question must be asked > then, if people of such high standing and > respectability in western society have such a > deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the > problem we face is much greater than we ever > imagined. These were not off the cuff, slip of the > tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were > well thought out and delivered, and even if there is > ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended > damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no > matter how vigorous an attempt to do so. I mention > these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because > it is imperative that there is an understanding by > all of us, that we should work to prove that the two > gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments > are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner > that provides them with ammunition, to buttress > their racist stereotypical opinions. There are three > things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that > will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted > opinions. The first is to ensure that the > agricultural season currently upon us yields the > fruits we anticipate and desperately need. It is not > too late to make the clarion call to all those on > agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of > the land reform programme, or have always been on > the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch > of available arable land, and make this the, "mother > of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people > wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts > as Sarkozy and Watson wrong. We must show that we can > use the land we have. We can make use of the farming > implements that have just been delivered to some of > our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our > African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser > mortals, that we are industrious, responsible > people. We must be constantly aware that there are > many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe > that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, > (both qualitatively and quantitatively), that the > white former farmers used to. It is for this reason > that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of > liberation, when those who fought for the > emancipation of the nation reminded each other in > the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy:

> "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound)." That is the > reality we face today and every one of us must not > flinch from the task ahead. The second is to ensure > that the up coming national elections are conducted > in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open > and transparent manner. Those who cannot bring > themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can > solve their own problems, (and we are well on our > way

=== message truncated ===

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

Make Yahoo! your homepage.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23755|2007-11-14 23:35:40|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Absolutely. Only now instead of bleeding Afrika to get wealth, they have acquired the wealth and power. So all they have to do is make sure they keep their economic clutches about her neck and she will feel she has to obey.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

> I remember back at University when we studied the > Scramble for Africa. Issues of debt, tribalism and > etc. were all used as reasons for the take over of > Africa. It appears to me that if African leaders don't > watch out colonialism may rise its ugly head again.

>

> Clyde

>

>

>

> --- Peter Gray wrote:

>

>>

>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>> these men persona non grata, what are we to do now
>> -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a most >> illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>>

>> Peter

>>

>>

>> To: Ta_Seti@...:

>> mahari@...: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11

>> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>>

>>

>>

>>

>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika

> > about Afrika and > > Afrikans.=====Zimbabwe: Putting Zim
> > First - If Not Now, When?Published by the government
> > of Zimbabwe The Herald (Harare)Bishop Trevor > > ManhangaTWO incidents took place this year, a couple > > of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated
> > in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and
> > indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the > > stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and > > opinions some in the white west have about us, as we > > strive for economic empowerment and emancipation.The > > first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July > > 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the > > President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh
> > Anta Diop University.In what can only be described > > as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner
> > feelings of a very high standing public figure, > > Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in > > part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man
> > has never really entered history."The African > > peasant who for centuries has lived according to the > > seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with > > nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time
> > via the endless repetition of the same actions and > > the same words."In this mentality, where everything
> > always starts over again, there is no place for > > human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this > > man never projects himself into the future, it never > > occurs to him to break free from the repetition and > > invent a destiny for himself."This, if you will > > allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's > > problem."Africa's challenge is to enter history more > > fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever
> > repeating and going over things, and to free itself
> > from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to > > realise that the golden age that it always harks
> > back to will never return, for the simple reason > > that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that > > its present is permeated with nostalgia for the > > paradise lost of its childhood."Africa's problem is > > that it judges its present according to a wholly > > imaginary notion of original purity that no one > > could ever hope to revive."Africa's challenge should > > not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make > > the present more bearable, but to invent a future
> > with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa

> > has a right to be happy just like all the other > > continents of the world."The deafening silence from
> > the African continent and its leadership in allowing > > Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on > > African soil, but also at an institution of higher > > learning, and get away with it has been most > > disturbing.How can the collective leadership of the > > African continent, have remained silent in the face > > of this very provocative and insulting opinion of > > Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its > > people is without empirical validation, downright > > condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with > > the contempt it deserves.One would have expected at
> > the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist
> > remarks from none other than the AU, or other > > regional African bodies such as Sadc or Ecowas. I > > have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of > > rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans.If > > there has been a response, then perhaps I have not > > seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's > > racist diatribe have been few and far between, and
> > among the few I have encountered is one in the > > October issue of New African magazine, where the > > editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's > > speech said:"I don't know about you just now, but I > > am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing > > here with a confused man with a confused speech.
> > Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors
> > doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those > > glorious empires of yore right across the continent?
> > When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in > > Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's > > European ancestors were still living in caves. They > > didn't know what a window was! And he has the > > temerity to insult us and our ancestors?"There is
> > doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so,
> > because such outright disdain for Africa and its > > people cannot be left unchallenged.What Sarkozy
> > needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants
> > of these "African peasants who live by the seasons"
> > were part of France's World Cup winning team, when > > France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory
> > serves me right, the team looked like a typical > > African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of > > Caucasian faces. So much for people who are > > supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to

> > the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by > > Sarkozy. The second incident took place in the USA,
> > and relates to an article written by an eminent
> > scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson, > > who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was
> > the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on > > Long Island New York, USA, resigned after > > controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting > > black people are less intelligent than whites. Watson > > (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering
> > the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour
> > Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it > > into one of the world's leading genetics research > > institutes. His problems, which led to his > > retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as > > having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of > > London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the > > prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies
> > are based on the fact that their intelligence is the > > same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not > > really." To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour > > Laboratory through their president, said Watson's > > comments have no connection with research activity
> > at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently > > disagree" with Watson's statements. The lab moved > > swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative > > responsibilities as chancellor leading to his > > subsequent resignation. Why do I make reference to > > these two incidents that have taken place on two > > continents by two different people, under two > > different conditions? Reference must be made to them, > > because they reveal the underlying hostile and > > racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with > > the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and > > Watson are not ordinary run of the mill,
> > intellectually challenged people. On the contrary,
> > one is the president of a key industrialised Western > > European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate > > and respected scientist. The question must be asked > > then, if people of such high standing and > > respectability in western society have such a > > deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the > > problem we face is much greater than we ever > > imagined. These were not off the cuff, slip of the > > tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were > > well thought out and delivered, and even if there is >> ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended >> damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no >> matter how vigorous an attempt to do so. I mention

>> these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because >> it is imperative that there is an understanding by >> all of us, that we should work to prove that the two >> gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments
>> are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner >> that provides them with ammunition, to buttress >> their racist stereotypical opinions. There are three >> things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that >> will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted >> opinions. The first is to ensure that the >> agricultural season currently upon us yields the >> fruits we anticipate and desperately need. It is not >> too late to make the clarion call to all those on >> agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of >> the land reform programme, or have always been on >> the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch >> of available arable land, and make this the, "mother >> of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people >> wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts
>> as Sarkozy and Watson wrong. We must show that we can >> use the land we have. We can make use of the farming >> implements that have just been delivered to some of >> our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our >> African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser >> mortals, that we are industrious, responsible >> people. We must be constantly aware that there are >> many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe >> that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, >> (both qualitatively and quantitatively), that the >> white former farmers used to. It is for this reason >> that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of >> liberation, when those who fought for the >> emancipation of the nation reminded each other in >> the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy:
>> "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound)." That is the >> reality we face today and every one of us must not >> flinch from the task ahead. The second is to ensure >> that the up coming national elections are conducted >> in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open >> and transparent manner. Those who cannot bring >> themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can >> solve their own problems, (and we are well on our >> way

> === message truncated ===

>
>
>
>
>

---

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>

| 23756|2007-11-15 05:39:49|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Djehuti,

Quite right -- it comes down to doing things by yourself, or preferably with a small coalition of like-minded progressives.

BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: Djehuti_Sundaka@hotmail.com

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

- >
- > Mahari
- >
- > Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(
- >
- > I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their
- > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as
- > fast as I like.
- >
- > I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to
- > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even
- > that took $12K out of MY pocket.
- > http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html
- >
- > It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the
- > bankers.
- > Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.
- > This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal
- > Reserve.
- > Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
- > <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
- >
- > The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points
- > out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
- >
- > Hotep
- > Meninarmer
- >
- > -----Original Message-----
- > From: Mahari Mengistu
- > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
- > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
- > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
- > MYTH.....
- > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
- > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
- >

> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> Congrats.
> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika > where so much gold is located.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>>
>> Dr. Winters
>>
>> Thank you for your response.
>>
>> Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native
> American,
>> and other histories.
>> Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done
to
>> others to maintain their position.
>> IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I
am >> tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is > nothing
>> else to learn in this area.
>>
>> For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
> from
>> the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the
drug >> trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
>> and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
instead
> to
>> become strong black men.
>> Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain
>> positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL, >> University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany
>> Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.
>> They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their >> friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready
to > do

> > more.
> >
> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives
> > to the worthless dollar.
> > <http://www.kastlean dhawke.com>
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >
> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a
> portion of
> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely

depend

> on

>> our own commitments.

>>

>> Regards,

>>

>> MeniNarmer

>>

>>

>> -----Original Message-----

>> From: clyde winters

>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS

A

>> MYTH.....

>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)

>>

>> Great points. If you let people get away with doing

>> nothing--that' s exactly what they do.

>>

>> Clyde

>>

>> --- kungfuhustle wrote:

>>

>>> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to

>>> react.

>>> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,

>>> Cuba,...and all

>>> other nations with black presence that are

>>> experiencing open hostility,

>>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.

>>>

>>> What are we to do?

>>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400

>>> years ago, yet we are

>>> even more deceived into playing their game and

>>> setting ourselves up for

>>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With

>>> everything, there is a

>>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the

>>> choices we make.

>>>

>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more

>>> vested we are into

>>> maintaining status quo.

>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used

>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>>
>>> Peter
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
_____
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> From: mahari@
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>>
>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in

>>> Afrika about Afrika
>>> and
>>> Afrikans.
>>> ===== =
>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
>>> When?
>>>
>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>
>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>
>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>
>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really

>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem
>>>
>> === message truncated ===
>>

> > _____
> > Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
> > <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
> >
>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Cafe Stop by today!
| 23757|2007-11-15 07:01:16|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|
ALL

This is nothing new, our self defeating cling to tribalism and small group mentality. In normal times, this is acceptable. But what war can be won with small tribes lacking communications and cohesion with others? Not many.

This was what W.E.B DuBois preached with his, TEN. Their isolation made them susceptible external influence leading to the formation of the, Boule, and the elimination of true people centric organizations such as Garvey, Martin Luther, Malcolm X's Pan-African Organizations. It didn't work then, as it will not work today. Or perhaps it did work, but just not for the people.

WHO ARE THE BOULE?

Steven Cokely has done research, which has exposed the fact that 90% of the (Greek orientated) Negro secret societies are very powerful (literally the eyes and ears within our communities) tools of White Supremacy, as that is an integral function of their formation, funding and influence within the social Establishment. The leader and overall controllers of these traitors are THE BOULE AKA, SIGMA PI PHI fraternity, Inc.

They were founded May 15, 1904 in Pennsylvania making them the first Negro fraternity in the USA; as the first African American College fraternity (Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity Inc) was not founded until December 4th, 1906. The Boules organisational structure is based on copying that of Yale University's Skull & Bones secret Society. Its primary founder was Dr Henry Minton (along with Drs Eugene T Henson, Edwin Clarence Howard, Algernon Brashear Jackson, Robert Jones Abele and Richard John Warwick) of Philadelphia.

They are the so called TALENTED 10TH mentioned by W.E.B. Dubois who are affiliated through the Masonic Lodges they are brothers in to the COMMITTEE OF 300, a group of White Supremacist Caucasian Parasites and their AUTOMATON like lackeys of many hues; who (also call themselves the OLYMPIANS or Bilderbergers).

This diverse assortment of Mutant Albino Defectives [literally MAD Palefaces] see themselves as humanity's elite whilst actually being a particularly malignant cancer, who are literally bleeding the World to death by working very hard on fulfilling a Luciferian agenda (Humanity's spiritual destruction, which is enhanced by Wars, poverty and racial hatred), because Lucifer/Satan is both their mentor and God.

Because they (the Boule) are committed to maintaining the existing White Supremacist status quo, these Negroes (as opposed to truly conscious Africans) are projected and promoted into prominent positions, thus they are literally the wealthiest group of people of African ethnicity on the planet.

There are 4000+ of them but they only position themselves in total subservience to the Caucasian Elite; thus they are not allowed (and most wouldn't and don't think to) to do anything to help and support African Americans in the USA, or other ethnic Africans anywhere in the Diaspora and Africa itself.

In 1994 they were known to be affiliated to 101 chapters in the World, thus as well as being extremely wealthy they have strong political connections. However their perspectives and objectives are so brutally White Supremacist that they are known to have been involved in both the organising and commissioning of the operatives that performed the assassinations of both Malcolm X and Martin Luther King; as well as many other acts of despicable treachery against progressive African (American) leaders and communities in both the USA and the Diaspora.

The American Dream is a nightmare for non-Caucasians in general, African and Native Americans in particular. The theft of the Native Americans' land added to the genocide inflicted on the majority of them means that as a country the USA can only ever be at best morally bankrupt.

In the scramble for looting the wealth and resources of Africa in the 1800s, the most powerful European nations literally carved Africa up on a map to create territories expedient to their needs, with no regard as to the African peoples (who were treated worse than the lower animals) already living there which is one of the main reasons many of these so-called countries; are still having difficulty functioning as socially, ethnically and economically viable nations today.

On their plantations in the South of the USA, White Supremacist Caucasians moulded Africans into two distinct groups, house Negroes (who were Uncle Tom types who would do anything to other Blacks to protect their White Masters) and field Negroes (who tended to be more disruptive as they were real Africans, thus they were worked harder and treated worse).

This very efficient system of social control has evolved with the BOULE being the equivalent of house Negroes; in that in return for access to material wealth and prosperity, they're not allowed to help (or show interest in) the rest of us. Their successful acquisition of wealth within the system, supposedly highlighting that the endemic Institutional Racism that blocks our collective advancement does not exist, and that we should all SELL-OUT by using these Coloured/Negro/Black TRAITORS as role models.

The Boules New York chapter was founded by W.E.B. Dubois, who openly said The Boule was created to give the Black Professionals and financial elite guidance, but what he meant was under control i.e. away from the growing ranks of followers of Marcus Garvey and his ilk. From a White Supremacist perspective Garvey was a living nightmare in that his organisation had over a million members; which he had achieved without the aid of radio or TV (neither of which were widely available to African Americans or anyone at that time) or mass media advertising and promotion.

Dubois and the rest of this secret society were the strongest Black (Negro as opposed to African) opponents of Marcus Garvey, thus they utilised their prominent social status within our society to ridicule and undermine and eventually destroy him and his organisation.

Marcus Garvey whose innovative perspective made him the most influential thinker (Mahatma Ghandi and Ho Chi Min were inspired by and acted on his concept of Asia for the Asians, and Africa for the Africans) of the 20th century was constantly belittled and treacherously manipulated (by Boule agents) and attacked by these Negro parasites.

Marcus Garveys greatest and only crime; the conceptual design and actual construction of the largest most viably intelligent, strategically focused (for our long term socio-economic development) grassroots organisation of Africans in the USA (and the rest of the Diaspora).

Garvey had very naively publicised in great detail all of his plans to take as many Africans from the Americas to start a settlement in Liberia; which would sustain itself by helping the Liberian Africans to utilise their resources (Rubber and a range of minerals) for building their own industrial infra-structure up, instead of just selling the resources to the West at pitifully low prices.

He said If the Oil of Afrika is good for the Rockerfellers, and the Iron is good for the Carneige Trust; these minerals are good for us. Why should we allow Wall Street and the Capitalist Groups of Amerikka and Europe to exploit Africa when they refuse to give us a fair chance in any of the countries their ancestors enslaved us to build? Why shouldnt Africa give the world an African Rockerfeller, Rothschild and Henry Ford?

Marcus Garveys very logical agenda would have completely undermined the existing White Supremacist status quo had it been allowed to proceed, with Goodyear and US Steel and many other Multi-National Companies profitability totally compromised.

The Boule were ordered to destroy Garveys organisation by any means, because its success would have set the precedent that Africans (and all non Caucasians) could take control of their land and mineral wealth with a focus on using their resources for themselves. Capitalist White Supremacists like to have access to raw materials and resources (of Africa especially) cheaply (or for nothing) to generate the huge profits that enhances their dominance in all areas of human activity.

The meaning of the Boule Logo-Sphinx; their colours and more of their connections with Freemasonry.

Lets start with their Logo. In the background there appears to be a Sphinx, true but not truth. The Sphinx as built thousands of years ago by Africans in Kemet (Egypt) was called Her-em-akhet, which means Heru of the horizon, and has the face of the builder Khafre.

However any dictionary will explain that the Kemetian Sphinx had the face of a man with the body of a lion, while in Greek mythology it had the face of a woman with breasts and wings, whose function was that of an inquisitive malevolent guardian and protector.

In the Greek myth the Sphinx was the guardian of the city of Thebes, thus anyone going there had to answer a riddle she posed and failure to answer correctly would lead to her tearing you to pieces and devouring you. Creon, the king of Thebes wanted to get rid of this wild guardian so he offered Oedipus his crown and his daughter if he could kill the Sphinx.

Accepting the challenge Oedipus confronted the Sphinx and was asked What has one voice, goes on four feet, on two feet and on three. He answered Man, who crawls on all fours as a baby, then walks on two as an adult and walks with a stick in old age. Because he answered the riddle correctly the Sphinx committed suicide by jumping off a cliff, and Oedipus subsequently married king Creons daughter and was proclaimed King of Thebes by, for outsmarting the beast.

The Sphinx (from an African centred perspective) is a symbolic representation of the Sphincter, which is a muscular membrane that is actually a means of protecting the human body from harmful substances and intrusions. There are eight sphincters in the body of a man and nine in a woman. There are also Spiritual Sphincters in the Ears, Navel, Breasts and Genitalia of humans. When or if we ever achieve Spiritual maturity, we will be able to operate the spiritual Sphincters at will.

The fact that so many Negro Masonic lodges and Black fraternities (like Alpha Phi Alpha) identify themselves using Greek words highlights the fact that their Sphinx is a symbolic representation of their focus of guarding and protecting our White Supremacist status quo, as opposed to being a means of (both individually and collectively) guarding and protecting Africa and Africans (including African Americans) best interests and security throughout the World.

An insight as to how effective the Boule have been was very discretely published (other references to the spy story, Nation 5/3/93; U.S. News and World Report 4/5/93) in the Memphis Commercial Appeal 3/12/93 about the Army Spy Network, which dates back to May 3, 1911. Newton D Baker (CFR) the Secretary of War ordered Lt Ralph von Deman to set up a Black Intelligence unit to monitor Negro Unrest.

This spy unit was dominated by Boule members, because the Army had to recruit Negroes who they felt could be trusted. Emmitt Scott (Boule) became Newton D Bakers special assistant because he used his charm and intelligence to persuade many Negroes to join the Armed forces (at a time when lynching PICNICS were still a regular feature of our oppression within the USA) and function as a part of this unit spying on our communities. He was later rewarded for his subservience and treachery by being made a Grand Sire Archon within the Boule.

The Boule controlled Black Press ran a story on Clifton Wharton-Former Defence Secretary of State (CFR) and Trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation (Feb 4, 1994), highlighting his successes and promoting him as a role model for African Americans. What they didnt mention is the fact that Clifton Wharton had hosted a Boule convention at which David Rockefeller (just to highlight who these mindlessly AUTOMATON like Uncle Tom type Negroes look up to) was guest of honour.

A Boule membership book came up with some interesting names, like Dr Daniel Hale Williams (who performed the 1st Open Heart surgery), Ralph Bunch-Former UN Ambassador, Arthur Ashe, James Baldwin, Whitney Young-Urban League President, Martin Luther King Jr, Benjamin Mays, George Washington Carver and Carter G. Woodson (who have all died without mentioning or acknowledging their Masonic fraternal connections).

Maynard Jackson-ex Mayor of Atlanta, Hank Aaron-baseball great, Tom Bradley-TV Personality, Dennis Archer-Mayor of Detroit, Elvin Big E Hayes, Bill Cosby, Jesse Jackson, Earl Graves, John H Johnson, Douglas Wiler Johnnie Cochran, John Singleton, Lynn Swann, David Dinkins-ex Mayor of New York City are some of the more prominent members.

Steven Cokely says Yes the Boule is in your Town. Anywhere there are prominently successful, or Professional Blacks, Chances are theyre in the Boule.

We owe brother Cokely a huge debt for his tireless dedication and research to highlight to the masses of Nubian people the fact that most of the most materially successful peoples of African descent in the USA and the Diaspora have pledged their allegiance to the White Supremacist Racist controlled Masonic Lodges.

They are literally taking orders from our enemies as opposed to being at the forefront of instigating, orchestrating and funding our fight (to gain revenge and justice for our ancestors and their mutilated and murdered siblings suffering) for Socio-economic independence in every area of human activity.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 08:39:47 -0500

Djehuti,

Quite right -- it comes down to doing things by yourself, or preferably with a small coalition of like-minded progressives.

BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: Djehuti_Sundaka@hotmail.com

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Mahari

>

> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>

> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change

their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as > fast as I like.

>

> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even

> that took $12K out of MY pocket.

> http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

>

> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the

> bankers.

> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.

> This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal > Reserve.

> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.

> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>

>

> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points

> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.

>

> Hotep

> Meninarmer

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.

> Congrats.

> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-

> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika

> where so much gold is located.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

> >
> > Dr. Winters
> >
> > Thank you for your response.
> >
> > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native
> American,
> > and other histories.
> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done
to
> > others to maintain their position.
> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I
am > > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is > nothing
> > else to learn in this area.
> >
> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
> from
> > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the
drug > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
instead
> to
> > become strong black men.
> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain
> > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL, > > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany
> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.
> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many pf them state, they are ready
to > do
> > more.
> >
> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives
> > to the worthless dollar.
> > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>

> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >
> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a
> portion of
> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on
> > our own commitments.
> >
> > Regards,
> >
> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----

> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> > MYTH.....
> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
> >
> > Great points. If you let people get away with doing > > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
> >
> > Clyde
> >
> > --- kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
> > > react.
> > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
> > > Cuba,....and all
> > > other nations with black presence that are
> > > experiencing open hostility,
> > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
> > >
> > > What are we to do?
> > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
> > > years ago, yet we are
> > > even more deceived into playing their game and
> > > setting ourselves up for
> > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With
> > > everything, there is a
> > > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the > > > choices we make.
> > >
> > > It seems the more educated we become, the more
> > > vested we are into
> > > maintaining status quo.
> > >
> > > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
> > > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
> > > distribution, Gangsta Rap,
> > > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
> > > Jordan, 50cents, TD
> > > Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
> > > support it financially,
> > > spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
> > > We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
> > > intentional

>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>

> > >

>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>
>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same

>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem
>>>
>> === message truncated ===
>>
>>
>> _____
>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>>
>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sup>é</sup> Stop by today!
| 23758|2007-11-15 07:02:55|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Again, I must recommend George Monbiot's The Age of Consent: A Manifesto for a New World Order, in which the author details with rigorous logic and historical data the setting up of modern global "development " institutions like the World Bank, IMF, IFC, etc, the primary objectives of which were to rejuvenate the rationalisation that Clyde has just mentioned (debt, tribalism, etc.)while actually implementing the net transfer of global assets and wealth into the hands of those industrialised nations who were clearly better equipped to make good economy of such assets.

TheGuardian newspaper editorialwrote: "This is an extremely important book. Monbiot offers a searchingly rigorous analysis of the sources of US power and presents a package of proposals that would radically redraw the present world order. It is breathtaking in its radicalism, but for anyone who is serious about tackling the current US hegemony, it is difficult to fault its logic."

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 07:35:36 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Absolutely. Only now instead of bleeding Afrika to get wealth, they have acquired the wealth and power. So all they have to do is make sure they keep their economic clutches about her neck and she will feel she has to obey.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, clyde winters wrote:

- >
- > I remember back at University when we studied the
- > Scramble for Africa. Issues of debt, tribalism and
- > etc. were all used as reasons for the take over of
- > Africa. It appears to me that if African leaders don't
- > watch out colonialism may rise its ugly head again.
- >
- > Clyde
- >
- >
- >

> --- Peter Gray wrote:
>
>>
>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>> these men persona non grata, what are we to do now
>> -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a most >> illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>
>> Peter
>>
>>
>> To: Ta_Seti@...:
>> mahari@...: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11
>> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika
>> about Afrika and
>> Afrikans.==== ===== =Zimbabwe: Putting Zim
>> First - If Not Now, When?Published by the government
>> of Zimbabwe The Herald (Harare)Bishop Trevor >> ManhangaTWO incidents took place this year, a couple >> of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated
>> in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and
>> indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the >> stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and >> opinions some in the white west have about us, as we >> strive for economic empowerment and emancipation. The >> first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July >> 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the >> President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh
>> Anta Diop University.In what can only be described >> as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner
>> feelings of a very high standing public figure, >> Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in >> part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man
>> has never really entered history."The African >> peasant who for centuries has lived according to the >> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with >> nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time
>> via the endless repetition of the same actions and >> the same words."In this mentality, where everything
>> always starts over again, there is no place for > > human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this > > man never projects himself into the future, it never > > occurs to him to break free from the repetition and > > invent a destiny for himself."This, if you will > > allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's > > problem."Africa' s challenge is to enter history more > > fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever

> > repeating and going over things, and to free itself
> > from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to > > realise that the golden age that it always harks
> > back to will never return, for the simple reason > > that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that > > its present is permeated with nostalgia for the > > paradise lost of its childhood."Africa' s problem is > > that it judges its present according to a wholly > > imaginary notion of original purity that no one > > could ever hope to revive."Africa' s challenge should > > not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make > > the present more bearable, but to invent a future
> > with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa
> > has a right to be happy just like all the other > > continents of the world."The deafening silence from
> > the African continent and its leadership in allowing > > Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on > > African soil, but also at an institution of higher > > learning, and get away with it has been most > > disturbing.How can the collective leadership of the > > African continent, have remained silent in the face > > of this very provocative and insulting opinion of > > Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its > > people is without empirical validation, downright > > condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with > > the contempt it deserves.One would have expected at
> > the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist
> > remarks from none other than the AU, or other > > regional African bodies such as Sadc or Ecowas. I > > have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of > > rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans.If > > there has been a response, then perhaps I have not > > seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's > > racist diatribe have been few and far between, and
> > among the few I have encountered is one in the > > October issue of New African magazine, where the > > editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's > > speech said:"I don't know about you just now, but I > > am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing

> > here with a confused man with a confused speech.
> > Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors
> > doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those > > glorious empires of yore right across the continent?
> > When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in > > Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's > > European ancestors were still living in caves. They > > didn't know what a window was! And he has the > > temerity to insult us and our ancestors?"There is
> > doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so,
> > because such outright disdain for Africa and its > > people cannot be left unchallenged. What Sarkozy > > needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants
> > of these "African peasants who live by the seasons"
> > were part of France's World Cup winning team, when > > France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory
> > serves me right, the team looked like a typical > > African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of > > Caucasian faces. So much for people who are > > supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to
> > the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by > > Sarkozy. The second incident took place in the USA,
> > and relates to an article written by an eminent
> > scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson, > > who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was
> > the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on > > Long Island New York, USA, resigned after > > controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting > > black people are less intelligent than whites. Watson > > (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering
> > the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour
> > Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it > > into one of the world's leading genetics research > > institutes. His problems, which led to his > > retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as > > having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of > > London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the > > prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies
> > are based on the fact that their intelligence is the > > same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not > > really."To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour > > Laboratory through their president, said Watson's > > comments have no connection with research activity
> > at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently > > disagree" with Watson's statements. The lab moved > > swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative > > responsibilities as chancellor leading to his > > subsequent resignation. Why do I make reference to > > these two incidents that have taken place on two > > continents by two different people, under two > > different conditions? Reference must be made to them, > > because they reveal the underlying hostile and > > racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with > > the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and > > Watson are not ordinary run of the mill,

> > intellectually challenged people. On the contrary,
> > one is the president of a key industrialised Western > > European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate > > and respected scientist. The question must be asked > > then, if people of such high standing and > > respectability in western society have such a > > deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the > > problem we face is much greater than we ever > > imagined. These were not off the cuff, slip of the > > tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were > > well thought out and delivered, and even if there is > > ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended > > damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no > > matter how vigorous an attempt to do so. I mention
> > these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because > > it is imperative that there is an understanding by > > all of us, that we should work to prove that the two > > gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments
> > are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner > > that provides them with ammunition, to buttress > > their racist stereotypical opinions. There are three > > things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that > > will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted > > opinions. The first is to ensure that the > > agricultural season currently upon us yields the > > fruits we anticipate and desperately need. It is not > > too late to make the clarion call to all those on > > agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of > > the land reform programme, or have always been on > > the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch > > of available arable land, and make this the, "mother > > of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people > > wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts
> > as Sarkozy and Watson wrong. We must show that we can > > use the land we have. We can make use of the farming > > implements that have just been delivered to some of > > our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our

> > African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser > > mortals, that we are industrious, responsible > > people. We must be constantly aware that there are > > many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe > > that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, > > (both qualitatively and quantitatively) , that the > > white former farmers used to. It is for this reason > > that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of > > liberation, when those who fought for the > > emancipation of the nation reminded each other in > > the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy:
> > "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound). "That is the > > reality we face today and every one of us must not > > flinch from the task ahead. The second is to ensure > > that the up coming national elections are conducted > > in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open > > and transparent manner. Those who cannot bring > > themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can > > solve their own problems, (and we are well on our > > way

> === message truncated ===

>
>
>
>
>

---

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.
> Make Yahoo! your homepage.
> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>

---

Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You! Get 'em!

| 23759|2007-11-15 07:30:11|aphricaneyecandy|NEWBIE HERE!|

Greetings to everyone here! It was hard finding a group that can constantly keep me educated on things that are important to me. I truly hope that it will be a group of knowledge.

I came here for some guidance and knowledge of my African blood line.

I know a lot but I don't know everything. I'm a mother of 2 beautiful Queens and sometimes it is hard for me trying to teach them the truth without fearing the outside world influence. So here I am. As a beginner here maybe someone can help at this point of my life.

Thank you!

| 23760|2007-11-15 08:57:34|clyde winters|Re: NEWBIE HERE!|
Welcome.
Clyde

--- aphricaneyecandy <lynn\_henderson06@yahoo.com>
wrote:

> Greetings to everyone here! It was hard finding a > group that can > constantly keep me educated on things that are > important to me. I > truly hope that it will be a group of knowledge.
> I came here for some guidance and knowledge of my > African blood line.
> I know a lot but I don't know everything. I'm a > mother of 2 beautiful > Queens and sometimes it is hard for me trying to > teach them the truth > without fearing the outside world influence. So here > I am. As a > beginner here maybe someone can help at this point > of my life.
>
> Thank you!
>
>

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.

http://mobile.yahoo.com/sports;\_ylt=At9\_qDKvtAbMuh1G1SQtBI7ntAcJ

| 23761|2007-11-15 08:59:29|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Didn't Dr. Fronkenschsteen do that already? LOL
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>
>
> Djehuti,
>
> Quite right -- it comes down to doing things by yourself, or preferably with a small coalition of like-minded progressives.

>

> BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

>

> Peter

> To: Ta_Seti@...: Djehuti_Sundaka@...: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47

+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

>

>

>

> Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you. A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000. As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation. Djehuti Sundaka --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:>> Mahari> > Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. : (> > I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their> priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as> fast as I like.> > I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to> license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even> that took $12K out of MY pocket.>

http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html>

> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the> bankers. > Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated. > This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal> Reserve. > Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.>

<http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>> > The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.> > Hotep> Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Mahari Mengistu > Reply-To:

Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject:

[Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....>

Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message

Poster> > Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.> > Congrats.> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika > where so much gold is located.> HTP,> Mahari> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:> >> > Dr. Winters> > > Thank you for your response.> > >

Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native >

American,> > and other histories.> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done to> > others to maintain their position.> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I am> > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is > nothing> > else to learn in this area.> > >

For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys > from> > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the drug> > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their > actions,> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them instead > to> > become strong black men. > > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain> >

positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL,> >

University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music >

(Brittany> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their> > friends and peers, are alone. Many pf them state, they are ready to > do> > more.> > > > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a > business to> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money. > > > > I started a company to sell Gold,

Platinum, and Silver as > alternatives> > to the worthless dollar. >

> <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on > silver,> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of > silver> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will> > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully > help> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times > within the> > black community.> > > > Did you know that the 1940s

Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar > is> > now valued at upwards of$390/coin?> > > > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore

banking, open accounts > in> > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation

(without representation) and> > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax > dollars> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world where > the> > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America, > Citi> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.> > > > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a > portion of> > my ambition.> > > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend > on> > our own commitments.> > > Regards,> > > MeniNarmer> > > > > --

---Original Message-----> > From: clyde winters > >
Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> >
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A> >
MYTH.....> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)> > > Great points. If you let people get away with doing> > nothing-- that's exactly what they do.> > > Clyde> > > --- kungfuhustle wrote:> > > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to> > > react. > > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,> > > Cuba,....and all> > > other nations with black presence that are> > > experiencing open hostility,> > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination. > > > > > What are we to do?
> > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400> > > years ago, yet we are> > > even more deceived into playing their game and> > > setting ourselves up for> > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With> > > everything, there is a> > > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the> > > choices we make.> > > > > It seems the more educated we become, the more> > > vested we are into> > > maintaining status quo.> > > > > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.> > > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine> > > distribution, Gangsta Rap,> > > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,> > > Jordan, 50cents, TD> > > Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to> > > support it financially,> > > spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.> > > We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are> > > intentional> > > countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in> > > development of future> > > follow-on programs that will do the same.> > > > > I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and> > > energies focused on> > > crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on> > > picketing,> > > protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks> > > who do not have our> > > best interests at heart 24/7/365.> > > > > -Make the Africa leaders and their people> > > accountable.> > > -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same> > > as the promises he's> > > > > made the Jews and whites.> > > -Make black voters aware there is something> > > dysfunctional and insane> > > about voting for a candidate because of skin color,> > > and not because of> > > the content of what they will do for you.> > > -Make black police and other black law enforcement> > > accountable when they> > > assist in killing or betraying their own.> > > -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have> > > sold their people's> > > interests for financial reward. > > > -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist> > > in developing,> > > maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites> > > promote of blacks> > > worldwide.> > > - Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,> > > and how it

[illegible]

to say it, is>>> Africa's >>> problem.>>>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and>>> going over things,>> > and to >>> free itself from the myth of the eternal>>> renewal.
It is to>>> realise >>> that the golden age that it always harks> >> back to will never>>> return, >>> for the simple reason that it never>>> existed.... Africa's problem>>>> === message truncated ===>>>

>> Never

miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page. >>

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>>>>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sub>é</sub> Stop by today.

> http://www.cafemessenger.com/info/info\_sweetstuff2.html?

ocid=TXT_TAGLM_OctWLtagline

>

| 23762|2007-11-15 08:59:41|clyde winters|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Thanks for the info.

Clyde

--- kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

> ALL

>

> This is nothing new, our self defeating cling to > tribalism and small > group mentality. In normal times, this is > acceptable. But what war can > be won with small tribes lacking communications and > cohesion with > others? Not many.

> This was what W.E.B DuBois preached with his, TEN.

> Their isolation made > them susceptible external influence leading to the > formation of the,

> Boule, and the elimination of true people centric > organizations such as

- > Garvey, Martin Luther, Malcohm X's Pan-African
- > Organizations.
- > It didn't work then, as it will not work today. Or
- > perhaps it did work,
- > but just not for the people.
- >
- > WHO ARE THE BOULE?
- >
- > Steven Cokely has done research, which has exposed
- > the fact that 90% of
- > the (Greek orientated) Negro secret societies are
- > very powerful
- > (literally the eyes and ears within our
- > community's) tools of White
- > Supremacy, as that is an integral function of their
- > formation, funding
- > and influence within the social Establishment. The
- > leader and overall
- > controllers of these traitors are THE BOULE AKA,
- > SIGMA PI PHI
- > fraternity, Inc.
- >
- > They were founded May 15, 1904 in Pennsylvania
- > making them the first
- > Negro fraternity in the USA; as the first African
- > American College
- > fraternity (Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity Inc) was not
- > founded until
- > December 4th, 1906. The Boule's organisational
- > structure is based on
- > copying that of Yale University's Skull &
- > Bones' secret Society. Its - > primary founder was Dr Henry Minton (along with
- > Dr's Eugene T Henson,
- > Edwin Clarence Howard, Algernon Brashear Jackson,
- > Robert Jones Abele and
- > Richard John Warwick) of Philadelphia.
- >
- > They are the so called 'TALENTED 10TH' mentioned
- > by W.E.B. Dubois who
- > are affiliated through the Masonic Lodges they are
- > brothers in to the - > COMMITTEE OF 300, a group of White Supremacist
- > Caucasian Parasites and
- > their AUTOMATON like lackeys of many hues; who (also
- > call themselves the

- > OLYMPIANS or Bilderbergers).
- >
- > This diverse assortment of Mutant Albino Defectives
- > [literally MAD
- > Palefaces] see themselves as humanity's elite
- > whilst actually being a
- > particularly malignant cancer, who are literally
- > bleeding the World to
- > death by working very hard on fulfilling a
- > Luciferian agenda (Humanity's
- > spiritual destruction, which is enhanced by Wars,
- > poverty and racial
- > hatred), because Lucifer/Satan is both their mentor
- > and God.
- >
- > Because they (the Boule) are committed to
- > maintaining the existing White
- > Supremacist status quo, these Negroes (as opposed to
- > truly conscious
- > Africans) are projected and promoted into prominent
- > positions, thus they
- > are literally the wealthiest group of people of
- > African ethnicity on the
- > planet.
- >
- > There are 4000+ of them but they only position
- > themselves in total
- > subservience to the Caucasian Elite; thus they are
- > not allowed (and most
- > wouldn't and don't think to) to do anything to
- > help and support African
- > Americans in the USA, or other ethnic Africans
- > anywhere in the Diaspora
- > and Africa itself.
- >
- > In 1994 they were known to be affiliated to 101
- > chapters in the World,
- > thus as well as being extremely wealthy they have
- > strong political
- > connections. However their perspectives and
- > objectives are so brutally
- > White Supremacist that they are known to have been
- > involved in both the
- > organising and commissioning of the operatives that
- > performed the
- > assassinations of both Malcom X and Martin Luther

- > King; as well as many
- > other acts of despicable treachery against
- > progressive African
- > (American) leaders and communities in both the USA
- > and the Diaspora.
- >
- > The American Dream is a nightmare for non-Caucasians
- > in general, African
- > and Native Americans in particular. The theft of the - > Native American lands
- > land added to the genocide inflicted on the majority
- > of them means that
- > as a country the USA can only ever be at best morally
- > bankrupt.
- >
- > In the scramble for looting the wealth and resources
- > of Africa in the
- > 1800s, the most powerful European nations
- > literally carved Africa up on
- > a map to create territories expedient to their
- > needs, with no regard as
- > to the African peoples (who were treated worse than
- > the lower animals)
- > already living there which is one of the main
- > reasons many of these so
- > called countries; are still having difficulty
- > functioning as socially,
- > ethnically and economically viable nations today.
- >
- > On their plantations in the South of the USA, White
- > Supremacist
- > Caucasians moulded Africans into two distinct
- > groups, house Negroes (who
- > were Uncle Tom types who would do anything to other
- > Blacks to protect
- > their White Masters) and field Negroes (who tended
- > to be more disruptive
- > as they were real Africans, thus they were worked
- > harder and treated
- > worse).
- >
- > This very efficient system of social control has
- > evolved with the
- > BOULE being the equivalent of house Negroes; in that
- > in return for access
- > to material wealth and prosperity, they are not

- > allowed to help (or show
- > interest in) the rest of us. Their successful
- > acquisition of wealth
- > within the system, supposedly highlighting that the
- > endemic
- > Institutional Racism that blocks our collective
- > advancement does not
- > exist, and that we should all SELL-OUT by using
- > these
- > Coloured/Negro/Black TRAITORS as role models.
- >
- > The Boule's New York chapter was founded by W.E.B.
- > Dubois, who openly
- > said "The Boule" was created to give the Black
- > Professionals and
- > financial elite guidance, but what he meant was
- > under control i.e. away
- > from the growing ranks of followers of Marcus Garvey
- > and his ilk. From a
- > White Supremacist perspective Garvey was a living
- > nightmare in that his
- > organisation had over a million members; which he
- > had achieved without
- > the aid of radio or TV (neither of which were widely
- > available to
- > African Americans or anyone at that time) or mass
- > media advertising and
- > promotion.
- >
- > Dubois and the rest of this secret society were the
- > strongest Black
- > (Negro as opposed to African) opponents of Marcus
- > Garvey, thus they
- > utilised their prominent social status within our
- > society to ridicule
- > and undermine and eventually destroy him and his
- > organisation.
- >
- > Marcus Garvey whose innovative perspective made him
- > the most influential
- > thinker (Mahatma Ghandi and Ho Chi Min were inspired
- > by and acted on his
- > concept of Asia for the Asians, and Africa for the
- > Africans) of the 20th
- > century was constantly belittled and treacherously
- > manipulated (by Boule > agents) and attacked by these Negro parasites.

>

>

==== message truncated ====

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

Make Yahoo! your homepage.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23763|2007-11-15 09:17:16|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Peter

The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it requires a huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also, since it would depend on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the collection would be very random and costly.

Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and cost effective.

You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps generate about a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized home, or approx. 2KW.

The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of catching wind current.

Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale. Hence, the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer, black computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television manufacturer is the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge, resources, or need, but rather because we lack the organization.

Meninarmer

BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com
Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Mahari
>
> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(
>
> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as > fast as I like.
>
> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even
> that took $12K out of MY pocket.
> http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html
>
> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the

> bankers.
> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.
> This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal > Reserve.
> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
>
> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points
> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
>
> Hotep
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> Congrats.
> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika > where so much gold is located.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>
>> Dr. Winters
>>
>> Thank you for your response.
>>
>> Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native
> American,
>> and other histories.
>> Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done
to
>> others to maintain their position.
>> IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I

am

> > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is

> nothing

> > else to learn in this area.

> >

> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys

> from

> > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the
drug

> > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their

> actions,

> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
instead

> to

> > become strong black men.

> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain

> > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL,

> > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music

> (Brittany

> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.

> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many pf them state, they are ready to

> do

> > more.

> >

> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a

> business to

> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.

> >

> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as

> alternatives

> > to the worthless dollar.

> > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>

> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on

> silver,

> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of

> silver

> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would

hopefully

> help

> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times

> within the

> > black community.

> >

> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar
> is
> > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >
> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a
> portion of
> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on
> > our own commitments.
> >
> > Regards,
> >
> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> > MYTH.....
> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
> >
> > Great points. If you let people get away with doing > > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
> >
> > Clyde
> >

> > --- kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
> > > react.
> > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
> > > Cuba,...and all
> > > other nations with black presence that are
> > > experiencing open hostility,
> > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
> > >
> > > What are we to do?
> > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
> > > years ago, yet we are
> > > even more deceived into playing their game and
> > > setting ourselves up for
> > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With
> > > everything, there is a
> > > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the > > > choices we make.
> > >
> > > It seems the more educated we become, the more
> > > vested we are into
> > > maintaining status quo.
> > >
> > > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
> > > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
> > > distribution, Gangsta Rap,
> > > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
> > > Jordan, 50cents, TD
> > > Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
> > > support it financially,
> > > spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
> > > We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
> > > intentional
> > > countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
> > > development of future
> > > follow-on programs that will do the same.
> > >
> > > I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
> > > energies focused on
> > > crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
> > > picketing,
> > > protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
> > > who do not have our
> > > best interests at heart 24/7/365.
> > >

>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>

>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>>>

>>> Peter

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>

---

>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>>> From: mahari@

>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000

>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A

>>> MYTH.....

>>>

>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in

>>> Afrika about Afrika

>>> and

>>> Afrikans.

>>> =====

>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,

>>> When?

>>>

>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe

>>>

>>> The Herald (Harare)

>>>

>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga

>>>

>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple

>>> of months and two

>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that

>>> they revealed the

>>> battle

>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans

>>> encounter in the face of

>>> the

>>> stereotypical, and downright racist

>>> attitudes and opinions some

>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a

>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem
>>>
>> === message truncated ===
>>
>>

---

>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>>
>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sub>é</sub> Stop
by today!
| 23764|2007-11-15 11:38:41|Alex van Deelen|Zimbabwe and Sarkozy|
On Sarkozy,

"The African peasant who for centuries has lived according to the seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time via the endless repetition of the same actions and the same words.

"In this mentality, where everything always starts over again, there is no place for human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this man never projects himself into the future, it never occurs to him to break free from the repetition and invent a destiny for himself. "

Since when have the french let ignorance about the facts stand in the way of sweeping generalisations?

So Sarkozy is ignorant about Africa - so what? And is he not really projecting his own ideas about Corsica, or wherever he is from?

Mahari,

"I am not surprised at their lack of vigorous opposition. In fact, it fits all too well into their most recent collective personalities. I am on the verge of being in favor of Afrikan-Americans, who have consistently backed them, telling them that they had better get it together. It has been about 25 years since they acquired their independence. And even though I know they are still economically enslaved by europeans they could at least show some balls and have some faith in their own potential and the potential of their people. Their people are quickly losing faith in them as they are leaving in droves. HTP Mahari "

Just a few things. The government of Zimbabwe is doing all kinds of things to start becoming economically independent from both the west and white landownership. There is a massive effort underway to start indigenising agriculture - something that basically couldn't happen until 10 years ago, because of the agreements made by ZANU-PF with the ANC in South Africa, which only became independent in 1994. Even then, it was the (New Labour) British government which unilaterally decided to stop funding the 'willing buyer, willing seller' land reform program in 1997, in Claire Short's infamous letter. Which is what started this whole thing off.

(" I should make it clear that we do not accept that Britain has a special responsibility to meet the costs of land purchase in Zimbabwe. We are a new Government from diverse backgrounds without links to former colonial interests. My own origins are Irish and as you know we were colonised not colonisers. ")

<http://www.swans.com/library/art9/ankomah5.html>

Secondly, the Arab world is hardly one to start chastising Africa for not throwing off it's neocolonial yoke. Everywhere you look, there are stooges for Western oil interests. From Saudi Arabia, to Egypt, to Syria, etc.

It may have been 25 years since Zimbabwe achieved 'independence', but I challenge you to have a close look at all the lock-ins and special privileges for whites, as well as the commitment to the useless 'willing buyer, willing seller' land reform program. If this program had been kept in place, there would be no significant land reform for another 200 years, if that.

Right now, the economic situation of Zimbabwe is because of them standing up to western interests. Read the Zimbabwe Democracy and Economic Recovery Act of 2001 (ZDERA), which prohibits the government of Zimbabwe from borrowing from the world's international financial institutions.

<http://www.govtrack.us/congress/billtext.xpd?bill=s107-494>

As well, overnight, they lost all 'aid support' for their government budget - which regularly adds up to 1/3 of their budget, creating an instant balance of payment crisis.

So let's not pretend that it is somehow easy or painless to wrest away western control from African economies.

Zimbabwe was made an example of, to deter land reform in the rest of Africa. That is why they have world record inflation, although it is very much (for obvious reasons) a local currency inflation, not inflation of products on sale in for instance US dollar or Euro terms. This (sanctions, ZDERA) was a direct assault on the value of the Zimbabwe dollar.

However...

This very rude awakening has given a new impulse to achieving independence. The Zimbabwean government is presently involved with a massive mechanisation and tractorisation programme (supported, as you might have guessed by China).

(HERALD) Training of agric operators a milestone

<http://maravi.blogspot.com/2007/07/herald-training-of-agric-operators.html>

(HERALD) Government buys 3 500 more tractors

<http://maravi.blogspot.com/2007/09/herald-government-buys-3-500-more.html>

(HERALD) Farm Mechanisation: Maintenance workshops being set up

<http://maravi.blogspot.com/2007/10/herald-farm-mechanisation-maintenance.html>

I wouldn't be surprised at all when the country of Zimbabwe would be the first country in the region to become economically independent.

Whatever the mistakes made by Robert Mugabe, falling into the trap of believing in 'free markets', neoliberalism and western expertise and advice is not one of them.

And make no mistake. The hundreds of thousands of African farmers (250,000) will produce much more than the 4,500 white commercial farmers and their mechanized farms will ever produce.

Alex

| 23765|2007-11-15 11:45:15|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|York advocates spelling Hh Pr-ty (Aa Perti) as "A'aferti"|

I challenged them on the misspelling of such words as Th Mry which they spell "Tamare / Tama Re" and now convicted child molestor York of the Ancient Egiptian Order, has advocated that he was a "A'aferti" as he claims, or pharaoh. I looked up the real spelling for so called Pharaoh and it is Pr Hh (Per Aa, the great house) and also Hh Pr-ty (Aa Perti, chief in command, Leading Soilder, Head General, or head commander). Look at the dialog they have used to alter Hh Pr-ty into "A'aferti"

---

THE SACRED RECORDS OF NETER: A'AFERTI ATUM-RE (page 429 verse 29)

29. Is this the reason for the imperfection in creation? Yes. Some scientists succeed and some fail. The sad thing is that these ancient scientists in religion are called god, and religious people respect the perfections and ignore the imperfections, or refuse to acknowledge if one god is in control of all things, and he would be responsible for all the imperfections in creation, as well.

Khalana Hassa Nazur Ba Atnah Farug Shil Haza Ren Ash Kalun A'aferti.
Let us now look at the second part of this name which is A'aferti

A'aferti- is another way to say Pharaoh. A Pharaoh and what many choose to call God are one and the same. A'aferti is a Nuwaubic / Heirectic word meaning, "The choice". An A'aferti was the one whom others would invest their will of choice in. The Pharaoh / A'aferti was not an intermediary between God and man but was a direct link with a God amongst men (Anus) and women (Anusha). The Pharaoh / A'aferti was used by Ba Aruaat Shil Ba Ali'yawn Ali'yawn El / the children of the Most High Most God to channel outformation from the etheric realm / Atheric Hayuz to the Maduy Yasway / physical plane. Our Ancient Ones / Gadumnaa Wahedaat have the ability to travel through the depths of ether, all the way to ether 99 on into hydrogen 1. The etheric realm is the reverse to the element realm which is why an etheric child is an elder and an etheric elder is an infant (of course this is based on your comprehension of these terms).

---

also

---

THE SACRED RECORDS OF NETER: A'AFERTI ATUM-RE (pages 428-429 verses 27-2Cool

Were these spiritual or physical beings? 27. Both, for the word A'aferti has it's root in a'fara, "dust", and implies the taking on of dust particles, dehydrated blood. Yet, it's translated as pharoah as a human yet spiritual god, who all gave reverence to the Neteru which has it's roots in Na Ta Ra, which means "watchers or guardians". Spiritual beings who can personify. 28. So both principles are covered. And there were and are good physical people, bad physical people; good spiritual beings and bad spiritual beings.

Hag Nawur- when translated from the Nuwaubic into the English is Truelight. Hag means true and Nawur means light. Your true light is found in your Aura. If you were to vibe on a specific emotion intensely then your Aura would be seen even by those who are not that spiritually inclined. What would normally happen in this case would be moments after contact with a person who is glowing, in would then come into the mind of the observer that there was a light projecting from the body. I was given the name True Tight from one of the elders in the Nuwaubian Grand Lodge who also happens to be the Worshipful Master Muhammad Qasim. The Worshipful Master said that it was good when I was going by the name Polight but now I have stepped it up in degrees in terms of knowledge and thereby, have been promoted to True Light. The Aura is the true light because all other lights are chaotic and or artificial. Our spiritual parents do not see the physical body. When they encounter us they make the judgment on our personality by way of our true light. Let us see what the Holy Tablets presents to us in terms of the true light.

---

Where can I find the word "a'fara" used in Hpy/Nile valley's cultural literature in the contest of being called "dust", and how did York take a compound name such as Hh pr-ty or Aa perti and convert it into a singular name a'aferti with different root words a'afer and ti from the original? By the way, I'm getting these excerpts from <http://www.thelightandwater.com/faqs.htm>

| 23766|2007-11-15 13:40:30|cristofori whitakara|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

in ivan van sertima's golden age of the moor he notes the lighted cities of al andalusia. was it wind technology that the moors used to have cordoba, seville ,etc illuminated. or were they oil lamps and the such?

kungfuhustle wrote:

Peter

The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it requires a huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also, since it would depends on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the collection would be very random and costly.

Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and cost effective.

You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps generate about a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized home, or approx. 2KW.

The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of catching wind current.

Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale. Hence, the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer, black computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television manufacturer is the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge, resources, or need, but rather because we lack the organization.

Meninarmer

BTW, any physicists/electron ics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super- capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Mahari

>

> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>

> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as > fast as I like.

>

> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even

> that took $12K out of MY pocket.

> http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

>

> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the

> bankers.

> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.

> This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal Reserve.

> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.

> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>

>
> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul
points
> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
>
> Hotep
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> Congrats.
> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika > where so much gold is located.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > Dr. Winters
> >
> > Thank you for your response.
> >
> > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native
> American,
> > and other histories.
> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done
to
> > others to maintain their position.
> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I
am > > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is > nothing
> > else to learn in this area.
> >
> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
> from

> > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the drug > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them instead
> to
> > become strong black men.
> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain
> > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL, > > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany
> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.
> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready to > do
> > more.
> >
> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives
> > to the worthless dollar.
> > <http://www.kastlean.dhawke.com>
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar
> is
> > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts

> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >
> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a
> portion of
> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on
> > our own commitments.
> >
> > Regards,
> >
> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> > MYTH.....
> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
> >
> > Great points. If you let people get away with doing > > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
> >
> > Clyde
> >
> > --- kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
> > > react.
> > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
> > > Cuba,....and all
> > > other nations with black presence that are

>>> experiencing open hostility,
>>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
>>>
>>> What are we to do?
>>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
>>> years ago, yet we are
>>> even more deceived into playing their game and
>>> setting ourselves up for
>>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With
>>> everything, there is a
>>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the >>> choices we make.
>>>
>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>> vested we are into
>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane

>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>>
>>> Peter

>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>

>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem
>>>

>> === message truncated ===

>>

>>

>> _____
>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>>

>

_____

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sup>e</sup> Stop
by today!

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.

| 23767|2007-11-15 13:40:33|cristofori whitakara|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

lawrence graham's book "our Kind of People" discusses this in his book...a few years ago he went undercover as a whiteman and wrote a book about the experience...this is after eddie murphy :)

kungfuhustle wrote:

ALL

This is nothing new, our self defeating cling to tribalism and small group mentality. In normal times, this is acceptable. But what war can be won with small tribes lacking communications and cohesion with others? Not many.

This was what W.E.B DuBois preached with his, TEN. Their isolation made them suceptible external influence leading to the formation of the, Boule, and the elimination of true people centric organizations such as Garvey, Martin Luther, Malcohm X's Pan-African Organizations.

It didn't work then, as it will not work today. Or perhaps it did work, but just not for the people.

WHO ARE THE BOULE?

Steven Cokely has done research, which has exposed the fact that 90% of the (Greek orientated) Negro secret societies are very powerful (literally the eyes and ears within our community's) tools of White Supremacy, as that is an integral function of their formation, funding and influence within the social Establishment. The leader and overall controllers of these traitors are THE BOULE AKA, SIGMA PI PHI fraternity, Inc.

They were founded May 15, 1904 in Pennsylvania making them the first Negro fraternity in the USA; as the first African American College fraternity (Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity Inc) was not founded until December 4th, 1906. The Boule's organisational structure is based on copying that of Yale University's 'Skull & Bones' secret Society. Its primary founder was Dr Henry Minton (along with Dr's Eugene T Henson, Edwin Clarence Howard, Algernon Brashear Jackson, Robert Jones Abele and Richard John Warwick) of Philadelphia.

They are the so called 'TALENTED 10TH' mentioned by W.E.B. Dubois who are affiliated through the Masonic Lodges they are brothers in to the COMMITTEE OF 300, a group of White Supremacist Caucasian Parasites and their AUTOMATON like lackeys of many hues; who (also call themselves the OLYMPIANS or Bilderbergers) .

This diverse assortment of Mutant Albino Defectives [literally MAD Palefaces] see themselves as humanity's elite whilst actually being a particularly malignant cancer, who are literally bleeding the World to death by working very hard on fulfilling a Luciferian agenda (Humanity's spiritual destruction, which is enhanced by Wars, poverty and racial hatred), because Lucifer/Satan is both their mentor and God.

Because they (the Boule) are committed to maintaining the existing White Supremacist status quo, these Negroes (as opposed to truly conscious Africans) are projected and promoted into prominent positions, thus they are literally the wealthiest group of people of African ethnicity on the planet.

There are 4000+ of them but they only position themselves in total subservience to the Caucasian Elite; thus they are not allowed (and most wouldn't and don't think to) to do anything to help and support African Americans in the USA, or other ethnic Africans anywhere in the Diaspora and Africa itself.

In 1994 they were known to be affiliated to 101 chapters in the World, thus as well as being extremely wealthy they have strong political connections. However their perspectives and objectives are so brutally White Supremacist that they are known to have been involved in both the organising and commissioning of the operatives that performed the assassinations of both Malcom X and Martin Luther King; as well as many other acts of despicable treachery against progressive African (American) leaders and communities in both the USA and the Diaspora.

The American Dream is a nightmare for non-Caucasians in general, African and Native Americans in particular. The theft of the Native American's land added to the genocide inflicted on the majority of them means that as a country the USA can only ever be at best morally bankrupt.

In the scramble for looting the wealth and resources of Africa in the 1800's, the most powerful European nations literally carved Africa up on a map to create territories expedient to their needs, with no regard as to the African peoples (who were treated worse than the lower animals) already living there which is one of the main reasons many of these so called countries; are still having difficulty functioning as socially, ethnically and economically viable nations today.

On their plantations in the South of the USA, White Supremacist Caucasians moulded Africans into two distinct groups, house Negroes (who were Uncle Tom types who would do anything to other Blacks to protect their White Masters) and field Negroes (who tended to be more disruptive as they were real Africans, thus they were worked harder and treated worse).

This very efficient system of social control has evolved with the BOULE being the equivalent of house Negroes; in that in return for access to material wealth and prosperity, they're not allowed to help (or show interest in) the rest of us. Their successful acquisition of wealth within the system, supposedly highlighting that the endemic Institutional Racism that blocks our collective advancement does not exist, and that we should all SELL-OUT by using these Coloured/Negro/ Black TRAITORS as role models.

The Boule's New York chapter was founded by W.E.B. Dubois, who openly said 'The Boule' was created to give the Black Professionals and financial elite guidance, but what he meant was under control i.e. away from the growing ranks of followers of Marcus Garvey and his ilk. From a White Supremacist perspective Garvey was a living nightmare in that his organisation had over a million members; which he had achieved without the aid of radio or TV (neither of which were widely available to African Americans or anyone at that time) or mass media advertising and promotion.

Dubois and the rest of this secret society were the strongest Black (Negro as opposed to African) opponents of Marcus Garvey, thus they utilised their prominent social status within our society to ridicule and undermine and eventually destroy him and his organisation.

Marcus Garvey whose innovative perspective made him the most influential thinker (Mahatma Ghandi and Ho Chi Min were inspired by and acted on his concept of Asia for the Asians, and Africa for the Africans) of the 20th century was constantly belittled and treacherously manipulated (by Boule agents) and attacked by these Negro parasites.

Marcus Garvey's greatest and only crime; the conceptual design and actual construction of the largest most viably intelligent, strategically focused (for our long term socio-economic development) grassroots organisation of Africans in the USA (and the rest of the Diaspora).

Garvey had very naively publicised in great detail all of his plans to take as many Africans from the America's to start a settlement in Liberia; which would sustain itself by helping the Liberian Africans to utilise their resources (Rubber and a range of minerals) for building their own industrial infra-structure up, instead of just selling the resources to the West at pitifully low prices.

He said 'If the Oil of Afrika is good for the Rockerfeller's, and the Iron is good for the Carneige Trust; these minerals are good for us. Why should we allow Wall Street and the Capitalist Groups of Amerikka and Europe to exploit Africa when they refuse to give us a fair chance in any of the countries their ancestors enslaved us to build? Why shouldn't Africa give the world an African Rockerfeller, Rothschild and Henry Ford??

Marcus Garvey's very logical agenda would have completely undermined the existing White Supremacist status quo had it been allowed to proceed, with Goodyear and US Steel and many other Multi-National Companies profitability totally compromised.

The Boule were ordered to destroy Garvey's organisation by any means, because its success would have set the precedent that Africans (and all non Caucasians) could take control of their land and mineral wealth with a focus on using their resources for themselves. Capitalist White Supremacists like to have access to raw materials and resources (of Africa especially) cheaply (or for nothing) to generate the huge profits that enhances their dominance in all areas of human activity.

The meaning of the Boule Logo-Sphinx; their colours and more of their connections with Freemasonry.

Let's start with their Logo. In the background there appears to be a Sphinx, true but not truth. The Sphinx as built thousands of years ago by Africans in Kemet (Egypt) was called Her-em-akhet, which means Heru of the horizon, and has the face of the builder Khafre.

However any dictionary will explain that the Kemetian Sphinx had the face of a man with the body of a lion, while in Greek mythology it had the face of a woman with breasts and wings, whose function was that of an inquisitive malevolent guardian and protector.

In the Greek myth the Sphinx was the guardian of the city of Thebes, thus anyone going there had to answer a riddle she posed and failure to answer correctly would lead to her tearing you to pieces and devouring you. Creon, the king of Thebes wanted to get rid of this wild guardian so he offered Oedipus his crown and his daughter if he could kill the Sphinx.

Accepting the challenge Oedipus confronted the Sphinx and was asked ?What has one voice, goes on four feet, on two feet and on three?. He answered ?Man, who crawls on all fours as a baby, then walks on two as an adult and walks with a stick in old age?. Because he answered the riddle correctly the Sphinx committed suicide by jumping off a cliff, and Oedipus subsequently married king Creon's daughter and was proclaimed King of Thebes by, for outsmarting the beast.

The Sphinx (from an African centred perspective) is a symbolic representation of the Sphincter, which is a muscular membrane that is actually a means of protecting the human body from harmful substances and intrusions. There are eight sphincters in the body of a man and nine in a woman. There are also Spiritual Sphincters in the Ears, Navel, Breasts and Genitalia of humans. When or if we ever achieve Spiritual maturity, we will be able to operate the spiritual Sphincters at will.

The fact that so many Negro Masonic lodges and Black fraternities (like Alpha Phi Alpha) identify themselves using Greek words highlights the fact that their Sphinx is a symbolic representation of their focus of guarding and protecting our White Supremacist status quo, as opposed to being a means of (both individually and collectively) guarding and protecting Africa and Africans (including African Americans) best interests and security throughout the World.

&nbs p;

An insight as to how effective the Boule have been was very discretely published (other references to the spy story, Nation 5/3/93; U.S. News and World Report 4/5/93) in the Memphis Commercial Appeal 3/12/93 about the Army Spy Network, which dates back to May 3, 1911. Newton D Baker (CFR) the Secretary of War ordered Lt Ralph von Deman to set up a Black Intelligence unit to monitor ?Negro Unrest?.

This spy unit was dominated by Boule members, because the Army had to recruit Negroes who they felt could be trusted. Emmet Scott (Boule) became Newton D Baker's special assistant because he used his charm and intelligence to persuade many Negroes to join the Armed forces (at a time when lynching PICNICS were still a regular feature of our oppression within the USA) and function as a part of this unit spying on our community's. He was later rewarded for his subservience and treachery by being made a Grand Sire Archon within the Boule.

The Boule controlled Black Press ran a story on Clifton Wharton-Former Defence

Secretary of State (CFR) and Trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation (Feb 4, 1994), highlighting his successes and promoting him as a role model for African Americans. What they didn't mention is the fact that Clifton Wharton had hosted a Boule convention at which David Rockefeller (just to highlight who these mindlessly AUTOMATON like Uncle Tom type Negroes look up to) was guest of honour.

A Boule membership book came up with some interesting names, like Dr Daniel Hale Williams (who performed the 1st Open Heart surgery), Ralph Bunch-Former UN Ambassador, Arthur Ashe, James Baldwin, Whitney Young-Urban League President, Martin Luther King Jr, Benjamin Mays, George Washington Carver and Carter G. Woodson (who have all died without mentioning or acknowledging their Masonic fraternal connections) .

Maynard Jackson-ex Mayor of Atlanta, Hank Aaron-baseball great, Tom Bradley-TV Personality, Dennis Archer-Mayor of Detroit, Elvin Big ?E? Hayes, Bill Cosby, Jesse Jackson, Earl Graves, John H Johnson, Douglas Wiler Johnnie Cochran, John Singleton, Lynn Swann, David Dinkins-ex Mayor of New York City are some of the more prominent members.

Steven Cokely says ?Yes the Boule is in your Town. Anywhere there are prominently successful, or Professional Blacks, Chances are they're in the Boule?.

We owe brother Cokely a huge debt for his tireless dedication and research to highlight to the masses of Nubian people the fact that most of the most materially successful peoples of African descent in the USA and the Diaspora have pledged their allegiance to the White Supremacist Racist controlled Masonic Lodges.

They are literally taking orders from our enemies as opposed to being at the forefront of instigating, orchestrating and funding our fight (to gain revenge and justice for our ancestors and their mutilated and murdered siblings suffering) for Socio-economic independence in every area of human activity.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 08:39:47 -0500

Djehuti,

Quite right -- it comes down to doing things by yourself, or preferably with a small coalition of like-minded progressives.

BTW, any physicists/electronic buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super- capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: Djehuti_Sundaka@ hotmail.com
Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Mahari

>

> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>

> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as > fast as I like.

>
> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even
> that took $12K out of MY pocket.
> http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html
>
> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the
> bankers.
> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.
> This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal > Reserve.
> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
>
> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul
points
> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
>
> Hotep
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> Congrats.
> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika > where so much gold is located.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > Dr. Winters
> >

> > Thank you for your response.
> >
> > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native
> American,
> > and other histories.
> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done
to
> > others to maintain their position.
> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I
am > > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is > nothing
> > else to learn in this area.
> >
> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
> from
> > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the
drug > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
instead
> to
> > become strong black men.
> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain
> > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL, > > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany
> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.
> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready to > do
> > more.
> >
> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives
> > to the worthless dollar.
> > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of

> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >
> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a
> portion of
> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on
> > our own commitments.
> >
> > Regards,
> >
> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
>>
>> Great points. If you let people get away with doing >> nothing--that's exactly what they do.
>>
>> Clyde
>>
>> --- kungfuhustle wrote:
>>
>>> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
>>> react.
>>> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
>>> Cuba,....and all
>>> other nations with black presence that are
>>> experiencing open hostility,
>>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
>>>
>>> What are we to do?
>>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
>>> years ago, yet we are
>>> even more deceived into playing their game and
>>> setting ourselves up for
>>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With
>>> everything, there is a
>>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the >>> choices we make.
>>>
>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>> vested we are into
>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.

>>>

>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.

>>>

>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.

>>>

>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.

>>>

>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.

>>>

>>> Meninarmer

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> -----Original Message-----

>>> From: Peter Gray

>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A

>>> MYTH.....

>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500

>>>

>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare

>>> these men persona

>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on

>>> Africa to fall? Thanks

>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>>>

>>> Peter

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> _____

>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>>> From: mahari@

>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000

>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A

>>> MYTH.....

>>>

>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in

>>> Afrika about Afrika

>>> and

>>> Afrikans.

>>> =====

>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,

>>> When?

>>>

>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe

>>>

>>> The Herald (Harare)

>>>

>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga

>>>

>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple

>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always

>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem
>>>
>> === message truncated ===
>>
>>
>> _____
>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>>
>

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

| 23768|2007-11-15 13:48:41|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Zimbabwe and Sarkozy|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
>

> (" I should make it clear that we do not accept that Britain has a special > responsibility to meet the costs of land purchase in Zimbabwe. We are a new > Government from diverse backgrounds without links to former colonial > interests. My own origins are Irish and as you know we were colonised not> colonisers. ")

> <http://www.swans.com/library/art9/ankomah5.html>

>

They should take the money then from the Crown properties, which does have responsibility, and which they recognize still recognize at least ceremonially as head of state.

>

> It may have been 25 years since Zimbabwe achieved 'independence', but I > challenge you to have a close look at all the lock-ins and special > privileges for whites, as well as the commitment to the useless 'willing > buyer, willing seller' land reform program. If this program had been kept in > place, there would be no significant land reform for another 200 years, if

> that.

>

The same thing happened in South Africa as we have discussed with land reform moving at a snail's pace.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23769|2007-11-15 14:03:55|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Yes, my brother, a Q, loved this book and lent it to me. Interesting.

-----Original Message-----

From: cristofori whitakara <boogie\_down\_black@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 11:17:09 -0800 (PST)

lawrence graham's book "our Kind of People" discusses this in his book...a few years ago he went undercover as a whiteman and wrote a book about the experience...this is after eddie murphy :)

kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

ALL

This is nothing new, our self defeating cling to tribalism and small group mentality. In normal times, this is acceptable. But what war can be won with small tribes lacking communications and cohesion with others? Not many.

This was what W.E.B DuBois preached with his, TEN. Their isolation made them susceptible external influence leading to the formation of the, Boule, and the elimination of true people centric organizations such as Garvey, Martin Luther, Malcohm X's Pan-African Organizations.

It didn't work then, as it will not work today. Or perhaps it did work, but just not for the people.

WHO ARE THE BOULE?

Steven Cokely has done research, which has exposed the fact that 90% of the (Greek orientated) Negro secret societies are very powerful (literally the eyes and ears within our communitys) tools of White Supremacy, as that is an integral function of their formation, funding and influence within the social Establishment. The leader and overall controllers of these traitors are THE BOULE AKA, SIGMA PI PHI fraternity, Inc.

They were founded May 15, 1904 in Pennsylvania making them the first Negro fraternity in the USA; as the first African American College fraternity (Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity Inc) was not founded until December 4th, 1906. The Boules organisational structure is based on copying that of Yale Universitys Skull & Bones secret Society. Its primary founder was Dr Henry Minton (along with Drs Eugene T Henson, Edwin Clarence Howard, Algernon Brashear Jackson, Robert Jones Abele and Richard John Warwick) of Philadelphia.

They are the so called TALENTED 10TH mentioned by W.E.B. Dubois who are affiliated through the Masonic Lodges they are brothers in to the COMMITTEE OF 300, a group of White Supremacist Caucasian Parasites and their AUTOMATON like lackeys of many hues; who (also call themselves the OLYMPIANS or Bilderbergers).

This diverse assortment of Mutant Albino Defectives [literally MAD Palefaces] see themselves as humanitys elite whilst actually being a particularly malignant cancer, who are literally bleeding the World to death by working very hard on fulfilling a Luciferian agenda (Humanitys spiritual destruction, which is enhanced by Wars, poverty and racial hatred), because Lucifer/Satan is both their mentor and God.

Because they (the Boule) are committed to maintaining the existing White Supremacist status quo, these Negroes (as opposed to truly conscious Africans) are projected and promoted into prominent positions, thus they are literally the wealthiest group of people of African ethnicity on the planet.

There are 4000+ of them but they only position themselves in total subservience to the Caucasian Elite; thus they are not allowed (and most wouldnt and dont think to) to do anything to help and support African Americans in the USA, or other ethnic Africans anywhere in the Diaspora and Africa itself.

In 1994 they were known to be affiliated to 101 chapters in the World, thus as well as being extremely wealthy they have strong political connections. However their perspectives and objectives are so brutally White Supremacist that they are known to have been involved in both the organising and commissioning of the operatives that performed the assassinations of both Malcom X and Martin Luther King; as well as many other acts of despicable treachery against progressive African (American) leaders and communities in both the USA and the Diaspora.

The American Dream is a nightmare for non-Caucasians in general,

African and Native Americans in particular. The theft of the Native Americans land added to the genocide inflicted on the majority of them means that as a country the USA can only ever be at best morally bankrupt.

In the scramble for looting the wealth and resources of Africa in the 1800s, the most powerful European nations literally carved Africa up on a map to create territories expedient to their needs, with no regard as to the African peoples (who were treated worse than the lower animals) already living there which is one of the main reasons many of these so called countries; are still having difficulty functioning as socially, ethnically and economically viable nations today.

On their plantations in the South of the USA, White Supremacist Caucasians moulded Africans into two distinct groups, house Negroes (who were Uncle Tom types who would do anything to other Blacks to protect their White Masters) and field Negroes (who tended to be more disruptive as they were real Africans, thus they were worked harder and treated worse).

This very efficient system of social control has evolved with the BOULE being the equivalent of house Negroes; in that in return for access to material wealth and prosperity, they're not allowed to help (or show interest in) the rest of us. Their successful acquisition of wealth within the system, supposedly highlighting that the endemic Institutional Racism that blocks our collective advancement does not exist, and that we should all SELL-OUT by using these Coloured/Negro/Black TRAITORS as role models.

The Boules New York chapter was founded by W.E.B. Dubois, who openly said The Boule was created to give the Black Professionals and financial elite guidance, but what he meant was under control i.e. away from the growing ranks of followers of Marcus Garvey and his ilk. From a White Supremacist perspective Garvey was a living nightmare in that his organisation had over a million members; which he had achieved without the aid of radio or TV (neither of which were widely available to African Americans or anyone at that time) or mass media advertising and promotion.

Dubois and the rest of this secret society were the strongest Black (Negro as opposed to African) opponents of Marcus Garvey, thus they utilised their prominent social status within our society to ridicule and undermine and eventually destroy him and his organisation.

Marcus Garvey whose innovative perspective made him the most influential thinker (Mahatma Ghandi and Ho Chi Min were inspired by and acted on his concept of Asia for the Asians, and Africa for the Africans) of the 20th century was constantly belittled and treacherously manipulated (by Boule agents) and attacked by these Negro parasites.

Marcus Garveys greatest and only crime; the conceptual design and actual construction of the largest most viably intelligent, strategically focused (for our long term socio-economic development) grassroots organisation of Africans in the USA (and the rest of the Diaspora).

Garvey had very naively publicised in great detail all of his plans to take as many Africans from the Americas to start a settlement in Liberia; which would sustain itself by helping the Liberian Africans to utilise their resources (Rubber and a range of minerals) for building their own industrial infra-structure up, instead of just selling the resources to the West at pitifully low prices.

He said If the Oil of Afrika is good for the Rockerfellers, and the Iron is good for the Carneige Trust; these minerals are good for us. Why should we allow Wall Street and the Capitalist Groups of Amerikka and Europe to exploit Africa when they refuse to give us a fair chance in any of the countries their ancestors enslaved us to build? Why shouldnt Africa give the world an African Rockerfeller, Rothschild and Henry Ford?

Marcus Garveys very logical agenda would have completely undermined the existing White Supremacist status quo had it been allowed to proceed, with Goodyear and US Steel and many other Multi-National Companies profitability totally compromised.

The Boule were ordered to destroy Garveys organisation by any means, because its success would have set the precedent that Africans (and all non Caucasians) could take control of their land and mineral wealth with a focus on using their resources for themselves. Capitalist White Supremacists like to have access to raw materials and resources (ofAfrica especially) cheaply (or for nothing) to generate the huge profits that enhances their dominance in all areas of human activity.

The meaning of the Boule Logo-Sphinx; their colours and more of their connections with Freemasonry.

Lets start with their Logo. In the background there appears to be a Sphinx, true but not truth. The Sphinx as built thousands of years ago by Africans in Kemet (Egypt) was called Her-em-akhet, which means Heru of the horizon, and has the face of the builder Khafre.

However any dictionary will explain that the Kemetian Sphinx had the face of a man with the body of a lion, while in Greek mythology it had the face of a woman with breasts and wings, whose function was that of an inquisitive malevolent guardian and protector.

In the Greek myth the Sphinx was the guardian of the city of Thebes, thus anyone going there had to answer a riddle she posed and failure to answer correctly would lead to her tearing you to pieces and devouring you. Creon, the king of Thebes wanted to get rid of this wild guardian so he offered Oedipus his crown and his daughter if he could kill the Sphinx.

Accepting the challenge Oedipus confronted the Sphinx and was asked What has one voice, goes on four feet, on two feet and on three. He answered Man, who crawls on all fours as a baby, then walks on two as an adult and walks with a stick in old age. Because he answered the riddle correctly the Sphinx committed suicide by jumping off a cliff, and Oedipus subsequently married king Creons daughter and was proclaimed King of Thebes by, for outsmarting the beast.

The Sphinx (from an African centred perspective) is a symbolic representation of the Sphincter, which is a muscular membrane that is actually a means of protecting the human body from harmful substances and intrusions. There are eight sphincters in the body of a man and nine in a woman. There are also Spiritual Sphincters in the Ears, Navel, Breasts and Genitalia of humans. When or if we ever achieve Spiritual maturity, we will be able to operate the spiritual Sphincters at will.

The fact that so many Negro Masonic lodges and Black fraternities (like Alpha Phi Alpha) identify themselves using Greek words highlights the fact that their Sphinx is a symbolic representation of their focus of guarding and protecting our White Supremacist status quo, as opposed to being a means of (both individually and collectively) guarding and protecting Africa and Africans (including African Americans) best interests and security throughout the World.

&nbs p;

An insight as to how effective the Boule have been was very discretely published (other references to the spy story, Nation 5/3/93; U.S. News and World Report 4/5/93) in the Memphis Commercial Appeal 3/12/93 about the Army Spy Network, which dates back to May 3, 1911. Newton D Baker (CFR) the Secretary of War ordered Lt Ralph von Deman to set up a Black Intelligence unit to monitor Negro Unrest.

This spy unit was dominated by Boule members, because the Army had to recruit Negroes who they felt could be trusted. Emmit Scott (Boule) became Newton D Bakers special assistant because he used his charm and intelligence to persuade many Negroes to join the Armed forces (at a time when lynching PICNICS were still a regular feature of our oppression within the USA) and function as a part of this unit spying on our communitys. He was later rewarded for his subservience and treachery by being made a Grand Sire Archon within the Boule.

The Boule controlled Black Press ran a story on Clifton Wharton-Former Defence Secretary of State (CFR) and Trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation (Feb 4, 1994), highlighting his successes and promoting him as a role model for African Americans. What they didnt mention is the fact that Clifton Wharton had hosted a Boule convention at which David Rockefeller (just to highlight who these mindlessly AUTOMATON like Uncle Tom type Negroes look up to) was guest of honour.

A Boule membership book came up with some interesting names, like Dr Daniel Hale Williams (who performed the 1st Open Heart surgery), Ralph Bunch-Former UN Ambassador, Arthur Ashe, James Baldwin, Whitney Young-Urban League President, Martin Luther King Jr, Benjamin Mays, George Washington Carver and Carter G. Woodson (who have all died without mentioning or acknowledging their Masonic fraternal connections).

Maynard Jackson-ex Mayor of Atlanta, Hank Aaron-baseball great, Tom Bradley-TV Personality, Dennis Archer-Mayor of Detroit, Elvin Big E Hayes, Bill Cosby, Jesse Jackson, Earl Graves, John H Johnson, Douglas Wiler Johnnie Cochran, John Singleton, Lynn Swann, David Dinkins-ex Mayor of New York City are some of the more prominent members.

Steven Cokely says Yes the Boule is in your Town. Anywhere there are prominently successful, or Professional Blacks, Chances are theyre in the Boule.

We owe brother Cokely a huge debt for his tireless dedication and research to highlight to the masses of Nubian people the fact that most of the most materially successful peoples of African descent in the USA and the Diaspora have pledged their allegiance to the White Supremacist Racist controlled Masonic Lodges.

They are literally taking orders from our enemies as opposed to being at the forefront of instigating, orchestrating and funding our fight (to gain revenge and justice for our ancestors and their mutilated and murdered siblings suffering) for Socio-economic independence in every area of human activity.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 08:39:47 -0500

Djehuti,

Quite right -- it comes down to doing things by yourself, or preferably with a small coalition of like-minded progressives.

BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself.
But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as
if
they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though
a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start
one
for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency
unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount
of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values
are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle
wrote:

>
> Mahari
>
> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>
> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change

their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as

> fast as I like.

>

> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but

it's

$1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even

> that took $12K out of MY pocket.

>

http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

>

> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the

> bankers.

> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.

> This site explains what the banks have done to create the

Federal

> Reserve.

> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.

> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>

>

> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron

Paul

points

> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.

>

> Hotep

> Meninarmer

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS

A

> MYTH.....

> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>
> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> Congrats.
> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to

paper-

> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem

that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of

Afrika

> where so much gold is located.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle

wrote:

> >

> > Dr. Winters

> >

> > Thank you for your response.

> >

> > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African,

native

> American,

> > and other histories.

> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done

to

> > others to maintain their position.

> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I

am > > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There

is

> nothing

> > else to learn in this area.

> >

> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys

> from > > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in

the

drug > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their

> actions,

> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them

instead

> to

> > become strong black men.

> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and

gain

> > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins

APL,

> > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music

> (Brittany

> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or

teaching.

> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among

their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many pf them state, they are ready

to > do

> > more.

> >

> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed

a

> business to

> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.

> >

> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as

> alternatives

> > to the worthless dollar.
> > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money

based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution

of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and

businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would

hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero

times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-

dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open

accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax

> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black

measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world

where
> the >> US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,

> Citi
>> Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
>>
>> It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even

a
> portion of
>> my ambition.
>>
>> No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely

depend
> on
>> our own commitments.
>>
>> Regards,
>>
>> MeniNarmer
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: clyde winters
>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST

IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
>>
>> Great points. If you let people get away with doing >> nothing--that's exactly what they do.
>>
>> Clyde
>>
>> --- kungfuhustle wrote:
>>
>>> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
>>> react.
>>> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,

>>> Cuba,...and all
>>> other nations with black presence that are
>>> experiencing open hostility,
>>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
>>>
>>> What are we to do?
>>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
>>> years ago, yet we are
>>> even more deceived into playing their game and
>>> setting ourselves up for
>>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With
>>> everything, there is a
>>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the >>> choices we make.
>>>
>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>> vested we are into
>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.

>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>>>

>>> Peter

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>

---

>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>>> From: mahari@

>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000

>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A

>>> MYTH.....

>>>

>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in

>>> Afrika about Afrika

>>> and

>>> Afrikans.

>>> =====

>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,

>>> When?

>>>

>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe

>>>

>>> The Herald (Harare)

>>>

>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga

>>>

>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple

>>> of months and two

>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that

>>> they revealed the

>>> battle

>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans

>>> encounter in the face of

>>> the

>>> stereotypical, and downright racist

>>> attitudes and opinions some

>>> in

>>> the white west have about us, as we strive

>>> for economic

>>> empowerment

>>> and emancipation.

>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's

>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem
>>>
>> === message truncated ===
>>
>>
>> _____
>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>>
>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger
Café Stop by today!

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.
| 23770|2007-11-15 14:08:43|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|
I'm not certain of what tech the moors deployed in this area.
On my last trip to Seville, I was very impressed by the wonderful architectural designs the moors erected. At the bull fights I couldn't help drawing an analogy and symbolism between Spain's fascination with The Running Of The Bulls, Bull fighting, and the moors.

Thanks. this should be an interesting area of research.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: cristofori whitakara <boogie\_down\_black@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 10:33:05 -0800 (PST)

in ivan van sertima's golden age of the moor he notes the lighted cities of al andalusia. was it wind technology that the moors used to have cordoba, seville ,etc illuminated. or were they oil lamps and the such?

kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

Peter

The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it requires a huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also, since it would depends on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the collection would be very random and costly. Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and cost effective.

You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps generate about a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized home, or approx. 2KW. The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of catching wind current.

Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale. Hence, the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer,

black computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television manufacturer is the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge,
resources,
or need, but rather because we lack the organization.

Meninarmer

BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas
of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development
would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com
Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself.
But
once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as
if
they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go
offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though
a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start
one
for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency
unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount
of

silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Mahari
>
> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>
> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change

their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as

> fast as I like.

>
> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but

it's

$1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even

> that took $12K out of MY pocket.

>

http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

>

> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the

> bankers.

> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.

> This site explains what the banks have done to create the

Federal

- > Reserve.
- > Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
- > <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
- >
- > The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron

Paul

points

- > out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
- >
- > Hotep
- > Meninarmer
- >
- > -----Original Message-----
- > From: Mahari Mengistu
- > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
- > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
- > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS

A

- > MYTH.....
- > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
- > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
- >
- > Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
- > Congrats.
- > Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to

paper-

- > based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem

that

- > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of

Afrika

- > where so much gold is located.
- > HTP,
- > Mahari
- >
- > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle

wrote:

- > >
- > > Dr. Winters
- > >
- > > Thank you for your response.

> >

> > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African,

native

> American,

> > and other histories.

> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done

to

> > others to maintain their position.

> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and

frankly, I

am

> > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There

is

> nothing

> > else to learn in this area.

> >

> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black

boys

> from

> > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in

the

drug > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their

> actions,

> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them

instead

> to

> > become strong black men.

> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and

gain

> > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins

APL,

> > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in

music

> (Brittany

> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or

teaching.

> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among

their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready

to > do

> > more.

> >

> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed

a

> business to

> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.

> >

> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as

> alternatives

> > to the worthless dollar.

> > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>

> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money

based on

> silver,

> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution

of

> silver

> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and

businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would

hopefully

> help

> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero

times

> within the

> > black community.

> >

> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-

dollar

> is

> > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?

> >

> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open

accounts

> in

> > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without

representation) and

> > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax

> dollars

> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black

measures.

> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world

where

> the

> > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,

> Citi

> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.

> >

> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even

a

> portion of

> > my ambition.

> >

> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely

depend

> on

> > our own commitments.

> >

> > Regards,

> >

> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST

IS A

> > MYTH.....
> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
> >
> > Great points. If you let people get away with doing > > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
> >
> > Clyde
> >
> > --- kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
> > > react.
> > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
> > > Cuba,....and all
> > > other nations with black presence that are
> > > experiencing open hostility,
> > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
> > >
> > > What are we to do?
> > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
> > > years ago, yet we are
> > > even more deceived into playing their game and
> > > setting ourselves up for
> > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With
> > > everything, there is a
> > > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the > > > choices we make.
> > >
> > > It seems the more educated we become, the more
> > > vested we are into
> > > maintaining status quo.
> > >
> > > We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
> > > We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
> > > distribution, Gangsta Rap,
> > > black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,

>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.

>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good >>> question.

>>>
>>> Meninarmer

>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>

>>> -----Original Message-----

>>> From: Peter Gray

>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....

>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500

>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>>>
>>> Peter

>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>

>>>

---

>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>>> From: mahari@

>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000

>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....

>>>
>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>> Afrika about Afrika
>>> and >>> Afrikans.

>>> =====

>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,

>>> When?
>>>
>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>
>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>
>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>
>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the

>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a >>> destiny for himself.

>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem

>>>
>> === message truncated ===

>>

>>

---

>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>>

>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger
Café Stop
by today!

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.
| 23771|2007-11-15 15:25:39|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|Re: KemMiou Videos|
Yeah I have the upmost respect for Theophile Obenga and Association Khepera.
Peace.

Divine

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> Peace Ta-Seti
>
> In my usual fashion of scouring the internet for good video > documentaries, I came across a gold mine in the organization and > collection of African centered video clips and documentaries. The only > disadvantage of this collection is that an overwhelming majority of > the videos are in French. They have very good lectures by Dr. Ivan Van > Sertima, Dr. Theophile Obenga, Molefi Kente Asante, Maulana Karenga > and many others. They have a whole collection on African origins of > civilizations and its information.
>
> I encourage those who have the time to check it out. All I can say is > that the French are doing it over there and I think we can use their > efforts as a model to revive and disseminate new findings. The > categories for the videos are as follows:
>
> Africa
> African Origins
> Afrocentricity
> Ancient Africa
> Apartheid
> Black Panther Party
> Colonization

- > Diaspora
- > Education & Conscientisation
- > Francophone
- > History
- > Imperial Africa
- > Kamitophobia
- > Kemet
- > Mythical Africa
- > Nation Of Islam
- > Our Warriors
- > Racism & Discrimination
- > Religion & Spirituality
- > Slavery
- > Tales, Art & theatre
- > White Ferocity
- > Ads & Promotional
- > Health
- > Music & Dance
- > Policy
- > Science & Technology
- > Society & Media
- > Sport & Entertainment
- >
- > KemMiou Video
- > <http://video.kemmiou.com/index.php>
- >
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
- >

| 23772|2007-11-15 15:36:13|cristofori whitakara|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

peace meniarmarmer i am here/hear to learn also. in his book the golden age of the moor he notes how the Moors also had pipes running from mountains creating a nice sewage system. im not an engineer so thats why i asked. peace

kungfuhustle wrote:

I'm not certain of what tech the moors deployed in this area.
On my last trip to Seville, I was very impressed by the wonderful architectural designs the moors erected. At the bull fights I couldn't help drawing an analogy and symbolism between Spain's fascination with The Running Of The Bulls, Bull fighting, and the moors.

Thanks. this should be an interesting area of research.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: cristofori whitakara <boogie\_down\_black@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 10:33:05 -0800 (PST)

in ivan van sertima's golden age of the moor he notes the lighted cities of al andalusia. was it wind technology that the moors used to have cordoba, seville ,etc illuminated. or were they oil lamps and the such?

kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

Peter

The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it requires a huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also, since it would depends on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the collection would be very random and costly. Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and cost effective.

You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps generate about a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized home, or approx. 2KW. The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of catching wind current.

Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale. Hence, the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer, black computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television manufacturer is the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge, resources, or need, but rather because we lack the organization.

Meninarmer

BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super- capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com
Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle

wrote:

>

> Mahari

>

> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>

> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as fast as I like.

>

> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's

$1.5M to

> license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even

> that took $12K out of MY pocket.

>

> http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

>

> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the

> bankers.

> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.

> This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal > Reserve.

> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.

> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>

>

> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points

> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.

>

> Hotep

> Meninarmer

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS

A

> MYTH.....

> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.

> Congrats.

> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-

> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika

> where so much gold is located.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>

>> Dr. Winters

>>

>> Thank you for your response.

>>

>> Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native

> American,

>> and other histories.

>> Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done

to

>> others to maintain their position.

>> IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I

am

>> tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is

> nothing

>> else to learn in this area.

>>

>> For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys

> from

>> the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the

drug

> > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them instead
> to
> > become strong black men.
> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain
> > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL, > > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany
> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.
> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready to > do
> > more.
> >
> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives
> > to the worthless dollar.
> > <http://www.kastlean.dhawke.com>
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times

> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-
dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black
measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >
> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even
a
> portion of
> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on
> > our own commitments.
> >
> > Regards,
> >
> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
>>
>> Great points. If you let people get away with doing >> nothing--that's exactly what they do.
>>
>> Clyde
>>
>> --- kungfuhustle wrote:
>>
>>> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
>>> react.
>>> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
>>> Cuba,....and all
>>> other nations with black presence that are
>>> experiencing open hostility,
>>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
>>>
>>> What are we to do?
>>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
>>> years ago, yet we are
>>> even more deceived into playing their game and
>>> setting ourselves up for
>>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With
>>> everything, there is a
>>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the >>> choices we make.
>>>
>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>> vested we are into
>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in

>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>

>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500

>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>>>
>>> Peter

>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>

>>> -----
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> From: mahari@
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....

>>>
>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>> Afrika about Afrika
>>> and >>> Afrikans.

>>> =====
>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
>>> When?

>>>
>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>
>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>
>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga

>>>
>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.

>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a >>> destiny for himself.

>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem

>>>
>> === message truncated ===

>>

>>

>> _____
>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>>

>

_____
Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger
Café Stop
by today!

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.
| 23773|2007-11-15 15:36:15|cristofori whitakara|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

the running of the bulls ceremony in connection with the moors makes me think of Osiris and the apis bull. this could be a stretch but the moors being caretakers of kemetic information allows me to make that stretch ....

kungfuhustle wrote:

I'm not certain of what tech the moors deployed in this area.
On my last trip to Seville, I was very impressed by the wonderful architectural designs the moors erected. At the bull fights I couldn't help drawing an analogy and symbolism between Spain's fascination with The Running Of The Bulls, Bull fighting, and the moors.

Thanks. this should be an interesting area of research.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: cristofori whitakara <boogie\_down\_black@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 10:33:05 -0800 (PST)

in ivan van sertima's golden age of the moor he notes the lighted cities of al andalusia. was it wind technology that the moors used to have cordoba, seville ,etc illuminated. or were they oil lamps and the such?

kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

Peter

The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it requires a huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also, since it would depends on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the collection

would be very random and costly.

Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and cost effective.

You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps generate about a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized home, or approx. 2KW.

The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of catching wind current.

Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale.

Hence,

the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer, black computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television manufacturer is the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge, resources, or need, but rather because we lack the organization.

Meninarmer

BTW, any physicists/electron ics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super- capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself.

But

once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as

if
they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Mahari

>

> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>

> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as > fast as I like.

>

> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's

$1.5M to

> license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even

> that took $12K out of MY pocket.

>

http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

>
> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the
> bankers.
> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.
> This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal
> Reserve.
> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
>
> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul
points
> out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
>
> Hotep
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS
A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> Congrats.
> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to
paper-> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem
that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika
> where so much gold is located.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle
wrote:
> >
> > Dr. Winters
> >

> > Thank you for your response.
> >
> > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African,
native
> American,
> > and other histories.
> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done
to
> > others to maintain their position.
> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I
am > > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There
is
> nothing
> > else to learn in this area.
> >
> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
> from > > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in
the
drug > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
instead
> to
> > become strong black men.
> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and
gain > > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins
APL,
> > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany > > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or
teaching.
> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among
their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready
to > do

> > more.
> >
> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed
a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives
> > to the worthless dollar.
> > http://www.kastlean\_dhawke.com
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money
based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution
of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and
businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero
times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-
dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black
measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where

> the >> US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
>> Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
>>
>> It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even
a
> portion of
>> my ambition.
>>
>> No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on
>> our own commitments.
>>
>> Regards,
>>
>> MeniNarmer
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: clyde winters
>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
>>
>> Great points. If you let people get away with doing >> nothing--that's exactly what they do.
>>
>> Clyde
>>
>> --- kungfuhustle wrote:
>>
>>> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
>>> react.
>>> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
>>> Cuba,....and all
>>> other nations with black presence that are
>>> experiencing open hostility,
>>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
>>>
>>> What are we to do?

>>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
>>> years ago, yet we are
>>> even more deceived into playing their game and
>>> setting ourselves up for
>>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With
>>> everything, there is a
>>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the >>> choices we make.
>>>
>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>> vested we are into
>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement

>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>>
>>> Peter
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>

>>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> From: mahari@
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>>
>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>> Afrika about Afrika
>>> and >>> Afrikans.
>>> =====
>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
>>> When?
>>>
>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>
>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>
>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>
>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas

>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,

>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem
>>>

>> === message truncated ===

>>

>>

>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>>

>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger

CaféStop

by today!

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

| 23774|2007-11-15 21:24:35|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is a continent of plantation-states created by the colonizers and managed by a succession of their lackies. The AU, like the OAU before it, is just a union of plantation-states that won't establish a common continental military defense, currency, or free trade and travel to bring about unity and continental prosperity.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

> I remember back at University when we studied the > Scramble for Africa. Issues of debt, tribalism and > etc. were all used as reasons for the take over of > Africa. It appears to me that if African leaders don't > watch out colonialism may rise its ugly head again.

>
> Clyde
>
>
>
> --- Peter Gray wrote:
>
>
>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>> these men persona non grata, what are we to do now
>> -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a most >> illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>
>> Peter
>>
>>
>> To: Ta_Seti@...:
>> mahari@...: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11
>> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika
>> about Afrika and >> Afrikans.=====Zimbabwe: Putting Zim
>> First - If Not Now, When?Published by the government
>> of Zimbabwe The Herald (Harare)Bishop Trevor >> ManhangaTWO incidents took place this year, a couple >> of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated
>> in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and
>> indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the >> stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and >> opinions some in the white west have about us, as we >> strive for economic empowerment and emancipation.The >> first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July >> 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the >> President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh
>> Anta Diop University.In what can only be described >> as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner
>> feelings of a very high standing public figure,

> > Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in > > part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man
> > has never really entered history."The African > > peasant who for centuries has lived according to the > > seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with > > nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time
> > via the endless repetition of the same actions and > > the same words."In this mentality, where everything
> > always starts over again, there is no place for > > human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this > > man never projects himself into the future, it never > > occurs to him to break free from the repetition and > > invent a destiny for himself."This, if you will > > allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's > > problem."Africa's challenge is to enter history more > > fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever
> > repeating and going over things, and to free itself
> > from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to > > realise that the golden age that it always harks
> > back to will never return, for the simple reason > > that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that > > its present is permeated with nostalgia for the > > paradise lost of its childhood."Africa's problem is > > that it judges its present according to a wholly > > imaginary notion of original purity that no one > > could ever hope to revive."Africa's challenge should > > not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make > > the present more bearable, but to invent a future
> > with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa
> > has a right to be happy just like all the other > > continents of the world."The deafening silence from
> > the African continent and its leadership in allowing > > Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on > > African soil, but also at an institution of higher > > learning, and get away with it has been most > > disturbing.How can the collective leadership of the > > African continent, have remained silent in the face > > of this very provocative and insulting opinion of > > Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its > > people is without empirical validation, downright > > condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with > > the contempt it deserves.One would have expected at
> > the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist
> > remarks from none other than the AU, or other > > regional African bodies such as Sadc or Ecowas. I > > have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of

> > rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans.If > > there has been a response, then perhaps I have not > > seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's > > racist diatribe have been few and far between, and
> > among the few I have encountered is one in the > > October issue of New African magazine, where the > > editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's > > speech said:"I don't know about you just now, but I > > am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing > > here with a confused man with a confused speech.
> > Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors
> > doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those > > glorious empires of yore right across the continent?
> > When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in > > Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's > > European ancestors were still living in caves. They > > didn't know what a window was! And he has the > > temerity to insult us and our ancestors?"There is
> > doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so,
> > because such outright disdain for Africa and its > > people cannot be left unchallenged.What Sarkozy
> > needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants
> > of these "African peasants who live by the seasons"
> > were part of France's World Cup winning team, when > > France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory
> > serves me right, the team looked like a typical > > African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of > > Caucasian faces. So much for people who are > > supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to
> > the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by > > Sarkozy.The second incident took place in the USA,
> > and relates to an article written by an eminent
> > scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson, > > who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was
> > the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on > > Long Island New York, USA, resigned after > > controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting
> > black people are less intelligent than whites.Watson
> > (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering
> > the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour
> > Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it > > into one of the world's leading genetics research > > institutes. His problems, which led to his > > retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as > > having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of > > London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the > > prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies > > are based on the fact that their intelligence is the > > same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not > > really."To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour > > Laboratory through their president, said Watson's > > comments have no connection with research activity

> > at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently
> > disagree" with Watson's statements.The lab moved > > swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative > > responsibilities as chancellor leading to his > > subsequent resignation.Why do I make reference to > > these two incidents that have taken place on two > > continents by two different people, under two > > different conditions?Reference must be made to them,
> > because they reveal the underlying hostile and > > racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with > > the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and > > Watson are not ordinary run of the mill,
> > intellectually challenged people. On the contrary,
> > one is the president of a key industrialised Western > > European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate
> > and respected scientist.The question must be asked
> > then, if people of such high standing and > > respectability in western society have such a > > deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the > > problem we face is much greater than we ever > > imagined.Theses were not off the cuff, slip of the > > tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were > > well thought out and delivered, and even if there is > > ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended > > damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no > > matter how vigorous an attempt to do so.I mention
> > these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because > > it is imperative that there is an understanding by > > all of us, that we should work to prove that the two > > gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments
> > are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner > > that provides them with ammunition, to buttress
> > their racist stereotypical opinions.There are three > > things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that > > will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted > > opinions.The first is to ensure that the > > agricultural season currently upon us yields the > > fruits we anticipate and desperately need.It is not > > too late to make the clarion call to all those on > > agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of > > the land reform programme, or have always been on > > the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch > > of available arable land, and make this the, "mother > > of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people > > wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts

> > as Sarkozy and Watson wrong. We must show that we can > > use the land we have. We can make use of the farming > > implements that have just been delivered to some of > > our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our > > African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser > > mortals, that we are industrious, responsible > > people. We must be constantly aware that there are > > many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe > > that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, > > (both qualitatively and quantitatively), that the > > white former farmers used to. It is for this reason > > that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of > > liberation, when those who fought for the > > emancipation of the nation reminded each other in > > the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy:
> > "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound)." That is the > > reality we face today and every one of us must not > > flinch from the task ahead. The second is to ensure > > that the up coming national elections are conducted > > in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open > > and transparent manner. Those who cannot bring > > themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can > > solve their own problems, (and we are well on our > > way
> === message truncated ===

>
>
>
>
>

---

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>

| 23775|2007-11-16 00:24:58|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Interesting point you make about the bulls. In the book "Who Were the Minoans....?" the author says that bullfighting is version of a very ancient Afrikan ritual, a cultural remnant of the European Afrikans.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

- >
- > I'm not certain of what tech the moors deployed in this area.
- > On my last trip to Seville, I was very impressed by the wonderful
- > architectural designs the moors erected. At the bull fights I
- > couldn't
- > help drawing an analogy and symbolism between Spain's fascination
- > with
- > The Running Of The Bulls, Bull fighting, and the moors.
- >
- > Thanks. this should be an interesting area of research.
- >
- > Meninarmer
- >
- >
- > -----Original Message-----
- > From: cristofori whitakara
- > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
- > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
- > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
- > MYTH.....
- > Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 10:33:05 -0800 (PST)
- >
- > in ivan van sertima's golden age of the moor he notes the lighted
- > cities
- > of al andalusia. was it wind technology that the moors used to have
- > cordoba, seville ,etc illuminated. or were they oil lamps and the
- > such?
- >
- > kungfuhustle wrote:
- >
- > Peter
- >
- > The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it
- > requires a
- > huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also,
- > since it
- > would depends on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the
- > collection
- > would be very random and costly.
- > Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and
- > cost
- > effective.
- >

> You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps > generate about > a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized > home, or > approx. 2KW.
> The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of > catching wind current.
>
> Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale.
> Hence,
> the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer,
> black > computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television
> manufacturer is
> the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge,
> resources,
> or need, but rather because we lack the organization.
>
> Meninarmer
>
> BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas
> of > possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of > lightning, for > example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development
> would > completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating > fossil > fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.
>
> Peter
>
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: Djehuti_Sundaka@...
> Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A
> MYTH.....
>
> Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself.

> But

> once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon
as

> if > they were always there for you.

>

> A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go
> offshore in > both protecting assets and building institutions and even though

> a > minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start

> one

> for around $1,000.

>

> As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but
the > standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a

> currency

> unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount

> of > silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when > values

> are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless
with > inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle

> wrote:

> >

> > Mahari

> >

> > Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other > activities. :(

> >

> > I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to > change

> their > > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not > progressing as

> > fast as I like.

> >
> > I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but
> it's
> $1.5M to > > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my > own. Even
> > that took $12K out of MY pocket.
> >
>
http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html
> >
> > It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by > aiding the
> > bankers.
> > Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.
> > This site explains what the banks have done to create the > Federal
> > Reserve.
> > Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
> > <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
> >
> > The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron
> Paul
> points
> > out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
> >
> > Hotep
> > Meninarmer
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS
> A
> > MYTH.....
> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
> > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
> >
> > Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> > Congrats.

> > Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based
to
> paper-> > based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem
> that > > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status
of > Afrika
> > where so much gold is located.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle
> wrote:
> > >
> > > Dr. Winters
> > >
> > > Thank you for your response.
> > >
> > > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African,
> native
> > American,
> > > and other histories.
> > > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites
have > done
> to
> > > others to maintain their position.
> > > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and > frankly, I
> am > > > tired of committing additional energies in repetition.
There
> is
> > nothing
> > > else to learn in this area.
> > >
> > > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young
black > boys
> > from > > > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing
in
> the
> drug > > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications

of
> their
> > actions,
> > > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
> instead
> > to
> > > become strong black men.
> > > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and
> gain > > > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins
> APL,
> > > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in > music
> > (Brittany > > > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or
> teaching.
> > > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among
> their > > > friends and peers, are alone. Many pf them state, they are > ready
> to > > do
> > > more.
> > >
> > > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed
> a
> > business to
> > > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> > >
> > > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver
as
> > alternatives
> > > to the worthless dollar.
> > > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>
> > > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money
> based on
> > silver,
> > > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution

> of
> > silver
> > > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and
> businesses will > > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would > hopefully
> > help
> > > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero
> times
> > within the
> > > black community.
> > >
> > > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver > half-
> dollar
> > is
> > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> > >
> > > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
> accounts
> > in > > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without > representation) and > > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using
the > tax
> > dollars
> > > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black
> measures.
> > > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the > world
> where
> > the > > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of > America,
> > Citi
> > > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> > >
> > > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even
> a > > portion of
> > > my ambition.
> > >

>>> No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely > depend
>> on
>>> our own commitments.
>>>
>>> Regards,
>>>
>>> MeniNarmer
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: clyde winters
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
> IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
>>>
>>> Great points. If you let people get away with doing >>> nothing--that's exactly what they do.
>>>
>>> Clyde
>>>
>>> --- kungfuhustle wrote:
>>>
>>>> If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
>>>> react.
>>>> However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
>>>> Cuba,....and all
>>>> other nations with black presence that are
>>>> experiencing open hostility,
>>>> denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
>>>>
>>>> What are we to do?
>>>> We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
>>>> years ago, yet we are
>>>> even more deceived into playing their game and
>>>> setting ourselves up for
>>>> defeat and elimination then ever before. With
>>>> everything, there is a
>>>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the >>>> choices we make.
>>>>

>>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>>> vested we are into
>>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>>
>>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>>> support it financially,
>>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>>> intentional
>>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>>> development of future
>>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>>
>>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>>> energies focused on
>>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>>> picketing,
>>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>>> who do not have our
>>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>>
>>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>>> accountable.
>>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>>> as the promises he's
>>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>>> and not because of
>>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>>> accountable when they
>>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>>> sold their people's
>>>> interests for financial reward.
>>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>>> in developing,
>>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>>> promote of blacks

>>>> worldwide.
>>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>>> and how it is used
>>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>>
>>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>>> did not allow it.
>>>> Examine your choices.
>>>>
>>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>>> question.
>>>>
>>>> Meninarmer
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> -----Original Message-----
>>>> From: Peter Gray
>>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>>> MYTH.....
>>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>>
>>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>>> these men persona
>>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>>>
>>>> Peter
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>

---

>>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>>> From: mahari@
>>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

>>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>>> MYTH.....
>>>>
>>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>>> Afrika about Afrika
>>>> and >>>> Afrikans.
>>>> =====
>>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
>>>> When?
>>>>
>>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>>
>>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>>
>>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>>
>>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>>> of months and two
>>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that
>>>> they revealed the
>>>> battle
>>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>>> encounter in the face of
>>>> the
>>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>>> attitudes and opinions some
>>>> in
>>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>>> for economic
>>>> empowerment
>>>> and emancipation.
>>>>
>>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>>> and
>>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>>> of France Nicolas
>>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>>
>>>> In what can only be described as a most >>>> unfortunate revelation
>>>> of the
>>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>>> had

>>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>>> "The tragedy of
>>>> Africa
>>>> is that the African man has never really
>>>> entered history.
>>>>
>>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>>> lived according to
>>>> the
>>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>>> with nature, has only
>>>> known
>>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>>> repetition of the
>>>> same
>>>> actions and the same words.
>>>>
>>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>>> starts over again,
>>>> there
>>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>>> idea of
>>>> progress...this
>>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>>> it never occurs to
>>>> him to
>>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>>> destiny for himself.
>>>>
>>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>>> to say it, is >>>> Africa's
>>>> problem.
>>>>
>>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>>> fully.... Africa's >>>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>>> going over things,
>>>> and to
>>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>>> renewal. It is to
>>>> realise
>>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>>> back to will never
>>>> return,
>>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem

>>>
>>> === message truncated ===
>>>
>>>

---

>>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
>>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>>>
>>
>
>

---

> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger
> Café. Stop
> by today!
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.
>

| 23776|2007-11-16 05:22:59|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A MYTH.....|

The Moors did a lot more tthan modernise Iberian agriculture with terracing ,etc. THeY also initiated (or augmented) the famous steel making industry of Toledo, where some of the finest swords were made. Not to mention the countless literary and scientific works burned by Cardinal Jimenez as "works of the Devil" in 1492 (ref. van Sertima).

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: boogie_down_black@yahoo.com
Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 14:11:50 -0800
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

peace meniarmarmer i am here/hear to learn also. in his book the golden age of the moor he notes how the Moors also had pipes running from mountains creating a nice sewage system. im not an engineer so thats why i asked. peace

kungfuhustle wrote:

I'm not certain of what tech the moors deployed in this area.

On my last trip to Seville, I was very impressed by the wonderful architectural designs the moors erected. At the bull fights I couldn't help drawing an analogy and symbolism between Spain's fascination with The Running Of The Bulls, Bull fighting, and the moors.

Thanks. this should be an interesting area of research.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: cristofori whitakara <boogie\_down\_black@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A

MYTH.....

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 10:33:05 -0800 (PST)

in ivan van sertima's golden age of the moor he notes the lighted cities of al andalusia. was it wind technology that the moors used to have cordoba, seville ,etc illuminated. or were they oil lamps and the such?

kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

Peter

The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it requires a huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also, since it would depends on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the collection would be very random and costly.

Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and cost effective.

You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps generate about a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized home, or

approx. 2KW.

The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of catching wind current.

Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale.

Hence,

the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer, black

computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television manufacturer is

the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge, resources, or need, but rather because we lack the organization.

Meninarmer

BTW, any physicists/electron ics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super- capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself.

But

once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one

for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Mahari
>
> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(
>
> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as > fast as I like.
>
> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even > that took $12K out of MY pocket.
>
> http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html
>
> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the
> bankers.
> Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.
> This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal > Reserve.
> Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.

> <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
>
> The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
>
> Hotep
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> Congrats.
> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika where so much gold is located.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > Dr. Winters
> >
> > Thank you for your response.
> >
> > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native American, and other histories.
> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done to

> > others to maintain their position.
> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I
am > > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There
is
> nothing
> > else to learn in this area.
> >
> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
> from > > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in
the
drug > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
instead
> to
> > become strong black men.
> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and
gain > > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins
APL,
> > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany > > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or
teaching.
> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among
their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready
to > do
> > more.
> >
> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed
a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives

> > to the worthless dollar.
> > <http://www.kastlean dhawke.com>
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money
based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution
of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and
businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero
times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-
dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black
measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >
> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even
a
> portion of

> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on
> > our own commitments.
> >
> > Regards,
> >
> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A
> > MYTH.....
> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
> >
> > Great points. If you let people get away with doing > > nothing--that' s exactly what they do.
> >
> > Clyde
> >
> > --- kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
> > > react.
> > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
> > > Cuba,...and all
> > > other nations with black presence that are
> > > experiencing open hostility,
> > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
> > >
> > > What are we to do?
> > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
> > > years ago, yet we are
> > > even more deceived into playing their game and
> > > setting ourselves up for
> > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With
> > > everything, there is a
> > > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the > > > choices we make.
> > >

>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>> vested we are into
>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks

>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>>
>>> Peter
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
-----
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> From: mahari@
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A

>>> MYTH.....
>>>
>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>> Afrika about Afrika
>>> and
>>> Afrikans.
>>> ===== =
>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
>>> When?
>>>
>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>
>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>
>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>
>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:

>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem

> > >
> > ==== message truncated ====
> >
> >
> > _____
> > Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
> > <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
> >
>

_____
Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger
Café Stop
by today!

_____
Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.

_____
Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.

---

Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You! Get 'em!

| 23777|2007-11-16 05:37:00|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A MYTH.....|

I couldn't agree more, Djehuti.

Without common military defense, free trade and travel throughout the continent (and diaspora too), prospects for an economically viable continent seem pretty dim. I can't help recalling Diop's Black Africa: The Cultural, Economic and Political Basis for a Federated State (if that's the correct title).

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: Djehuti_Sundaka@hotmail.com
Date: Fri, 16 Nov 2007 05:24:34 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is a continent of plantation-states created by the colonizers and managed by a succession of their lackies. The AU, like the OAU before it, is just a union of plantation-states that won't establish a common continental military defense, currency, or free trade and travel to bring about unity and continental prosperity.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

> I remember back at University when we studied the > Scramble for Africa. Issues of debt, tribalism and > etc. were all used as reasons for the take over of > Africa. It appears to me that if African leaders don't > watch out colonialism may rise its ugly head again.

>

> Clyde

>

>

>

> --- Peter Gray wrote:

>

>>

>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>> these men persona non grata, what are we to do now
>> -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a most >> illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>>

>> Peter

>>

>>

>> To: Ta_Seti@...:

>> mahari@...: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11

>> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>>

>>

>>

>>

>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in Afrika
>> about Afrika and

>> Afrikans.==== ===== =Zimbabwe: Putting Zim

>> First - If Not Now, When?Published by the government

> > of Zimbabwe The Herald (Harare) Bishop Trevor > > Manhanga TWO incidents took place this year, a couple > > of months and two continents apart, yet interrelated
> > in that they revealed the battle we Africans, and
> > indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the > > stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes and > > opinions some in the white west have about us, as we > > strive for economic empowerment and emancipation. The > > first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on July > > 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the > > President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the Cheikh
> > Anta Diop University. In what can only be described > > as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner
> > feelings of a very high standing public figure, > > Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans, in > > part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African man
> > has never really entered history." "The African > > peasant who for centuries has lived according to the > > seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with > > nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time
> > via the endless repetition of the same actions and > > the same words." "In this mentality, where everything
> > always starts over again, there is no place for > > human adventure nor for any idea of progress... this > > man never projects himself into the future, it never > > occurs to him to break free from the repetition and > > invent a destiny for himself." "This, if you will > > allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's > > problem." "Africa's challenge is to enter history more > > fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever
> > repeating and going over things, and to free itself
> > from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to > > realise that the golden age that it always harks
> > back to will never return, for the simple reason > > that it never existed.... Africa's problem is that > > its present is permeated with nostalgia for the > > paradise lost of its childhood." "Africa's problem is > > that it judges its present according to a wholly > > imaginary notion of original purity that no one > > could ever hope to revive." "Africa's challenge should > > not be to invent a past, however mythical; to make > > the present more bearable, but to invent a future
> > with the means it has at its disposal.... For Africa
> > has a right to be happy just like all the other > > continents of the world." "The deafening silence from
> > the African continent and its leadership in allowing

> > Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not only on > > African soil, but also at an institution of higher > > learning, and get away with it has been most > > disturbing. How can the collective leadership of the > > African continent, have remained silent in the face > > of this very provocative and insulting opinion of > > Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its > > people is without empirical validation, downright > > condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed with > > the contempt it deserves. One would have expected at > > the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist
> > remarks from none other than the AU, or other > > regional African bodies such as SADC or ECOWAS. I > > have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell of > > rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans. If > > there has been a response, then perhaps I have not > > seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's > > racist diatribe have been few and far between, and
> > among the few I have encountered is one in the > > October issue of New African magazine, where the > > editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's > > speech said: "I don't know about you just now, but I > > am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are dealing > > here with a confused man with a confused speech.
> > Africa has no glorious past? What were our ancestors
> > doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those > > glorious empires of yore right across the continent?
> > When our ancestors had built the great pyramids in > > Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan), Sarkozy's > > European ancestors were still living in caves. They > > didn't know what a window was! And he has the > > temerity to insult us and our ancestors?" There is > > doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so,
> > because such outright disdain for Africa and its > > people cannot be left unchallenged. What Sarkozy > > needs to ask himself is how many of the descendants
> > of these "African peasants who live by the seasons"
> > were part of France's World Cup winning team, when > > France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory
> > serves me right, the team looked like a typical > > African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of > > Caucasian faces. So much for people who are > > supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners to
> > the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused by > > Sarkozy. The second incident took place in the USA,
> > and relates to an article written by an eminent

> > scholar and Nobel laureate James D. Watson. Watson, > > who up until his retirement on October 25 2007, was
> > the chancellor of Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on > > Long Island New York, USA, resigned after > > controversy erupted over comments he made suggesting > > black people are less intelligent than whites. Watson > > (79) who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for discovering
> > the structure of DNA, joined Cold Spring Harbour
> > Laboratory as director in 1968 and helped build it > > into one of the world's leading genetics research > > institutes. His problems, which led to his > > retirement, arose from comments he was quoted as > > having said on October 14 in the Sunday Times of > > London, that he is "inherently gloomy about the > > prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies
> > are based on the fact that their intelligence is the > > same as ours -- where-as all the testing says, not > > really." To their credit, Cold Spring Harbour > > Laboratory through their president, said Watson's > > comments have no connection with research activity
> > at the lab, whose faculty members "vehemently > > disagree" with Watson's statements. The lab moved > > swiftly to suspend Watson's administrative > > responsibilities as chancellor leading to his > > subsequent resignation. Why do I make reference to > > these two incidents that have taken place on two > > continents by two different people, under two > > different conditions? Reference must be made to them, > > because they reveal the underlying hostile and > > racist attitudes we face as Africans in dealing with > > the global village of the 21st century. Sarkozy and > > Watson are not ordinary run of the mill,
> > intellectually challenged people. On the contrary,
> > one is the president of a key industrialised Western > > European nation, the other an eminent Nobel laureate > > and respected scientist. The question must be asked > > then, if people of such high standing and > > respectability in western society have such a > > deprecating opinion of Africa and Africans, then the > > problem we face is much greater than we ever > > imagined. These were not off the cuff, slip of the > > tongue comments. On the contrary, the comments were > > well thought out and delivered, and even if there is > > ever an attempt to withdraw them, the intended > > damage has been done, and cannot be retracted, no > > matter how vigorous an attempt to do so. I mention

> > these two incidents in relation to Zimbabwe because > > it is imperative that there is an understanding by > > all of us, that we should work to prove that the two > > gentleman, and others who may share their sentiments
> > are wrong. We must not conduct ourselves in a manner > > that provides them with ammunition, to buttress > > their racist stereotypical opinions. There are three > > things I believe we need to do as Zimbabweans that > > will serve to counter Sarkozy and Watson's bigoted > > opinions. The first is to ensure that the > > agricultural season currently upon us yields the > > fruits we anticipate and desperately need. It is not > > too late to make the clarion call to all those on > > agricultural land whether they be beneficiaries of > > the land reform programme, or have always been on > > the land, A1 or A2 farmers, to fully use every inch > > of available arable land, and make this the, "mother > > of all agricultural seasons." We must prove people > > wherever they may be, who harbour the same thoughts
> > as Sarkozy and Watson wrong. We must show that we can > > use the land we have. We can make use of the farming > > implements that have just been delivered to some of > > our farmers. We owe it to ourselves and indeed our > > African compatriots, to show that we are not lesser > > mortals, that we are industrious, responsible > > people. We must be constantly aware that there are > > many more Sarkozy's and Watson's who firmly believe > > that we are incapable producing the kinds of crops, > > (both qualitatively and quantitatively) , that the > > white former farmers used to. It is for this reason > > that we must turn to the rallying cry of the war of > > liberation, when those who fought for the > > emancipation of the nation reminded each other in > > the face of a well armed and intransigent enemy:
> > "Iwe neni tine basa (we are duty-bound). "That is the > > reality we face today and every one of us must not > > flinch from the task ahead. The second is to ensure > > that the up coming national elections are conducted > > in an atmosphere free of violence, and in an open > > and transparent manner. Those who cannot bring > > themselves to face the reality that Zimbabweans can > > solve their own problems, (and we are well on our > > way
> === message truncated ===
>
>

>
>

---

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.
> Make Yahoo! your homepage.
> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.
Play Now!

| 23778|2007-11-16 05:37:11|Maurice Humphrey|Re: Wonderful Ethiopians of the Cushite Empire part II|

Hotep everyone!!

I have been following the dialogue on Ta Seti for sometime now and I find it very informative. This is my first time initiating a dialogue. My name is Neo and I attended Baba Asa's lecture sometime ago and he mentioned that there is a second part to Ms. Houston's "Wonderful Ethiopians of the Ancient Cushite Empire". He said the book would be published soon. Does anyone know anything about this ? And if so do you know if the book has been published and if it is available for purchase?

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

| 23779|2007-11-16 05:40:56|clyde winters|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

--- Djehuti Sundaka <Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com>
wrote:

> Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is a > continent of > plantation-states created by the colonizers and > managed by a > succession of their lackies. The AU, like the OAU
> before it, is just > a union of plantation-states that won't establish a > common > continental military defense, currency, or free
> trade and travel to > bring about unity and continental prosperity.
>
> Djehuti Sundaka
>

Hi

What you have written is cold blooded. But I must agree.

Clyde

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters

> wrote:

>>

>> I remember back at University when we studied the >> Scramble for Africa. Issues of debt, tribalism and

>> etc. were all used as reasons for the take over of >> Africa. It appears to me that if African leaders > don't >> watch out colonialism may rise its ugly head

> again.

>>

>> Clyde

>>

>>

>>

>> --- Peter Gray wrote:

>>

>>>

>>> Well, if African political leaders will not > declare

>>> these men persona non grata, what are we to do

> now

>>> -- just wait on Africa to fall? Thanks for a > most >>> illuminating editorial article, Mahari.

>>>

>>> Peter

>>>

>>>

>>> To: Ta_Seti@...:

>>> mahari@...: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11

>>> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in

> Afrika

> > > about Afrika and > > > Afrikans.=====Zimbabwe: Putting > Zim
> > > First - If Not Now, When?Published by the > government
> > > of Zimbabwe The Herald (Harare)Bishop Trevor > > > ManhangaTWO incidents took place this year, a > couple > > > of months and two continents apart, yet > interrelated
> > > in that they revealed the battle we Africans,
> and
> > > indeed Zimbabweans encounter in the face of the > > > stereotypical, and downright racist attitudes
> and > > > opinions some in the white west have about us, > as we > > > strive for economic empowerment and > emancipation.The > > > first incident took place in Dakar Senegal on > July
> > > 20 2007 and relates to the speech given by the > > > President of France Nicolas Sarkozy at the > Cheikh
> > > Anta Diop University.In what can only be > described > > > as a most unfortunate revelation of the inner
> > > feelings of a very high standing public figure, > > > Sarkozy had this to say of Africa and Africans,
> in > > > part: "The tragedy of Africa is that the African > man
> > > has never really entered history."The African > > > peasant who for centuries has lived according to
> the
> > > seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with > > > nature, has only known the eternal renewal of
> time
> > > via the endless repetition of the same actions
> and > > > the same words."In this mentality, where > everything
> > > always starts over again, there is no place for > > > human adventure nor for any idea of
> progress...this > > > man never projects himself into the future, it

> never >>> occurs to him to break free from the repetition
> and
>>> invent a destiny for himself."This, if you will >>> allow a friend of Africa to say it, is Africa's >>> problem."Africa's challenge is to enter history
> more
>>> fully.... Africa's challenge is to stop forever >>> repeating and going over things, and to free > itself
>>> from the myth of the eternal renewal. It is to >>> realise that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never return, for the simple reason >>> that it never existed.... Africa's problem is > that
>>> its present is permeated with nostalgia for the >>> paradise lost of its childhood."Africa's problem
> is >>> that it judges its present according to a wholly >>> imaginary notion of original purity that no one >>> could ever hope to revive."Africa's challenge > should >>> not be to invent a past, however mythical; to > make >>> the present more bearable, but to invent a > future >>> with the means it has at its disposal.... For > Africa
>>> has a right to be happy just like all the other >>> continents of the world."The deafening silence
> from >>> the African continent and its leadership in > allowing >>> Sarkozy to make such a derogatory speech not > only on >>> African soil, but also at an institution of > higher >>> learning, and get away with it has been most >>> disturbing.How can the collective leadership of
> the >>> African continent, have remained silent in the > face
>>> of this very provocative and insulting opinion
> of >>> Africans? Sarkozy's synopsis of Africa and its >>> people is without empirical validation, > downright >>> condescendingly racist, and must be dismissed

> with >>> the contempt it deserves. One would have expected
> at
>>> the very least a rebuttal of Sarkozy's racist >>> remarks from none other than the AU, or other >>> regional African bodies such as Sadc or Ecowas.
> I
>>> have been surprised at the lack of a groundswell
> of >>> rebuke from continental and Diaspora Africans. If >>> there has been a response, then perhaps I have > not
>>> seen it. Voices of indignation against Sarkozy's >>> racist diatribe have been few and far between,
> and
>>> among the few I have encountered is one in the >>> October issue of New African magazine, where the >>> editor Baffour Ankomah in response to Sarkozy's >>> speech said: "I don't know about you just now, > but I >>> am doing my utmost to calm down! For we are > dealing
>>> here with a confused man with a confused speech.
>>> Africa has no glorious past? What were our > ancestors
>>> doing in Egypt then? And Nubia? And all those >>> glorious empires of yore right across the > continent?
>>> When our ancestors had built the great pyramids
> in >>> Egypt and Nubia (today's northern Sudan),
> Sarkozy's
>>> European ancestors were still living in caves.
> They
>>> didn't know what a window was! And he has the >>> temerity to insult us and our ancestors?" There
> is
>>> doubt that Ankomah is livid and rightfully so,
>>> because such outright disdain for Africa and its >>> people cannot be left unchallenged. What Sarkozy >>> needs to ask himself is how many of the > descendants >>> of these "African peasants who live by the > seasons"

> > > were part of France's World Cup winning team,
> when > > > France hosted the soccer showcase? If my memory
> > > serves me right, the team looked like a typical > > > African Cup of Nations team, with a couple of > > > Caucasian faces. So much for people who are > > > supposedly locked in a time warp and prisoners
> to > > > the "seasons" according to the gospel espoused
> by
>

=== message truncated ===

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23780|2007-11-16 05:47:09|Peter Gray|Re: Zimbabwe and Sarkozy|

Thanks, Alex, for that expose on Zimbabwe. It seems there are in fact two sides to the Mugabe/Zimbabwe coin.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: avdeelen@wanadoo.nl

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 20:33:39 +0100

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Zimbabwe and Sarkozy

On Sarkozy,

"The African peasant who for centuries has lived according to the seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony with nature, has only known the eternal renewal of time via the endless repetition of the same actions and the same words.

"In this mentality, where everything always starts over again, there is no place for human adventure nor for any idea of progress...this man never projects himself into the future, it never occurs to him to break free from the repetition and invent a destiny for himself. "

Since when have the french let ignorance about the facts stand in the way of sweeping generalisations?

So Sarkozy is ignorant about Africa - so what? And is he not really projecting his own ideas about Corsica, or wherever he is from?

Mahari,

"I am not surprised at their lack of vigorous opposition. In fact, it fits all too well into their most recent collective personalities. I am on the verge of being in favor of Afrikan-Americans, who have consistently backed them, telling them that they had better get it together. It has been about 25 years since they acquired their independence. And even though I know they are still economically enslaved by europeans they could at least show some balls and have some faith in their own potential and the potential of their people. Their people are quickly losing faith in them as they are leaving in droves. HTP Mahari "

Just a few things. The government of Zimbabwe is doing all kinds of things to start becoming economically independent from both the west and white landownership. There is a massive effort underway to start indigenising agriculture - something that basically couldn't happen until 10 years ago, because of the agreements made by ZANU-PF with the ANC in South Africa, which only became independent in 1994. Even then, it was the (New Labour) British government which unilaterally decided to stop funding the 'willing buyer, willing seller' land reform program in 1997, in Claire Short's infamous letter. Which is what started this whole thing off.

(" I should make it clear that we do not accept that Britain has a special responsibility to meet the costs of land purchase in Zimbabwe. We are a new Government from diverse backgrounds without links to former colonial interests. My own origins are Irish and as you know we were colonised not colonisers. ")

<http://www.swans.com/library/art9/ankomah5.html>

Secondly, the Arab world is hardly one to start chastising Africa for not throwing off it's neocolonial yoke. Everywhere you look, there are stooges for Western oil interests. From Saudi Arabia, to Egypt, to Syria, etc.

It may have been 25 years since Zimbabwe achieved 'independence' , but I challenge you to have a close look at all the lock-ins and special privileges for whites, as well as the commitment to the useless 'willing buyer, willing seller' land reform program. If this program had been kept in place, there would be no significant land reform for another 200 years, if that.

Right now, the economic situation of Zimbabwe is because of them standing up to western interests. Read the Zimbabwe Democracy and Economic Recovery Act of 2001 (ZDERA), which prohibits the government of Zimbabwe from borrowing from the world's international financial institutions.

<http://www.govtrack.us/congress/billtext.xpd?bill=s107-494>

As well, overnight, they lost all 'aid support' for their government budget - which regularly adds up to 1/3 of their budget, creating an instant balance of payment crisis.

So let's not pretend that it is somehow easy or painless to wrest away western control from African economies.

Zimbabwe was made an example of, to deter land reform in the rest of Africa. That is why they have world record inflation, although it is very much (for obvious reasons) a local currency inflation, not inflation of products on sale in for instance US dollar or Euro terms. This (sanctions, ZDERA) was a direct assault on the value of the Zimbabwe dollar.

However...

This very rude awakening has given a new impulse to achieving independence. The Zimbabwean government is presently involved with a massive mechanisation and tractorisation programme (supported, as you might have guessed by China).

(HERALD) Training of agric operators a milestone

<http://maravi.blogspot.com/2007/07/herald-training-of-agric-operators.html>

(HERALD) Government buys 3 500 more tractors

<http://maravi.blogspot.com/2007/09/herald-government-buys-3-500-more.html>

(HERALD) Farm Mechanisation: Maintenance workshops being set up

<http://maravi.blogspot.com/2007/10/herald-farm-mechanisation-maintenance.html>

I wouldn't be surprised at all when the country of Zimbabwe would be the first country in the region to become economically independent.

Whatever the mistakes made by Robert Mugabe, falling into the trap of believing in 'free markets', neoliberalism and western expertise and advice is not one of them.

And make no mistake. The hundreds of thousands of African farmers (250,000) will produce much more than the 4,500 white commercial farmers and their mechanized farms will ever produce.

Alex

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.
Play Now!

| 23781|2007-11-16 06:14:29|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Dear Shalomic,

Thanks for the feedback.

The lightning idea was spawned by the fact that in many regions, there is heavy rainfall (thunderstorms) occurring daily, with random lightning throughout.

But tell me, what is the nature of the "huge support mechanism" that makes it so difficult? Here in Trinidad, we have daily lightning all around, and in places (e.g., northeast Brasil) where there is a consistent wind resource, windmills can generate electric power at about 6 cents/kwh, competitive with the utilities, while for photovoltaics, the levelled economic cost still remains in the range of 25 - 30 cents per kwh, so solar electric power is not yet cost-effective in most places except with subsidy, whereas solar thermal is. I'm basing all this on the years I spent designing both solar stand-alone as well as grid-connected systems for rural communities, homes, hotels, commercial buildings, etc. I looked into the matter of manufacturing solar (PV) panels in an offshore tax haven, and hounded the World Bank, IFC and GEF for funding ($500,000) for startup, all to no avail. Failing that, I was able to obtain a lot of pro bono work out of NREL and SANDIA Labs for a new type of photo-electrochemical cell which I thought might achieve about 10% overall conversion efficiency, but that device didn't pan out either.

Being persistent and optimistic by nature, I still haven't given up on some novel lightning technology for independent power production. Still seeking clues.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: shalomic@nc.rr.com

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 12:17:14 -0500

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Peter

The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it requires a huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also, since it would depend on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the collection would be very random and costly.

Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and cost effective.

You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps generate about a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized home, or approx. 2KW.

The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of catching wind current.

Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale. Hence, the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer, black computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television manufacturer is the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge, resources, or need, but rather because we lack the organization.

Meninarmer

BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super- capacitor perhaps? Such a development would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com

Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself. But once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as if they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start one for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

- >
- > Mahari
- >
- > Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(
- >
- > I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change their
- > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as
- > fast as I like.
- >
- > I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but it's $1.5M to
- > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even
- > that took $12K out of MY pocket.
- > http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html
- >
- > It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by aiding the
- > bankers.
- > Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.
- > This site explains what the banks have done to create the Federal
- > Reserve.
- > Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
- > <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
- >
- > The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron Paul points
- > out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
- >
- > Hotep
- > Meninarmer
- >
- > -----Original Message-----
- > From: Mahari Mengistu
- > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com
- > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
> Congrats.
> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to paper-> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem that > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of Afrika > where so much gold is located.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>>
>> Dr. Winters
>>
>> Thank you for your response.
>>
>> Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African, native
> American,
>> and other histories.
>> Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done
to
>> others to maintain their position.
>> IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and frankly, I
am >> tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There is > nothing
>> else to learn in this area.
>>
>> For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black boys
> from
>> the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in the
drug >> trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their
> actions,
>> and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them
instead
> to
>> become strong black men.
>> Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and gain
>> positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins APL, >> University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in music
> (Brittany

> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or teaching.
> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready to > do
> > more.
> >
> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed a
> business to
> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> >
> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as
> alternatives
> > to the worthless dollar.
> > http://www.kastlean\_dhawke.com
> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money based on
> silver,
> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution of
> silver
> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would hopefully
> help
> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero times
> within the
> > black community.
> >
> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-dollar
> is > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> >
> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open
accounts
> in > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without representation) and > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax
> dollars
> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black measures.
> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world
where
> the > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,
> Citi
> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> >

> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even a
> portion of
> > my ambition.
> >
> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely depend
> on
> > our own commitments.
> >
> > Regards,
> >
> > MeniNarmer
> >
> >
> > -----Original Message-----
> > From: clyde winters
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS
A
> > MYTH.....
> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
> >
> > Great points. If you let people get away with doing > > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
> >
> > Clyde
> >
> > --- kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
> > > react.
> > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
> > > Cuba,...and all
> > > other nations with black presence that are
> > > experiencing open hostility,
> > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
> > >
> > > What are we to do?
> > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
> > > years ago, yet we are
> > > even more deceived into playing their game and
> > > setting ourselves up for
> > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With
> > > everything, there is a
> > > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the

>>> choices we make.
>>>
>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>> vested we are into
>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,

>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks
>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>>
>>> Peter
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
_____
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> From: mahari@
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000

>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>>
>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>> Afrika about Afrika
>>> and >>> Afrikans.
>>> =====
>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
>>> When?
>>>
>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>
>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>
>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>
>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy

>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,

> > > for the simple reason that it never > > > existed.... Africa's problem

> > >

> > === message truncated ===

> >

> >

> > _____
> > Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

> > <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

> >

>

_____
Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf~~é~~Stop by today!

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.
Play Now!

| 23782|2007-11-16 06:18:52|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

>

> --- Djehuti Sundaka

> wrote:

>

> > Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is a

> > continent of

> > plantation-states created by the colonizers and

> > managed by a > > succession of their lackies. The AU, like the OAU

> > before it, is just > > a union of plantation-states that won't establish a

> > common

> > continental military defense, currency, or free

> > trade and travel to > > bring about unity and continental prosperity.

> >

> > Djehuti Sundaka

> >

> Hi

> What you have written is cold blooded. But I must > agree.

>

Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African independence struggles. In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot of blood lost. Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.

However, two things often happened in the process. One is that many independence leaders at their core were still educated Europhiles.

They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same time they saw the answer was with the West.

The other problem is that the independence leaders had little experience necessary for running a modern country.

The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few people who knew anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were confined mainly to working jobs and simply were not allowed into many positions of technical or sophisticated business knowledge.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala
| 23783|2007-11-16 07:21:16|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|
Hi Peter

Thank you for your response.
Also kudos for working in the green with alternate energy sources.

While at Hopkins, I was also fascinated with the idea of harnessing lightning as an energy source.
It's been awhile since I abandoned the idea, but fortunately, Hopkins has a great library with tons of information on prior experiments. I learned a lot about lightning, some of it pretty radical from what we think we understand. Example: Lightning is from the earth up, and not from clouds to ground.

First, I have to add, lighting and working with lightning is very dangerous. A typical lightning strike can contain 10s of megawatts of energy, and an equivalent amount of volts. There is no way to predict exactly how powerful the strike will be, so it is nearly impossible to design a standard circuit to handle all possible situations.
Also, with this level of energy, most cathodes deployed to capture this energy will have a very short life span since the energy to heat conversion can lead to temperatures as high as 2800C.

Being in the US, lightning strikes are more random. As you are in the islands, perhaps they are more frequent, but this only increases the risks and dangers, as well as increasing the temperatures above by incurring multiple strikes.

So, the problem needing to be overcome are vast, such as;

- 1) cathode material that survives multiple strikes and resulting temps while maintaining valence
- 2) A shunt that can absorb energy in the  $1e12$  Joule range (this is a partial strike)
- 3) Method of converting Megavolts/MegaAmps into low voltage (12/24/48 volts) for storage

Building the components to accomplish this are currently beyond our level.

There are other approaches that seek to capture the energy in water to assist in separating hydrogen and oxygen.

Many people have been killed attempting to achieve this goal.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Fri, 16 Nov 2007 09:14:28 -0500

Dear Shalomic,

Thanks for the feedback.

The lightning idea was spawned by the fact that in many regions, there is heavy rainfall (thunderstorms) occurring daily, with random lightning throughout.

But tell me, what is the nature of the "huge support mechanism" that makes it so difficult? Here in Trinidad, we have daily lightning all around, and in places (e.g., northeast Brasil) where there is a consistent wind resource, windmills can generate electric power at about 6 cents/kwh, competitive with the utilities, while for photovoltaics, the levelled economic cost still remains in the range of 25 - 30 cents per kwh, so solar electric power is not yet cost-effective in most places except with subsidy, whereas solar thermal is. I'm basing all this on the years I spent designing both solar stand-alone as well as grid-connected systems for rural communities, homes, hotels, commercial buildings, etc. I looked into the matter of manufacturing solar (PV) panels in an offshore tax haven, and hounded the World Bank, IFC and GEF for funding ($500,000) for startup, all to no avail. Failing that that, I was able to obtain a lot of pro bono work out of NREL and SANDIA Labs for a new type of photo-electrochemical cell which I thought might achieve about 10% overall conversion efficiency, but that device didn't pan out either.

Being persistent and optimistic by nature, I still haven't given up on some novel lightning technology for independent power production. Still seeking clues.

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: shalomic@nc.rr.com
Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 12:17:14 -0500
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Peter

The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it requires a huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also, since it would depends on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the collection would be very random and costly. Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and cost effective.

You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps generate about a third of the electricity required to run a home medium sized home, or approx. 2KW.

The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better chances of catching wind current.

Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large scale.
Hence,
the reason why there is not one black automobile manufacturer,
black computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television
manufacturer is
the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge,
resources,
or need, but rather because we lack the organization.

Meninarmer

BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any ideas
of possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of lightning, for example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development
would completely revolutionise power production globally, eliminating fossil fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com
Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
MYTH.....

Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by yourself.
But
once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon as
if
they were always there for you.

A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go
offshore in both protecting assets and building institutions and even though
a minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can start
one
for around $1,000.

As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but the standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a currency unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain amount of silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when values are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless with inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Mahari
>
> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other activities. :(

>
> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to change

their > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not progressing as

> fast as I like.

>

> I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but

it's

$1.5M to > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my own. Even

> that took $12K out of MY pocket.

>

http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html

>

> It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American people by

aiding the

- > bankers.
- > Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was assassinated.
- > This site explains what the banks have done to create the

Federal

- > Reserve.
- > Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
- > <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
- >
- > The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as Ron

Paul

points

- > out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
- >
- > Hotep
- > Meninarmer
- >
- > -----Original Message-----
- > From: Mahari Mengistu
- > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
- > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
- > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS

A

- > MYTH.....
- > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
- > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
- >
- > Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of doing.
- > Congrats.
- > Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based to

paper-

- > based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would seem

that

- > the effect of this would be to lower the economic status of

Afrika

- > where so much gold is located.
- > HTP,
- > Mahari
- >
- > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle

wrote:

> >

> > Dr. Winters

> >

> > Thank you for your response.

> >

> > Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African,

native

> American,

> > and other histories.

> > Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites have done

to

> > others to maintain their position.

> > IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and

frankly, I

am

> > tired of committing additional energies in repetition. There

is

> nothing

> > else to learn in this area.

> >

> > For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young black

boys

> from

> > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing in

the

drug > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications of their

> actions,

> > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging them

instead

> to

> > become strong black men.

> > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their degrees and

gain

> > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns Hopkins

APL,

> > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in

music

> (Brittany

> > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliament-Funkadelic, etc.), or

teaching.

> > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but among

their > > friends and peers, are alone. Many of them state, they are ready

to > do

> > more.

> >

> > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I developed

a

> business to

> > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.

> >

> > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver as

> alternatives

> > to the worthless dollar.

> > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>

> > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money

based on

> silver,

> > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to distribution

of

> silver

> > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and

businesses will > > create our own monetary system based on value. This would

hopefully

> help

> > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero

times

> within the

> > black community.

> >

> > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver half-

dollar

> is

> > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?

> >

> > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking, open

accounts

> in

> > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without

representation) and

> > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using the tax

> dollars

> > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black

measures.

> > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the world

where

> the

> > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of America,

> Citi

> > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.

> >

> > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve even

a

> portion of

> > my ambition.

> >

> > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures solely

depend

> on

> > our own commitments.

> >

> > Regards,

> >

> > MeniNarmer

> >

> >

> > -----Original Message-----

> > From: clyde winters

> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST

IS A

> > MYTH.....

> > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)

> >

> > Great points. If you let people get away with doing

> > nothing--that's exactly what they do.

> >

> > Clyde

> >

> > --- kungfuhustle wrote:

> >

> > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to

> > > react.

> > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,

> > > Cuba,....and all

> > > other nations with black presence that are

> > > experiencing open hostility,

> > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.

> > >

> > > What are we to do?

> > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400

> > > years ago, yet we are

> > > even more deceived into playing their game and

> > > setting ourselves up for

> > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With

> > > everything, there is a

> > > trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the

> > > choices we make.

> > >

>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>> vested we are into
>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>
>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>> support it financially,
>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>> intentional
>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>> development of future
>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>
>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>> energies focused on
>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>> picketing,
>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>> who do not have our
>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>
>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>> accountable.
>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>> as the promises he's
>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>> and not because of
>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>> accountable when they
>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>> sold their people's
>>> interests for financial reward.
>>> -Stop supporting black media entertainers who assist
>>> in developing,
>>> maintaining, and re-enforcing the image that whites
>>> promote of blacks

>>> worldwide.
>>> -Educate blacks on the realities of world economics,
>>> and how it is used
>>> to place blacks into a state of entropy.
>>>
>>> Nothing that whites do to us would be possible if we
>>> did not allow it.
>>> Examine your choices.
>>>
>>> What are we to do when we wish to do nothing? Good
>>> question.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Peter Gray
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:17:53 -0500
>>>
>>> Well, if African political leaders will not declare
>>> these men persona
>>> non grata, what are we to do now -- just wait on >>> Africa to fall? Thanks
>>> for a most illuminating editorial article, Mahari.
>>>
>>> Peter
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
_____
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> From: mahari@
>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A

>>> MYTH.....
>>>
>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>> Afrika about Afrika
>>> and >>> Afrikans.
>>> =====
>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
>>> When?
>>>
>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>
>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>
>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>
>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>> of months and two
>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that >>> they revealed the
>>> battle
>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>> encounter in the face of
>>> the
>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>> attitudes and opinions some
>>> in
>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>> for economic
>>> empowerment
>>> and emancipation.
>>>
>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>> and
>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>> of France Nicolas
>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>
>>> In what can only be described as a most >>> unfortunate revelation
>>> of the
>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>> had
>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:

>>> "The tragedy of
>>> Africa
>>> is that the African man has never really
>>> entered history.
>>>
>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>> lived according to
>>> the
>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>> with nature, has only
>>> known
>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>> repetition of the
>>> same
>>> actions and the same words.
>>>
>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>> starts over again,
>>> there
>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>> idea of
>>> progress...this
>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>> it never occurs to
>>> him to
>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>> destiny for himself.
>>>
>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>> to say it, is
>>> Africa's
>>> problem.
>>>
>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>> fully.... Africa's >>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>> going over things,
>>> and to
>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>> renewal. It is to
>>> realise
>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>> back to will never
>>> return,
>>> for the simple reason that it never >>> existed.... Africa's problem

> > >
> > ==== message truncated ====
> >
> >
> > _____
> > Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
> > <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
> >
> >
>

---

Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger
Café Stop
by today!

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power. Play Now!
| 23784|2007-11-16 08:05:20|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>
> Hi Peter
>
> Thank you for your response.
> Also kudos for working in the green with alternate energy sources.
>
>

As one whose family is involved in the solar industry I might be a bit biased, but solar energy holds prospects for the developing world which is mostly located in the hot tropical zone.

Right now, the main "problem" is silicon used to make solar cells.
Actually there are technologies out there to extract silicon from ordinary quartz sand or to even use "dirty silicon" i.e. sand to make solar cells without purification:

<http://www.sciencenews.org/articles/20050910/fob6.asp>

Even in terms of purified polysilicon, the main problem is that there are only a few silicon plants mostly owned by the Japanese.

With more investment the supply and price of silicon can easily be managed. Most of the planet's energy comes from the Sun in one way or another, so why not produce power directly from sunlight?

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23785|2007-11-16 08:20:09|Alex van Deelen|Re: Zimbabwe and Sarkozy|

Paul,

> > (" I should make it clear that we do not accept > > that Britain has a special responsibility to meet > > the costs of land purchase in Zimbabwe. We > > are a new Government from diverse > > backgrounds without links to former colonial > > interests. My own origins are Irish and as > > you know we were colonised not colonisers. ")
> >
> > > <http://www.swans.com/library/art9/ankomah5.html>
> >
>
> They should take the money then from the > Crown properties, which does have responsibility, > and which they recognize still recognize at least > ceremonially as head of state.

Fortunately, they are way beyond 'compensation' now.
And of course, like the end of slavery, only the white farmers were supposed to be compensated.

This is a problem that exists in much of former British Africa - South Africa, Namibia, Swaziland, Lesotho, Botswana, Zambia, Malawi, Tanzania, Kenya.

There is also an insecurity of tenure in land ownership
(i.e., land belongs either to chiefs or the state, which means that anyone can be evicted at the drop of a hat - which is terrible for longterm investment in improvements or capital goods).

However in Zimbabwe, the problem was white land ownership of huge estates, which are almost euphemistically referred to as 'farms'.

You can go online and buy a farm in Zambia for $1.1 million, which is *60,000 hectares* in size (that is 15.5 miles by 15.5 miles). Obviously, only about 1,000 hectares of those are actually under cultivation.

And that is the story of white landownership in Africa. There were always too few whites to farm all land, and still Africans were shunted off to reservations ('native reserves', bantustans), where most still live.

Baffour Ankomah made the observation of the contrast between driving through Zimbabwe, and driving through Ghana. In Ghana, he would encounter a village every 10 miles. In Zimbabwe, he would drive for hundreds of miles without ever seeing an African settlement.

That is the cost to productivity, poverty and the way the country is structured.

Ideally, every farmer would have 100 hectares to his or her disposal, and access to some machinery for planting and harvesting. With that, an income of $10,000 per year can be easily realized. The present average income per year is $280.

If I had the money or knew how to come by it, I would be there right now, setting up farms.

Alex

| 23786|2007-11-16 08:41:46|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Paul,

I agree with you about solar for the developing world. With regard to Afrika in my fantasy state I've often thought about the grand potential for Afrika in that regard. There is all that sun in great parts of it. And the huge expanse of the Sahara!

Of course, a lot of my fantasy outcome had to do with a working "unified" Afrika as the Sahara covers a number of countries.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

> >

> > Hi Peter

> >

> > Thank you for your response.

> > Also kudos for working in the green with alternate energy sources.

> >

> >

>

> As one whose family is involved in the solar industry I might be a bit

> biased, but solar energy holds prospects for the developing world > which is mostly located in the hot tropical zone.

>

> Right now, the main "problem" is silicon used to make solar cells.

> Actually there are technologies out there to extract silicon from > ordinary quartz sand or to even use "dirty silicon" i.e. sand to make

> solar cells without purification:

>

> <http://www.sciencenews.org/articles/20050910/fob6.asp>

>

> Even in terms of purified polysilicon, the main problem is that

there > are only a few silicon plants mostly owned by the Japanese.

>

> With more investment the supply and price of silicon can easily be > managed. Most of the planet's energy comes from the Sun in one way or > another, so why not produce power directly from sunlight?

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23787|2007-11-16 10:01:53|Mahari Mengistu|COPYRIGHT FREE AFRIKAN IMAGES|

Does anyone know where on the web I can get copyright free images of ancient Egypt/Afrika and/or Afrikan people?

Thanks in advance.

HTP,

Mahari

| 23788|2007-11-16 10:34:45|clyde winters|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>
wrote:

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters

> wrote:

>>

>>

>> --- Djehuti Sundaka

>> wrote:

>>

>>> Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is

> a

>>> continent of

>>> plantation-states created by the colonizers and

>>> managed by a >>> succession of their lackies. The AU, like the

> OAU

>>> before it, is just

>>> a union of plantation-states that won't

> establish a

>>> common

>>> continental military defense, currency, or free

>>> trade and travel to >>> bring about unity and continental prosperity.

>>>

>>> Djehuti Sundaka

>>>

>> Hi

>> What you have written is cold blooded. But I must >> agree.

>>

>

>

> Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African

> independence struggles.

> In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot

> of blood lost.

> Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.

>

> However, two things often happened in the process.

> One is that many

> independence leaders at their core were still > educated Europhiles.

- >
- > They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same
- > time they saw the
- > answer was with the West.
- >
- > The other problem is that the independence leaders
- > had little
- > experience necessary for running a modern country.
- >
- > The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few
- > people who knew
- > anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were
- > confined mainly to
- > working jobs and simply were not allowed into many
- > positions of
- > technical or sophisticated business knowledge.
- >
- > Regards,
- > Paul Kekai Manansala

Paul

You're right. The problem is that most African leaders don't understand that European civilization is based on the book. In other words if you learn from a book how to do something you can do it.

They believe that science has advanced purely by consultants from University, instead of understanding that it is the common man that makes the innovation, that University personnel learn about and perfect.

As a result, these leaders, unlike the Japanese ,associated advancement with getting people to become acculturated to European civilization as a method of insuring that they would find the most qualified promising candidate to help in modernizing their cultures. The Japanese on the otherhand sent Japanese to learn western technology, but never let these "western oriented" people become the leaders in the modernization movement. In this way they ensured that a Japanese character would be evident in the rise of their civilization.

Clyde

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

Make Yahoo! your homepage.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23789|2007-11-16 11:11:05|MILTON MOORE|Welcome To The Police State|

Islam Moors,

The Moorish Science Temple of America is not only just a Divine movement, but it is also a National movement and with that being said I now give you my very in-dept study and research of The Patriot Acts 1 & 2, The Real ID Act and The North American Union. Like that of my former National Grand Sheikh Jerry Lewis Bey, the most controversial Moorish American Moslem Leader, I must reveal the truth, as he revealed the truth about the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force, the FBI, the DEA, the St. Louis City Police Intelligence Units and Homicide Units. So in honor of the Bey of Missouri, I now reveal the truth about the Federal Government's plans to take away our civil liberties. This measure will shed light on the events that the Prophet Noble Drew Ali said that are to come.

Most of you may not know this, but on Tuesday May 10, 2005, the United States of America became a true Police State. The US Senators voted unanimously with no discussion and without even reading the bill to create a National ID Card. The Real ID Act black mails state governments into turning drivers licenses into a draconian tool of the Federal Home Land Security Apparatus. If the states refuse then the citizens of those states will lose privileges such as being allowed to board an airplane, enter a federal building or apply for social security. President Bush signed this bill in 2005. So this Stalin style internal passport will be in full effect by May 11, 2008 and the United States Government will have more control over its citizens than Joseph Stalin in all of his anti-freedom views ever dreamed of and this is just the beginning. The creator of the Real ID Act is Representative James Sensenbrenner. He says that his Real ID Act is about dealing with illegal immigration and preventing terrorists from entering the country. Well that is a lie and the truth is not in him. The truth is this, the Real ID Act is all about tracking and controlling every citizen of the United States, it has nothing to do with terrorists and if the Real ID Act is about controlling illegal immigration, then why was the US Border Patrol Agents along the Arizona Mexico border ordered by the White House back in 2005 to stand down and let all of the illegal aliens come in the country. Moors the truth is this, 9-11 was a staged event of the government in order to bring forth and pass into law the Patriot Acts 1 & 2, which allowed the government to install surveillance cameras on every corner, to limit the freedoms of the press and the public, to enable strip searches at the air port and now the National ID system.

David Rockefeller told a crowd in Switzerland in the year 2004 at a meeting of the global elite that they are on the verge of a global transformation, all they need is the right major crisis and the nations will finally accept the New World Order that they have been working so long to implement. Henry Kissinger said back in 2005 at a Bilderberg meeting in France that today American citizens would be outraged if the UN Troops entered Los Angeles to restore order, but tomorrow they will be grateful, especially if they are told that there is an outside threat from beyond rather than if it's true or false, it is the people who will plead with world leaders to deliver them from this evil, because the one thing that every one fears is the unknown. Kissinger also said that when presented with this scenario many individuals will willingly relinquish their rights for the guaranty of their well being granted to them by the world government. So this is how it all works. Your right to travel, your right to be secure in your person and possessions and the right of gun ownership will be the first liberties to go. For example you go into a gun store and fill out a 4473 form, but instead of them looking at your license and taking down some information, they will run your National ID Card with its radio frequency ID chip through a scanner and complete information on every fire arm that you buy will instantly be sent to every police officer, every government employee, every Walmart gun clerk or computer hacker who is able to get into the data base. The private gun purchase loop hole will be closed and if you are caught with an unregistered gun, then the Department of Home Land Security will cut off your driving privileges and you will also not be able to get on a plane. You will be a prisoner in your own home and country, some will even be forced to function as out laws, living beneath the government's radar.

In the 1930's Congress said that our social security numbers would never be used as identification or displayed on any document, but now they are the key to everything about us and without a social security number you will not receive your National ID Barometric RFID Card and without this card you will no longer be a citizen. Now check this out, back in 1913 a historical Congressional announcement was made. Congress had said that the brand new income tax would only effect the rich, well I do not know about the rest of you Moors, but I am know where near being rich, but the government is taking 40 percent of my income in taxes. So by May 11, 2008 all citizens will be required to show their papers to board an airplane, take a train, ride a bus, rent a car, enter a federal or public building, even to walk into a bank. We as citizens must stand up against this Nazi Germany style system. I refuse to live in a system like that of the Soviet Russia. Is this not the "Land of The Free". According to a highly classed memo that was leaked during a British electoral election campaign back in 2002 that proves that United States knew that there were no weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. The memo came out of the United Kingdoms MI6 building. The MI6 chief Richard Dearlove in a meeting with Tony Blair reported in this memo when he was in Washington that Iraq had no weapons of mass destruction. The memo also said that Saddam Hussein was not treating Kuwait nor the United States. Back in 2005 Representative John Conyers of the House Judiciary Committee had circulated a letter asking President Bush for an explanation, but as usual his administration said they would not comment on the memo.

So 9-11, the Anthrax scare and everything else were just tactics to frighten the people into accepting what ever the government tells them they need to do to protect them. Well with the Patriot Act, Congress was tricked into signing the bill. It was given to them at around 3:00am, now who do you know that is going to read 345 pages of legislation that early in the morning? All Congress read was the first few pages that looked good and also what was given to them was not even the original draft. Well Congress signed the bill and now that they see that the bill takes away a lot of our civil liberties, they started speaking out against it, but too little too late. To my opinion the only solution is civil war. Now here is the shocking part, the same provisions in the Patriot Act are the same provisions in an earlier bill before 9-11 that was rejected by Congress. Oh yes the Devil is very good at tricking the people. the Patriot Act expands the Federal Government law enforcement power, in other words it gives them the power to do what ever the hell they want to do. So please do not think that those cameras on the traffic lights are just for catching people running red lights, for that is just the beginning of all the cameras that you will see looking down on you. Big Brother is watching you. He can put a camera any where he wants to now. We are now being monitored in every way possible. Our phones, our emails and every other electronic device we have is being monitored by the Government. They no longer need a court order to monitor you. All of this are the provisions of the Patriot Act and there are so many 3rd party businesses that have all of your private information that you thought was protected by the Privacy Act and these businesses cooperate with the government in helping them to see who they feel is a threat to national security. Some of these 3rd party businesses that have your private information are Acxiom, Verint, Identrix, ChoicePoint and so many more. Even though we have the protection of the Constitution with the 4th amendment when it comes to search and seizures, but now our private information of who we call on the phone, or who we email on the computer and every other bit of information about us is no longer held within the privacy of our own home, but now our private information is being held by big businesses who monitor our lives, so called 3rd parties to which the 4th amendment does not apply. The Supreme Court decided in 1970 that if a 3rd party has your information, then you do not have 4th amendment protection of that information, But that does not even matter any more because with the passing of the Patriot Act the NSA no longer needs a court order to tap your phone. Yes Moors, welcome to the police state. The Galileo Satellite Navigation System that is scheduled to be launched in 2008 will take this type of surveillance to a whole other level. This satellite system will be connected to the RFID technology. The RFID is a technology that uses tiny computer chips the size of a grain of sand or even smaller hooked up to miniature antennas to transmit information about items of a distance. Back in 1999 Proctor, Gamble, Gillette, and MIT got together to find a way to commercialize this technology and make it small enough to essentially put them on every physical item manufactured on planet earth. The latest technology for identifying people when they make purchases is the implantable chip. This chip is a very tiny glass capsule about the size of a grain of rice and is embedded directly into human flesh, it contains a RFID computer chip with a coiled antenna and it can transmit information. Home Land Security and the Department of Defense both will be deeply involved in the system of monitoring the US populous and the best way to do this is to use a system that tells them who buys what and where they take those things that were bought. Radio waves can travel through walls, wood and everything that most of us use to protect our privacy. Things like a purse, pocket, backpacks or anything that we have on radio waves can transmit info through them. Craft Philadelphia Cream Cheese has been tagged with RFID and Machu Razor products and other Gillette Razor products all have been sold to consumers without the knowledge of the consumer. The chip is so small that it can even be the dot on the letter i in the fine print on the back of the package that you purchase. These devices will be in every airport, on every bus, on every train, on every port and on every dock. These tracking devices will also be put inside money. They will be able to track every bank note. They will know where the money has been and who the money has been issued to, in essence this will create an audit trail. At the ATM as the money comes out of it, there will be a device in it that will be reading the numbers and they will know who you are because you will already have identified yourself at the bank before you take out the money and when you go to a store and buy something, the cashier will put the money in the register and the same type of device will be in the register that will tag the numbers and send that information and pass possession of that information to whom ever the government has chosen. Once everything you do is tied down to a single number and then there is no longer the ability to pay with cash, then all it takes to render you a non citizen is to simply turn that chip off and then you will no longer be able to participate of function in any society, because you will not be able to buy anything and the most important thing you need is food and water. So now the American citizen through the Federal Reserve System has gone from being a private individual who had real money (gold) in his possession that was private to a citizen who has no privacy at all, because all money is now digitized. The Government can deduct all they want out of your account when they want to and they can trace you when they want to, so basically you will be at their mercy. So everything you do will be seen by Big Brother, everything will be reported back to the government. In early 2006 a number of employees of a video surveillance company called CityWatcher in Cincinnati Ohio were implanted with micro chips. This chip allows the workers to identify themselves by holding their arm in front of a scanner. This is just the beginning of the governments way of tracking every citizen of the United States.

http://search.ft.com/ftArticle?queryText=chip+implants&y=5&aje=false&x=10&id=060212003622&ct=0&nlick\_check=1

Right after 9-11 the government started arresting immigrants from Arab and Muslim countries and most of the families of the immigrants did not even know where these immigrants were taken. The way the government was doing this was very unconstitutional. The government was targeting communities on the basis of stereo types. The government was arresting people who had beards and those who prostrated to God. The government wanted the citizens to believe that these people were terrorists. The government wanted the citizens of the US to think that these people were guilty until proven innocent. The government called these people detainees, like they was just going to be late for dinner, but that was far from the truth. These people were kept in solitary confinement for 24 hours or longer. They had no contact at all with the outside world. In the middle of winter with no blankets, lights off all 24 hours, windows covered and many of them were beaten. They were shackled hands to waist and waist to feet. They were strip searched and some of them looked like they were just dragged along the concrete floor. Some of these people were held for months even though they had not broken any laws. The so called Justice Department called this "The Hold Until Cleared Policy". This is the reason why that devil John Ashcroft wanted to get the Patriot Act passed as law. Thousands of people were arrested, but when questions were asked about how many of these people have committed any crimes of terrorism, all the government did was stop telling the citizens how many people they have arrested and this is because none of them committed any crimes of terrorism. These people had no legal representation or anything else for that matter. According to the Constitution, "No Person Shall Be Denied Life, Liberty or Property Without Due Process of Law", but thanks to those two devils, George Bush and John Ashcroft with their Anti-freedom Patriot Act. The civil liberties of the Constitution (The Supreme Law of The Land) have been changed. In a lot of these round ups many Latinos were arrested. The government was storming into many of these people's homes and just basically kidnapping these people. The last time I checked, kidnapping was a federal crime. I guess as long as you are the Feds then its ok.

Now lets talk about the North American Union. For all who do not know about this, your President has signed a formal agreement that will end the United States as you know it and Bush did this without the approval of the US Congress or the people of the United States. This is nothing but President Bush's way of ignoring the enforcement of this country's immigration laws. They call this formal agreement the Security & Prosperity Partnership of North America (SPP). All of this was done back in 2005. Now if you have done any studies in world politics, then you know that the nations of Europe have surrendered their independence to the bureaucracy of what is known as the European Union and Bush is fooling the people of the United States of America into surrendering their independence to the bureaucracy of the North American Union. This merging of Canada, Mexico and the United States will end all liberties and independence in this country. In a summit meeting in Waco Texas on the date of March 23, 2005 this agreement between President George Bush, President Vicente Fox of Mexico and Prime Minister Paul Martin of Canada was signed. So as you can see, the so-called free trade agreements are nothing but a way of turning this country into a totalitarian dictatorship, in other words the end of FREEDOM. These so-called trade agreements are a reconstitution of our bureaucracy and the integration of Canada's and Mexico's bureaucracy with the end result being all of our administrative law and regulations being rewritten to harmonize this North American Union which is nothing but President Bush's open boarder policy. So get ready for the one world communist government. For just like the European Union has its common currency called the Euro, the North American Union is doing the same thing, its common currency will be called the Amero. We will have a new Constitution that will be modeled after the Constitution of the Soviet Union, so this means your rights will not be inalienable, they will be granted by the government who can also take them away. Now this is what I call terrorism of the most worst kind and it is being brought upon us by our own government. "We The People" must not let this happen, for "We The People" are the ones who are suppose to be in control of this country. The United States of America is suppose to be anation of the people by the people. So I say give me liberty or give me death. The New World Order is here and you have 3 world powers that have been formed. The European Union, The North American Union and Red China. So like I said, the only solution to stopping the police state is civil war. May Allah help us all.

Does any one remember President George H. W. Bush's New World Order speech that he gave on September 11, 1990? In it he described the United States' objectives for post-coldwar-cooperation with the former Soviet Union, using the phrase New World Order. When President Bush announced his new foreign policy would help build a New World Order, his phrasing surged through the religious and secular hard right like an electric shock, since the phrase had been used to represent the dreaded collectivist One World Government for decades,

(<http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=8259800846851144110> ). The New World Order is the rulership of Earth by the World Government (Anti-Christ) and the coming of Satan's reign is the mark of the beast (666) which is mentioned specifically in the Book of Revelation (see Revelation 13:16). The Mark of the Beast deals with the act of buying and selling, this mark is identical with the collection of sales tax, the use of Social Security card numbers, and the bar-coding of retail goods with UPC (Universal Product Code) markings and the RFID tagging as well. You will see many socio-political changes. You will see black helicopters, militias organized from a combination of UN troops, paramilitary police forces and the National Guard; the imposition of martial law; FEMA operated dissident camps. National and local elections monitored by the UN, with an implication of election rigging. The UN assuming the sovereignty and responsibilities of the US government. Foreign military troops on US soil for alleged "peacekeeping" or "humanitarian" missions. The US constitution replaced by the UN Charter (requiring a redrafting of the charter, since the current form is not sufficiently robust, nor intended, to serve as a document of national basic law). UN control of a unified, global economy -which is Globalization. All cash money eliminated; currency or credit exchanges made using microchips, implanted or otherwise; the Smart Card, VeriChip, the more recent Real ID Act - which is prophesied in the Biblical book of Revelation 13:16-17: [16] And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads [17] and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Ubiquitous surveillance of civilians, via cameras and implants. The execution, imprisonment, institutionalization, or marginalization of critics, artists, dissidents, religious figures, etc. as a means of censorship and control. The New World Order is about replacing sovereign states with their world government, so in other words there will be no more national sovereignty. There are many signs that will confirm what I say. For example, the strange murals in the Denver International Airport, the Illuminati symbol on the Great Seal of the United States with the words "Novus Ordo Seclorum" meaning "New Order of the Ages", Masonic signs on buildings (particularly in Washington DC) and pentagrams worked into city plans. A DVD entitled "Riddles In Stone" investigates the peculiarities in Washington, D.C.'s streets and buildings. The most prominent families such as the Rothschilds, Rockefellers, Morgans, and Du Ponts, as well as European monarchs, are the most important members of the Illuminati. International organizations such as the World Bank, IMF, European Union, the United Nations and NATO are the core organizations of the Illuminati. The Presidents of the US and Mexico as well as the Prime Ministers of Canada are all apart of the Illuminati. I will go as far as saying that most of these families and persons are all part of the same bloodline. Rather if you believe it are not, but the truth is this, there will be numerous internment camps located within the United States and these internment camps will start being seen as signs before any action is taken. These camps will be used to store any Americans who protest or give any sort of fight against the Secret Service Guard that will be used to control the population and new laws. So this shows that the European Freemasons are involved in the creation of the New World Order. The motto is inspired by Freemasonry and is one of the clues to the True Masters of the World. By circumscribing the 6 pointed hexagram or Star of David, over the pyramid, 5 of the 6 apices (the 6th being the 'All-seeing eye'), point near letters spelling S-M-O-N-A, which can be rearranged to spell Mason (also monas and moans, as well as the phenome "omans", which possibly could portend to "omens"). (In Hebrew the word "oman" (plural "omanim") means artisan or skilled labourer, hence the possible reference in the word mason). Also check out the 13 steps that ascend the pyramid and the 72 visible blocks on the front. The Great US seal shows heavily masonic imagery. The eagle represents the masonic phoenix. The eagle holds an olive branch with 13 olives and 13 leaves in one claw, and 13 arrows in the other. The recurrence and significance of the number 13 is often attributed to its importance in numerology, and also to there being 13 degrees in York Rite Freemasonry. The Great Seal's eagle also has 32 feathers on the right wing and 33 on left wing (32 and 33 being the two highest degrees in Scottish Rite Freemasonry). The thirteen steps also refers to the thirteen colonies. If the blocks are correctly counted and their number intended, 72 has other mystical meanings: it was sacred to the Egyptians, as Plutarch says; and both Jews and Christians use it as the number of nations on the Earth. In Islam, we believe that the Jews will divide into 71 sects, the Christians into 72, and the Moslems into 73. We also believe that 30 false prophets (those who claim prophethood), "Dajjals" or anti-christs will appear on Earth to mislead people, and one of them will be the anti-Christ (false Messiah). The ideas of today's setup of the "new world order" originated in the early 1900s with Cecil Rhodes, who advocated that the British Empire and the United States should jointly impose a Federal World Government. In order to facilitate this, Rhodes founded the Rhodes Scholarship as a global brotherhood of future leaders. Lionel Curtis founded the Rhodes-Milner Round Table Groups in 1909, which led to the establishment of the British-based Royal Institute for International Affairs in 1919 and the U.S.-based Council on Foreign Relations in 1920. The concept was further developed by Edward M. House, a close advisor to Woodrow Wilson during the negotiations to set up the League of Nations (it is unclear whether it was House or Wilson who invented the actual phrase). H.G. Wells, was also a vigorous advocate for world government.

In 1903 the The Protocols of the Elders of Zion were published in Russia. Scholars generally agree that the Okhrana, the secret police of the Russian Empire, fabricated the text in the late 1890s or early 1900s. In 1913 the U.S. Federal Reserve system and the Internal Revenue Service were introduced. Owners of the "Fed" are rich international bankers loaning money to the U.S. government at interest. They have the power to print money and control it without using the Gold Standard. In the July 17, 1926 Saturday Evening Post, the term "New World Order" was used for the first time in a popular magazine article to describe the work of Edward M. House in helping to create the League of Nations and helping to found the Council on Foreign Relations. Between 1928 and 1940, H. G. Wells wrote of his hopes for "an efficient and beneficent world system" under one world-government. In 1933, when Hitler came to power, he announced the coming of a, "New World Order" under Nazi rule, a Nazi New World Order - Nazi One World Government. In 1935, the reverse side of the Great Seal of the United States with the Eye of Providence above the pyramid appeared for the first time on the back of the one dollar U.S. dollar bill. In 1938, Lionel Curtis's The Commonwealth of God was published, advocating joint rule of the world by the USA and the UK. From 1940 until her death in 1949, Alice Bailey published various books in which she called Zionism a "triangle of terror" and called for a New World Order in which Orthodox Judaism no longer existed. The term "One World" originated in the 1943 book One World by liberal Republican Wendell Willkie. In the book Willkie described his 31,000 mile journey around the world from August 26 to October 14, 1942 in the Consolidated bomber "Gulliver" to meet with Allied war leaders. In 1944, the Bretton Woods Agreement was signed, outlining a regime for the post World War II world economy. In 1945, the United Nations is founded. In 1946, Bertrand Russell supported the Baruch Plan for establishment of a world government based on international control of atomic weapons, and advocated that the United States and the United Kingdom should use their atomic monopoly to compel the assent of the Soviet Union if necessary for the sake of achieving permanent world power. On October 1, 1946, the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists carried an article by Bertrand Russell entitled The Atomic Bomb and the Prevention of War, where he writes, "The American and British governments ... should make it clear that genuine international cooperation is what they most desire. But although peace should be their goal, they should not let it appear that they are for peace at any price. At a certain stage, when their plan (sic) for an international government are ripe, they should offer them to the world ... If Russia acquiesced willingly, all would be well. If not, it would be necessary to bring pressure to bear, even to the extent of risking war". In 1954, the Bilderberg Group was founded. On March 25, 1957 the European Economic Community (European Common Market) was formed, which in 1992 changed its name to the European Union. Currently, the EU has 27 member states, 13 of which use a common currency, the Euro. In 1961, Arnold Toynbee said: "in the present Atomic Age we shall not have assured the survival of the human race until we have established a world-government and made the present national governments subordinate to it". In 1963, the Codex Alimentarius Commission was established by the Food and Agriculture Organization and the World Health Organization, later to be backed by the World Trade Organization. In 1973, David Rockefeller organized the Trilateral Commission. In 1974, retail stores began using the Universal Product Code. The UPC is also the Mark of the Beast. On September 11, 1990, the President of the United States, George H.W. Bush gave his famous speech, "Toward a New World Order" to a joint session of the United States Congress. In 1991, televangelist Pat Robertson published the book 'The New World Order'. On January 1, 1995, the United Nations' International Trade Organization's (ITO) General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) group renamed itself the World Trade Organization (WTO). The WTO Ministerial Conference of 1999 protest activity took place on November 30, 1999, when the World Trade Organization (WTO) convened in Seattle, Washington, USA. The September 11, 2001 attacks are linked to the New World Order, the so called attack was nothing but a media-orchestrated plot to frighten Americans into giving up their basic liberties to a "Homeland Security" authority that will eventually turn control of the United States over to a multi-national "coalition government." In 2002, the FDA approved the manufacture of the VeriChip Microchip implant (human). Much more intrusive than the UPC, this aroused people's fears that a future totalitarian government could enforce the implanting of these chips and thus fulfill the Book of Revelation prophecy regarding the Mark of the Beast. In 2005, transhumanist futurist philosopher and computer scientist Ray Kurzweil reported that "The U.S. Joint Forces Command "Project Alpha"...envision a 2025 fighting force that 'is largely robotic.' "

There are many ideologies related to the New World Order. H.G. Wells said in his 1940 non-fiction book entitled "The New World Order": "... when the struggle seems to be drifting definitely towards a world social democracy, there may still be very great delays and disappointments before it becomes an efficient and beneficent world system. Countless people ... will hate the new world order ... and will die protesting against it. When we attempt to evaluate its promise, we have to bear in mind the distress of a generation or so of malcontents, many of them quite gallant and graceful-looking people." H.G. Wells called his effort to organize prominent intellectuals behind the idea of establishing a World Government "The Open Conspiracy" (a benevolent one) in his 1928 book by the same name. Lionel Curtis wrote a book in 1938 called The Commonwealth of God in which he advocated that the United States and the British Empire should jointly impose a world government which would be presented as being the work of God: "I feel that when once the Protestant churches had learned to regard the creation of a world commonwealth as an all-important aspect of their work in realising the Kingdom of God, an international commonwealth in the English-speaking world would come into being in a few generations". Alice A. Bailey, a one time Theosophist who formed her own group, the Arcane School, in 1923, predicted in 1940 the victory of the Allies over the Axis and the establishment afterward by the Allies of a "New World Order" ? regarded by her (as by H.G. Wells) ? as a benevolent conspiracy by political progressives that would bring humanity to a higher level of civilization. However, in 1997, Rabbi Yonassan Gershom, in an article titled "Antisemitic Stereotypes in Alice Bailey's Writings", pointed out that Bailey's "Plan for the New World Order" called for "the gradual dissolution - again if in any way possible - of the Orthodox Jewish faith", which, he said, indicated that "her goal is nothing less than the destruction of Judaism itself." Some believe that Zionists (or, alternatively, Israel and pro-Israel lobbying in the US) are the primary force behind the NWO. They assert the establishment of the New World Order is being engineered by Neo-Conservatives to provide support for Israel and they point out that many Neo-Conservative leaders are hawkish Zionists and some of them have worked as advisors to the government of Israel. Claims have been made that the primary reason that the Iraq War was fought is that the Zionists thought that Saddam Hussein was a threat to Israel that needed to be removed. Some claim that it is difficult for people to find out the truth about the NWO because, mass media outlets are predominantly owned by a few corporate executives who have the same goal. It is said that these individuals in control of mass media are all Zionists or supporters of them: Jonathan Miller (Chair/CEO) of AOL in Time Warner; Michel Eisener (CEO) of The Walt Disney Company; Reinhard Mohn [owner] of Bertelsmann media worldwide; Murray Rothstien (Head) of MTV in Viacom; Rupert Murdoch (Founder) of News

Corporation; Jean-Bernard L鵑 (Chairman/CEO) of Vivendi Universal. When accused of racism or antisemitism, some of those theorists argue that Zionism is racist and hateful ideologies of ethnic supremacy. Zionists in US, i.e. "Prominent groups in the Israeli lobby include the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, the Anti-Defamation League (ADL); Christians United for Israel (CUFI), and pro-Israel think tanks like the Washington Institute for Near East Policy and the American Enterprise Institute. Leading individuals in the lobby include the heads of these various organizations, as well as neoconservatives who served in the Bush administration like Elliot Abrams, John Bolton, Douglas Feith, Paul Wolfowitz, and David Wurmser." Also includes "John Hagee" and "Tom DeLay". Some racially biased subscribers to the Zionism theory have also asserted that part of the goal of the New World Order is to foster egalitarianism and enforce "race-mixing" or the integration of inherently unequal* races to engender miscegenation and submerge the genetically greater intellects of some races into the genetically lesser intellects of others, in order to breed a one-world race. This is a popular ideology among theorists who subscribe to a racist belief system. The perennial U.S. presidential candidate Lyndon LaRouche claims that the "New World Order" is a conspiracy directed by the House of Windsor (the British royal family), which, he asserts, also controls the international Illegal drug trade. Hesays the Fabian Society (of which H.G. Wells was a member) was secretly financed by the Royal Family so that the Windsors could gain control of the eventual world government. LaRouchealso saysthat as of 2006 the Neo-Conservatives (especially Dick Cheney) are working with the House of Windsor to set up a type of fascism throughout the world which LaRouche calls synarchism and which, he says, the Neo-Conservatives hope will become the basis of the New World Order. George W Bush and Tony Blair aresaid to have iniated theNWO. Paleoconservative Patrick J. Buchanan asserts the Council on Foreign Relations (itself supposedly a front for the "international bankers", as well as, it is said, the inspiration for the founding of the Bilderberg Group, Trilateral Commission, and World Trade Organization) is behind the NWO. Hesays that the liberals are planning to eventually subvert the independence of the United States of America by subordinating national sovereignty to the United Nations. This thesis agrees with the right-wing libertarian opinion who sees a future socialist World State as the only way to achieve an Orwellian collectivist oligarchy freed from the need to subordinate the world's production to the consumers of a free market economy. TheNWO would consist into replacing it with a monopolist planned economy capable of rationing the resources, converting populations into public property. Their usual image is an egalitarian slavery under a global scientific dictatorship. "For more than a century ideological extremists at either end of the political spectrum have seized upon well-publicized incidents ... to attack the Rockefeller family for the inordinate influence they claim we wield over American political and economic institutions. Some even believe we are part of a secret cabal working against the best interests of the United States, characterizing my family and me as 'internationalists' and of conspiring with others around the world to build a more integrated global political and economic structure - one world, if you will. If that's the charge, I stand guilty, and I am proud of it." - David Rockefeller, "Memoirs" autobiography (2002, Random House publishers), page 405. Some fundamentalist evangelical Christian ideologies about the conspiracy include a prominent religious element based on prophecies in the Book of Revelation about the coming of the Anti-Christ. They assert that agents of Satan are involved in deceiving humanity into accepting an international demonic order that has Satan at the core of worship. These beliefs often include explicit millenarianism. Other ideologies do not have a religious component, and view the concept of "serving Satan"

metaphorically. Compare Pat Robertson's The New World Order to William Cooper's Behold a Pale Horse. The fundamentalist evangelical Christian view regarding the expected events leading to the implementation of the New World Order and the emergence of the Anti-Christ as well as the subsequent Battle of Armageddon and Second Coming is exhaustively summarized in the 1998 book Final Warning: The History of the New World Order by David Allen Rivera. Some anarcho-primitivists, anarchists, environmentalists, ultra-populists, Neo-Luddites, and (very occasionally) bioconservatives sometimes claim that there is or may be an explicit (conspiracy) or implicit (bloc) organization of intellectuals, technologists, technocrats, intelligentsia, technophiles, and other such intellectual elites who view science as god in itself and push a pro-Technocracy, pro-Scientism, anti-natural, anti-environment, dehumanising, anti-freedom agenda. Generally, such notions tend to be connected to the theories mentioned above, related to capitalism and transnational corporations, with the idea being that technology is profitable, and human mediocrity is profitable, and thus, generally, capitalists and capitalist societies are in at least implicit collusion with technologists, intelligentsia, and scientists in order to pacify, standardise, dehumanise, technologically-saturate and commodify human beings, to create the ultimate global consumer society. Anti-psychiatry sometimes plays a role in such theories, as it is said that the fields of psychology and psychiatry are for the purposes of medicating the individualist instincts of people and creating a conformant "therapeutic society". Sometimes, the technocratic New World Order is said to have transhumanist ambitions, with the ultimate aim being to engineer life and thus control it that much more by completing the process of turning people and animals into things. Such themes are popular in science fiction: Technocracy (World of Darkness), Deus Ex, Cyberpunk. Although the United Nations is a central figure in some theories of the NWO, but there are additional ideas, such as extra-terrestrials (either the "Reptilians" or the "Greys" or both) are now being said by some religious/sovereignty groups to be the power behind the NWO, well I do not know anything about that, but I do know that the Trilateral Commission and the Illuminati play major roles in the NWO and every one knows that secret annual conferences of the Bilderberg Group plans world events to establish the New World Order. The New World Order is a loss to every one's civil liberties, conservatives and liberals alike. A number of those on both the right and left believe that the left/right paradigm itself is a subversive creation of a New World Order-controlled media, intended as disinformation to divert people from their common enemy. This has been called "Fusion Paranoia" by Michael Kelly.

There are several ideas about how the architects and planners of the NWO will implement it. Some say the New World Order is being implemented gradually, citing the foundation of the Federal Reserve bank; American Imperialism and economic Colonialism, the formation of the United Nations; the formation of the World Health Organization, the World Bank and the World Trade Organization; the formation of the European Union and the Euro currency; the formations of a North American Union and the Amero currency, the Middle East Free Trade Area, the African Union, and the various Middle East peace processes as major milestones. Some say that the New World Order will be created by a military coup, using UN and possibly American troops, against all the nations of the world to bring about a singular world government. Before 2000, it was said that this process would be set in motion by the predicted Y2K computer crisis causing widespread social disorder. Black helicopters are apart of some of the ideas about the NWO, especially among the US militia movement, that says that special unmarked "black" helicopters are being used now in secret military operations and are going to be used by secret agents of the New World Order to implement their plans. Others maintain that the United States is to be taken over, by troops nominally loyal to the United Nations but in fact controlled by a trans-national group (sometimes referred to as Faction One). The takeover is to include the detention of 'patriots' and those hostile to the NWO in secret internment camps in remote parts of the country, to which elements of the population will be taken for processing before being released as "work-units." (See Rex 84). Other components of the NWO may include the dispersal of chemicals into the atmosphere via aircraft in the Chemtrail theory, the well-known CIA mind control experiments performed under the code name MK-ULTRA, and involvement by extraterrestrial aliens, as in the Dulce Base conspiracy theories. The mental health systems of various nations have been cited as a means to keep dissidents in line. This theory has gained credibility among those who are aware that historically, incarceration in mental hospitals has been used by totalitarian regimes to control opposition, and they say that some, if not all of these regimes, as well as ostensible democracies, still do this. Some ideas are that the New World Order is the rulership of Earth by the Anti-Christ, and identify the coming of Satan's reign with the mark of the beast (666) mentioned specifically in the Book of Revelation (see Revelation 13:16). Because the Mark of the Beast is linked to the act of "buying and selling", this mark has been at various times considered identical with the collection of sales tax, the use of Social Security card numbers, and the bar-coding of retail goods with UPC (Universal Product Code) markings. Current theorists have implicated RFID tagging as well. Katherine Albrecht and Liz McIntyre, authors of Spychips: How Major Corporations and Government Plan to Track Your Every Move with RFID, wrote a new book on the subject from a Christian perspective. John Conner, leader of an organization called "The Resistance of Christ" also says there is a strong connection. Related subjects include eschatology (last things) and dispensationalism. In Alice Bailey's concept, a Brotherhood of Mahatmas (among them Master Djwhal Khul, "The Tibetan") work on the "inner planes" to oversee humanity's transition to the New World Order. At present, the members of this Spiritual Hierarchy are only known to a few people, with whom they communicate telepathically, but as the need for their personal involvement in the plan increases, there will be an "Externalization of the Hierarchy" and all people will know of their presence on Earth. One of the results of this will be the "solution" of "The Jewish problem" by intermarriage of Jews with people of other religions, putting an end to Orthodox Judaism and paving the way for all people to accept Christ (also called Maitreya) as the Messiah.

There are many theories which feature a plan to create a one-world government. Most of these theories envision this as being done against the self-interest of the particular nation they happen to live in. Sociologists draw a connection between these theories and a more general sentiment of nationalism or isolationism. For example, prior to the rise of Neoconservatism in the United States, conservative or Republican talk show hosts such as Rush Limbaugh would criticize different politicians for internationalist positions they felt were not in the best interest of the United States. Commentators would allege unethical or conspiratorial conduct on by disfavored politicians in support of this criticism. These allegations might be similar to new world order theories. Historically this debate has most often centered on supporters of international free trade versus protectionists. Since protectionists generally believe that opposing a certain liberalization of trade helps their own country, it is then implied the free trade supporters are supporting a position against their own country. New world order theories therefore most often do not surmise that the believer's nation is working for world control, but rather that others, perhaps including powerful officials, are working to control that country and all countries. The people responsible for the new world order are also the same people who have staged many historical events such as World Wars and terrorist attacks. World leaders throughout history have successfully manipulated their people into wars using false flag operations. Here are some examples of such manipulations: The Nazis capitalized on the Reichstag fire by blaming the Communists for it, thus eliminating support for the Communist party in Germany, and leading to Nazi domination of the legislature. The use of the Patriot Act in the United States (9/11). The state of emergency in Indira Gandhi's rule of India after convicted of election fraud. The United States knew in advance of the attacks on Pearl Harbor, and President Roosevelt used the attacks as a "legitimate" reason for entering World War II. Operation Northwoods, a proposed series of false flag operations to be used as a pretext for an invasion of Cuba, was signed off by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, but rejected by President Kennedy shortly before his assassination. The Gulf of Tonkin Incident led President Johnson to escalate U.S. hostilities in Vietnam. The Federal Reserve Act, designed to regulate bankers, was written on a private island off the coast of Georgia in 1910 by bankers representing the JP Morgan, Rockefeller, and Rothschild interests. This gave the top international bankers the power to control and manipulate the United States economy. Elements of the United States government knew in advance of the attacks on the World Trade Center and The Pentagon (9/11), the Bush administration used the attacks as a "legitimate" reason to enter Afghanistan, and later Iraq. It is also thought that the US may use similar reasoning to invade Iran, Israel, Lebanon and other countries in the Middle East as a foothold for the new world order. The new world order is also at work in globalization, or in the various intellectual movements evolved from Marxism, ranging from social democracy to the Frankfurt School. These are intended to homogenize cultures and values by political normalization, as in the European Union and African Union's gradual "communitarian construction" scheme of a common economic and legal framework.

These are some of the oral statements and prophecies of the Holy Prophet Noble Drew Ali on the subject of the New World Order: If you have people in the South, get them out, because that is where destruction is going to start. The times that have been, won't be no more. One day, they are going to tear down all the churches and take the bells and melt them down, and make bullets to fight with. Things are going back to the horse and buggy days. One day, blood is going to flow in the streets up to a horse's brow. One day, bombs are going to fall so that they won't miss a spot as wide as my shoe. You are going to need a basement to hide in. One day, people are going to be so hungry that the only way that you will be able to turn them away, will be at the point of a gun. Money will be burnt in the streets, and we won't be able to buy much; and when I put my spirit in the streets, you won't be able to sell your car for 25 cents. One day, all of the property is going back to the government. We are going to be taxed to death. One day, the Europeans are going to lock the food up in warehouses, put soldiers around them to guard them, and you will go anywhere he says to get something to eat. One day you will go to the store, and there will be soldiers there with guns with bayonets on them, and they will not let you enter. They will order you to move on. One day the European is going to let you down. You are going to have to put up a 90 day supply of food to last you until your brothers come to your rescue from the East. Your Nationality Card is going to change on you in your pocket. (This is about to come to pass in 2008 with President Bush's so called National ID Card.)

SOURCES:

Fox News

CNN News

C-Span News
News 4 WOAI
CNBC News
Time Magazine
New York Times
The Washington Post
The Works of Congressman Ron Paul Wikipedia, The Free Encyclopedia
Peace & Love
THE INSURGENT
Bro. Milton E. Moore-Bey
http://www.blackplanet.com/Jerry\_Lewis-Bey/
<http://www.myspace.com/miltonmoorebey>

Click to join Therevealersmoorishscience

| 23790|2007-11-16 11:33:52|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Offtopi|

Attachments :

IMJ,

Thanks for the piece on Connecticut. Very useful.

GE

---

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com on behalf of IMJs@webtv.net

Sent: Wed 11/14/2007 11:36 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Eugenics, Genetics, James Watson and Cold Spring Harbor (Offtopic

I've been gathering together info on this and built these pages a few years ago.... A man named Boyd E. Graves seems to have amassed the most damning evidence. [his website is on the Aids origins pages below]

IMJ

Eugenics: Made In America!

http://community-2.webtv.net/Down\_For\_Knowledge/EugenicsMadeIn/index.html

Aids Origins

http://community-2.webtv.net/Down\_For\_Knowledge/AIDSOrgins/

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23791|2007-11-16 23:09:34|Alex van Deelen|Zimbabwe and Sarkozy|
Peter,

> Thanks, Alex, for that expose on Zimbabwe. It seems there > are in fact two sides to the Mugabe/Zimbabwe coin.

Thanks. The extremely biased coverage of Zimbabwe by the BBC is one of my biggest disappointments in the organisation.

It seems obsessed with reporting things from the Rhodesian point of view. They are not much more than an anti-Mugabe cabal.

Alex

| 23792|2007-11-16 23:09:34|Alex van Deelen|NEWBIE HERE!|

> Greetings to everyone here! It was hard finding a > group that can constantly keep me educated on > things that are important to me. I truly hope that > is will be a group of knowledge. I came here for > some guidance and knowledge of my African > blood line. I know alot but I don't know > everything. I'm a mother of 2 beautiful Queens > and sometimes it is hard for me trying to teach > them the truth without fearing the outside world > influence. So here I am. As a beginner here > maybe someone can help at this point of my life.
>
> Thank you!

Hi Lynn Henderson,

Welcome on board. :)

Ask whatever you or your girls need to know.

Alex

| 23793|2007-11-17 08:01:07|ahmed hany|all about egypt| egypt is a nice city you will like it the city of pyramids

if you want to know more about it and down load picture you can visit

<http://goodandfun4u.blogspot.com/>

you will find a good data and nice picture

so nice website

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

Make Yahoo! your homepage.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23794|2007-11-17 08:01:07|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Awhile ago I had an epihany. Europe needs Africa for its natural resource because Africa is vital to the economic stability and advancement of Europe. Without this form of neo-colonialism Europe would be forced back into the dark ages. Therefore, they will maintain the status quo at all costs.

Sarkozy, who would be classified as a far right wing Republican in America, engaged in a deliberate attack againgt the minds of African people by going to a university named after one the greatest liberators of African history and basically calling all of his work insignificant and false. Why didnt the faculty and students boo him off the stage and toss him off the campus?

We are so weak and confused as a people that, at times, I feel there is no hope. I have heard African people state that "white supremacy" is a conspiracy theory. There is a march on the Justice Department today and the Civil Rights division head will not talk to any of the represenatives. Moreover, nothing will come from this march, certainly not justice. Memebers of this forum have suggested fantastic ideas that would improve the condition of Africa people but we are not in a position to bring the ideas to fruition.

Everytime you watch a program about Kemet on the History or Discovery channel, African people are not represented and our history given to other people. Looking out of my window I see our youth practicing the "Crack Dat" dance instead of studying their history. Every month "they" find a new high profile negro to lynch and they report on the demise of these, mostly black men, with so much glee and celebration. Sellouts are rewarded and freedom fighters destroyed. Ignorance approved and intellgence dismissed. Africa people are thirsting for a change but there is nothing to quench our thirst. The vast majority of Afrikan leaders are either stooges or figureheads.

I ask you, African men and women, what is the solution to this problem? This is a forum filled with intellectuals surely we can come up with an actionable plan.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

>

> --- Paul Kekai Manansala

> wrote:

>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters

>> wrote:

>>>

>>>

>>> --- Djehuti Sundaka

>>> wrote:

>>>

>>>> Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is

>>> a

>>>> continent of

>>>> plantation-states created by the colonizers and

>>>> managed by a >>>> succession of their lackies. The AU, like the

>>> OAU

>>>> before it, is just

>>>> a union of plantation-states that won't

>>> establish a

>>>> common

>>>> continental military defense, currency, or free

>>>> trade and travel to >>>> bring about unity and continental prosperity.

>>>>

>>>> Djehuti Sundaka

>>>>

>>> Hi

>>> What you have written is cold blooded. But I must >>> agree.

>>>

> >
> >
> > Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African
> > independence struggles.
> > In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot
> > of blood lost.
> > Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.
> >
> > However, two things often happened in the process.
> > One is that many > > independence leaders at their core were still > > educated Europhiles.
> >
> > They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same
> > time they saw the > > answer was with the West.
> >
> > The other problem is that the independence leaders
> > had little > > experience necessary for running a modern country.
> >
> > The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few
> > people who knew > > anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were > > confined mainly to > > working jobs and simply were not allowed into many
> > positions of > > technical or sophisticated business knowledge.
> >
> > Regards,
> > Paul Kekai Manansala
>
> Paul
>
> > You're right. The problem is that most African leaders > > don't understand that European civilization is based > > on the book. In other words if you learn from a book
> > how to do something you can do it.
>
> > They believe that science has advanced purely by > > consultants from University, instead of understanding
> > that it is the common man that makes the innovation, > > that University personnel learn about and perfect.
>
> > As a result, these leaders, unlike the Japanese
> > ,associated advancement with getting people to become

> acculturated to European civilization as a method of > insuring that they would find the most qualified > promising candidate to help in modernizing their > cultures. The Japanese on the otherhand sent Japanese > to learn western technology, but never let these
> "western oriented" people become the leaders in the > modernization movement. In this way they ensured that > a Japanese character would be evident in the rise of > their civilization.

>
> Clyde

>
>
>

---

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>

| 23795|2007-11-17 08:01:07|ahmed|egypt nice city the city of pyramids|

egypt is a nice city you will like it the city of pyramids

if you want to know more about it and down load picture you can visit

<http://goodandfun4u.blogspot.com/>

you will find a good data and nice picture

so nice website

| 23796|2007-11-17 08:23:51|nnamdi79|Re: Wonderful Ethiopians of the Cushite Empire part II|
HTP Neo,

The book you mention below, Book II of Drusilla Dunjee Houston's work is available. I picked up my copy a couple of months ago while attending the Black History meetings of the Association of the Study of African American Life and History (ASALH). Houston's biographer Peggy Brooks-Bertram was at the conference and was a panel discussion participant. I'd suggest you contact Brooks-Bertram by writing her at P.O. Box 161, Buffalo, New York 14215 or reach her through the Uncrowned Queens webpage @ to obtain a copy of the book. Brooks-Bertram is currently working on a biography of Houston. Not sure of a release date.

<http://wings.buffalo.edu/uncrownedqueens/C/index.html>

Nnamdi

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Maurice Humphrey wrote:

>

> Hotep everyone!!

>

> I have been following the dialogue on Ta Seti for sometime now and I find it very informative.

> This is my first time initiating a dialogue. My name is Neo and I attended Baba Asa's lecture sometime ago and he mentioned that there is a second part to Ms. Houston's "Wonderful Ethiopians of the Ancient Cushite Empire". He said the book would be published soon. Does anyone know anything about this ? And if so do you know if the book has been published and if it is available for purchase?

>

>

> -----

> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

>

| 23797|2007-11-17 10:52:53|Alex van Deelen|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

> Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African independence struggles.

> In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot of blood lost.

> Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.

>

> However, two things often happened in the process. One is that many independence leaders at their core were still educated Europhiles.

>

> They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same time they saw the answer was with the West.

>

> The other problem is that the independence leaders had little experience necessary for running a modern country.

>

> The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few people who knew anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were confined mainly to working jobs and simply were not allowed into many positions of technical or sophisticated business knowledge.

This was the original intent in all the colonies - keep Black people from being independent. That is what they devoted every moment of their day to. This is why they created no universities at all, and all the leadership was educated in Europe, the US, etc.

Colonists never introduced two things they supposedly took great pride in:

- democracy

- local government
- infrastructure for the benefit of the people, instead of the corporations

Alex

| 23798|2007-11-17 11:15:24|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Elliot

I asked this question also, and got no response.
Who invited him to speak in the first place?
It takes no brilliance to see what Sarkozy is about.

You are correct about the weakness of blacks worldwide, and it is frustrating to observe all of the interconnected situations as they unfold, and watch helplessly while blacks not only play into it, but aid in it, as if they are in a zombie-like dream state.
Unfortunately, there is no island in which you can escape. No nation where you can run and hide from the nightmare. The same issue are pervasive in India, Asia, and Alaska.
All one can do is be proactive, and honestly vocalize reality and hope 1 out of 10, or 1 out of 1000 will share the same concerns and be committed to helping to make a change.

Over time, I have come to understand, if blacks want to realize their history, the shortest path is to gain access to the Vatican catacombs and other secret knowledge stores. Our history has been purposely collected over thousands of years, hidden away, and reintroduced periodically as their own. Access to just one of these caches would uncover what 200 years of speculative research will not.
Problem is, over thousands of years, blacks have been terrorized into a permanent state of fear and disorganization. A thousand year old Stockholm Syndrome with pervasive identification with the aggression dominance that without specialized and radical psychological treatment will continue through generational propagation. Aided by fractional divisions such as interbreeding, indoctrination as education, and fear of one another as promoted by class, drugs, race, and economics.

Here's an epiphany that struck me.

Suppose a certain group, a certain worldly, and very well organized group decided to gain control of the world by creating situations that pitted one group against the other. This group decided to accomplish this feat, they needed to organize a network that controlled literature, history, the media, economics, politics, and religion.
Suppose they decided to obtain the required resources the best method would be to divide themselves into two groups separated by social ideology. For example, one group embraced communism while the other embraced another ideology called, democracy. They then create a false conflict between themselves that demanded that all peoples residing within each region devote all their time and resources to defeating the other. Over time, the vast majority of both group's resources are funneled into this manufactured enterprise while those who created it on both sides are positioned to siphon all these resources onto themselves. Simultaneously, they had to deal with fractions within their group who opposed or were not committed to this plan. So, they create situations that would motivate others outside of their group to assist in the elimination of these opposing fractions, while at the same time, gaining benefits from the action.

As the plan progresses, the world is focused on channeling all it's resources into one or the other group, while the group's true organizers have positioned themselves as Arms manufacturers, trade merchants, bankers, Presidential & Premiere Advisors, CEOs, Oligarchs, grass root organizers, and Educators. All the while siphoning the resources from both cultures onto themselves, and used to strengthen and widen the structure to maintain this position. This is done all behind the scenes, in a manner much like the Hykos did in Ancient Egypt. In a stealth like mode, with tribune not as apparent.

Granted, it's a very complex and twisted web. However, facts seem to support such a scenario, and the sequence of events in history do not appear to be coincidental.

We often blame "whites" for our situation, but digging deeper and peeling the onion will show others that control;

- 1) The Media
- 2) The Drug Trade
- 3) World Banks
- 4) Weapons development (nuclear bomb, bioagent development, psychological warfare, ect)
- 5) World Political Policy
- 6) Religion (Bible, Quran, Torah, etc)

These others appear to go to great length to appear as (disguise themselves) the dominate element within each culture by intermarrying and creating hybrids that maintain the same agenda, but their social actions identify them as being of the same group.

Sarkozy appears to be of this group, as was Lenin, the NAACP founder and present BOD, the Communist Party founders, the Bible scholars, Einstein, Oppenheimer, The Russian Oligarchs, The World Bank Organizers, The US Federal Reserve Organizers & managers (no other member outside this group has ever sat on this board), The World Media Owners (Brought both Motown & BET), The US Political Think Tank Organizers, The founders of European Psychology (Freud), Hollywood Controllers (World Image Control), World Trade Center Owners (Tribune Hub), Controlling Board Of Director of majority of Military Prime Contractors (Lockheed, Boeing, Raytheon, General Dynamics...).

Who really holds the power?

Recently, I prepared a presentation for obtaining SBA (Small Business Administration) funding for an inner city business.

At the SBA, a black woman (Director) attempted to persuade me not to get my hopes on gaining SBA funding, or any other minority assistance, in spite of my being qualified to receive them.

Following the presentation, the SBA denied me the funding, in spite of my providing 50% of the required funding out of my own pocket.

BUT, they instead redirected my request and proactively Offered to;

- 1) sponsor up to five (5) Russian engineers to help develop my company's product by;
- 2) paying for the travel expenses from Russia to the US
- 3) paying for their US living expenses, for up to 2 years
- 4) paying their salaries, for up to 2 years
- 5) paying for any continuing education these Russians might require to assist in the design effort

These expenses would all be paid for out of SBA funding, which are obtained using tax dollars from American citizens. WTF!

Tell me, can you put 2+2 together?

Why blacks continue to ignore their situation is beyond me. Believing we can accomplish significant changes on an individual basis is insane, or a direct result of our conditioning.

Regards,
Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: elliottandelliottmtg <elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Fri, 16 Nov 2007 19:43:24 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Awhile ago I had an epiphany. Europe needs Africa for its natural resource because Africa is vital to the economic stability and advancement of Europe. Without this form of neo-colonialism Europe would be forced back into the dark ages. Therefore, they will maintain the status quo at all costs.

Sarkozy, who would be classified as a far right wing Republican in America, engaged in a deliberate attack against the minds of African people by going to a university named after one of the greatest liberators of African history and basically calling all of his work insignificant and false. Why didn't the faculty and students boo him off the stage and toss him off the campus?

We are so weak and confused as a people that, at times, I feel there is no hope. I have heard African people state that "white supremacy" is a conspiracy theory. There is a march on the Justice Department today and the Civil Rights division head will not talk to any of the representatives. Moreover, nothing will come from this march, certainly not justice. Members of this forum have suggested fantastic ideas that would improve the condition of Africa people but we are not in a position to bring the ideas to fruition. Everytime you watch a program about Kemet on the History or Discovery channel, African people are not represented and our history given to other people. Looking out of my window I see our youth practicing the "Crack Dat" dance instead of studying their history. Every month "they" find a new high profile negro to lynch and they report on the demise of these, mostly black men, with so much glee and celebration. Sellouts are rewarded and freedom fighters destroyed. Ignorance approved and intelligence dismissed. Africa people are thirsting for a change but there is nothing to quench our thirst. The vast majority of African leaders are either stooges or figureheads.

I ask you, African men and women, what is the solution to this problem? This is a forum filled with intellectuals surely we can come up with an actionable plan.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

>

> --- Paul Kekai Manansala

> wrote:

>

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters

> > wrote:

> > >

> > >

>>> --- Djehuti Sundaka
>>> wrote:
>>>
>>>> Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is
>>> a
>>>> continent of >>>> plantation-states created by the colonizers and
>>>> managed by a >>>> succession of their lackies. The AU, like the >>> OAU
>>>> before it, is just
>>>> a union of plantation-states that won't
>>> establish a
>>>> common
>>>> continental military defense, currency, or free
>>>> trade and travel to >>>> bring about unity and continental prosperity.
>>>>
>>>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>>>
>>> Hi
>>> What you have written is cold blooded. But I must >>> agree.
>>>
>>
>>
>> Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African
>> independence struggles.
>> In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot
>> of blood lost.
>> Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.
>>
>> However, two things often happened in the process.
>> One is that many >> independence leaders at their core were still >> educated Europhiles.
>>
>> They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same
>> time they saw the >> answer was with the West.
>>
>> The other problem is that the independence leaders
>> had little >> experience necessary for running a modern country.
>>
>> The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few

> > people who knew > > anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were > > confined mainly to > > working jobs and simply were not allowed into many
> > positions of > > technical or sophisticated business knowledge.
> >
> > Regards,
> > Paul Kekai Manansala
>
> Paul
>
> You're right. The problem is that most African leaders
> don't understand that European civilization is based > on the book. In other words if you learn from a book
> how to do something you can do it.
>
> They believe that science has advanced purely by > consultants from University, instead of understanding
> that it is the common man that makes the innovation, > that University personnel learn about and perfect.
>
> As a result, these leaders, unlike the Japanese
> ,associated advancement with getting people to become > acculturated to European civilization as a method of > insuring that they would find the most qualified
> promising candidate to help in modernizing their > cultures. The Japanese on the otherhand sent Japanese
> to learn western technology, but never let these
> "western oriented" people become the leaders in the > modernization movement. In this way they ensured that > a Japanese character would be evident in the rise of > their civilization.
>
> Clyde
>
>
>

---

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.
> Make Yahoo! your homepage.
> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>

| 23799|2007-11-17 11:59:58|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

I feel exactly as you do. It is so depressing.

A huge percentage of the black people I am around are such a weak, hypocritical, lying group of "tom's" that it is pathetic. I am convinced that the problem is self-hate. And, of course, since you are a product of your environment - for the most part - how could there be another outcome? The history of this country (and the european diaspora) is one of consistent, relentless degradation and non-acceptance of black people. We are assaulted on EVERY front and since we don't have our culture or families in tact we have nothing to fall back on.

I'll mention an idea I've had for a long time that unfortunately does not provide a quick solution and is not fully worked out in my mind or on paper.

The idea is to set up organizations - not schools per se because that might be financially prohibitive - whose objective is to de-indoctrinate the minds of our people. Essentially, frankly, the goal would be to "brainwash" or un-brainwash them to counter the persistent onslaught of black-race negativity. They would be taught Afrikan history, psychology (how the mind works) and the Afrikan worldview within an Africentric setting. Children would be "expected" to attend from pre-school through high school, at least. I say expected because you certainly could not mandate such an attendance. This would require that our leaders step on board and how likely is that?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg" wrote:

>

> Awhile ago I had an epihany. Europe needs Africa for its natural > resource because Africa is vital to the economic stability and > advancement of Europe. Without this form of neo-colonialism Europe > would be forced back into the dark ages. Therefore, they will > maintain the status quo at all costs.

>

> Sarkozy, who would be classified as a far right wing Republican in > America, engaged in a deliberate attack againgst the minds of > African people by going to a university named after one the greatest

> liberators of African history and basically calling all of his work > insignificant and false. Why didnt the faculty and students boo him > off the stage and toss him off the campus?

>
>
> We are so weak and confused as a people that, at times, I feel

there > is no hope. I have heard African people state that "white supremacy"

> is a conspiracy theory. There is a march on the Justice Department > today and the Civil Rights division head will not talk to any of > representatives. Moreover, nothing will come from this march, > certainly not justice. Members of this forum have suggested > fantastic ideas that would improve the condition of Africa people > but we are not in a position to bring the ideas to fruition.

the

> Everytime you watch a program about Kemet on the History or > Discovery channel, African people are not represented and our > history given to other people. Looking out of my window I see our > youth practicing the "Crack Dat" dance instead of studying their > history. Every month "they" find a new high profile negro to lynch > and they report on the demise of these, mostly black men, with so > much glee and celebration. Sellouts are rewarded and freedom > fighters destroyed. Ignorance approved and intelligence dismissed.
> Africa people are thirsting for a change but there is nothing to > quench our thirst. The vast majority of Afrikan leaders are either > stooges or figureheads.

>

> I ask you, African men and women, what is the solution to this > problem? This is a forum filled with intellectuals surely we can > come up with an actionable plan.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters

> wrote:

>>

>>

>> --- Paul Kekai Manansala

>> wrote:

>>

>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters

>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> --- Djehuti Sundaka
>>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>>> Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is
>>>> a
>>>>> continent of >>>>> plantation-states created by the colonizers and
>>>>> managed by a >>>>> succession of their lackies. The AU, like the >>> OAU
>>>>> before it, is just
>>>>> a union of plantation-states that won't >>> establish a
>>>>> common
>>>>> continental military defense, currency, or free
>>>>> trade and travel to >>>>> bring about unity and continental prosperity.
>>>>>
>>>>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>>>>
>>>> Hi
>>>> What you have written is cold blooded. But I must >>>> agree.
>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African
>>> independence struggles.
>>> In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot
>>> of blood lost.
>>> Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.
>>>
>>> However, two things often happened in the process.
>>> One is that many >>> independence leaders at their core were still >>> educated Europhiles.
>>>
>>> They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same
>>> time they saw the >>> answer was with the West.
>>>
>>> The other problem is that the independence leaders
>>> had little

>>> experience necessary for running a modern country.
>>>
>>> The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few
>>> people who knew >>> anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were >>> confined mainly to >>> working jobs and simply were not allowed into many
>>> positions of >>> technical or sophisticated business knowledge.
>>>
>>> Regards,
>>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>
>> Paul
>>
>> You're right. The problem is that most African leaders
>> don't understand that European civilization is based >> on the book. In other words if you learn from a book
>> how to do something you can do it.
>>
>> They believe that science has advanced purely by >> consultants from University, instead of understanding
>> that it is the common man that makes the innovation, >> that University personnel learn about and perfect.
>>
>> As a result, these leaders, unlike the Japanese
>> ,associated advancement with getting people to become >> acculturated to European civilization as a method of >> insuring that they would find the most qualified
>> promising candidate to help in modernizing their >> cultures. The Japanese on the otherhand sent Japanese
>> to learn western technology, but never let these
>> "western oriented" people become the leaders in the >> modernization movement. In this way they ensured that >> a Japanese character would be evident in the rise of >> their civilization.
>>
>> Clyde
>>
>>
>>
>

---

> _____
>> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

> > Make Yahoo! your homepage.

> > <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

> >

>

| 23800|2007-11-17 13:05:01|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Mahari

Thank you for your response.

Your idea is correct and in-line with most enlightened black thinking.

For example, when a small group of whites are held hostage for even a brief period of time, following the incident, they undergo therapy for Stockholm syndrome. This is true, even if they were held captive for a week or a month.

Remember Patty Hearst and the SLA?

In her trial, her lawyers had this defense.

"Hearst's attorney, F. Lee Bailey, claimed that she had been blindfolded, imprisoned in a narrow closet and physically and sexually abused. The claim that her actions were the result of a concerted brainwashing program was central to her defense. (Hearst's actions have also been attributed to Stockholm syndrome, in which hostages sympathize with the aims of their captors.) Bailey also argued that she had been coerced or intimidated into taking part in the bank robbery."

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Patty\_Hearst

So, if Ms. Hearst was led to such actions by captivity of less than 1 year, what actions can we attribute to 1,000 years of even more severe treatment?

There are many people who agree with your thoughts of un-brain-washing. Unfortunately, too few are actual trained black psychiatrists.

I see the human mind like that of a canvas. If it is clean when you apply paint, the colors are vibrant and vivid. With the proper protective covering, it will remain this way over time.

If on the other hand, the canvas is soiled or stained, when paint is applied, over time, the dirt or stain will show/bleed through, regardless of any protective overcoat.

The black mind has been warped with many symptoms of many centuries of underlying contamination. It is apparent that overlaying an education on top is insufficient to suppress these underlying symptoms, and in many cases, may amplify or further distort them.

European culture teaches us to treat the symptoms of a problem, versus addressing the problem itself.

The greatest problem for blacks, in my opinion, is an inability to show the same type of organization we see used by Europeans and Asians, even when our very existence depends on it.

Therefore, I have no problem with what Sarkozy, Bush, or David Duke say or do.

Rather, I find greater issue with why blacks do not react in a healthy way to organize, and put a halt to this madness.

By taking offense at his views, and reacting by debating if he is right or wrong, in my opinion merely enforces the accuracy of those views. I.E. With excuses aside, how could our ancestors have achieved such wondrous achievements when we can't even unite to save ourselves from pending destruction. This is in spite of whatever external forces come to bear. We being the Golden people, United, there is nothing that we could not accomplish.

Yet, seeking approval, we set ourselves up once again by inviting Sarkozy, Bush, or David Duke to speak at an institution we hold in high regards.

Would we have been pleased had Sarkozy instead praised Diop? Why, and why would we believe him to be sincere even then, or why would his approval make any difference at all? I believe these are all justified and reasonable questions that are much more important than Sarkozy's actions and words.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Sat, 17 Nov 2007 19:59:54 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

I feel exactly as you do. It is so depressing.

A huge percentage of the black people I am around are such a weak, hypocritical, lying group of "tom's" that it is pathetic. I am convinced that the problem is self-hate. And, of course, since you are a product of your environment - for the most part - how could there be another outcome? The history of this country (and the european diaspora) is one of consistent, relentless degradation and non-acceptance of black people. We are assaulted on EVERY front and since we don't have our culture or families in tact we have nothing to fall back on.

I'll mention an idea I've had for a long time that unfortunately does not provide a quick solution and is not fully worked out in my mind or on paper.

The idea is to set up organizations - not schools per se because that might be financially prohibitive - whose objective is to de-indoctrinate the minds of our people. Essentially, frankly, the goal would be to "brainwash" or un-brainwash them to counter the persistent onslaught of black-race negativity. They would be taught Afrikan history, psychology (how the mind works) and the Afrikan worldview within an Africentric setting. Children would be "expected" to attend from pre-school through high school, at least. I say expected because you certainly could not mandate such an attendance. This would require that our leaders step on board and how likely is that?

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
wrote:

- >
- > Awhile ago I had an epihany. Europe needs Africa for its natural
- > resource because Africa is vital to the economic stability and
- > advancement of Europe. Without this form of neo-colonialism Europe
- > would be forced back into the dark ages. Therefore, they will
- > maintain the status quo at all costs.
- >
- > Sarkozy, who would be classified as a far right wing Republican in
- > America, engaged in a deliberate attack againgst the minds of
- > African people by going to a university named after one the greatest

- > liberators of African history and basically calling all of his work
- > insignificant and false. Why didnt the faculty and students boo him
- > off the stage and toss him off the campus?
- >
- >
- > We are so weak and confused as a people that, at times, I feel

there

- > is no hope. I have heard African people state that "white supremacy"

- > is a conspiracy theory. There is a march on the Justice Department
- > today and the Civil Rights division head will not talk to any of

the

- > represenatives. Moreover, nothing will come from this march,
- > certainly not justice. Memebers of this forum have suggested
- > fantastic ideas that would improve the condition of Africa people
- > but we are not in a position to bring the ideas to fruition.
- > Everytime you watch a program about Kemet on the History or
- > Discovery channel, African people are not represented and our
- > history given to other people. Looking out of my window I see our
- > youth practicing the "Crack Dat" dance instead of studying their
- > history. Every month "they" find a new high profile negro to lynch
- > and they report on the demise of these, mostly black men, with so
- > much glee and celebration. Sellouts are rewarded and freedom
- > fighters destroyed. Ignorance approved and intellgence dismissed.
- > Africa people are thirsting for a change but there is nothing to
- > quench our thirst. The vast majority of Afrikan leaders are either > stooges or figureheads.

>
> I ask you, African men and women, what is the solution to this > problem? This is a forum filled with intellectuals surely we can > come up with an actionable plan.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters > wrote:
> >
> >
> > --- Paul Kekai Manansala
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters
> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > --- Djehuti Sundaka
> > > > wrote:
> > > > >
> > > > > Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is
> > > > a
> > > > > continent of > > > > > plantation-states created by the colonizers and
> > > > > managed by a > > > > > succession of their lackies. The AU, like the > > > OAU
> > > > before it, is just
> > > > a union of plantation-states that won't > > > establish a
> > > > common
> > > > continental military defense, currency, or free
> > > > trade and travel to > > > > bring about unity and continental prosperity.
> > > >
> > > > Djehuti Sundaka
> > > >
> > > > Hi
> > > > What you have written is cold blooded. But I must > > > > agree.

>>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African

>>> independence struggles.

>>> In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot

>>> of blood lost.

>>> Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.

>>>

>>> However, two things often happened in the process.

>>> One is that many

>>> independence leaders at their core were still

>>> educated Europhiles.

>>>

>>> They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same

>>> time they saw the >>> answer was with the West.

>>>

>>> The other problem is that the independence leaders

>>> had little

>>> experience necessary for running a modern country.

>>>

>>> The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few

>>> people who knew

>>> anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were

>>> confined mainly to

>>> working jobs and simply were not allowed into many

>>> positions of

>>> technical or sophisticated business knowledge.

>>>

>>> Regards,

>>> Paul Kekai Manansala

>>

>> Paul

>>

>> You're right. The problem is that most African leaders

>> don't understand that European civilization is based >> on the book. In other words if you learn from a book

>> how to do something you can do it.

>>

>> They believe that science has advanced purely by

>> consultants from University, instead of understanding

>> that it is the common man that makes the innovation,

>> that University personnel learn about and perfect.

>>

>> As a result, these leaders, unlike the Japanese

> > ,associated advancement with getting people to become > > acculturated to European civilization as a method of > > insuring that they would find the most qualified
> > promising candidate to help in modernizing their > > cultures. The Japanese on the otherhand sent Japanese
> > to learn western technology, but never let these
> > "western oriented" people become the leaders in the > > modernization movement. In this way they ensured that > > a Japanese character would be evident in the rise of > > their civilization.

> >

> > Clyde

> >

> >

> >

>

---

>

> > Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

> > Make Yahoo! your homepage.

> > <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

> >

>

| 23801|2007-11-17 13:32:33|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

I agree with you almost completely except the reason I posted the article was because I think we all need to know exactly what happened. Previous to reading the article I did not know this speech took place. I DID know that I didn't like this guy and that he was arrogant and probably racist. I wasn't sure. Now I know. I don't want to promote more injustice by not giving people the benefit of the doubt. In addition, too many of our people just don't know what's going on in the world.

I was watching a news program with an associate of mine that dealt with the horrors of the Iraq war. He got up and walked out saying "How can anyone watch this stuff?" Needless to say he is not an informed black man. He is an ordained minister/musician who is into white women among others. We have conversations he calls "heavy" but the essence and import of the information goes in one ear and out the other.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

- >
- > Mahari
- >
- > Thank you for your response.
- >
- > Your idea is correct and in-line with most enlightened black thinking.
- >
- > For example, when a small group of whites are held hostage for even a
- > brief period of time, following the incident, they undergo therapy for
- > Stockholm syndrome. This is true, even if they were held captive for a
- > week or a month.
- > Remember Patty Hearst and the SLA?
- > In her trial, her lawyers had this defense.
- > "Hearst's attorney, F. Lee Bailey, claimed that she had been
- > blindfolded, imprisoned in a narrow closet and physically and sexually
- > abused. The claim that her actions were the result of a concerted
- > brainwashing program was central to her defense. (Hearst's actions have
- > also been attributed to Stockholm syndrome, in which hostages sympathize
- > with the aims of their captors.) Bailey also argued that she had been
- > coerced or intimidated into taking part in the bank robbery."
- > http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Patty\_Hearst
- >
- > So, if Ms. Hearst was led to such actions by captivity of less than 1
- > year, what actions can we attribute to 1,000 years of even more severe
- > treatment?
- >
- > There are many people who agree with your thoughts of un-brainwashing.
- > Unfortunately, too few are actual trained black psychiatrists.
- >
- > I see the human mind like that of a canvas. If it is clean when you
- > apply paint, the colors are vibrant and vivid. With the proper
- > protective covering, it will remain this way over time.

- > If on the other hand, the canvas is soiled or stained, when paint is
- > applied, over time, the dirt or stain will show/bleed through,
- > regardless of any protective overcoat.
- > The black mind has been warped with many symptoms of many centuries of
- > underlying contamination. It is apparent that overlaying an education on
- > top is insufficient to suppress these underlying symptoms, and in many
- > cases, may amplify or further distort them.
- > European culture teaches us to treat the symptoms of a problem, versus
- > addressing the problem itself.
- > The greatest problem for blacks, in my opinion, is an inability to show
- > the same type of organization we see used by Europeans and Asians, even
- > when our very existence depends on it.
- >
- > Therefore, I have no problem with what Sarkozy, Bush, or David Duke say
- > or do.
- > Rather, I find greater issue with why blacks do not react in a healthy
- > way to organize, and put a halt to this madness.
- > By taking offense at his views, and reacting by debating if he is right
- > or wrong, in my opinion merely enforces the accuracy of those views.
- > I.E. With excuses aside, how could our ancestors have achieved such
- > wondrous achievements when we can't even unite to save ourselves from
- > pending destruction. This is in spite of whatever external forces come
- > to bear. We being the Golden people, United, there is nothing that we - > could not accomplish.
- > Yet, seeking approval, we set ourselves up once again by inviting
- > Sarkozy, Bush, or David Duke to speak at an institution we hold in high
- > regards.
- > Would we have been pleased had Sarkozy instead praised Diop? Why, and
- > why would we believe him to be sincere even then, or why would his
- > approval make any difference at all? I believe these are all justified
- > and reasonable questions that are much more important than Sarkozy's > actions and words.

>
> Meninarmer
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Sat, 17 Nov 2007 19:59:54 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> I feel exactly as you do. It is so depressing.
> A huge percentage of the black people I am around are such a weak, > hypocritical, lying group of "tom's" that it is pathetic. I am > convinced that the problem is self-hate. And, of course, since you > are a product of your environment - for the most part - how could > there be another outcome? The history of this country (and the > european diaspora) is one of consistent, relentless degradation and > non-acceptance of black people. We are assaulted on EVERY front and > since we don't have our culture or families in tact we have nothing > to fall back on.
> I'll mention an idea I've had for a long time that unfortunately does > not provide a quick solution and is not fully worked out in my mind > or on paper.
> The idea is to set up organizations - not schools per se because
that > might be financially prohibitive - whose objective is to de> indoctrinate the minds of our people. Essentially, frankly, the goal
> would be to "brainwash" or un-brainwash them to counter the > persistent onslaught of black-race negativity. They would be taught > Afrikan history, psychology (how the mind works) and the Afrikan > worldview within an Africentric setting. Children would > be "expected" to attend from pre-school through high school, at > least. I say expected because you certainly could not mandate such > an attendance. This would require that our leaders step on board
and > how likely is that?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:
>>
>> Awhile ago I had an epihany. Europe needs Africa for its natural >> resource because Africa is vital to the economic stability and >> advancement of Europe. Without this form of neo-colonialism Europe
>> would be forced back into the dark ages. Therefore, they will >> maintain the status quo at all costs.
>>
>> Sarkozy, who would be classified as a far right wing Republican
in >> America, engaged in a deliberate attack againgst the minds of >> African people by going to a university named after one the > greatest >> liberators of African history and basically calling all of his work >> insignificant and false. Why didnt the faculty and students boo him
>> off the stage and toss him off the campus?
>>
>>
>> We are so weak and confused as a people that, at times, I feel
> there >> is no hope. I have heard African people state that "white > supremacy"
>> is a conspiracy theory. There is a march on the Justice Department
>> today and the Civil Rights division head will not talk to any of
> the >> represenatives. Moreover, nothing will come from this march, >> certainly not justice. Memebbers of this forum have suggested >> fantastic ideas that would improve the condition of Africa people >> but we are not in a position to bring the ideas to fruition.
>> Everytime you watch a program about Kemet on the History or >> Discovery channel, African people are not represented and our >> history given to other people. Looking out of my window I see our >> youth practicing the "Crack Dat" dance instead of studying their >> history. Every month "they" find a new high profile negro to lynch
>> and they report on the demise of these, mostly black men, with so >> much glee and celebration. Sellouts are rewarded and freedom >> fighters destroyed. Ignorance approved and intellgence dismissed.
>> Africa people are thirsting for a change but there is nothing to >> quench our thirst. The vast majority of Afrikan leaders are either
>> stooges or figureheads.

>>
>> I ask you, African men and women, what is the solution to this >> problem? This is a forum filled with intellectuals surely we can >> come up with an actionable plan.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters >> wrote:
>>>
>>>
>>> --- Paul Kekai Manansala
>>> wrote:
>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters
>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> --- Djehuti Sundaka
>>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>> Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is
>>>>> a
>>>>>> continent of >>>>>> plantation-states created by the colonizers and
>>>>>> managed by a >>>>>> succession of their lackies. The AU, like the >>>>> OAU
>>>>>> before it, is just
>>>>>> a union of plantation-states that won't >>>>> establish a
>>>>>> common
>>>>>> continental military defense, currency, or free
>>>>>> trade and travel to >>>>>> bring about unity and continental prosperity.
>>>>>>
>>>>>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>>>>>
>>>>>> Hi
>>>>>> What you have written is cold blooded. But I must >>>>>> agree.
>>>>>>

>>>>
>>>>
>>>> Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African
>>>> independence struggles.
>>>> In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot
>>>> of blood lost.
>>>> Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.
>>>>
>>>> However, two things often happened in the process.
>>>> One is that many >>>> independence leaders at their core were still >>>> educated Europhiles.
>>>>
>>>> They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same
>>>> time they saw the >>>> answer was with the West.
>>>>
>>>> The other problem is that the independence leaders
>>>> had little >>>> experience necessary for running a modern country.
>>>>
>>>> The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few
>>>> people who knew >>>> anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were >>>> confined mainly to >>>> working jobs and simply were not allowed into many
>>>> positions of >>>> technical or sophisticated business knowledge.
>>>>
>>>> Regards,
>>>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>>
>>> Paul
>>>
>>> You're right. The problem is that most African leaders
>>> don't understand that European civilization is based >>> on the book. In other words if you learn from a book
>>> how to do something you can do it.
>>>
>>> They believe that science has advanced purely by >>> consultants from University, instead of understanding
>>> that it is the common man that makes the innovation, >>> that University personnel learn about and perfect.
>>>
>>> As a result, these leaders, unlike the Japanese
>>> ,associated advancement with getting people to become

>>> acculturated to European civilization as a method of >>> insuring that they would find the most qualified
>>> promising candidate to help in modernizing their >>> cultures. The Japanese on the otherhand sent Japanese
>>> to learn western technology, but never let these
>>> "western oriented" people become the leaders in the >>> modernization movement. In this way they ensured that >>> a Japanese character would be evident in the rise of >>> their civilization.

>>>

>>> Clyde

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>

>

>> _____

>>> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

>>> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>>>

>>

>

| 23802|2007-11-17 23:32:49|Dave Groves|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Just a note I have been downloading the Africa Today show from KPFA? in San Francisco every week for a podcast and they said there will be a new news network coming out of Africa that will be like Al-Jazeera soon and will tell news from various African perspectives I didnt know Nelson Mandela trained in Algeria for example. They have recently been discussing Haiti and what is happening in the Darfur region.
Swamp Fox - peace

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com [mailto:Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Mahari Mengistu

Sent: Saturday, November 17, 2007 1:32 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

I agree with you almost completely except the reason I posted the article was because I think we all need to know exactly what happened. Previous to reading the article I did not know this speech took place. I DID know that I didn't like this guy and that he was arrogant and probably racist. I wasn't sure. Now I know. I don't want to promote more injustice by not giving people the benefit of the doubt. In addition, too many of our people just don't know what's going on in the world.

I was watching a news program with an associate of mine that dealt with the horrors of the Iraq war. He got up and walked out saying "How can anyone watch this stuff?" Needless to say he is not an informed black man. He is an ordained minister/musician who is into white women among others. We have conversations he calls "heavy" but the essence and import of the information goes in one ear and out the other.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

- >
- > Mahari
- >
- > Thank you for your response.
- >
- > Your idea is correct and in-line with most enlightened black thinking.

- >
- > For example, when a small group of whites are held hostage for even

a

- > brief period of time, following the incident, they undergo therapy

for

- > Stockholm syndrome. This is true, even if they were held captive for a

- > week or a month.
- > Remember Patty Hearst and the SLA?
- > In her trial, her lawyers had this defense.
- > "Hearst's attorney, F. Lee Bailey, claimed that she had been
- > blindfolded, imprisoned in a narrow closet and physically and sexually

- > abused. The claim that her actions were the result of a concerted
- > brainwashing program was central to her defense. (Hearst's actions

have

- > also been attributed to Stockholm syndrome, in which hostages sympathize

- > with the aims of their captors.) Bailey also argued that she had been

> coerced or intimidated into taking part in the bank robbery."
> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Patty\_Hearst
>
> So, if Ms. Hearst was led to such actions by captivity of less than 1 > year, what actions can we attribute to 1,000 years of even more severe > treatment?

>

> There are many people who agree with your thoughts of un-brainwashing.

> Unfortunately, too few are actual trained black psychiatrists.

>

> I see the human mind like that of a canvas. If it is clean when you > apply paint, the colors are vibrant and vivid. With the proper > protective covering, it will remain this way over time.

> If on the other hand, the canvas is soiled or stained, when paint is > applied, over time, the dirt or stain will show/bleed through,

> regardless of any protective overcoat.

> The black mind has been warped with many symptoms of many centuries

of > underlying contamination. It is apparent that overlaying an education on > top is insufficient to suppress these underlying symptoms, and in many > cases, may amplify or further distort them.

> European culture teaches us to treat the symptoms of a problem, versus

> addressing the problem itself.

> The greatest problem for blacks, in my opinion, is an inability to show

> the same type of organization we see used by Europeans and Asians,

even

> when our very existence depends on it.

>

> Therefore, I have no problem with what Sarkozy, Bush, or David Duke

say

> or do.

> Rather, I find greater issue with why blacks do not react in a healthy

> way to organize, and put a halt to this madness.

> By taking offense at his views, and reacting by debating if he is right

> or wrong, in my opinion merely enforces the accuracy of those views.

> I.E. With excuses aside, how could our ancestors have achieved such > wondrous achievements when we can't even unite to save ourselves

from > pending destruction. This is in spite of whatever external forces

come > to bear. We being the Golden people, United, there is nothing that we > could not accomplish.

> Yet, seeking approval, we set ourselves up once again by inviting

> Sarkozy, Bush, or David Duke to speak at an institution we hold in high

> regards.

> Would we have been pleased had Sarkozy instead praised Diop? Why,

and

> why would we believe him to be sincere even then, or why would his > approval make any difference at all? I believe these are all justified

> and reasonable questions that are much more important than Sarkozy's > actions and words.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A

> MYTH.....

> Date: Sat, 17 Nov 2007 19:59:54 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> I feel exactly as you do. It is so depressing.

> A huge percentage of the black people I am around are such a weak, > hypocritical, lying group of "tom's" that it is pathetic. I am > convinced that the problem is self-hate. And, of course, since you > are a product of your environment - for the most part - how could

> there be another outcome? The history of this country (and the > european diaspora) is one of consistent, relentless degradation and

> non-acceptance of black people. We are assaulted on EVERY front and > since we don't have our culture or families in tact we have nothing > to fall back on.

> I'll mention an idea I've had for a long time that unfortunately

does > not provide a quick solution and is not fully worked out in my mind

> or on paper.

> The idea is to set up organizations - not schools per se because

that > might be financially prohibitive - whose objective is to de> indoctrinate the minds of our people. Essentially, frankly, the goal

> would be to "brainwash" or un-brainwash them to counter the > persistent onslaught of black-race negativity. They would be taught

> Afrikan history, psychology (how the mind works) and the Afrikan

> worldview within an Africentric setting. Children would > be "expected" to attend from pre-school through high school, at > least. I say expected because you certainly could not mandate such > an attendance. This would require that our leaders step on board

and > how likely is that?

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com,

"elliottandelliottm tg"

> wrote:

>>

>> Awhile ago I had an epihany. Europe needs Africa for its natural >> resource because Africa is vital to the economic stability and >> advancement of Europe. Without this form of neo-colonialism

Europe

> > would be forced back into the dark ages. Therefore, they will > > maintain the status quo at all costs.
> >
> > Sarkozy, who would be classified as a far right wing Republican

in > > America, engaged in a deliberate attack against the minds of > > African people by going to a university named after one the > greatest > > liberators of African history and basically calling all of his work

> > insignificant and false. Why didn't the faculty and students boo

him

> > off the stage and toss him off the campus?
> >
> >
> > We are so weak and confused as a people that, at times, I feel
> there > > is no hope. I have heard African people state that "white > supremacy"
> > is a conspiracy theory. There is a march on the Justice

Department

> > today and the Civil Rights division head will not talk to any of
> the > > representatives. Moreover, nothing will come from this march, > > certainly not justice. Members of this forum have suggested > > fantastic ideas that would improve the condition of African people > > but we are not in a position to bring the ideas to fruition.
> > Everytime you watch a program about Kemet on the History or > > Discovery channel, African people are not represented and our > > history given to other people. Looking out of my window I see our > > youth practicing the "Crack Dat" dance instead of studying
their > > history. Every month "they" find a new high profile negro to lynch

> > and they report on the demise of these, mostly black men, with so > > much glee and celebration. Sellouts are rewarded and freedom > > fighters destroyed. Ignorance approved and intelligence dismissed.
> > African people are thirsting for a change but there is nothing to > > quench our thirst. The vast majority of African leaders are either

> > stooges or figureheads.
> >
> > I ask you, African men and women, what is the solution to this > > problem? This is a forum filled with intellectuals surely we can > > come up with an actionable plan.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters
> > wrote:
> > >
> > >
> > > --- Paul Kekai Manansala
> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters
> > > > wrote:
> > > > >
> > > > >
> > > > > --- Djehuti Sundaka
> > > > > wrote:
> > > > > >
> > > > > Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is
> > > > > a
> > > > > continent of > > > > > plantation-states created by the colonizers and
> > > > > managed by a > > > > > succession of their lackies. The AU, like the > > > > > OAU
> > > > > before it, is just
> > > > > a union of plantation-states that won't
> > > > > establish a
> > > > > common
> > > > > continental military defense, currency, or free
> > > > > trade and travel to > > > > > bring about unity and continental prosperity.
> > > > >
> > > > > Djehuti Sundaka
> > > > >
> > > > > Hi

>>>> What you have written is cold blooded. But I must >>>> agree.
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African
>>>> independence struggles.
>>>> In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot
>>>> of blood lost.
>>>> Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.
>>>>
>>>> However, two things often happened in the process.
>>>> One is that many >>>> independence leaders at their core were still >>>> educated Europhiles.
>>>>
>>>> They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same
>>>> time they saw the >>>> answer was with the West.
>>>>
>>>> The other problem is that the independence leaders
>>>> had little >>>> experience necessary for running a modern country.
>>>>
>>>> The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few
>>>> people who knew >>>> anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were >>>> confined mainly to >>>> working jobs and simply were not allowed into many
>>>> positions of >>>> technical or sophisticated business knowledge.
>>>>
>>>> Regards,
>>>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>>
>>> Paul
>>>
>>> You're right. The problem is that most African leaders
>>> don't understand that European civilization is based >>> on the book. In other words if you learn from a book
>>> how to do something you can do it.
>>>
>>> They believe that science has advanced purely by >>> consultants from University, instead of understanding
>>> that it is the common man that makes the innovation, >>> that University personnel learn about and perfect.

>>>
>>> As a result, these leaders, unlike the Japanese
>>> ,associated advancement with getting people to become >>> acculturated to European civilization as a method of >>> insuring that they would find the most qualified
>>> promising candidate to help in modernizing their >>> cultures. The Japanese on the otherhand sent Japanese
>>> to learn western technology, but never let these
>>> "western oriented" people become the leaders in the >>> modernization movement. In this way they ensured that >>> a Japanese character would be evident in the rise of >>> their civilization.

>>>

>>> Clyde

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>

>

> _____

>> _____

>>> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

>>> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

>>>

>>

>

| 23803|2007-11-18 00:13:09|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Origins and History of Bullfighting

Bullfighting is certainly one of the best-known-although at the same time most controversial-Spanish popular customs. This Fiesta could not exist without the toro bravo, a species of bull of an ancient race that is only conserved in Spain. Formerly this bull's forebears, the primitive urus, were spread out over wide areas of the world. Many civilizations revered them; the bull cults on the Greek island of Crete are very well known. The Bible tells of sacrifices of bulls in honour of divine justice.

Bulls also played an important role in the religious ceremonies of the Iberian tribes living in Spain in prehistoric times. The origins of the plaza de toros (bullring) are probably not the Roman amphitheatres but rather the Celtic-Iberian temples where those ceremonies were held. Near Numancia in the province of Soria one of them has survived, and it is supposed that bulls were sacrificed to the gods there.

I started thinking about the bullfighting connection to Afrika. As I understand it the bull for Afrikans symbolized god, male masculinity, virility, potency and strength and to kill it as the Spanish do seemed inconsistent. So I thought that perhaps the religious bull cults go back to ritual, in fact, symbolized the killing of the people it represented, the Afrikans.

While

Here are two excerpts from the history of bullfighting that seem to support this theory.

=====

Iberians, it was Greek and Roman influences that converted it into a spectacle. During the Middle Ages it was a diversion for the aristocracy to torear on horseback -a style known as suerte de ca□

In the 18th century this tradition was more or less abandoned and the poorer population invented bullfighting on foot. Francisco Romero was a key figure in laying down the rules for the new sport..

*****

History of Bullfighting- Origins.

Bullfighting in Spain seems to have its origins during the 8 long centuries of the Spanish War of Reconquest (711-1492 A.D.) when the knights of both the Moors and Christians would organize hunting competitions as a respite from killing each other and they soon realized that of all the prey the Iberian bull offered the greatest challenge as unlike other animals it preferred to die fighting rather than fleeing.

It seems probable that a nobleman captured a few of these brave beasts and took them to his village in order to recreate the thrill of the hunt before his admiring subjects. Thus some remote part of Medieval Spain saw the origins of what is today the national Spanish spectacle of bullfighting.

The history of bullfighting recalls that the first real bullfight, or corrida, took place in 1133 at Vera, Logroño in honour of the coronation of King Alfonso VIII. From then on they became a popular pastime at many important events and continued after the wars of reconquest had finished offering noblemen an outlet to demonstrate the zeal and daring with which he defeated the Moors.

King Philip II however found the spectacle disgusting and enlisted the help of Pope Pius V to get it banned by papal decree. This, together with the growing pleasures to be had at the royal court, resulted in the nobility giving up their interest in bullfighting but not so the peasantry who took it enthusiastically to heart and it thus became a symbol of something genuinely Spanish.

By 1726 they were ready to adopt their first bullfighting hero in the form of Francisco Romero from Ronda. He was a man of humble origins who became the first professional bullfighter in Spain. With him the corrida developed into more of an art form. He introduced the estoque, sword, and the muleta, the small cape used in the last part of the fight as it is more easily wielded.

===

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Interesting point you make about the bulls. In the book "Who Were > the Minoans....?" the author says that bullfighting is version of a > very ancient Afrikan ritual, a cultural remnant of the European > Afrikans.

> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle shalomic@ wrote:
>>
>> I'm not certain of what tech the moors deployed in this area.
>> On my last trip to Seville, I was very impressed by the wonderful >> architectural designs the moors erected. At the bull fights I > couldn't >> help drawing an analogy and symbolism between Spain's fascination
> with
>> The Running Of The Bulls, Bull fighting, and the moors.
>>
>> Thanks. this should be an interesting area of research.
>>
>> Meninarmer
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: cristofori whitakara boogie_down_black@
>> Reply-To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 10:33:05 -0800 (PST)
>>
>> in ivan van sertima's golden age of the moor he notes the lighted > cities
>> of al andalusia. was it wind technology that the moors used to have >> cordoba, seville ,etc illuminated. or were they oil lamps and the > such?
>>
>> kungfuhustle shalomic@ wrote:
>>
>> Peter
>>
>> The task of harnessing lightning is not realistic since it >> requires a >> huge support mechanism to attract and collect strikes. Also,
>> since it
>> would depends on storms (thunder/lightning conditions), the >> collection
>> would be very random and costly.

> > Harnessing Wind energy or geothermal is more efficient and > cost > > effective.
> >
> > You can do a Wind Mill on an individual basis and perhaps > > generate about > > a third of the electricity required to run a home medium > sized
> > home, or
> > approx. 2KW.
> > The higher the platform (typically 30-60') the better
> chances of > > catching wind current.
> >
> > Individually, one can accomplish very little on a large > scale.
> > Hence,
> > the reason why there is not one black automobile
> manufacturer,
> > black
> > computer (component) manufacturer, or black Television
> > manufacturer is
> > the entire world. Not because we do not have the knowledge,
> > resources,
> > or need, but rather because we lack the organization.
> >
> > Meninarmer
> >
> > BTW, any physicists/electronics buffs in Ta-Seti with any > ideas
> > of > > possible relevance to trapping/harnessing the power of > > lightning, for > > example? A super-super-capacitor perhaps? Such a development
> > would > > completely revolutionise power production globally, > eliminating > > fossil > > fuel hegemony altogether. Thank you.
> >
> > Peter
> >
> > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > From: Djehuti_Sundaka@
> > Date: Thu, 15 Nov 2007 02:59:47 +0000
> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST

> IS A
>> MYTH.....
>>
>> Believe me, it always comes down to doing things by > yourself.
>> But
>> once you're successful, people will jump on your band wagon
> as
>> if >> they were always there for you.
>>
>> A Panamanian private foundation is the optimal way to go
>> offshore in >> both protecting assets and building institutions and even > though
>> a >> minimum of $10,000 is eventually required for it, one can > start
>> one
>> for around $1,000.
>>
>> As for currency, the key to that is not the substances but
> the >> standard values placed upon the substances. So long as a >> currency
>> unit ALWAYS equals a certain amount of gold or a certain > amount
>> of >> silver or any other substances, it has value. It's only when >> values
>> are allowed to change that the currency becomes worthless
> with >> inflation empowering those who control actually inflation.
>>
>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>
>> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle
>> wrote:
>>>
>>> Mahari
>>>
>>> Yes, unfortunately, by myself, as well as a dozen other >> activities. :(
>>>
>>> I can't seem to get blacks (with money) interested or to >> change

> > their > > > priorities from basic survival. Therefore, things are not > > progressing as
> > > fast as I like.
> > >
> > > I'd like to purchase this new Plasma smelting system, but
> > it's
> > $1.5M to > > > license. So, I'm purchasing the components and building my > > own. Even
> > > that took $12K out of MY pocket.
> > >
> >
> >
> http://www.oneatmosphereplasma.com/one/aluminum\_melting\_furnace.html
> > >
> > > It was Roosevelt in 1938, that cheated the American > people by > > aiding the
> > > bankers.
> > > Kennedy sought to undo it, and as a result, was > assassinated.
> > > This site explains what the banks have done to create the > > Federal
> > > Reserve.
> > > Listen to the Ron Paul mp3.
> > > <http://www.apfn.org/apfn/money.htm>
> > >
> > > The price of Gold & Silver is about to skyrocket! Or as > Ron
> > Paul
> > points
> > > out, the value of the dollar is about to bottom.
> > >
> > > Hotep
> > > Meninarmer
> > >
> > > -----Original Message-----
> > > From: Mahari Mengistu
> > > Reply-To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS > PAST IS
> > A
> > > MYTH.....
> > > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 23:44:30 -0000
> > > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>>>
>>> Wow! You're doing all the things that I've THOUGHT of > doing.
>>> Congrats.
>>> Wasn't it Nixon who changed our currency from gold based
> to
>> paper->>> based or whatever the correct economics term is? It would > seem
>> that >>> the effect of this would be to lower the economic status
> of >> Afrika
>>> where so much gold is located.
>>> HTP,
>>> Mahari
>>>
>>> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle
>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Dr. Winters
>>>>
>>>> Thank you for your response.
>>>>
>>>> Since I grew up I have learned white, black, African,
>> native
>>> American,
>>>> and other histories.
>>>> Since day one, I have learned and observed what whites > have >> done
>> to
>>>> others to maintain their position.
>>>> IMHO, today we are all experts on their behavior, and >> frankly, I
>> am >>>> tired of committing additional energies in repetition.
> There
>> is
>>> nothing
>>>> else to learn in this area.
>>>>
>>>> For the last 15 years, I have snatched numerous young
> black >> boys
>>> from

> > > the corners of inner city corners, many of them dealing
> in
> > the
> > drug > > > trade. I mentored them to understand the ramifications
> of
> > their
> > > actions,
> > > and redirected them to become responsible, challenging
> them
> > instead
> > > to
> > > become strong black men.
> > > Today, many of them have went on to obtain their > degrees and
> > gain
> > > positions at companies such as Intel, Bose, Johns > Hopkins
> > APL,
> > > University Of NC, Diebold, and Microsoft. Others are in > > music
> > > (Brittany > > > Spears, Kirk Franklin, Parliment-Funkadelic, etc.), or
> > teaching.
> > > They all state they are ready for the next phase, but > among
> > their > > > friends and peers, are alone. Many pf them state, they > are > > ready
> > to
> > > do
> > > more.
> > >
> > > Recently, to do my part on the economic front, I > developed
> > a
> > > business to
> > > enlighten blacks about the realities of money.
> > >
> > > I started a company to sell Gold, Platinum, and Silver
> as
> > > alternatives
> > > to the worthless dollar.
> > > > <http://www.kastleandhawke.com>
> > > > I have just invested in a smelter to create black money

> > based on
> > > silver,
> > > > and attempting to convince blacks to convert to > distribution
> > of
> > > silver
> > > > money amongst ourselves, where black consumers and
> > businesses will > > > > create our own monetary system based on value. This > would
> > hopefully
> > > help
> > > > turn around the trend where black money circulates zero
> > times
> > > within the
> > > > black community.
> > > >
> > > > Did you know that the 1940s Booker T. Washington silver > > half-
> > dollar
> > > is
> > > > now valued at upwards of $390/coin?
> > > >
> > > > I encourage blacks to learn about off-shore banking,
> open
> > accounts
> > > in > > > > Panama, and avoid excessive taxation (without > > representation) and > > > > withdraw continued supporting of our own demise using
> the
> > tax
> > > dollars
> > > > you provide to develop AIDS and other future anti-black
> > measures.
> > > > Did you know that Panama is the only nation left in the > > world
> > where
> > > the
> > > > US cannot gain access to your financial records? Bank Of > > America,
> > > Citi
> > > > Bank, Nation's Bank, they are all there.
> > > >
> > > > It is not easy, but worthwhile if I am able to achieve > even

> > a
> > > portion of
> > > > my ambition.
> > > >
> > > > No excuses are affordable at this point. Our futures > solely > > depend
> > > on
> > > > our own commitments.
> > > >
> > > > Regards,
> > > >
> > > > MeniNarmer
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > -----Original Message-----
> > > > From: clyde winters
> > > > Reply-To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > > > To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > > > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS > PAST
> > IS A
> > > > MYTH.....
> > > > Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 08:00:31 -0800 (PST)
> > > >
> > > > Great points. If you let people get away with doing > > > > nothing--that's exactly what they do.
> > > >
> > > > Clyde
> > > >
> > > > --- kungfuhustle wrote:
> > > >
> > > > > If it were only Africa, then Africans would need to
> > > > > react.
> > > > > However, the fact is, it is Africa, America, the UK,
> > > > > Cuba,....and all
> > > > > other nations with black presence that are
> > > > > experiencing open hostility,
> > > > > denial of contribution, and planned elimination.
> > > > >
> > > > > What are we to do?
> > > > > We are supposed to be more educated then 100-400
> > > > > years ago, yet we are
> > > > > even more deceived into playing their game and
> > > > > setting ourselves up for
> > > > > defeat and elimination then ever before. With

>>>>> everything, there is a
>>>>> trade-off. We refuse to take accountability for the >>>>> choices we make.
>>>>>
>>>>> It seems the more educated we become, the more
>>>>> vested we are into
>>>>> maintaining status quo.
>>>>>
>>>>> We understand that we must unite, but we do not.
>>>>> We understand the destructiveness of cocaine
>>>>> distribution, Gangsta Rap,
>>>>> black flight, and selective enrichment (Oprah,
>>>>> Jordan, 50cents, TD
>>>>> Jakes) on our communities, yet we continue to
>>>>> support it financially,
>>>>> spiritually, and emotionally with no payback.
>>>>> We understand that AIDS and constant conflict are
>>>>> intentional
>>>>> countermeasures, yet we continue to assist in
>>>>> development of future
>>>>> follow-on programs that will do the same.
>>>>>
>>>>> I'd suggest we reset by halting all protests and
>>>>> energies focused on
>>>>> crying about what whites do or say, and refocus on
>>>>> picketing,
>>>>> protesting, and dropping support for our own blacks
>>>>> who do not have our
>>>>> best interests at heart 24/7/365.
>>>>>
>>>>> -Make the Africa leaders and their people
>>>>> accountable.
>>>>> -Make Obama say what he will do for your vote, same
>>>>> as the promises he's
>>>>> made the Jews and whites.
>>>>> -Make black voters aware there is something
>>>>> dysfunctional and insane
>>>>> about voting for a candidate because of skin color,
>>>>> and not because of
>>>>> the content of what they will do for you.
>>>>> -Make black police and other black law enforcement
>>>>> accountable when they
>>>>> assist in killing or betraying their own.
>>>>> -Discipline and disgrace black politicians who have
>>>>> sold their people's
>>>>> interests for financial reward.

[illegible]

>>>>> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>>>> From: mahari@
>>>>> Date: Wed, 14 Nov 2007 07:32:11 +0000
>>>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
>>>>> GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>>>> MYTH.....
>>>>>
>>>>> French Prez Sarkozy makes racist speech in >>>>> Afrika about Afrika
>>>>> and
>>>>> Afrikans.
>>>>> =====
>>>>> Zimbabwe: Putting Zim First - If Not Now,
>>>>> When?
>>>>>
>>>>> Published by the government of Zimbabwe
>>>>>
>>>>> The Herald (Harare)
>>>>>
>>>>> Bishop Trevor Manhanga
>>>>>
>>>>> TWO incidents took place this year, a couple
>>>>> of months and two
>>>>> continents apart, yet interrelated in that
>>>>> they revealed the
>>>>> battle
>>>>> we Africans, and indeed Zimbabweans
>>>>> encounter in the face of
>>>>> the
>>>>> stereotypical, and downright racist >>>>> attitudes and opinions some
>>>>> in
>>>>> the white west have about us, as we strive
>>>>> for economic
>>>>> empowerment
>>>>> and emancipation.
>>>>>
>>>>> The first incident took place in Dakar
>>>>> Senegal on July 20 2007
>>>>> and
>>>>> relates to the speech given by the President
>>>>> of France Nicolas
>>>>> Sarkozy at the Cheikh Anta Diop University.
>>>>>
>>>>> In what can only be described as a most >>>>> unfortunate revelation

>>>>> of the
>>>>> inner feelings of a very high standing
>>>>> public figure, Sarkozy
>>>>> had
>>>>> this to say of Africa and Africans, in part:
>>>>> "The tragedy of
>>>>> Africa
>>>>> is that the African man has never really
>>>>> entered history.
>>>>>
>>>>> "The African peasant who for centuries has
>>>>> lived according to
>>>>> the
>>>>> seasons, whose ideal is to be in harmony
>>>>> with nature, has only
>>>>> known
>>>>> the eternal renewal of time via the endless
>>>>> repetition of the
>>>>> same
>>>>> actions and the same words.
>>>>>
>>>>> "In this mentality, where everything always
>>>>> starts over again,
>>>>> there
>>>>> is no place for human adventure nor for any
>>>>> idea of
>>>>> progress...this
>>>>> man never projects himself into the future,
>>>>> it never occurs to
>>>>> him to
>>>>> break free from the repetition and invent a
>>>>> destiny for himself.
>>>>>
>>>>> "This, if you will allow a friend of Africa
>>>>> to say it, is >>>>> Africa's
>>>>> problem.
>>>>>
>>>>> "Africa's challenge is to enter history more
>>>>> fully.... Africa's >>>>> challenge is to stop forever repeating and
>>>>> going over things,
>>>>> and to
>>>>> free itself from the myth of the eternal
>>>>> renewal. It is to
>>>>> realise

>>>> that the golden age that it always harks
>>>> back to will never
>>>> return,
>>>> for the simple reason that it never >>>> existed.... Africa's problem

>>>>
>>>> === message truncated ===

>>>>
>>>>

>
_____
>>>> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.
>>>> <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
>>>>

>>>
>>

>>
_____
>> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the > Messenger
>> Café. Stop
>> by today!

>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>

_____
> _____
>> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your > homepage.
>>
>

| 23804|2007-11-18 03:23:02|Peter Kaiza|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A MYTH.....|

Hi Dave can you give me the URL address fothe Africa today programme?Thanks.

_____
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: leisuretravel@comcast.net

Date: Sat, 17 Nov 2007 21:59:14 -0800

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Just a note I have been downloading the Africa Today show from KPFA? in San Francisco every week for a podcast and they said there will be a new news network coming out of Africa that will be like Al-Jazeera soon and will tell news from various African perspectives I didnt know Nelson Mandela trained in Algeria for example. They have recently been discussing Haiti and what is happening in the Darfur region. Swamp Fox - peace

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com [mailto:Ta_Seti@ yahoogroups. com] On Behalf Of Mahari Mengistu

Sent: Saturday, November 17, 2007 1:32 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

I agree with you almost completely except the reason I posted the article was because I think we all need to know exactly what happened. Previous to reading the article I did not know this speech took place. I DID know that I didn't like this guy and that he was arrogant and probably racist. I wasn't sure. Now I know. I don't want to promote more injustice by not giving people the benefit of the doubt. In addition, too many of our people just don't know what's going on in the world.

I was watching a news program with an associate of mine that dealt with the horrors of the Iraq war. He got up and walked out saying "How can anyone watch this stuff?" Needless to say he is not an informed black man. He is an ordained minister/musician who is into white women among others. We have conversations he calls "heavy" but the essence and import of the information goes in one ear and out the other.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Mahari

>

> Thank you for your response.

>

> Your idea is correct and in-line with most enlightened black thinking.

>

> For example, when a small group of whites are held hostage for even a > brief period of time, following the incident, they undergo therapy

for > Stockholm syndrome. This is true, even if they were held captive for a > week or a month.

> Remember Patty Hearst and the SLA?

> In her trial, her lawyers had this defense.

> "Hearst's attorney, F. Lee Bailey, claimed that she had been > blindfolded, imprisoned in a narrow closet and physically and sexually > abused. The claim that her actions were the result of a concerted > brainwashing program was central to her defense. (Hearst's actions have > also been attributed to Stockholm syndrome, in which hostages sympathize > with the aims of their captors.) Bailey also argued that she had been > coerced or intimidated into taking part in the bank robbery."

> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Patty\_Hearst

>

> So, if Ms. Hearst was led to such actions by captivity of less than 1 > year, what actions can we attribute to 1,000 years of even more severe > treatment?

>

> There are many people who agree with your thoughts of un-brainwashing.

> Unfortunately, too few are actual trained black psychiatrists.

>

> I see the human mind like that of a canvas. If it is clean when you > apply paint, the colors are vibrant and vivid. With the proper > protective covering, it will remain this way over time.

> If on the other hand, the canvas is soiled or stained, when paint is > applied, over time, the dirt or stain will show/bleed through,

> regardless of any protective overcoat.

> The black mind has been warped with many symptoms of many centuries of > underlying contamination. It is apparent that overlaying an education on > top is insufficient to suppress these underlying symptoms, and in many > cases, may amplify or further distort them.

> European culture teaches us to treat the symptoms of a problem, versus > addressing the problem itself.

> The greatest problem for blacks, in my opinion, is an inability to show

> the same type of organization we see used by Europeans and Asians, even

> when our very existence depends on it.

>

> Therefore, I have no problem with what Sarkozy, Bush, or David Duke
say

> or do.

> Rather, I find greater issue with why blacks do not react in a healthy

> way to organize, and put a halt to this madness.

> By taking offense at his views, and reacting by debating if he is right

> or wrong, in my opinion merely enforces the accuracy of those views.

> I.E. With excuses aside, how could our ancestors have achieved such > wondrous achievements when we can't even unite to save ourselves

from > pending destruction. This is in spite of whatever external forces

come > to bear. We being the Golden people, United, there is nothing that we > could not accomplish.

> Yet, seeking approval, we set ourselves up once again by inviting > Sarkozy, Bush, or David Duke to speak at an institution we hold in high

> regards.

> Would we have been pleased had Sarkozy instead praised Diop? Why,
and

> why would we believe him to be sincere even then, or why would his > approval make any difference at all? I believe these are all

justified

> and reasonable questions that are much more important than Sarkozy's > actions and words.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....

> Date: Sat, 17 Nov 2007 19:59:54 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> I feel exactly as you do. It is so depressing.
 > A huge percentage of the black people I am around are such a weak, > hypocritical, lying group of "tom's" that it is pathetic. I am > convinced that the problem is self-hate. And, of course, since you > are a product of your environment - for the most part - how could > there be another outcome? The history of this country (and the > european diaspora) is one of consistent, relentless degradation and > non-acceptance of black people. We are assaulted on EVERY front and > since we don't have our culture or families in tact we have nothing > to fall back on.
 > I'll mention an idea I've had for a long time that unfortunately does > not provide a quick solution and is not fully worked out in my mind
 > or on paper.
 > The idea is to set up organizations - not schools per se because
 that > might be financially prohibitive - whose objective is to de> indoctrinate the minds of our people. Essentially, frankly, the goal
 > would be to "brainwash" or un-brainwash them to counter the > persistent onslaught of black-race negativity. They would be taught > Afrikan history, psychology (how the mind works) and the Afrikan > worldview within an Africentric setting. Children would > be "expected" to attend from pre-school through high school, at > least. I say expected because you certainly could not mandate such > an attendance. This would require that our leaders step on board
 and > how likely is that?
 > HTP,
 > Mahari
 >
 > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "elliottandelliottm tg"
 > wrote:
 >>
 >> Awhile ago I had an epihany. Europe needs Africa for its natural >> resource because Africa is vital to the economic stability and >> advancement of Europe. Without this form of neo-colonialism Europe
 >> would be forced back into the dark ages. Therefore, they will >> maintain the status quo at all costs.
 >>
 >> Sarkozy, who would be classified as a far right wing Republican
 in >> America, engaged in a deliberate attack againgst the minds of >> African people by going to a university named after one the > greatest > > liberators of African history and basically calling all of his work > > insignificant and false. Why didnt the faculty and students boo him

> > off the stage and toss him off the campus?
> >
> >
> > We are so weak and confused as a people that, at times, I feel
> there > > is no hope. I have heard African people state that "white > supremacy"
> > is a conspiracy theory. There is a march on the Justice Department
> > today and the Civil Rights division head will not talk to any of
> the > > represenatives. Moreover, nothing will come from this march, > > certainly not justice. Memebbers of this forum have suggested > > fantastic ideas that would improve the condition of Africa people > > but we are not in a position to bring the ideas to fruition.
> > Everytime you watch a program about Kemet on the History or > > Discovery channel, African people are not represented and our > > history given to other people. Looking out of my window I see our > > youth practicing the "Crack Dat" dance instead of studying their > > history. Every month "they" find a new high profile negro to lynch
> > and they report on the demise of these, mostly black men, with so > > much glee and celebration. Sellouts are rewarded and freedom > > fighters destroyed. Ignorance approved and intellgence dismissed.
> > Africa people are thirsting for a change but there is nothing to > > quench our thirst. The vast majority of Afrikan leaders are either
> > stooges or figureheads.
> >
> > I ask you, African men and women, what is the solution to this > > problem? This is a forum filled with intellectuals surely we can > > come up with an actionable plan.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, clyde winters
> > wrote:
> > >

>>>
>>> --- Paul Kekai Manansala
>>> wrote:
>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters
>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> --- Djehuti Sundaka
>>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>> Colonialism has never ended. What exists now is
>>>>> a
>>>>>> continent of >>>>>> plantation-states created by the colonizers and
>>>>>> managed by a >>>>>> succession of their lackies. The AU, like the >>>>> OAU
>>>>>> before it, is just
>>>>>> a union of plantation-states that won't >>>>> establish a
>>>>>> common
>>>>>> continental military defense, currency, or free
>>>>>> trade and travel to >>>>>> bring about unity and continental prosperity.
>>>>>>
>>>>>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>>>>>
>>>>> Hi
>>>>> What you have written is cold blooded. But I must >>>>> agree.
>>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> Clyde, I have a lot of respect for the African
>>>> independence struggles.
>>>> In many cases, there was great sacrifice and a lot
>>>> of blood lost.
>>>> Zimbabwe and South Africa are two examples.
>>>>
>>>> However, two things often happened in the process.
>>>> One is that many >>>> independence leaders at their core were still >>>> educated Europhiles.
>>>>
>>>> They wanted to be treated as equals but at the same

>>>> time they saw the >>>> answer was with the West.
>>>>
>>>> The other problem is that the independence leaders
>>>> had little >>>> experience necessary for running a modern country.
>>>>
>>>> The ANC, for example, was well-organized but had few
>>>> people who knew >>>> anything about running heavy industry. Blacks were >>>> confined mainly to >>>> working jobs and simply were not allowed into many
>>>> positions of >>>> technical or sophisticated business knowledge.
>>>>
>>>> Regards,
>>>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>>>
>>>> Paul
>>>>
>>>> You're right. The problem is that most African leaders
>>>> don't understand that European civilization is based >>>> on the book. In other words if you learn from a book
>>>> how to do something you can do it.
>>>>
>>>> They believe that science has advanced purely by >>>> consultants from University, instead of understanding
>>>> that it is the common man that makes the innovation, >>>> that University personnel learn about and perfect.
>>>>
>>>> As a result, these leaders, unlike the Japanese
>>>> ,associated advancement with getting people to become >>>> acculturated to European civilization as a method of >>>> insuring that they would find the most qualified
>>>> promising candidate to help in modernizing their >>>> cultures. The Japanese on the otherhand sent Japanese
>>>> to learn western technology, but never let these
>>>> "western oriented" people become the leaders in the >>>> modernization movement. In this way they ensured that >>>> a Japanese character would be evident in the rise of >>>> their civilization.
>>>>
>>>> Clyde
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>

> >
> _____
> > _____
> > > Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.
> > > Make Yahoo! your homepage.
> > > <http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>
> > >
> >
>

---

Get free emoticon packs and customisation from Windows Live. Pimp My Live!
| 23805|2007-11-18 06:08:38|asar_imhotep|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|
Peace Meninarmer

The video still doesn't come up. Have you been able to pull it up?

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
> >
> > OK, I just logged onto Google to check the file.
> >
> > Here's the deal;
> >
> > 1. They changed the file name and added underscores, so the file name is > > now,
> > The_Black_Athena_Debate_-_All.wmv.
> >
> > 2. Google pre-screens all uploaded video to ensure they are not porn.
> > They say it takes about 3-4 hours before the video will show up in a > > search.
> >
> > 3. Unlike YouTube, Googley haven't provided a direct url link.
Will wait
> > to after approval to > > see if one is available then.
> >

> > It's there but it takes time for Google to OK it for release.

Following

> > that, it should show up in a search.

> >

> > Hotep

> > Meninarmer

>

>

> I don't think they approved it yet. I still can't pull it up.

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23806|2007-11-18 06:36:14|kungfuhustle|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|
Asar

It still doesn't come up on a search, but a link is supplied.

The Black Athena Debate, Vol1 (Parts 1-5)

<http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-7120595286564627227&hl=en>

The Truth About The Pyramids, Parts 1-3

<http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=844176061701400573&hl=en>

Peace

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips

Date: Sun, 18 Nov 2007 14:08:36 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Peace Meninarmer

The video still doesn't come up. Have you been able to pull it up?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>
>> OK, I just logged onto Google to check the file.
>>
>> Here's the deal;
>>
>> 1. They changed the file name and added underscores, so the file name is >> now,
>> The_Black_Athena_Debate_-_All.wmv.
>>
>> 2. Google pre-screens all uploaded video to ensure they are not porn.
>> They say it takes about 3-4 hours before the video will show up in a >> search.
>>
>> 3. Unlike YouTube, Googley haven't provided a direct url link.
Will wait
>> to after approval to >> see if one is available then.
>>
>> It's there but it takes time for Google to OK it for release.
Following
>> that, it should show up in a search.
>>
>> Hotep
>> Meninarmer
>
>
> I don't think they approved it yet. I still can't pull it up.
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
| 23807|2007-11-18 07:01:37|kungfuhustle|Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips|
HTP

Money, Banking and the Federal Reserve

<http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-466210540567002553&q=genre%3Adocumentary&total=290336&start=10&num=10&so=0&type=search&plindex=7>

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep

Reply-To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Origin of the Sphinx Documentary Video Clips
Date: Sun, 18 Nov 2007 14:08:36 -0000
Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Peace Meninarmer

The video still doesn't come up. Have you been able to pull it up?

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

> >

> > OK, I just logged onto Google to check the file.

> >

> > Here's the deal;

> >

> > 1. They changed the file name and added underscores, so the file name is > > now,

> > The_Black_Athena_Debate_-_All.wmv.

> >

> > 2. Google pre-screens all uploaded video to ensure they are not porn.

> > They say it takes about 3-4 hours before the video will show up in a search.

> >

> > 3. Unlike YouTube, Googley haven't provided a direct url link.

Will wait

> > to after approval to > > see if one is available then.

> >

> > It's there but it takes time for Google to OK it for release.

Following

> > that, it should show up in a search.

> >

> > Hotep

> > Meninarmer

>

>

> I don't think they approved it yet. I still can't pull it up.

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23808|2007-11-18 11:07:49|asar_imhotep|Free/Open Source Hieroglyphic Editing Software for PC|

Peace Ta-Seti

In my tedious search for some good Mdw Ntr (hierglyphic) editing software for the PC, I came across this FREE Open Source software that I think will interest those of you who write papers and need Mdw Ntr images/fonts for certain descriptions. It follows the Manuel de Codage format. I think it would be a good addition to some of your work. Check it out:

<http://jsesh.qenherkhopeshef.org>

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23809|2007-11-18 17:44:50|ANTHONY|VALLEYOFTHEKINGS.COM|

Your Yahoo Group has been chosen out of many by the omnipotent creative will of Ptah.

Imhotep, Son of Ptah, Director of the craftsmen, Overseer, and Chief Spokesperson of www.valleyofthekings.com

| 23810|2007-11-18 17:44:50|ahmed|ancient egyptian| ancient egyptian

A tour to Egypt can be a good experience with the variety of delights that the country has to offer. A large number of tourists flank the world-famous Sahara desert and the Giza pyramids. One would wonder how a country with its hot and dry climate, plays such a gracious host to so many people. However, every day there is an increasing number of people visiting Egypt. The main tourist attractions in Egypt are the Sahara desert, the Giza pyramids and the Karnak temple.

for more picture and information about egypt visit

<http://ancient-egyptian.blogspot.com/>

| 23811|2007-11-18 20:04:31|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|Re: Free/Open Source Hieroglyphic Editing Software for PC|

Peace and thank you for the link to this resource. Peace.

Divine Ruler Equality Allah

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> Peace Ta-Seti

>

> In my tedious search for some good Mdw Ntr (hierglyphic) editing > software for the PC, I came across this FREE Open Source software that I > think will interest those of you who write papers and need Mdw Ntr > images/fonts for certain descriptions. It follows the Manuel de Codage > format. I think it would be a good addition to some of your work. Check > it out:

>

> <http://jsesh.qenherkhopeshef.org> <<http://jsesh.qenherkhopeshef.org>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23812|2007-11-19 01:23:00|Mahari Mengistu|EGYPT/GERMANY RIFT COOLING|

Go to Google News

The bust of Queen Nefertiti

Egypt-Germany row over Nefertiti bust cools

14 hours ago

CAIRO (AFP) ? Germany is willing to consider whether an ancient Egyptian statue at the centre of a row between the two countries can be returned to Cairo for display, Egypt's antiquities chief Zahi Hawass said on Sunday.

Berlin has proposed to set up a joint committee with Cairo to examine whether the controversial bust of Queen Nefertiti currently housed in Berlin's Altes Museum can safely make the trip to Egypt for display within two years, he said.

"The letter that we received from Berlin says that the statue is very fragile," and that a joint Egyptian-German committee should decide if it can travel in the next two years, Hawass said.

"The statue, in my opinion, is in good condition and should travel to Egypt within two years," Hawass said during a ceremony to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the German archeological institute in Egypt.

Cairo and Berlin have frequently clashed over the 3,400-year-old limestone bust, which was unearthed by German archaeologists on the banks of the Nile and taken to Germany under a 1913 agreement.

Nefertiti, renowned as one of history's great beauties, was the wife of Pharaoh Akhenaton, remembered for having converted his kingdom to monotheism with the worship of one sun god, Aton.

Hawass, the director of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, threatened earlier this year to ban future exhibitions of its ancient artefacts in Germany if Berlin refused to return the statue.

Herman Panzinger, head of the German archeological institute, meanwhile told AFP that research was now underway in Berlin to determine "if one can transport Nefertiti or not."

"When they have this result, they will discuss this with the Egyptians," he said.

Hawass wants to display Nefertiti at the opening of the Akhenaton Museum in Minya, Upper Egypt.

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23813|2007-11-19 08:23:51|Ferg|Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Attachments :

Good evening all!

Niw-t has finally been decoded.

Enjoy.

Ferg Somo

| 23814|2007-11-19 11:28:26|Dexter Harper|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Peace Ferg,

Would you please send this to the email address below?

dharp3r@yahoo.com

Asante!

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Good evening all!

>

> Niw-t has finally been decoded.

>

> Enjoy.

>

> Ferg Somo

>

| 23815|2007-11-19 12:11:02|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Hi, Ferg,

For some reason I've gotten emails from everyone else but not you. So would you please email the Word document to my email address which should be on this page.

Thanks.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Good evening all!

>

> Niw-t has finally been decoded.

>

> Enjoy.

>

> Ferg Somo

>

| 23816|2007-11-19 12:12:51|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

Here is a joke. An Australian newspaper talked about 'the blackened face'

Of King Tutankhamun. How low would these folks go?

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Mahari Mengistu

Sent: Monday, November 05, 2007 11:29 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>>They can't see it anyway. The ability to mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the Western world.<<

Point of reference observe all of the current fantasy movies and tv shows displaying white superhumans doing such fantastical things. When you consider the endless overwhelming lies spewed about over the years and currently it's kind of amusing --- in a creepy evil kind of way.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

> >

> >

> > This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still > believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal
> other peoples civilisations?

>

> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go

> back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown
exactly

> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability
to

> mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in
the > Western world.

>

> Fred

>

>

> >

> > To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59

> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > French version vs. the real thing.

> >

> > Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small > group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief > archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the > public for the first time.

> > We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof

> and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.

> > A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the

> mummy onto a wooden stretcher.

> > Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's

> body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, > shrivelled body of the boy king.

> > It was a rare and incredible moment.

> >

> > See how Tutankhamun looked then and now

> > Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy > into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras,

saying: "The

> only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is

> the face and the legs.

> > "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be > completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we > can say that the mummy is going to be safe."

> > The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity

> from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley

> of the Kings.

> > As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every > day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn > erode the tombs and all that lies within.

> > Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian > museum long ago, the mummy was not.
> > In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, > the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also > threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come
> and visit his tomb.
> > So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus
and
> put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.
> > Iconic symbol
> > For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination > around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it > was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one
of
> the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.
> > At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists
rashly
> declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of > the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept
> this and together with his team spent many years following clues
> around this crumbling valley.
> > On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that > would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of > Tutankhamun.
> > More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb
was > discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthrall. Now
his > fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

---

>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

>> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live
> Hotmail

> > <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>
> >
>

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23817|2007-11-19 12:36:09|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

I should add that he was trying to give the impression that the blackness of the face was due to something external.

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf

Of Emeagwali, Gloria (History)

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 3:12 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

Here is a joke. An Australian newspaper talked about 'the blackened face'

Of King Tutankhamun. How low would these folks go?

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf

Of Mahari Mengistu

Sent: Monday, November 05, 2007 11:29 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>>They can't see it anyway. The ability to

mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the Western world.<<

Point of reference observe all of the current fantasy movies and tv shows displaying white superhumans doing such fantastical things. When you consider the endless overwhelming lies spewed about over the years and currently it's kind of amusing --- in a creepy evil kind of way.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

> >

> >

> > This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still > believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal > other peoples civilisations?

>

> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go

> back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown
exactly

> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability
to

> mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in
the > Western world.

>

> Fred

>

>

> >

> > To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59

> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > French version vs. the real thing.

> >

> > Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small > group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief > archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the > public for the first time.

> > We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof

> and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.

> > A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the mummy onto a wooden stretcher.

> > Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's

> body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, shrivelled body of the boy king.

> > It was a rare and incredible moment.

> >

> > See how Tutankhamun looked then and now

> > Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras,

saying: "The > only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is the face and the legs.

> > "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be > completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we > can say that the mummy is going to be safe."

> > The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

> > As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every > day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn erode the tombs and all that lies within.

> > Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian museum long ago, the mummy was not.

> > In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also > threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come and visit his tomb.

> > So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus

and

> put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.
>> Iconic symbol
>> For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination > around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it > was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one
of
> the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.
>> At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists
rashly
> declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of > the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept
> this and together with his team spent many years following clues
> around this crumbling valley.
>> On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that > would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of > Tutankhamun.
>> More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb
was > discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthral. Now
his > fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

---

>> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live
> Hotmail

>> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

>>
>

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23818|2007-11-19 13:28:26|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Thank you, Paul.

I have been through all the hoops regarding possible shortcut routes to initiating not just purchasing/installation of solar-electric technology in the developing world, but actual technology transfer, i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline boule or from "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in the Boston area), among others, but got stuck with the funding (surprise, surprise!!). So cudos to your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future - -- did you hear Chavez talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: pmanansala@sbcglobal.net

Date: Fri, 16 Nov 2007 16:05:18 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Hi Peter

>

> Thank you for your response.

> Also kudos for working in the green with alternate energy sources.

>

>

As one whose family is involved in the solar industry I might be a bit biased, but solar energy holds prospects for the developing world which is mostly located in the hot tropical zone.

Right now, the main "problem" is silicon used to make solar cells. Actually there are technologies out there to extract silicon from ordinary quartz sand or to even use "dirty silicon" i.e. sand to make

solar cells without purification:

<http://www.sciencenews.org/articles/20050910/fob6.asp>

Even in terms of purified polysilicon, the main problem is that there are only a few silicon plants mostly owned by the Japanese.

With more investment the supply and price of silicon can easily be managed. Most of the planet's energy comes from the Sun in one way or another, so why not produce power directly from sunlight?

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

You keep typing, we keep giving. Download Messenger and join the im Initiative now. Join in!
| 23819|2007-11-19 14:00:01|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thank you, Paul.

>

> I have been through all the hoops regarding possible shortcut routes to initiating not just purchasing/installation of solar-electric technology in the developing world, but actual technology transfer, i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline boule or from "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in the Boston area), among others, but got stuck with the funding (surprise, surprise!!). So kudos to your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future - -- did you hear Chavez talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?

>

>

Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward a "basket of currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil. This is being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.

I still remember when people would laugh at predictions of $100/bbl.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

Regards,

Paul Keaki Manansala

| 23820|2007-11-19 14:11:05|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun-australia|

<http://www.theaustralian.news.com.au/story/0,25197,22709708-30417,00.htm>

1

Sorry to give 3 separate messages on the same subject but one thing led to another. I lost the site about 'the blackened' king but soon found another hypocrite.

I believe that Australian news should take the prize for deception, disinformation and fraud. Have a look at the above site:

1. King Tutankhamun is given an instant, fake, aquiline nose-Illusion;
2. 'Play Video' is made to take up a big part of the screen to reinforce the illusion and to reduce the coverage of his face.
3. The light is made to shine on his face deliberately- to help reinforce the illusion and change his hue...
4. The reader is then told that the guy with almond eyes is really what you are seeing.....

Hail to the masters of deception and illusion.

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Emeagwali, Gloria (History)

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 3:36 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

I should add that he was trying to give the impression that the blackness of the face was due to something external.

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Emeagwali, Gloria (History)
Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 3:12 PM
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

Here is a joke. An Australian newspaper talked about 'the blackened face'
Of King Tutankhamun. How low would these folks go?

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Monday, November 05, 2007 11:29 PM
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>>They can't see it anyway. The ability to

mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the Western world.<<

Point of reference observe all of the current fantasy movies and tv shows displaying white superhumans doing such fantastical things. When you consider the endless overwhelming lies spewed about over the years and currently it's kind of amusing --- in a creepy evil kind of way.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>>

>>

>> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction-yet many people still > believe in this nonsense.What make westerners/arabs want to steal
> other peoples civilisations?

>

> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go > back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown
exactly
> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability
to > mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in
the > Western world.
>
> Fred
>
>
>
>> To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59
> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> French version vs. the real thing.
>>
>> Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small > group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief > archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to
the
> public for the first time.
>> We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof
> and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.
>> A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the

> mummy onto a wooden stretcher.
>> Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's > body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, > shrivelled body of the boy king.
>> It was a rare and incredible moment.
>>
>> See how Tutankhamun looked then and now
>> Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy > into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras,
saying: "The
> only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is
> the face and the legs.
>> "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will
be > completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we
> can say that the mummy is going to be safe."
>> The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity
> from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley
> of the Kings.
>> As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers
every > day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn > erode the tombs and all that lies within.
>> Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian > museum long ago, the mummy was not.
>> In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, > the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also > threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come
> and visit his tomb.
>> So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus
and
> put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.
>> Iconic symbol
>> For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination > around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it > was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one
of
> the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.
>> At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists
rashly
> declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of > the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept

> this and together with his team spent many years following clues
> around this crumbling valley.
>> On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that > would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of > Tutankhamun.
>> More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb
was > discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthrall. Now
his > fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

---

>> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live
> Hotmail
>> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>
>>
>

Ta_Seti Repository
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2
 Yahoo! Groups Links

Ta_Seti Repository
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2
 Yahoo! Groups Links

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23821|2007-11-19 14:14:13|Ferg|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Mahari Mengistu not recognised

Send email address to me.

Ferg

----- Original Message -----

From: Mahari Mengistu

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 8:10 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Hi, Ferg,

For some reason I've gotten emails from everyone else but not you. So would you please email the Word document to my email address which should be on this page.

Thanks.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Good evening all!

>

> Niw-t has finally been decoded.

>

> Enjoy.

>

> Ferg Somo

>

| 23822|2007-11-19 14:32:11|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun-australia|

"Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

1. King Tutankhamun is given an instant, fake, aquiline nose-Illusion;

>>

Hi Gloria, even the Frenchman-like reconstruction doesn't have what I think looks like an "aquiline nose." It's quite depressed at the root as also with the Discovery Channel reconstruction.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23823|2007-11-19 15:26:38|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun-australia|

A recent reconstruction of his face shows a striking looking young man with almond eyes, an aquiline nose, full lips and shaved head. He had the pronounced overbite typical of his royal family line, and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned. .

The key word here is illusion, I guess

G

---

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com [mailto: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com ] On Behalf Of Paul Kekai Manansala

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 5:32 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia

"Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

1. King Tutankhamun is given an instant, fake, aquiline nose-Illusion;

>>

Hi Gloria, even the Frenchman-like reconstruction doesn't have what I think looks like an "aquiline nose." It's quite depressed at the root as also with the Discovery Channel reconstruction.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23824|2007-11-19 15:33:45|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun-australia|

.depressed aquiline illusion - I guess.

GE

---

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com [mailto: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com ] On Behalf Of Emeagwali, Gloria (History)
Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 6:26 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia

A recent reconstruction of his face shows a striking looking young man with almond eyes, an aquiline nose, full lips and shaved head. He had the pronounced overbite typical of his royal family line, and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned. .

The key word here is illusion, I guess

G

---

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com [mailto: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com ] On Behalf Of Paul Kekai Manansala
Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 5:32 PM
To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia

"Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

1. King Tutankhamun is given an instant, fake, aquiline nose-Illusion;

>>

Hi Gloria, even the Frenchman-like reconstruction doesn't have what I think looks like an "aquiline nose." It's quite depressed at the root as also with the Discovery Channel reconstruction.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23825|2007-11-19 16:12:39|Mahari|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia|

Thanks, Gloria. But we just have to remember who the Australians are and there will NO surprise. It was only fairly recently that Africans were allowed to emigrate to Australia; they were clearly racist. And we mustn't forget that they have conquered and essentially enslaved the native black peoples there. And like America, Australia was totally settled by white criminals. Not all the white settlers in the US were technically criminals. And finally we mustn't forget that the conservative media mogul Rupert Murdoch is Australian. Talk about the manipulation of the media. Disturbing but not surprising.

FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....

It is well enough that people of the nation do not understand our banking and monetary system, for if they did, I believe there would be a revolution before tomorrow morning.

Henry Ford (23)

--- On Mon 11/19, Emeagwali, Gloria (History) <emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu> wrote:

From: Emeagwali, Gloria (History) [mailto:emeagwali@mail.ccsu.edu]

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 17:10:59 -0500

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia

<http://www.theaustralian.news.com.au/story/0,25197,22709708,-30417,00.html>

1

Sorry to give 3 separate messages on the same subject but one thing led to another. I lost the site about 'the blackened' king but soon found another hypocrite.

I believe that Australian news should take the prize for deception, disinformation and fraud. Have a look at the above site:

1. King Tutankhamun is given an instant, fake, aquiline nose-Illusion;
2. 'Play Video' is made to take up a big part of the screen to reinforce the illusion and to reduce the coverage of his face.
3. The light is made to shine on his face deliberately- to help reinforce the illusion and change his hue...
4. The reader is then told that the guy with almond eyes is really what you are seeing.....

Hail to the masters of deception and illusion.

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Emeagwali, Gloria (History)

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 3:36 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

I should add that he was trying to give the impression that the blackness of the face was due to something external.

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Emeagwali, Gloria (History)
Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 3:12 PM
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

Here is a joke. An Australian newspaper talked about 'the blackened face'
Of King Tutankhamun. How low would these folks go?

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of Mahari Mengistu
Sent: Monday, November 05, 2007 11:29 PM
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>>They can't see it anyway. The ability to mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the Western world.<<

Point of reference observe all of the current fantasy movies and tv shows displaying white superhumans doing such fantastical things. When you consider the endless overwhelming lies spewed about over the years and currently it's kind of amusing --- in a creepy evil kind of way.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" > wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>>

>>

>> This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction- yet many people still > believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal > other peoples civilisations?

>

> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go

> back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown
exactly

> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability

to > mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in
the > Western world.
>
> Fred
>
>
>>
>> To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59
> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> French version vs. the real thing.
>>
>> Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small > group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief > archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to
the
> public for the first time.
>> We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof
> and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.
>> A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the
> mummy onto a wooden stretcher.
>> Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's > body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, > shrivelled body of the boy king.
>> It was a rare and incredible moment.
>>
>> See how Tutankhamun looked then and now
>> Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy > into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras,
saying: "The
> only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is
> the face and the legs.
>> "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will
be > completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we
> can say that the mummy is going to be safe."

> > The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity
> from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley
> of the Kings.

>> As much as 20g of water collects in the underground chambers every

- > day and when it evaporates, salt crystals are formed that in turn
- > erode the tombs and all that lies within.

> > Although the treasures of Tutankhamun were moved to the Egyptian > museum long ago, the mummy was not.

> > In the process of removing the jewellery, amulets and death mask, > the remains of the boy king were badly damaged. Now the body is also > threatened by the impact of the thousands of people who want to come > and visit his tomb.

>> So on Sunday his remains were taken from his golden sarcophagus and

- > put into a specially-designed climate-controlled case.

> > Iconic symbol

> > For generations, Tutankhamun has captured the public imagination > around the world. Although he was only a minor royal in his day, it > was the treasures discovered in his tomb that turned him into one
of

> the iconic symbols of ancient Egypt.

>> At the turn of the 20th Century a team of US archaeologists rashly

> declared there were no new discoveries to be made in the Valley of > the Kings. But British archaeologist Howard Carter refused to accept

- > this and together with his team spent many years following clues
- > around this crumbling valley.

> > On 4 November 1922 he discovered the first flight of stairs that > would ultimately lead down to the tomb and the treasures of > Tutankhamun.

> > More than 3,000 years after he died and 85 years after his tomb was > discovered, King Tutankhamun still has the power to enthrall. Now his > fans will be able to come face-to-face with him for the first time.

>>

>>

 $\gg$

> >

$\angle$

✓ ✓
✓ ✓

11

10

11

✓ ✓
✓ ✓

> >
/ /

>>

>> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live

> Hotmail

>> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

>>

>

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

---

No banners. No pop-ups. No kidding.

Make My Way your home on the Web - <http://www.myway.com>

| 23826|2007-11-19 16:15:22|Mahari|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

That's weird. Doesn't everybody's email show unless they indicate otherwise?

Here it is: mahari@myway.com

FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....

It is well enough that people of the nation do not understand our banking and monetary system, for if they did, I believe there would be a revolution before tomorrow morning.

Henry Ford (23)

--- On Mon 11/19, Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk> wrote:

From: Ferg [mailto:egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk]

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 22:14:48 -0000

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Mahari Mengistu not recognised

Send email address to me.

Ferg

----- Original Message -----

From: Mahari Mengistu

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 8:10 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Hi, Ferg,

For some reason I've gotten emails from everyone else but not you. So would you please email the Word document to my email address which should be on this page.

Thanks.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" ...> wrote:

>

> Good evening all!

>

> Niw-t has finally been decoded.

>

> Enjoy.

>

> Ferg Somo

>

---

No banners. No pop-ups. No kidding.

Make My Way your home on the Web - <http://www.myway.com>

| 23827|2007-11-19 22:00:57|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar developments are available through their technology transfer program. The stuff is developed for space, but they encourage commercialization of these technologies.

Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from them for $1.

<http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>

<http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thank you, Paul.

>

> I have been through all the hoops regarding possible shortcut routes to initiating not just purchasing/installation of solar-electric technology in the developing world, but actual technology transfer, i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline boule or from "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in the Boston area), among others, but got stuck with the funding (surprise, surprise!!). So kudos to your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future - -- did you hear Chavez talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?

>

>

Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward a "basket of currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil. This is being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.

I still remember when people would laugh at predictions of $100/bbl.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

Regards,
Paul Keaki Manansala
| 23828|2007-11-20 00:18:06|Alex van Deelen|Prof Molefi Kete Asante And Temple University|
<http://www.blackbritain.co.uk/news/details/2595/us/>

Supporters of prominent African scholar launch protest over racial abuse at Temple University 13/11/2007
Deborah Gabriel

Many people are responding to this crazy situation from all over the world and I cannot keep up with the great spirit of the people.

Dedicated supporters of the father of Afrocentricity, renowned scholar, Molefi Kete Asante, have launched a global protest against Temple University after it emerged that the author of over 50 books was the victim of racial abuse by another staff member.

Molefi Kete Asante is the Professor of the African Studies Department at Temple University in Philadelphia in the USA. It is alleged that he was racially abused by the newly appointed Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Ms Teresa Scott Soufas.

Sources informed Black Britain that the incident took place during a meeting with other staff members last month on October 22. At this meeting Ms Soufas allegedly "yelled" at Professor Asante, pointed her finger at him and "attempted to malign, terrorize and demonize him" [and] made "false and slanderous claims against him."

The call for worldwide protests is being led by Black Nation, in Germany, an African-led organization that focuses on issues affecting the global African Diaspora. A spokesperson told Black Britain that the "attack" on Professor Asante was "all the more unfair and unacceptable since Brother Asante's achievements, figure and name have" contributed to "the national and international reputation and fame of Temple University in general and the African American Studies Department of Temple in particular in a unique way."

Professor Asante has inspired African-centred scholars around the globe for decades. He received his doctorate from UCLA at the tender age of 26 and is the pioneer of the doctoral programme in African American studies. His African centred perspective has offered an alternative academic approach to the Eurocentric ideologies that continue to provide limited learning opportunities within the field of higher education.

Black Nation told Black Britain that it is demanding an unreserved and official apology to Professor Asante by Ms Soufas. It stated that such attack on Molefe kete Asante "one of our most conscious, bold and uncompromising intellectuals, role-models, leaders and s/heroes is an attack against us all."

Professor Asante told Black Britain that he was overwhelmed by the international support he has received: "Many people are responding to this crazy situation from all over the world and I cannot keep up with the great spirit of the people." He promised to come back to us with more information about the incident.

Temple University could not be contacted for comment at the time of going to press.

| 23829|2007-11-20 05:14:16|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Thank you, Meninarmer.

Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer "success stories" as they were called -- examples of NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial success, whether through the licensing of the technology or actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving that solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant shifts the absorption spectrum of titaniaslightly into the UV range, not particularly significant for terrestrial power conversion systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot more UV.

But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: shalomic@nc.rr.com
Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar developments are available through their technology transfer program. The stuff is developed for space, but they encourage commercialization of these technologies. Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from them for $1.
<http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>
<http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>
Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....
Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000
Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thank you, Paul.

>

> I have been through all the hoops regarding possible shortcut routes to initiating not just purchasing/installation of solar-electric technology in the developing world, but actual technology transfer, i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline boule or from "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in the Boston area), among others, but got stuck with the funding (surprise, surprise!!). So cudos to your your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future - -- did you hear Chavez talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?

>
>

Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward a "basket of currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil. This is being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.

I still remember when people would laugh at predictions of $100/bbl.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

Regards,
Paul Keaki Manansala

---

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

| 23830|2007-11-20 05:42:39|Peter Kaiza|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support

IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you dont have to worry about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite television subscription. You have power and water in abundance and you can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village.

John Fute, popularly known by his friends as Pwagu lives this kind of life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.

When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the first time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle.

His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road, looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world despite the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.

As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the sounds of the Hagafilo River falls.

His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family members visit him from time to time.

Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village .

When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him Pwagu, relating him to a former radio comedian with Radio

Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has successfully generated his own power plant.

The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate.

I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as mad except for the village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue with what I was doing, says Fute.

According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to settle. When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me, he says.

He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought on how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative because he had learnt from government officials that it was the government (Tanesco) only that had the right to own and generate electricity by then. In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue with his endeavour without fear of Tanesco.

He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time.

In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So to him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan.

When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of electricity.

From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says soon he will expand to 30 kilowatts.

After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local brew shop.

It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take it through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home theatre sets.

From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio signals.

Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill for domestic use, he devised a pump that uses no outside energy (electricity, oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe, up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000 litre-capacity underground tank at his home.

With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planted variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No dependence on rain falls anymore.

Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the father of farm implements.

Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagus technology.

He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby factory.

Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen, according to his explanation.

They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and my skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this machine, says Msigwa.

He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time. This planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width. He had taken it to SUA for a farm implements show in Morogoro.

When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation and resentment from his voice. He says: This was my biggest invention following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the poverty-stricken situation we were living in.

He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as yanga, but whenever they planted them, they never germinated. At this time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which was known as Nzalilo, would cover for three people.

Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of Mwalimu Nyerere. But when he retired from active administration, it was like everything went away with him, he laments.

When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen, he further narrates.

Msigwa's brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping. He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number of which he can't predict. As of today many still go to his workshop for timber and cutting of logs.

He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.

And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop themselves. Don't fear to practise your talents, your society depends on you, he says.

---

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com

From: atenergy@hotmail.com

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Thank you, Meninarmer.

Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer "success stories" as they were called -- examples of NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial success, whether through the licensing of the technology or actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving that solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant shifts the absorption spectrum of titanium slightly into the UV range, not particularly significant for terrestrial power conversion systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot more UV.

But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: shalomic@nc. rr.com
Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar developments are available through their technology transfer program. The stuff is developed for space, but they encourage commercialization of these technologies. Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from them for $1.
<http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>
<http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:

>
>
> Thank you, Paul.
>
> I have been through all the hoops regarding possible shortcut routes to initiating not just purchasing/installation of solar-electric technology in the developing world, but actual technology transfer, i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline boules or from "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in the Boston area), among others, but got stuck with the funding (surprise, surprise!!). So kudos to your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future - -- did you hear Chavez talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?
>
>

Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward a "basket of currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil. This is being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.

I still remember when people would laugh at predictions of $100/bbl.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

Regards,
Paul Keaki Manansala

---

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

| 23831|2007-11-20 06:17:48|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Prof Molefi Kete Asante And Temple University|

Here is the contact info for Teresa Scott Soufas and the president of Temple. I've sent an email to both of them:

Name: Teresa Scott Soufas
Position: Dean, The College of Liberal Arts
Office: Anderson Hall 1238

Phone: 215-204-7748

Email: teresa.scott.soufas@temple.edu

Ann Weaver Hart, President

Temple University

1801 North Broad Street

Philadelphia, PA 19122 USA

Phone: (215) 204-7405

Fax: (215) 204-5600

E-mail: president@temple.edu

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

> <http://www.blackbritain.co.uk/news/details/2595/us/>

>

> Supporters of prominent African scholar launch protest over racial abuse at

> Temple University

> 13/11/2007

> Deborah Gabriel

>

> Many people are responding to this crazy situation from all over the world > and I cannot keep up with the great spirit of the people.

>

> Dedicated supporters of the father of Afrocentricity, renowned scholar,

> Molefi Kete Asante, have launched a global protest against Temple University > after it emerged that the author of over 50 books was the victim of racial > abuse by another staff member.

>

> Molefi Kete Asante is the Professor of the African Studies Department at

> Temple University in Philadelphia in the USA. It is alleged that he was > racially abused by the newly appointed Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, > Ms Teresa Scott Soufas.

>

> Sources informed Black Britain that the incident took place during a meeting > with other staff members last month on October 22. At this meeting Ms Soufas

- > allegedly "yelled" at Professor Asante, pointed her finger at him and
- > "attempted to malign, terrorize and demonize him" [and] made "false and
- > slanderous claims against him."
- >
- > The call for worldwide protests is being led by Black Nation, in Germany, an
- > African-led organization that focuses on issues affecting the global African
- > Diaspora. A spokesperson told Black Britain that the "attack" on Professor
- > Asante was "all the more unfair and unacceptable since Brother Asante's
- > achievements, figure and name have" contributed to "the national and
- > international reputation and fame of Temple University in general and the
- > African American Studies Department of Temple in particular in a unique
- > way."
- >
- > Professor Asante has inspired African-centred scholars around the globe for
- > decades. He received his doctorate from UCLA at the tender age of 26 and is
- > the pioneer of the doctoral programme in African American studies. His
- > African centred perspective has offered an alternative academic approach to
- > the Eurocentric ideologies that continue to provide limited learning
- > opportunities within the field of higher education.
- >
- > Black Nation told Black Britain that it is demanding an unreserved and
- > official apology to Professor Asante by Ms Soufas. It stated that such
- > attack on Molefe kete Asante "one of our most conscious, bold and
- > uncompromising intellectuals, role-models, leaders and s/heroes is an attack
- > against us all."
- >
- > Professor Asante told Black Britain that he was overwhelmed by the
- > international support he has received: "Many people are responding to this
- > crazy situation from all over the world and I cannot keep up with the great
- > spirit of the people." He promised to come back to us with more information
- > about the incident.
- >
- > Temple University could not be contacted for comment at the time of going to > press.

>

| 23832|2007-11-20 07:01:12|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Peter

Thank you for sharing this. I found it very informative, with more than a hint of familiarity.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Kaiza <prweza@hotmail.co.uk>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 13:42:35 +0000

Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support

IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you dont have to worry about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite television subscription. You have power and water in abundance and you can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village.

John Fute, popularly known by his friends as Pwagu lives this kind of life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.

When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the first time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle.

His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road, looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world despite the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.

As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the sounds of the Hagafilo River falls.

His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family members visit him from time to time.

Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village.

When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him Pwagu, relating him to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has successfully generated his own power plant.

The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate.

I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as mad except for the village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue with what I was doing, says Fute.

According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to settle. When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me, he says.

He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought on how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative because he had learnt from government officials that it was the government (Tanesco) only that had the right to own and generate electricity by then.

In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue with his endeavour without fear of Tanesco.

He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time.

In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So to him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family wouldnt agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan.

When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of electricity.

>From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says soon he will expand to 30 kilowatts.

After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the electric posts that were used for electric supply to the villages local brew shop.

It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take it through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home theatre sets.

>From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio signals.

Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill for domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy (electricity, oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe, up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000 litre-capacity underground tank at his home.

With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No dependence on rain falls anymore.

Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar Msigwa. In todays language he can be called the father of farm implements.

Mr Msigwas latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagus technology.

He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby factory.

Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen, according to his explanation.

They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and my skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this machine, says Msigwa.

He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time. This planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width. He had taken it to SUA for a farm implements show in Morogoro.

When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation and resentment from his voice. He says: This was my biggest invention following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the poverty-stricken situation we were living in.

He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as yanga, but whenever they planted them, they never germinated. At this time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which was known as Nzalilo, would cover for three people.

Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of Mwalimu Nyerere. But when he retired from active administration, it was like everything went away with him, he laments.

When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen, he further narrates.

Msigwas brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping. He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number of which he cant predict. As of today many still go to his workshop for timber and cutting of logs.

He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.

And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop themselves. Dont fear to practise your talents, your society depends on you, he says.

---

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

From: atenergy@hotmail.com

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST

IS A MYTH.....

Thank you, Meninarmer.

Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer "success stories" as they were called -- examples of NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial success, whether through the licensing of the technology or actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving that solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant shifts the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the UV range, not particularly significant for terrestrial power conversion systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot more UV.

But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: shalomic@nc.rr.com
Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar developments are available through their technology transfer program. The stuff is developed for space, but they encourage commercialization of these technologies. Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from them for $1.
<http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>
<http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
MYTH.....

Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray
wrote:

>

>

> Thank you, Paul.

>

> I have been through all the hoops regarding possible

shortcut routes

to initiating not just purchasing/installation of

solar-electric

technology in the developing world, but actual

technology transfer,

i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline

boule or from

"dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've

had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in

the Boston

area), among others, but got stuck with the funding

(surprise, surprise!!). So kudos to your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future - -- did you hear Chavez

talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?

>

>

Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward a "basket of currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil.

This is being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.

I still remember when people would laugh at predictions of $100/bbl.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

Regards,
Paul Keaki Manansala

---

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!
| 23833|2007-11-20 08:01:03|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|
This is really an inspiring story.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

Peter Kaiza wrote:

Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support
IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you don't have to worry about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite television subscription. You have power and water in abundance and you can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village.

John Fute, popularly known by his friends as Pwagu lives this kind of life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.

When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the first time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle.

His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road, looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world despite the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.

As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the sounds of the Hagafilo River falls.

His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family members visit him from time to time.

Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village .

When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him Pwagu, relating him to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has successfully generated his own power plant.

The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate.

I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as mad except for the village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue with what I was doing, says Fute.

According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to settle. When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me, he says.

He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought on how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative because he had learnt from government officials that it was the government (TanESCO) only that had the right to own and generate electricity by then.

In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue with his endeavour without fear of TanESCO.

He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time.

In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So to him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan.

When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of electricity.

From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says soon he will expand to 30 kilowatts.

After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local brew shop. It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take it through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home theatre sets.

From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio signals.

Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill for domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy (electricity, oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe, up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000 litre-capacity underground tank at his home.

With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No dependence on rain falls anymore. Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the 'father of farm implements'.

Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology.

He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby factory.

Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen, according to his explanation.

'They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and my skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this machine,' says Msigwa.

He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time. This planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width. He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement's show in Morogoro.

When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation and resentment from his voice. He says: 'This was my biggest invention following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the poverty-stricken situation we were living in. He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as 'yanga', but whenever they planted them, they never germinated. At this time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which was known as 'Nzalilo', would cover for three people. Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of Mwalimu Nyerere. 'But when he retired from active administration, it was like everything went away with him,' he laments.

'When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen,' he further narrates.

Msigwa's brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping. He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number of which he can't predict. As of today many still go to his workshop for timber and cutting of logs.

He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.

And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop themselves. Don't fear to practise your talents, your society depends on you, he says.

---

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com

From: atenergy@hotmail. com

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Thank you, Meninarmer.

Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer "success stories" as they were called -- examples of NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial success, whether through the licensing of the technology or actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving that solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant shifts the absorption spectrum of titaniaslightly into the UV range, not particularly significant for terrestrial power conversion systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot more UV.

But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

From: shalomic@nc. rr.com

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar developments are available through their technology transfer program. The stuff is developed for space, but they encourage commercialization of these technologies. Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from them for $1.

<http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>

<http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thank you, Paul.

>

> I have been through all the hoops regarding possible shortcut routes to initiating not just purchasing/installation of solar-electric technology in the developing world, but actual technology transfer, i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline boules or from "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in the Boston area), among others, but got stuck with the funding (surprise, surprise!!). So kudos to your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future - -- did you hear Chavez talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?

>

>

Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward a "basket of currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil. This is being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.

I still remember when people would laugh at predictions of $100/bbl.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

Regards,

Paul Keaki Manansala

---

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

| 23834|2007-11-20 09:01:36|Mahari Mengistu|SANCTUARY OF ROME'S "FOUNDER" REVEALED?|

Sanctuary of Rome's 'founder' revealed By ARIEL DAVID, Associated Press Writer

ROME - Archaeologists on Tuesday unveiled an underground grotto believed to have been revered by ancient Romans as the place where a wolf nursed the city's legendary founder Romulus and his twin brother Remus.

Decorated with seashells and colored marble, the vaulted sanctuary is buried 52 feet inside the Palatine hill, the palatial center of power in imperial Rome, the archaeologists said at a news conference.

In the past two years, experts have been probing the space with endoscopes and laser scanners, fearing that the fragile grotto, already partially caved-in, would not survive a full-scale dig, said Giorgio Croci, an engineer who worked on the site.

The archaeologists are convinced that they have found the place of worship where Romans believed a she-wolf suckled Romulus and Remus, the twin sons of the god of war Mars who were abandoned in a basket and left adrift on the Tiber.

Thanks to the wolf, a symbol of Rome to this day, the twins survived, and Romulus founded the city, becoming its first king after killing Remus in a power struggle.

Ancient texts say the grotto known as the "Lupercal" _ from "lupa," Latin for she-wolf _ was near the palace of Augustus, Rome's first emperor, who was said to have restored it, and was decorated with a white eagle.

That symbol of the Roman Empire was found atop the sanctuary's vault, which lies just below the ruins of the palace built by Augustus, said Irene Iacopi, the archaeologist in charge of the Palatine and the nearby Roman Forum.

Augustus, who ruled from the late 1st century B.C. to his death in the year 14, was keen on being close to the places of Rome's mythical foundation and used the city's religious traditions to bolster his hold on power, Iacopi said.

"The Lupercal must have had an important role in Augustus' policies," she said. "He saw himself as a new Romulus."

Andrea Carandini, a professor of archaeology at Rome's La Sapienza University and an expert on the Palatine, said the grotto is almost certainly the "Lupercal."

"The chances that it's not are minimal," said Carandini, who did not take part in the dig. "It's one of the greatest discoveries ever made."

Most of the sanctuary is filled with earth, but laser scans allowed experts to estimate that the circular structure has a height of 26 feet and a diameter of 24 feet, Croci said.

Archaeologists at the news conference were divided on how to gain access to the "Lupercal."

Iacopi said a new dig would start soon to find the grotto's original entrance at the bottom of the hill. Carandini suggested enlarging the hole at the top through which probes have been lowered so far, saying that burrowing at the base of the hill could disturb the foundations of other ruins.

The Palatine is honeycombed with palaces and other ancient monuments, from the 8th-century B.C. remains of Rome's first fledgling huts to a medieval fortress and Renaissance villas. But the remains are fragile and plagued by collapses, leaving more than half of the hill, including Augustus' palace, closed to the public.

Culture Minister Francesco Rutelli said the first area to benefit from an extensive, $17.5 million restoration of the hills' ruins will be Augustus' palace, scheduled to reopen in February after being closed for decades.

===

HTP,
Mahari
| 23835|2007-11-20 09:08:18|Messiah Twain|Re: [PoS-Roots] Mother Songline ... the Magdalene
Line?|
blessings StarBird,

here is the Requiem link, for Pipe Organ,
as interpreted by Pala.

knowing Leonardo, I cannot imagine that precise relations of the elements of the painting would NOT be comprehensive ... and that there are depths to be revealed still, FAR in excess of what we have seen so far.

I will have a look for the knot of Isis, of HER Creation, Discrimination, Judgement, Knowing ... looking now,

Millennium Twain

Italian musician uncovers hidden music in Da Vinci's 'Last Supper'
November 9, 2007

<http://templars.wordpress.com/category/music>

It's a new Da Vinci code, but this time it could be for real.

An Italian musician and computer technician claims to have uncovered musical notes encoded in Leonardo Da Vinci's
"Last Supper," raising the possibility that the Renaissance genius might have left behind a somber composition to accompany the scene depicted in the 15th-century wall painting.

"It sounds like a requiem," Giovanni Maria Pala said. "It's like a soundtrack that emphasizes the passion of Jesus."

Painted from 1494 to 1498 in Milan's Church of Santa Maria delle Grazie, the "Last Supper" captures a key moment in the Gospel narration of Jesus' last meal with the 12 Apostles before his arrest and crucifixion, vividly depicting the shock of Christ's followers as they learn that one of them is about to betray him.

Pala, a 45-year-old musician who lives near the southern Italian city of Lecce, began studying Leonardo's painting in 2003, after hearing on a news program that researchers believed the artist and inventor had hidden a musical composition in the work.

"Afterward, I didn't hear anything more about it," he said in an interview with The Associated Press. "As a musician, I wanted to dig deeper."

In a book released Friday in Italy, Pala explains how he interpreted elements of the painting that have symbolic value in Christian theology as musical clues.

Pala first saw that by drawing the five lines of a musical staff across the painting, the loaves of bread on the table as well as the hands of Jesus and the Apostles could each represent a musical note.

This fit the relation in Christian symbolism between the bread, representing the body of Christ, with the hands, which are used to bless the food, he said. But the notes made no sense musically until Pala realized that the score had to be read from right to left, following Leonardo's particular writing style.

In his book ? "La Musica Celata" ("The Hidden Music") ? Pala also describes how he found what he says are other clues in the painting that reveal the slow rhythm of the composition and the duration of each note.

The result is a 40-second hymn that Pala said plays best on a pipe organ, the instrument most commonly used in Leonardo's time for spiritual music.

Alessandro Vezzosi, a Leonardo expert and the director of a museum dedicated to the artist in his hometown of Vinci, said that he had not seen Pala's research but that the musician's hypothesis "is plausible."

Vezzosi said that previous research has indicated that the hands of the Apostles in the painting can be substituted with the notes of a Gregorian chant, though so far no one had tried to work in the bread loaves.

"There's always a risk of seeing something that is not there, but it's certain that the spaces (in the painting) are divided harmonically, " he told The AP. "Where you have harmonic proportions, you can find music."

Vezzosi also noted that though Leonardo was more noted for his paintings, sculptures and visionary inventions, he was also learned in music. Da Vinci played the lyre, designed various instruments and his writings include some musical riddles, which must be read from right to left.

Reinterpretations of the "Last Supper" have popped up ever since "The Da Vinci Code" fascinated readers and movie-goers with suggestions that one of the apostles sitting on Jesus' right is Mary Magdalene, that the two had children and their bloodline continues.

Pala stressed that his discovery does not reveal any supposed dark secrets of the Catholic Church or of Leonardo, but instead shows the artist in a light far removed from the conspiratorial descriptions found in fiction.

---

Pala's site in Italian (with CD):

<http://www.lamusicacelata.it>

" ... in the painted Vinciano is hidden a true and actual musical sentence, perfectly structured and executable. A requiem that accompanies the dramatic moment of the Last Supper. The music concealed is the faithful Recosonto of this extraordinary discovery: the Svelamento of the melody, with the message in Hebrew and the mystical symbols bound within ..."

---

and HERE is Leonardo's Requiem!:

<http://web.cheapnet.it/loredana.mazzarella/rassegna/radio2-intervista-giovannimariapala.mp3>

[about 2/3 of the way thru the radio interview.]

from:

<http://web.cheapnet.it/loredana.mazzarella/news.htm>

..

| 23836|2007-11-20 09:14:40|olmec982000|Re: Prof Molefi Kete Asante And Temple University|

Ms.

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> Here is the contact info for Teresa Scott Soufas and the president of > Temple. I've sent an email to both of them:

>

> Name: Teresa Scott Soufas

> Position: Dean, The College of Liberal Arts

> Office: Anderson Hall 1238

> Phone: 215-204-7748

> Email: teresa.scott.soufas@...

>

> Ann Weaver Hart, President

> Temple University

> 1801 North Broad Street

> Philadelphia, PA 19122 USA

> Phone: (215) 204-7405

> Fax: (215) 204-5600

> E-mail: president@...

>

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" avdeelen@ wrote:

>>

>> <http://www.blackbritain.co.uk/news/details/2595/us/>

>>

>> Supporters of prominent African scholar launch protest over racial > abuse at

>> Temple University

>> 13/11/2007

>> Deborah Gabriel

>>

> > Many people are responding to this crazy situation from all over the
> world
> > and I cannot keep up with the great spirit of the people.
> >
> > Dedicated supporters of the father of Afrocentricity, renowned scholar, > > Molefi Kete Asante, have launched a global protest against Temple > University
> > after it emerged that the author of over 50 books was the victim of > racial > > abuse by another staff member.
> >
> > Molefi Kete Asante is the Professor of the African Studies Department at > > Temple University in Philadelphia in the USA. It is alleged that he was > > racially abused by the newly appointed Dean of the College of > Liberal Arts,
> > Ms Teresa Scott Soufas.
> >
> > Sources informed Black Britain that the incident took place during a > meeting > > with other staff members last month on October 22. At this meeting
> Ms Soufas
> > allegedly "yelled" at Professor Asante, pointed her finger at him and
> > "attempted to malign, terrorize and demonize him" [and] made "false and > > slanderous claims against him."
> >
> > The call for worldwide protests is being led by Black Nation, in > Germany, an > > African-led organization that focuses on issues affecting the global > African
> > Diaspora. A spokesperson told Black Britain that the "attack" on > Professor
> > Asante was "all the more unfair and unacceptable since Brother Asante's > > achievements, figure and name have" contributed to "the national and > > international reputation and fame of Temple University in general > and the > > African American Studies Department of Temple in particular in a unique > > way."
> >
> > Professor Asante has inspired African-centred scholars around the > globe for > > decades. He received his doctorate from UCLA at the tender age of 26 > and is > > the pioneer of the doctoral programme in African American studies. His > > African centred perspective has offered an alternative academic > approach to > > the Eurocentric ideologies that continue to provide limited learning > > opportunities within the field of higher education.

 > >
 > > Black Nation told Black Britain that it is demanding an unreserved and > > official apology to Professor Asante by Ms Soufas. It stated that such > > attack on Molefe kete Asante "one of our most conscious, bold and > > uncompromising intellectuals, role-models, leaders and s/heroes is > an attack > > against us all."
 > >
 > > Professor Asante told Black Britain that he was overwhelmed by the > > international support he has received: "Many people are responding > to this > > crazy situation from all over the world and I cannot keep up with > the great > > spirit of the people." He promised to come back to us with more > information
 > > about the incident.
 > >
 > > Temple University could not be contacted for comment at the time of > going to > > press.
 > >
 >

| 23837|2007-11-20 11:22:16|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

What a wonderful and sad story. It is a perfect example of the ways in which Afrikan/black talent is abused, misused and unappreciated. There is greatness in these men. Imagine how many more of them there are!
 HTP,
 Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>
 >
 > Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support
 >
 > IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you don't have to worry about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite television subscription. You have power and water in abundance and you can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village.
 >
 > John Fute, popularly known by his friends as `Pwagu' lives this kind of life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.

>

> When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the first time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle.

>

> His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road, looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world despite the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.

>

> As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the sounds of the Hagafilo River falls.

>

> His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family members visit him from time to time.

> Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village.

>

> When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him 'Pwagu', relating him to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has successfully generated his own power plant.

>

>

> The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate.

>

>

> "I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as 'mad' except for the village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue with what I was doing," says Fute.

>

>

> According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to settle. "When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me," he says.

>

>

> He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought on how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative because he had learnt from government officials that it was the government (Tanesco) only that had the right to own and generate electricity by then.

>

>

> In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue with his endeavour without fear of Tanesco.

>

>

> He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time.

> In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So to him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan.

>

>

>

> When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of electricity.

>

>

> From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says soon he will expand to 30 kilowatts.

>

>

> After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local brew shop.

>

>

> It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take it through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home theatre sets.

>

>

> From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio signals.

>

>

> Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill for domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy (electricity, oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe, up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000 litre-capacity underground tank at his home.

>

> With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No dependence on rain falls anymore.

>

>

> Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the 'father of farm implements'.

>

> Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology.

>

>

> He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby factory.

>

>

> Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen, according to his explanation.

>

>

> "They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and my skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this machine," says Msigwa.

>

>

> He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time. This planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width. He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement's show in Morogoro.

>

>

> When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation and resentment from his voice. He says: "This was my biggest invention following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the poverty-stricken situation we were living in.

>

>

>

> He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as 'yanga', but whenever they planted them, they never germinated. At this time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which was known as 'Nzalilo', would cover for three people.

>

>

> Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of Mwalimu Nyerere. "But when he retired from active administration, it was like everything went away with him," he laments.

>

>

> "When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen," he further narrates.

>

>

> Msigwa's brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping. He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number of which he can't predict. As of today many still go to his workshop for timber and cutting of logs.

>

>

>

> He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.

>

>

> "And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop themselves. Don't fear to practise your talents, your society depends on you," he says.

>

>

>

>

> To: ta_seti@...: atenergy@...: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 - 0500Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

>

>

>

> Thank you, Meninarmer. Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer "success stories" as they were called -- examples of NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial success, whether through the licensing of the technology or actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving that solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see - - the dopant shifts the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the UV range, not particularly significant for terrestrial power conversion systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot more UV. But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again. Peter

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: shalomic@...: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 - 0500Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

>

> I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar developments are available through their technology transfer program. The stuff is developed for space, but they encourage commercialization of these technologies. Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from them for

$1. <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/Me>

ninarmer-----Original Message-----From: Paul Kekai Manansala

Reply-To: Ta_Seti@...: Ta_Seti@...: [Ta_Seti] Re:

SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....Date: Mon, 19 Nov

2007 21:59:59 -0000 Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster--- In

Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:>> > Thank you,

Paul.> > I have been through all the hoops regarding possible shortcut routes to initiating not just purchasing/installation of solar-electric technology in the developing world, but actual technology transfer, i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline boules or from "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in the Boston area), among others, but got stuck with the funding (surprise, surprise!!). So kudos to your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future -- did you hear Chavez talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?> > Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward a "basket of currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil. This is being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq. I still remember when people would laugh at predictions of $100/bbl. Regards, Paul Kekai Manansala

>

> Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live Hotmail

> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

>

| 23838|2007-11-20 11:32:03|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way the three of you could form an organization of some sort - an Afrikan-American inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that there is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in yourselves. Plant the seed.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Peter

>

> Thank you for sharing this. I found it very informative, with more then > a hint of familiarity.

>

> Meninarmer

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Peter Kaiza

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 13:42:35 +0000

>

> Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support

>

>

>

>

> IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you don't have to worry > about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite > television subscription. You have power and water in abundance and you > can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village.

>

>

>

> John Fute, popularly known by his friends as "Pwagu" lives this kind of > life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.

>

>

>

> When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the first > time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension > officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty > pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle.

>
>
>
> His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road, > looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish > and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in > terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world
despite > the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.
>
>
>
> As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the > magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the > sounds of the Hagafilo River falls.
>
>
>
> His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family
> members visit him from time to time.
>
> Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case > cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch > off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor
> and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village.
>
>
>
> When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to > him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him "Pwagu", relating him
> to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who > went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has > successfully generated his own power plant.
>
>

>
>
>
> The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of
the > schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> □I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my > village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as □mad□ except for the > village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue
with > what I was doing,□ says Fute.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to > settle. □When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how > to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me,□ he says.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought
on > how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative > because he had learnt from government officials that it was the > government (TanESCO) only that had the right to own and generate > electricity by then.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue > with his endeavour without fear of TanESCO.

>

>

>

>

>

> He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream > of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but > the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time.

>

> In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby > and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So to > him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council > and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family > wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought > some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought > wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of > electricity.

>

>

>

>

>

>>From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter > pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the > propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends > electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into > electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says soon > he will expand to 30 kilowatts.

>

>
>
>
>
> After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in > helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew
> are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never > lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal
> the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the > electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local > brew shop.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take
it > through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and > produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no > more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home > theatre sets.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>>From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite > dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio > signals.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill
for > domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy (electricity, > oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe,

> up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000 > litre-capacity underground tank at his home.
>
>
>
> With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed > variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No > dependence on rain falls anymore.
>
>
>
>
>
> Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of > talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar > Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the "father of farm > implements".
>
>
>
> Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles > to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally > designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwaga's technology.
>
>
>
>
>
> He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can > either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby > factory.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of > his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of > Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen,

> according to his explanation.

>

>

>

>

>

> □ They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and my > skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this > machine, □ says Msigwa.

>

>

>

>

>

> He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time.

This

> planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width.

> He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement □ s show in Morogoro.

>

>

>

>

>

> When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation and > resentment from his voice. He says: □ This was my biggest invention > following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the > poverty-stricken situation we were living in.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was > serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as > □ yanga □, but whenever they planted them, they never germinated.

At this > time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which > was known as □ Nzalilo □, would cover for three people.

>

>

>

>

>

> Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to > develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of

> Mwalimu Nyerere. □ But when he retired from active administration, it was > like everything went away with him, □ he laments.

>

>

>

>

>

> □ When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they > tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen, □ he > further narrates.

>

>

>

>

>

> Msigwa's brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping.

> He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into > writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number of > which he can't predict. As of today many still go to his workshop for > timber and cutting of logs.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology > alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on > local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.

>
>
>
>
>
>
> □ And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop > themselves. Don't fear to practise your talents, your society depends on > you, □ he says.

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: atenergy@...
> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST
> IS A MYTH.....
>
> Thank you, Meninarmer.
>
> Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at > NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer
> "success stories" as they were called -- examples of > NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial > success, whether through the licensing of the technology or > actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress > marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by > NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur > (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had > also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium > dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving
that > solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant shifts
> the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the UV
range,
> not particularly significant for terrestrial power

conversion

> systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot > more UV.

>

> But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

>

>

---

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> From: shalomic@...

> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

> I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar

> developments are available > through their technology transfer program. The stuff is > developed for > space, but they encourage commercialization of these > technologies.

> Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from > them for $1.

> <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>

> <http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>

>

> Meninarmer

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Paul Kekai Manansala

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS

> PAST IS A

> MYTH.....

> Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray
> wrote:
> >
> >
> > Thank you, Paul.
> >
> > I have been through all the hoops regarding possible
> shortcut routes
> to initiating not just purchasing/installation of > solar-electric > technology in the developing world, but actual
> technology transfer,
> i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure
polycrystalline
> boule or from
> "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years,
I've
> had > discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens
(in > the Boston
> area), among others, but got stuck with the funding > (surprise, > surprise!!). So congratulations to your family too for > actually being > involved in the technology of the future -- did
you > hear Chavez
> talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?
> >
> >
>
> Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward
> a "basket of > currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil.
> This is > being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.
>
> I still remember when people would laugh at predictions > of $100/bbl.
>
> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

> Regards,

> Paul Keaki Manansala

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

>

| 23839|2007-11-20 11:35:12|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Prof Molefi Kete Asante And Temple University|

Off with her head!!! Just kidding - kinda.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "olmec982000" wrote:

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Ms.

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>>

>> Here is the contact info for Teresa Scott Soufas and the president of >> Temple. I've sent an email to both of them:

>>

> > Name: Teresa Scott Soufas
> > Position: Dean, The College of Liberal Arts
> > Office: Anderson Hall 1238
> > Phone: 215-204-7748
> > Email: teresa.scott.soufas@
> >
> > Ann Weaver Hart, President
> > Temple University
> > 1801 North Broad Street
> > Philadelphia, PA 19122 USA
> > Phone: (215) 204-7405
> > Fax: (215) 204-5600
> > E-mail: president@
> >
> >
> > Regards,
> > Paul Kekai Manansala
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" avdeelen@ wrote:
> > >
> > > <http://www.blackbritain.co.uk/news/details/2595/us/>
> > >
> > > Supporters of prominent African scholar launch protest over racial > > abuse at > > > Temple University
> > > 13/11/2007
> > > Deborah Gabriel
> > >
> > > Many people are responding to this crazy situation from all over the > > world
> > > and I cannot keep up with the great spirit of the people.
> > >
> > > Dedicated supporters of the father of Afrocentricity, renowned > scholar,
> > > Molefi Kete Asante, have launched a global protest against Temple
> > University
> > > after it emerged that the author of over 50 books was the victim of > > racial > > > abuse by another staff member.
> > >
> > > Molefi Kete Asante is the Professor of the African Studies

> Department at >>> Temple University in Philadelphia in the USA. It is alleged that he
> was >>> racially abused by the newly appointed Dean of the College of >> Liberal Arts,
>>> Ms Teresa Scott Soufas.
>>>
>>> Sources informed Black Britain that the incident took place during a >> meeting >>> with other staff members last month on October 22. At this meeting
>> Ms Soufas
>>> allegedly "yelled" at Professor Asante, pointed her finger at him
> and
>>> "attempted to malign, terrorize and demonize him" [and] made "false
> and >>> slanderous claims against him."
>>>
>>> The call for worldwide protests is being led by Black Nation, in >> Germany, an >>> African-led organization that focuses on issues affecting the global >> African
>>> Diaspora. A spokesperson told Black Britain that the "attack" on >> Professor
>>> Asante was "all the more unfair and unacceptable since Brother > Asante's >>> achievements, figure and name have" contributed to "the national and >>> international reputation and fame of Temple University in general
>> and the >>> African American Studies Department of Temple in particular in a > unique >>> way."
>>>
>>> Professor Asante has inspired African-centred scholars around
the >> globe for >>> decades. He received his doctorate from UCLA at the tender age
of 26
>> and is > > > the pioneer of the doctoral programme in African American studies.

> His
> > > African centred perspective has offered an alternative academic > > approach to > > > the Eurocentric ideologies that continue to provide limited learning > > > opportunities within the field of higher education.
> > >
> > > Black Nation told Black Britain that it is demanding an unreserved
> and > > > official apology to Professor Asante by Ms Soufas. It stated that > such > > > attack on Molefe kete Asante "one of our most conscious, bold and > > > uncompromising intellectuals, role-models, leaders and s/heroes is > > an attack > > > against us all."
> > >
> > > Professor Asante told Black Britain that he was overwhelmed by the > > > international support he has received: "Many people are responding > > to this > > > crazy situation from all over the world and I cannot keep up with > > the great > > > spirit of the people." He promised to come back to us with more > > information
> > > about the incident.
> > >
> > > Temple University could not be contacted for comment at the time of > > going to > > > press.
> > >
> >
>

| 23840|2007-11-20 12:42:59|Peter Kaiza|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Mahari. Good idea. I read the story yesterday. Was impressed, but as an African, I'm quite saddened by how much local talent is being wasted .In Tanzania, only around 15 percent have access to electricity, yes 85%! Will try to contact the guy (via the newspapers article) For example, a link up with african americans with similar interests (Kungufuhustle etc) would very much help in terms of technological transfer and help. Will keep you informed.

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 19:32:00 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way the three of you could form an organization of some sort - an Afrikan-AAmerican inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that there is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in yourselves.

Plant the seed.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Peter
>
> Thank you for sharing this. I found it very informative, with more then
> a hint of familiarity.
>
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Peter Kaiza
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 13:42:35 +0000
>
> Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support
>
>
>
>
> IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you don't have to worry
> about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite > television subscription. You have power and water in abundance and

you

> can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village.

>

>

>

> John Fute, popularly known by his friends as 'Pwagu' lives this kind of > life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.

>

>

>

> When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the first > time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension > officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty > pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle.

>

>

>

> His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road, > looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish > and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in > terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world despite > the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.

>

>

>

> As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the > magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the > sounds of the Hagafilo River falls.

>

>

>

> His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family > members visit him from time to time.

>

> Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case > cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch > off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor

> and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village.

>

>

>

> When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to > him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him ‘Pwagu’, relating him > to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who > went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has > successfully generated his own power plant.

>

>

>

>

>

> The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the > schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate.

>

>

>

>

>

> “I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my > village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as ‘mad’ except for the > village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue with > what I was doing,” says Fute.

>

>

>

>

>

> According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to settle. “When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how > to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me,” he says.

>

>

>

>
>
> He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought
on > how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative > because he had learnt from government officials that it was the > government (Tanesco) only that had the right to own and generate > electricity by then.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue > with his endeavour without fear of Tanesco.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream
> of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt,
but > the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to
time.
>
> In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby
> and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So
to > him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council
> and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family > wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought > some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought > wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of > electricity.

>
>
>
>
>
>
>>From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter
> pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the > propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends > electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into > electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says soon
> he will expand to 30 kilowatts.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in > helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew
> are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never > lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal
> the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the > electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local > brew shop.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take
it
> through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and > produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no
> more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home > theatre sets.
>
>
>
>
>

>
> > From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite > dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio > signals.
>
>
>
>
>
> Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill
for > domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy (electricity, > oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe,
> up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000
> litre-capacity underground tank at his home.
>
>
>
> With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed > variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No
> dependence on rain falls anymore.
>
>
>
>
>
> Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of > talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar > Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the 'father of farm > implements'.
>
>
>
> Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles
> to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally > designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology.
>
>
>
>

>
> He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can > either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby
> factory.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of > his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of > Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen,
> according to his explanation.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> “They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and
my > skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this > machine,” says Msigwa.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time.
This
> planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width.
> He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement’s show in Morogoro.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation
and > resentment from his voice. He says: “This was my biggest invention > following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the > poverty-stricken situation we were living in.

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was > serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as > ‘yanga’, but whenever they planted them, they never germinated.
At this > time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which > was known as ‘Nzalilo’, would cover for three people.

>
>
>
>
>

> Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to > develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of > Mwalimu Nyerere. “But when he retired from active administration, it was > like everything went away with him,~ he laments.

>
>
>
>
>

> “When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they > tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen,~ he > further narrates.

>
>
>
>
>

> Msigwa’s brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping.
> He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into > writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number

of > which he can't predict. As of today many still go to his workshop

for > timber and cutting of logs.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported
technology

> alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on

> local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.

>

>

>

>

>

> "And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop > themselves. Don't fear to practise your talents, your society depends on

> you, he says.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

> From: atenergy@...

> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500

> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST

> IS A MYTH.....

>

> Thank you, Meninarmer.

>

> Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at > NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology

transfer

- > "success stories" as they were called -- examples of
- > NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial
- > success, whether through the licensing of the technology or
- > actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress
- > marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by
- > NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur
- > (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had
- > also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium
- > dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving
- that
- > solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant
- shifts
- > the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the UV
- range,
- > not particularly significant for terrestrial power
- conversion
- > systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a
- lot
- > more UV.
- >
- > But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.
- >
- > Peter
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >

-
- > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
  - > From: shalomic@...
  - > Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500
  - > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
  - > GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....
  - >
  - > I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar
  - > developments are available
  - > through their technology transfer program. The
  - stuff is
  - > developed for
  - > space, but they encourage commercialization of these
  - > technologies.
  - > Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program
  - from
  - > them for $1.

> <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>
> <http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>
>
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Paul Kekai Manansala
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS > PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray
> wrote:
>>
>>
>> Thank you, Paul.
>>
>> I have been through all the hoops regarding possible
> shortcut routes
> to initiating not just purchasing/installation of > solar-electric > technology in the developing world, but actual
> technology transfer,
> i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure
polycrystalline
> boule or from
> "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years,
I've
> had > discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens
(in > the Boston
> area), among others, but got stuck with the funding > (surprise, > surprise!!). So congratulations to your family too for > actually being > involved in the technology of the future - -- did
you > hear Chavez
> talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?

> >
> >
>
> Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move
toward
> a "basket of > currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil.
> This is > being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.
>
> I still remember when people would laugh at predictions
> of $100/bbl.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
> Regards,
> Paul Keaki Manansala
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

>

---

Are you the Quizmaster? Play BrainBattle with a friend now!

| 23841|2007-11-20 13:26:33|asar_imhotep|Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian
Mdw Ntr|

Peace Pham

Many of you know of the lecture I will be doing on December 15th entitled Bantu Cosmology & the Origins of Egyptian Civilization. Many have asked about material in which they could study to do their own comparisons because they live in another city. Well one book, out of many reference materials, I highly recommend is titled Sacred Symbols of the Dogon, The Key to Advanced Science in the Ancient Egyptian Hieroglyphs by Laird Scranton.

This is a real good scholarly work and it provides a methodology to interpreting the Mdw Ntr script and the Ta-Merrian world view (cosmology). The comparative studies he has done with the Dogon cosmology and language with that of ancient Egypt, I have been doing with the Kongo & ancient Egypt. His analysis further backs the ideas proposed by Dr. Winters, Ferg Somo, Dr Obenga, Dr. Fu-Kiau and myself.

What this further helps to bring to light is how ancient the proto-saharan civilizations were and how expansive the global education system that had its orientation in ancient Egypt was. He comes to the same conclusions we have been espousing (African centered researchers) for decades and it's nice to see scholarship out there like this to make a more fuller body of knowledge (especially in English).

So for those who at least would like to get some insight into how I, at least, approach comparative cultural and iconographic studies, then this is a good start. I also titled this thread as such because the Bantu languages are a branch of the larger Niger-Congo languages in which the Dogon Toro language is a part of. So this is a hint as if you find regular correspondences throughout many other inner African languages in comparison to the ancient Egyptian, then more than likely the Egyptian language is simply a branch of the Niger-Congo languages. More definitive research needs to be conducted however.

*****

See larger image

Share your own customer images

Publisher: learn how customers can search inside this book.

Sacred Symbols of the Dogon: The Key to Advanced Science in the Ancient Egyptian Hieroglyphs (Paperback)

by Laird Scranton (Author), John Anthony West (Foreword)

No customer reviews yet. Be the first.

---

List Price: $18.95

Price: $12.89 & eligible for FREE Super Saver Shipping on orders over $25. Details

You Save: $6.06 (32%)

Availability: In Stock. Ships from and sold by Amazon.com. Gift-wrap available.

Want it delivered Thursday, November 1?

Order it in the next 15 hours and 19 minutes, and choose

One-Day Shipping at checkout.

See details

9 used & new available from $12.25

Review

John Dering, chief scientist for lasers and special projects at Scientific Applications & Research Associates (SARA), Inc. : "Sacred Symbols of the Dogon will challenge the reader to seriously consider that ancient civilizations possessed a scientific sophistication rivaling our present-day theories of matter and the fundamental forces of physics. Highly recommended for anyone who has questioned the mainstream view of ancient civilization as scientifically primitive."

Book Description

Dogon cosmology provides a new Rosetta stone for reinterpreting Egyptian hieroglyphs

? Provides a new understanding of Egyptian hieroglyphs as scientific symbols based on Dogon cosmological drawings

? Use parallels between Dogon and Egyptian word meanings to identify relationships between Dogon myths and modern science

In The Science of the Dogon, Laird Scranton demonstrated that the cosmological structure described in the myths and drawings of the Dogon runs parallel to modern science--atomic theory, quantum theory, and string theory--their drawings often taking the same form as accurate scientific diagrams that relate to the formation of matter. Scranton also pointed to the close resemblance between the keywords and component elements of Dogon cosmology and those of ancient Egypt, and the implication that ancient cosmology may also be about actual science.

Sacred Symbols of the Dogon uses these parallels as the starting point for a new interpretation of the Egyptian hieroglyphic language. By substituting Dogon cosmological drawings for equivalent glyph-shapes in Egyptian words, a new way of reading and interpreting the Egyptian hieroglyphs emerges. Scranton shows how each hieroglyph constitutes an entire concept, and that their meanings are scientific in nature. Using the Dogon symbols as a "Rosetta stone," he reveals references within the ancient Egyptian language that define the full range of scientific components of matter: from massless waves to the completed atom, even suggesting direct correlations to a fully realized unified field theory

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23842|2007-11-20 16:02:36|pukulan1984|Re: Prof Molefi Kete Asante And Temple University|
Here is another link to the story:

<http://www.blink.org.uk/print.asp?key=15918>

However, it is hard to find out what was actually said.

Alex

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Off with her head!!! Just kidding - kinda.

> HTP,

> Mahari

| 23843|2007-11-20 22:41:55|Mahari Mengistu|PBS' MASTER OF THE KILLER ANTS|

I just watched this wonderful program on PBS' Nova called Master of the Killer Ants. As you watch it you see perfectly how the ancient culture of KMT and Afrika developed: the close observation of nature, the mysticism, the deep awareness of the close connection to and respect for animals.

As you watch you also see evidence that seems to support the question discussed here regarding the meaning of ancestors and whether ancestors equal ntr. From the way ancestors was used in the village it seems clear that they are interchangeable.

The most important man in the village was an elder named Matsagawra (may have mis-spelled it) who was a very small man - perhaps, a dwarf (a la Bes?)who performed incantations and magic with this high mystical voice.

It was a wonderful program to watch. The village life seemed so idyllic and peaceful and mutually supportive. Following it was a program on the genocide in Darfur - a study in Afrikan diversity and contrasts.

Speaking of contrasts, below is a photo of two little boys from the village. I think they are brothers.

I wonder what eurocentrics say about them. These are the same kind of color distinctions we see on Egyptian wall paintings.

Would they say the one on the right, a reddish brown, is Egyptian and the one on the left is Nubian?

If you can't see it, go here:<http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/nova/ants/mofu.html>

HTP, Mahari

| 23844|2007-11-20 23:10:21|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Great! I think that as a people our culture teaches us to respect authority which for us has tended to be older people whom we have traditionally revered. Now, however, globally that ancient tradition has been ripped to shreds and it's benefits are/have crumbled. This isn't to say that we should no longer respect our elders - they probably need it more now than ever, perhaps. What I'm referring to is the dynamic of respect for authority symbolized by the elderly. That kind of respect I believe extends itself ever upward into the government, etc. After years of invasion and interference from europeans and arabs who don't respect this ancient symbol of authority it has ceased to work sufficiently for the Afrikan. The europeans and arabs respect youth and power only. And consequently profoundly distrust our youth. So their respect for youth does not extend to and enable our youth - it seeks to destroy them subtly or overtly.

So our younger generation must move beyond the tradiion and take the initiative because I believe the current black authority worldwide is weakened and wounded from some mortal blows. The caring, of course, won't leave the wounded to die but he mustn't allow himself to die because of the wounded.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>

> Mahari. Good idea. I read the story yesterday. Was impressed, but as an African, I'm quite saddened by how much local talent is being wasted .In Tanzania, only around 15 percent have access to electricity, yes 85%!Will try to contact the guy (via the newspapers article)For example, a link up with african americans with similar interests(Kungufuhustle etc) would very much help in terms of technological transfer and help.Will keep you informed.

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: mahari@...: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 19:32:00

+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>

>

>

>

> Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way the three of you could form an organization of some sort - an Afrikan-AAmerican inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that there is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in yourselves.

Plant the seed.HTP,Mahari--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:>> Peter> > Thank you for sharing this. I found it very informative, with more then> a hint of familiarity.> >

Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Peter Kaiza

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> To:

ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007

13:42:35 +0000> > Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa

but they lack support> > > > IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you don't have to worry> about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite> television subscription. You have power and water in abundance and you> can access any television

channel of your choice from a remote village. > > > John Fute, popularly known by his friends as Pwagu lives this kind of> life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region. > > >

When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the first> time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension> officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty> pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle. > > > His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road,> looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish> and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in> terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world despite> the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.

> > > > As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the> magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the> sounds of the Hagafilo River falls. > > > > His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family> members visit him from time to time. > > Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case> cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch> off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor> and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village. > > > > When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to> him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him □Pwagu□, relating him> to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who> went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has> successfully generated his own power plant. > > > > > The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the> schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate. > > > > > □I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my> village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as □mad□ except for the> village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue with> what I was doing,□ says Fute. > > > > > According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to> settle. □When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how> to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me,□ he says. > > > > > > He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought on> how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative> because he had learnt from government officials that it was the> government (TanESCO) only that had the right to own and generate> electricity by then. > > > > > In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue> with his endeavour without fear of TanESCO. > > > > > He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream> of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but> the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time. > > In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby> and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So to> him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council> and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family> wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan. > > > > > > > When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought> some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought> wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of> electricity. > > > > > > From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter> pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the> propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends> electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into> electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says soon> he will expand to 30 kilowatts. > > > > > After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in> helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew> are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never> lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal> the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the> electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local> brew shop. > > > > > It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take it> through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and> produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no> more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home> theatre sets. > > > > > > From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite> dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio> signals. > > > > > > Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill for> domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy (electricity,> oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe,> up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000> litre-capacity underground tank at his home. > > > > With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed> variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No> dependence on rain falls anymore. > > > > > Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of> talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar> Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the 'father of farm> implements'. > > > > Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles> to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally> designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology. > > > > > He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can> either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby> factory. > > > > > Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of> his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of> Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen,> according to his explanation. > > > > > 'They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and my> skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this> machine,' says Msigwa. > > > > > He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time. This> planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width.> He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement's show in Morogoro. > > > > > When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation and> resentment from his voice. He says: 'This was my biggest invention> following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the> poverty-stricken situation we were living in. > > > > > > He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as nyanga, but whenever they planted them, they never germinated. At this time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which was known as Nzalilo, would cover for three people. > > > > > Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of Mwalimu Nyerere. But when he retired from active administration, it was like everything went away with him, he laments. > > > > > When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen, he further narrates. > > > > > Msigwa's brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping. > He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number of which he can't predict. As of today many still go to his workshop for timber and cutting of logs. > > > > > > > He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement. > > > > > And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop themselves. Don't fear to practise your talents, your society depends on you, he says. > > > > > > >

> To:

ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com > From: atenergy@ > Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500 > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST > IS A MYTH.....> > Thank you, Meninarmer.> > Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer> "success stories" as they were called -- examples of NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial success, whether through the licensing of the technology or actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving that solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant shifts the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the UV range, not particularly significant for terrestrial power conversion systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot more UV.> > But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.> > Peter> > > >

> To:

Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com > From: shalomic@ > Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500 > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....> > I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar> developments are available> through their technology transfer program. The stuff is> developed for> space, but they encourage commercialization of these> technologies.> Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from> them for $1.> <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>> <http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>> > Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Paul Kekai Manansala > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS> PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 - 0000> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray> wrote:> > > > > Thank you, Paul.> > > I have been through all the hoops regarding possible> shortcut routes> to initiating not just purchasing/installaton of> solar-electric> technology in the developing world, but actual> technology transfer,> i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline> boule or from> "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've> had> discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in> the Boston> area), among others, but got stuck with the funding> (surprise,> surprise!!). So cudos to your your family too for> actually being> involved in the technology of the future - -- did you> hear Chavez> talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?> > > > > Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward> a "basket of> currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil.> This is> being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.> > I still remember when people would laugh at predictions> of $100/bbl.> > Regards,> Paul Kekai Manansala> > Regards,> Paul Keaki Manansala> > > > > _____> Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now! > > > > > _____> Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!> > > > > > > > _____> > Get free emoticon packs and customisation from Windows Live.> > <http://www.pimpmylive.co.uk>> > | 23845|2007-11-21 06:24:56|Peter Gray|Re: Prof Molefi Kete Asante And Temple University| I too would like to find out what exactly transpired between them.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: avdeelen@wanadoo.nl
Date: Wed, 21 Nov 2007 00:02:35 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Prof Molefi Kete Asante And Temple University

Here is another link to the story:

<http://www.blink.org.uk/print.asp?key=15918>

However, it is hard to find out what was actually said.

Alex

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
>
> Off with her head!!! Just kidding - kinda.
> HTP,
> Mahari

---

You keep typing, we keep giving. Download Messenger and join the im Initiative now. Join in!
| 23846|2007-11-21 07:33:43|matt mercer|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A MYTH.....|

I agree, when I was in New Orleans doing relief work last year, iI was struck by how many conversations I had with the sixty something generation about this issue especially for the African-American. The break down of the relationships between the old and young may have gotten more extreme after the storm, but the truth that the generation gap was already wider and deeper in conflict was just made more clear. And I think this is true for many ethnic groups and is more an issue of class ism and poor education all around.

I wonder if the the word Plaeides has been mistranslated since the ages of obsession of Greco=Roman beauty.....even in Dr. Winters work with Tocharian this is translated as "in praise of youth", but perhaps in old Egyptian it is more like, "in praise of regeneration of recognition of self-determination" especially if you write it out phonetically in Meroitic. I was thinking about this as I was looking at the virtual tour, <http://www.world-heritage-tour.org/list/e.html>

, of Seti I temple in the 15th frame on the ceiling is a painting I think illustrates this concept of regeneration quite well. I think from dynasty to dynasty the idea of the pesdjet or pantheon was meant to help teach people about continuity of growth and cultivation as related to social expansion and inter cultural versus indigenous expression of growth. The Ntr are like bodies of teachings that are interchangeable and shift form time to time that are constantly shifting alignments to suit the needs of the day. I think the temple ceiling here is like a blue print passed on from generation to generation of what the Hathor ceiling represents as a unified field of expression of this concept.

Bless,
Matt Mercer
JAH

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Great! I think that as a people our culture teaches us to respect authority which for us has tended to be older people whom we have traditionally revered. Now, however, globally that ancient tradition has been ripped to shreds and it's benefits are/have crumbled. This isn't to say that we should no longer respect our elders - they probably need it more now than ever, perhaps. What I'm referring to is the dynamic of respect for authority symbolized by the elderly. That kind of respect I believe extends itself ever upward into the government, etc. After years of invasion and interference from europeans and arabs who don't respect this ancient symbol of authority it has ceased to work sufficiently for the Afrikan. The europeans and arabs respect youth and power only. And consequently profoundly distrust our youth. So their respect for youth does not extend to and enable our youth - it seeks to destroy them subtly or overtly.

So our younger generation must move beyond the tradiion and take the initiative because I believe the current black authority worldwide is weakened and wounded from some mortal blows. The caring, of course, won't leave the wounded to die but he mustn't allow himself to die because of the wounded.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>

> Mahari. Good idea. I read the story yesterday. Was impressed, but as an African, I'm quite saddened by how much local talent is being wasted .In Tanzania, only around 15 percent have access to electricity, yes 85% !Will try to contact the guy (via the newspapers article)For example, a link up with african americans with similar interests(Kungufuhu stle etc) would very much help in terms of technological transfer and help.Will keep you informed.

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: mahari@...: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 19:32:00

+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>
>
>
>

> Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way the three of you could form an organization of some sort - an Afrikan-AAmerican inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that there is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in yourselves. Plant the seed.HTP,Mahari- -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:>> Peter> > Thank you for sharing this. I found it very informative, with more than> a hint of familiarity. > > Meninarmer> > -----Original Message----- > From: Peter Kaiza > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups .com> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 13:42:35 +0000> > Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support> > > > > IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you don't have to worry> about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite> television subscription. You have power and water in abundance and you> can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village. > > > > John Fute, popularly known by his friends as Pwagu lives this kind of> life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region. > > > > When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the first> time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension> officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty> pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle. > > > > His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road,> looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish> and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in> terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world despite> the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe. > > > > As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the> magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the> sounds of the Hagafilo River falls. > > > > His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family> members visit him from time to time. > > Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case> cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch> off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor> and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village. > > > > When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to> him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him Pwagu, relating him> to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who> went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has> successfully generated his own power plant. > > > > > The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate. > > > > > □ I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as □mad□ except for the village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue with what I was doing,□ says Fute. > > > > > According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to settle. □ When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me,□ he says. > > > > > > He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought on how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative because he had learnt from government officials that it was the government (TanESCO) only that had the right to own and generate electricity by then. > > > > > In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue with his endeavour without fear of TanESCO. > > > > > He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time. > > In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So to him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan. > > > > > > When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of electricity. > > > > > > From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says soon he will expand to 30 kilowatts. > > > > > > After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local brew shop. > > > > > > It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take it through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home theatre sets. > > > > > > From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio signals. > > > >

> > Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill for domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy (electricity, > oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe,> up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000> litre-capacity underground tank at his home. >
> > > With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed> variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No> dependence on rain falls anymore. > > > > > Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of> talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar> Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the 'father of farm> implements'. > > > > Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles> to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally> designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology. > > > > > He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can> either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby> factory. > > > > > Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of> his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of> Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen,> according to his explanation. > > > > >
> 'They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and my> skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this> machine,' says Msigwa. > > > > > > He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time. This> planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width.> He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement's show in Morogoro. > > > > > > When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation and> resentment from his voice. He says: 'This was my biggest invention> following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the> poverty-stricken situation we were living in. > > > > > > > He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was> serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as> 'yanga', but whenever they planted them, they never germinated. At this> time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which> was known as 'Nzalilo', would cover for three people. > > > > > > Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to> develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of> Mwalimu Nyerere. 'But when he retired from active administration, it was> like everything went away with him,' he laments. > > > > > > 'When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they> tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen,' he> further narrates. > > >
> > > Msigwa's brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping.> He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number of which he can't predict. As of today many still go to his workshop for timber and cutting of logs. > > > > > > He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement. > > > > And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop themselves. Don't fear to practise your talents, your society depends on you, he says. > > > > > >

> To:

ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com > From: atenergy@ > Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500 > Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH..... > > Thank you, Meninarmer. > > Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer "success stories" as they were called -- examples of NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial success, whether through the licensing of the technology or actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving that solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant shifts the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the UV range, not particularly significant for terrestrial power conversion systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot more UV. > > But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again. > > Peter > > > >

> To:

Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com > From: shalomic@ > Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500 > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH..... > > I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar developments are available through their technology transfer program. The stuff is developed for space, but they encourage commercialization of these technologies. > Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program from them for $1. > <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/> > <http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/> > Meninarmer > > -----Original Message----- > From: Paul Kekai Manansala > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH..... > Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 - 0000 > Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote: > > > > > Thank you, Paul. > > > I have been through all the hoops regarding possible shortcut routes to initiating not just purchasing/installation of solar-electric technology in the developing world, but actual technology transfer, i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline boule or from "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've had discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in the Boston area), among others, but got stuck with the funding (surprise, surprise!!). So kudos to your family too for actually being involved in the technology of the future -- did you hear Chavez talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil? > > > > > Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward a "basket of currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil. > This is being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq. > > I still remember when people would laugh at predictions of $100/bbl. > > Regards, > Paul Kekai Manansala > > Regards, > Paul Kekai Manansala > > > > > _____ _>

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now! > > >
> > _____ _>
Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____ _
> Get free emoticon packs and customisation from Windows Live.
> <http://www.pimpmylive.co.uk>
>

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

| 23847|2007-11-21 09:36:52|shaimesh@aol.com|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|

Thx for this reference. I knew this was a key to khamitik philosophy but did not know which book to start with. Would you say this is a good starter book?

Sista Shai (Shy-ee)

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 1:26 pm

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr

Peace Pham

Many of you know of the lecture I will be doing on December 15th entitled Bantu Cosmology & the Origins of Egyptian Civilization. Many have asked about material in which they could study to do their own comparisons because they live in another city. Well one book, out of many reference materials, I highly recommend is titled Sacred Symbols of the Dogon, The Key to Advanced Science in the Ancient Egyptian Hieroglyphs by Laird Scranton.

This is a real good scholarly work and it provides a methodology to interpreting the Mdw Ntr script and the Ta-Merrian world view (cosmology). The comparative studies he has done with the Dogon cosmology and language with that of ancient Egypt, I have been doing with the Kongo & ancient Egypt. His analysis further backs the ideas proposed by Dr. Winters, Ferg Somo, Dr Obenga, Dr. Fu-Kiau and myself.

What this further helps to bring to light is how ancient the proto-saharan civilizations were and how expansive the global education system that had its orientation in ancient Egypt was. He comes to the same conclusions we have been espousing (African centered researchers) for decades and it's nice to see scholarship out there like this to make a more fuller body of knowledge (especially in English).

So for those who at least would like to get some insight into how I, at least, approach comparative cultural and iconographic studies, then this is a good start. I also titled this thread as such because the Bantu languages are a branch of the larger Niger-Congo languages in which the Dogon Toro language is a part of. So this is a hint as if you find regular correspondences throughout many other inner African languages in comparison to the ancient Egyptian, then more than likely the Egyptian language is simply a branch of the Niger-Congo languages. More definitive research needs to be conducted however.

*****

See larger image

Share your own customer images

Publisher: learn how customers can

search inside this book.

Sacred Symbols of the Dogon: The Key to Advanced Science in the Ancient Egyptian Hieroglyphs (Paperback)

by Laird Scranton (Author), John Anthony West (Foreword)

No customer reviews yet. Be the first.

---

List Price: $18.95

Price: $12.89 & eligible for FREE Super Saver Shipping on orders over $25. Details

You Save: $6.06 (32%)

Availability: In Stock. Ships from and sold by Amazon.com. Gift-wrap available.

Want it delivered Thursday, November 1?

Order it in the next 15 hours and 19 minutes, and choose One-Day Shipping at checkout.

See details

9 used & new available from $12.25

Review

John Dering, chief scientist for lasers and special projects at Scientific Applications & Research Associates (SARA), Inc. : "Sacred Symbols of the Dogon will challenge the reader to seriously consider that ancient civilizations possessed a scientific sophistication rivaling our present-day theories of matter and the fundamental forces of physics. Highly recommended for anyone who has questioned the mainstream view of ancient civilization as scientifically primitive."

Book Description

Dogon cosmology provides a new Rosetta stone for reinterpreting Egyptian hieroglyphs

Provides a new understanding of Egyptian hieroglyphs as scientific symbols based on Dogon cosmological drawings

Use parallels between Dogon and Egyptian word meanings to identify relationships between Dogon myths and modern science

In The Science of the Dogon, Laird Scranton demonstrated that the cosmological structure described in the myths and drawings of the Dogon runs parallel to modern science--atomic theory, quantum theory, and string theory--their drawings often taking the same form as accurate scientific diagrams that relate to the formation of matter. Scranton also pointed to the close resemblance between the keywords and component elements of Dogon cosmology and those of ancient Egypt, and the implication that ancient cosmology may also be about actual science.

Sacred Symbols of the Dogon uses these parallels as the starting point for a new interpretation of the Egyptian hieroglyphic language. By substituting Dogon cosmological drawings for equivalent glyph-shapes in Egyptian words, a new way of reading and interpreting the Egyptian hieroglyphs emerges. Scranton shows how each hieroglyph constitutes an entire concept, and that their meanings are scientific in nature. Using the Dogon symbols as a "Rosetta stone," he reveals references within the ancient Egyptian language that define the full range of scientific components of matter: from massless waves to the completed atom, even suggesting direct correlations to a fully realized unified field theory

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail!

| 23848|2007-11-21 09:41:31|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

I was watching a series of programs on the History Channel (love that and History International; of course there is the eurocentric spin) which dealt with the Spartans. I watched only one of the series of three. I think their history clearly defines where this European worship of youth and power came from ? not that the Spartans are totally responsible but that they exemplified its expression. They practiced an early crude and cruel form of genetic engineering. They killed any baby ? male or female -that was not in their opinion "perfect" by leaving them to the elements or throwing them off a cliff. The women were essentially baby machines. The boys when they became seven years of age were sent off to the "Cub Scouts of Hell" where they were taught survival skills and toughness which including learning to steal. And if you got caught stealing you were brutally beaten. This kind of "training" continued until you were approximately 30.

They lorded over a group of slaves called "helots" who outnumbered them and who they could and did kill at will without punishment. Hitler's Germany modeled themselves after the Spartans which was mentioned on the Athena Debates video. It was in essence a soldier society which is what I think we live under today. But that's another topic.

===

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> I agree, when I was in New Orleans doing relief work last year, I was struck by how many conversations I had with the sixty something generation about this issue especially for the African-American. The break down of the relationships between the old and young may have gotten more extreme after the storm, but the truth that the generation gap was already wider and deeper in conflict was just made more clear. And I think this is true for many ethnic groups and is more an issue of classism and poor education all around.

> I wonder if the word Plaeides has been mistranslated since the ages of obsession of Greco-Roman beauty.....even in Dr. Winters work with Tocharian this is translated as "in praise of youth", but perhaps in old Egyptian it is more like, "in praise of regeneration of recognition of self-determination" especially if you write it out phonetically in Meroitic.

> I was thinking about this as I was looking at the virtual tour, <http://www.world-heritage-tour.org/list/e.html>

> , of Seti I temple in the 15th frame on the ceiling is a painting I think illustrates this concept of regeneration quite well. I think from dynasty to dynasty the idea of the pesdjed or pantheon was meant to help teach people about continuity of growth and cultivation as related to social expansion and intercultural versus indigenous expression of growth. The Ntr are like bodies of teachings that are interchangeable and shift form time to time that are constantly shifting alignments to suit the needs of the day. I think the temple ceiling here is like a blue print passed on from generation to generation of what the Hathor ceiling represents as a unified field of expression of this concept.

>

> Bless,

> Matt Mercer

> JAH

>

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Great! I think that as a people our culture teaches us to respect > authority which for us has tended to be older people whom we have > traditionally revered. Now, however, globally that ancient tradition > has been ripped to shreds and its benefits are/have crumbled.

This

> isn't to say that we should no longer respect our elders - they > probably need it more now than ever, perhaps. What I'm referring to > is the dynamic of respect for authority symbolized by the elderly.

> That kind of respect I believe extends itself ever upward into the > government, etc. After years of invasion and interference from

> Europeans and Arabs who don't respect this ancient symbol of > authority it has ceased to work sufficiently for the African. The > Europeans and Arabs respect youth and power only. And consequently > profoundly distrust our youth. So their respect for youth does not > extend to and enable our youth - it seeks to destroy them subtly or > overtly.

> So our younger generation must move beyond the tradiion and take
the > initiative because I believe the current black authority worldwide
is > weakened and wounded from some mortal blows. The caring, of course, > won't leave the wounded to die but he mustn't allow himself to die > because of the wounded.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:
>
>> Mahari. Good idea. I read the story yesterday. Was impressed,
but > as an African, I'm quite saddened by how much local talent is being > wasted .In Tanzania, only around 15 percent have access to > electricity, yes 85%!Will try to contact the guy (via the newspapers > article)For example, a link up with african americans with similar > interests(Kungufuhustle etc) would very much help in terms of > technological transfer and help.Will keep you informed.
>
>
>> To: Ta_Seti@: mahari@: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 19:32:00 > +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS
A
> MYTH.....
>
>
>
>
>
>> Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way the three > of you could form an organization of some sort - an Afrikan-AAmerican
> inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that there > is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in yourselves.
> Plant the seed.HTP,Mahari--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com,
kungfuhustle > wrote:>> Peter> > Thank you for sharing this. I found

it

> very informative, with more than> a hint of familiarity.> >
> Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Peter Kaiza
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> To:
> ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS
> AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007
> 13:42:35 +0000> > Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa > but they lack support> > > > IMAGINE you are living in a situation
> where you don't have to worry> about any kind of bills, be it > water, electricity or satellite> television subscription. You have > power and water in abundance and you> can access any television
> channel of your choice from a remote village. > > > John Fute, > popularly known by his friends as Pwagu lives this kind of> > life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region. > >
>
> When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for the > first> time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural > extension> officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with
a > cap, dirty> pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle. > > > His > homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road,> > looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite > dish> and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is
up-> to-date in> terms of electricity and what is happening throughout
the > world despite> the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.
> > > > As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view > the> magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation
and > the> sounds of the Hagafilo River falls. > > > His does not stay > with his family at this remote area. He says family> members visit > him from time to time. > > Fute does not experience any power cuts or > rationing as is the case> cities and towns in the country. At his > place he decides when to switch> off the lights; otherwise power
is > on all the time. He is the inventor> and the engineer of an electric > plant in remote Njombe Village. > > > When he began his experiment
> in electricity generation, people close to> him did not take him > seriously. They nicknamed him Pwagu, relating him> to a former

> radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who> went
by > that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has> > successfully generated his own power plant. > > > > > The 48-

year-> old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the> schooling

> apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate. > > > > >

□I > started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my> > village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as □mad□ except > for the> village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to > continue with> what I was doing,□ says Fute. > > > > >

According

> to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to> settle.

> □When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how>
to > solve it. This is exactly what happened to me,□ he says. > > > >

>

> > He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought

> on> how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the > initiative> because he had learnt from government officials that

it > was the> government (TanESCO) only that had the right to own and > generate> electricity by then. > > > > > In 1992, the Area

> Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue> with his > endeavour without fear of TanESCO. > > > > > He started by > repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream> of having > his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but> the > problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time. >

>

> In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a > nearby> and would-be his new home village. This river flows all > seasons. So to> him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached > the village council> and they gave him a big area running across

the > river. His family> wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on

with > his plan. > > > > > > When he settled, the primary objective

was > to produce power. He bought> some tools and produced a turbine

from > his home workshop. He bought> wires and other materials necessary

for > production and supply of> electricity. > > > > > >From the falls,

> water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter> pipe and > from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the> > propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends> > electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals

into> > electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says > soon> he will expand to 30 kilowatts. > > > > > > After generating > such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in> helping his new > village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew> are the first > to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never> lasted long

as > he was forced to stop it because they started to steal> the wires.

If

> you happen to pass through that area, you will see the> electric > posts that were used for electric supply to the village□s local> > brew shop. > > > > > > It is very strange how he managed to tap

water

> from the falls, take it> through pipes at an unprecedented pressure > to run the turbine and> produce power. Apart from the costs of buying > materials, there are no> more. He uses the power to light up his > compound and run his home> theatre sets. > > > > > >From pieces

of > metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite> dish that can > access an imaginable number of television and radio> signals. > >

> >

> > > Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the > hill for> domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy

> (electricity,> oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes > water through a pipe,> up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat

> surface to his 9,000> litre-capacity underground tank at his home.

>

> > > > With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has > planed> variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all > the time. No> dependence on rain falls anymore. > > > > > > Njombe

> District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of talents.

> Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar Msigwa.

In

> today's language he can be called the "father of farm implements".

> > > > Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology.

> > > > He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can either use > his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby factory.

> > > > > Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University of Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority > claimed that it was stolen, according to his explanation.

> > > >

> > "They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology and > my skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with this machine," says Msigwa.

> > > > > He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time. This planter was good > as it would plant seeds to required length and width. He had taken > it to SUA for a farm implement's show in Morogoro.

> > > > >

When

> Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation and > resentment from his voice. He says: "This was my biggest invention > following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the poverty-> stricken situation we were living in.

> > > > > > He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was serious > hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as "yanga", but whenever they planted them, they never germinated.

> At this time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which was known as "Nzalilo", would cover for three

> people.

> > > > > Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent > would be helped out to> develop their talents for the betterment of > many, during the time of> Mwalimu Nyerere. □ But when he retired > from active administration, it was> like everything went away with > him,□ he laments. > > > > > □ When SUA wanted me to manufacture > another machine, I refused until they> tell me what exactly happened > to first one they claimed was stolen,□ he> further narrates. > >

>
> > > > Msigwa□s brain works better when he is resting, alone or when > sleeping.> He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put > them into> writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, > the number of> which he can□t predict. As of today many still go to > his workshop for> timber and cutting of logs. > > > > > > He says > that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology> > alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended > on> local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.
> >
> > > > > □ And those who know that they have talents let them find > ways to develop> themselves. Don□t fear to practise your talents, > your society depends on> you,□ he says. > > > > > > >
> _____> To:
> ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com> From: atenergy@> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007
> 08:14:13 -0500> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS PAST> IS A MYTH.....> > Thank you, Meninarmer.> > Good > idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at> NASA > documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer> "success > stories" as they were called -- examples of> NASA-initiated R&D that > eventually culminated in commercial> success, whether through the > licensing of the technology or> actual manufacturing of a product > (such as the foam mattress> marketed by Serta that uses a > viscoelastic foam developed by> NASA for space flight). As an > independent R&D entrepreneur> (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia > Labs and NREL) I had> also worked on a novel photovoltaic material > (ruthenium> dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of > achieving that> solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the > dopant shifts> the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into

the > UV range,> not particularly significant for terrestrial power > conversion> systems, but conceivably useful in space where there
is a > lot> more UV.> > But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.>
>
> Peter> > > >
> _____> To:
> Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> From: shalomic@> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007
> 01:00:56 -0500> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S> > GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....> > I suggest you contact NASA and see > what solar> developments are available> through their technology > transfer program. The stuff is> developed for> space, but they > encourage commercialization of these> technologies.> Last time I used > them, I purchased a 6DOF program from> them for $1.>
> <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>>
<http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>>
> > Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Paul Kekai
> Manansala > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> To:
> Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS
AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS> PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -
> 0000> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster> > --- In > Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray> wrote:> > > > >
> Thank you, Paul.> > > > I have been through all the hoops regarding > possible> shortcut routes> to initiating not just > purchasing/installaton of> solar-electric> technology in the > developing world, but actual> technology transfer,> i.e., > manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline> boule or > from> "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've>
had> > discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in> the Boston>
> area), among others, but got stuck with the funding> (surprise,> > surprise!!). So cudos to your your family too for> actually being> > involved in the technology of the future - -- did you> hear Chavez>
> talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?> > > > > Yes, I > heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward> a "basket of> > currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil.> This is> > being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.> > I still

There is no one "key" so to speak. The language system of ancient Ta-merri is an amalgamation of several African languages. To understand Ta-Merri is to first realize that the social structure that governed the political state was that of a priesthood. These priesthods had several universities (lodges) across the continent and eventually across the world. What you could "see" and discover in one part of the continent, you could not see in other parts. Each specific culture specialized in a particular science. It was an inner-connected web of living universities.

So to study a particular aspect of Astronomy, you had to study under the Dogon priest: that was their specialty. To study metallurgy and alchemy, you might study under the priesthood in Ta-Seti. It was a large university system and Mdw Ntr was a centralized way in which all the different ethnic groups under the priesthood could communicate. Languages change over time, but the symbols, for the most part, do not.

So this is why you can see phonetic variations to the same set of symbols. For instance, the term "life" is said differently depending on the dialect on the continent. Three examples are:

aNKh - Ancient Egyptian - life

NKwa - Akan - life

N'Kwiki - Kongo - to live, life

As we can see from these terms, the root of the word "life" has the consonants "NK." The Akan and the Kongo pronunciation gives us clues on how to properly say "Ankh." It is more likely rendered "Nkwa" as pronounced by the Akan. The symbol used for the "Ankh/Nkwa" is also found among the Kongo people and it represents an Nganga priest (a doer, master, community medicine, specialist, fire/coal lighter (life of the community)).

What the book Sacred Symbols of the Dogon does is reaffirms the notion that Mdw Ntr is a deliberate writing system created by priest who understood higher aspects of creation and science. Also, it reinforces the notion that if you really want to understand Mdw Ntr, you have to look at LIVING African priesthood systems as I have espoused.

I remember about two years ago, I had a tape of a professor here in the United States who did a presentation at an ASCAC conference on using the Dogon mythology to decode the higher science behind Mdw Ntr. I since lost the tape so I don't remember his name. But this concept of using African symbology from current living systems to interpret Ancient Egyptian writing is not new, it's just nice to see a thorough exploration in print.

The book gets technical, but I think he puts it in a manner that is easily digestible for the layman. So I recommend it if you are looking for an alternative way to interpret key concepts in Egyptian cosmology, but not as an introduction to reading Mdw Ntr. And also, I would recommend you get his first book Science of the Dogon. It will be a good lead into book II (Sacred Symbols of the Dogon).

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23850|2007-11-21 13:06:50|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

BOSTON, Massachusetts (AP) -- IBM Corp. is placing bets on African countries where it has launched a mentoring program for college students.

The project, called Makocha Minds, using the Swahili word for "teachers," puts 250 of IBM's top researchers in regular contact with engineering, math and computing students at universities in 10 sub-Saharan countries: Ethiopia, Rwanda, Uganda, South Africa, Kenya, Senegal, Botswana, Tanzania, Ghana and Nigeria.

The participants chat mainly by e-mail or phone, but in-person meetings could happen eventually.

The students usually want general guidance on becoming successful or pursuing advanced degrees, rather than help with their homework, said Mark Dean, head of IBM'S Almaden Research Center in Silicon Valley and leader of the project.

Dean said the project lays groundwork for IBM to do business in Africa, where potentially groundbreaking research is being pursued on diverse topics like plant genomics and nuclear power.

"We believe that Africa is that next emerging opportunity," he said. "We need to be familiar with different cultures and languages and operations in the African countries. What we want is the African people and African businesses to look at IBM as a trusted provider."

Other technology companies have tried strengthening their interactions in Africa, including Google Inc., whose foundation has backed business-plan competitions in Ghana and Tanzania. However, experts in international technology development said IBM's mentoring program appears unique.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Kaiza <prweza@hotmail.co.uk>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 20:40:53 +0000

Mahari. Good idea. I read the story yesterday. Was impressed, but as an African, I'm quite saddened by how much local talent is being wasted .In Tanzania, only around 15 percent have access to electricity, yes 85%!
Will try to contact the guy (via the newspapers article)For example, a link up with african americans with similar interests(Kungufuhustle etc) would very much help in terms of technological transfer and help.Will keep you informed.

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: mahari@myway.com

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 19:32:00 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way the three of you could form an organization of some sort - an Afrikan-AAmerican inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that there is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in yourselves.
Plant the seed.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Peter

>

> Thank you for sharing this. I found it very informative, with more then

> a hint of familiarity.
>
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Peter Kaiza
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST

IS A

> MYTH.....
> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 13:42:35 +0000
>
> Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support

>
>
>
>
> IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you don't have

to worry

> about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite > television subscription. You have power and water in abundance

and
you > can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village.

>
>
>

> John Fute, popularly known by his friends as 'Pwagu' lives

this kind of > life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.

>

>

>

> When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for

the first > time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension

> officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty

> pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle.

>

>

>

> His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea

road,

> looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite

dish

> and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in > terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world

despite

> the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.
>
>
>
> As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the > magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation

and the > sounds of the Hagafilo River falls.

>
>
>
> His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says

family

> members visit him from time to time.
>
> Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case > cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when

to switch

> off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor

> and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe

Village.

>
>
>
> When he began his experiment in electricity generation,

people
close to > him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him 'Pwagu' >

,
relating him

> to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam

(RTD)
who > went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has > successfully generated his own power plant.

>

>

>

>

>

> The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of

the > schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate.

>

>

>

>

>

> "I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in

my

> village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as 'mad'

except for the > village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue

with > what I was doing,†says Fute.

>

>

>

>

>

> According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to > settle. "When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think

of how > to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me," he says.

>

>

>

>

>

> He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and

thought

on > how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative

> because he had learnt from government officials that it was

the > government (TanESCO) only that had the right to own and generate > electricity by then.

>

>

>

>

>

> In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue

> with his endeavour without fear of Tanesco.

>

>

>

>

>

> He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream

> of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt,

but > the problem was little water supply and would dry from time

to
time.

>

> In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby

> and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So

to > him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village

council

> and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family

> wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power.

He

bought > some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought

> wires and other materials necessary for production and supply

of > electricity.

>

>

>

>

>

>>From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch

diameter

> pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the > propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller

sends > electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals

into > electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says

soon

> he will expand to 30 kilowatts.

>

>

>

>

>

> After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem

in > helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local

brew

> are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply

never > lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started

to steal

> the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the > electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local

> brew shop.

>

>

>

>

>

> It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take

it

> through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine

and > produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are

no > more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home

> theatre sets.

>

>

>

>

>

> > From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite

> dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio

> signals.

>

>

>

>

>

> Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill

for > domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy

(electricity, > oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe,

> up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his

9,000

> litre-capacity underground tank at his home.

>

>

>

> With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed

> variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all

the

time. No

> dependence on rain falls anymore.

>

>

>

>

>

> Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house

of > talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old

Aboubacar

> Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the 'father of farm > implements'.

>

>

>

> Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of

poles

> to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally

> designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology.

>

>

>

>

>

> He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine.

He

can > either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby

> factory.

>

>

>

>

>

> Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed

the loss of > his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University

of > Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it

was stolen,

> according to his explanation.

>

>

>

>

>

> “They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology

and
my > skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with

this > machine,†says Msigwa.

>

>

>

>

>

> He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time.

This

> planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length

and width.

> He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement’s show in Morogoro.

>

>

>

>

>

> When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation

and > resentment from his voice. He says: “This was my biggest invention

> following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the > poverty-stricken situation we were living in.

>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17.

There
was > serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly

known
as > ‘yanga’, but whenever they planted them, they never germinated.

At this > time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention,

which > was known as ‘Nzalilo’, would cover for three people.

>
>
>
>
>
>

> Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to > develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of > Mwalimu Nyerere. “But when he retired from active administration,

it was

> like everything went away with him,†he laments.

>

>

>

>

>

> “When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused

until they > tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen,†he

> further narrates.

>

>

>

>

>

> Msigwa’s brain works better when he is resting, alone or

when sleeping.

> He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them

into > writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number

of > which he can’t predict. As of today many still go to his workshop

for > timber and cutting of logs.

>

>

>

>

>

>
>
> He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported

technology

> alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed,

depended on

> local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.

>

>

>

>

>

> “And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop > themselves. Don’t fear to practise your talents, your society

depends on

> you,†he says.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

> From: atenergy@...

> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500

> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS

PAST

> IS A MYTH.....

>

> Thank you, Meninarmer.

>

> Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at > NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology

transfer

> "success stories" as they were called -- examples of

> NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial

> success, whether through the licensing of the technology or

> actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress

> marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by

> NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur

> (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had

> also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium > dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving

that

> solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant

shifts

> the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the UV

range,

> not particularly significant for terrestrial power

conversion

> systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot

> more UV.

>

> But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

>

>

---

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: shalomic@...
> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....
>
> I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar > developments are available > through their technology transfer program. The stuff is

> developed for > space, but they encourage commercialization of these > technologies.
> Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program

from

> them for $1.
> <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>
> <http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>
>
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Paul Kekai Manansala
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

GLORIOUS

> PAST IS A
> MYTH.....
> Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray
> wrote:
>>
>>

> > Thank you, Paul.

> >

> > I have been through all the hoops regarding

possible

> shortcut routes

> to initiating not just purchasing/installation of

> solar-electric

> technology in the developing world, but actual

> technology transfer,

> i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure

polycrystalline

> boule or from

> "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years,

I've

> had > discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens

(in

> the Boston

> area), among others, but got stuck with the funding

> (surprise, > surprise!!). So congratulations to your family too for

> actually being

> involved in the technology of the future - -- did

you

> hear Chavez

> talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?

> >

> >

>

> Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move

toward

> a "basket of > currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading

oil.

- > This is
- > being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.
- >
- > I still remember when people would laugh at

predictions

- > of $100/bbl.
- >
- > Regards,
- > Paul Kekai Manansala
- >
- > Regards,
- > Paul Keaki Manansala
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >

---

> Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

- >
- >
- >
- >
- >

---

> Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

>

---

Are you the Quizmaster? Play BrainBattle with a friend now!

| 23851|2007-11-21 15:00:40|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

>

> Other technology companies have tried strengthening their interactions > in Africa, including Google Inc., whose foundation has backed > business-plan competitions in Ghana and Tanzania. However, experts in > international technology development said IBM's mentoring program > appears unique.

The EU seems even more bullish on Africa, and China is investing all over the place on the continent.

US playing "catch-up" on Africa investment OPIC

Chinese Investments Are Taking the Lead in Africa

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23852|2007-11-21 15:13:37|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Bill Gates just gave a presentation to the NSBE (National Society Of Black Engineers) criticizing the US for encouraging a 50% drop-out rate of black males from High school (now called, Drop-Out factories) and not promoting development of more black engineers. He implied that blacks make much better engineers relative to the other countries the US are attempting to foster.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Wed, 21 Nov 2007 23:00:37 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

>

> Other technology companies have tried strengthening their interactions > in Africa, including Google Inc., whose foundation has backed > business-plan competitions in Ghana and Tanzania. However, experts in > international technology development said IBM's mentoring program > appears unique.

The EU seems even more bullish on Africa, and China is investing all over the place on the continent.

US playing "catch-up" on Africa investment OPIC

Chinese Investments Are Taking the Lead in Africa

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23853|2007-11-21 15:40:41|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

I'm convinced that a large part of the reason young black men drop out of high school has to do with the fact that there are no male role models - so to speak - in the high school curriculum. I'll use myself as an example regarding history classes.

I always enjoyed World History - probably because you saw different and dark peoples in the process in addition to its being simply interesting. However, I found American history intensely -even painfully - boring. And I think it was because there were NO black people in the course except for the cursory mention of slavery and the Civil War. The characters in history were unspeakably uninteresting, boring and oppressive to me. This I believe was partly due to the fact that the accounts were "perfect-ed" lies. If the true fact that they were frequently despicable, vile human beings had been included they would have, at least, been interesting.

Now I intensely love history- now that I know the truth.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Bill Gates just gave a presentation to the NSBE (National Society Of > Black Engineers) criticizing the US for encouraging a 50% drop-out rate > of black males from High school (now called, Drop-Out factories) and not > promoting development of more black engineers. He implied that blacks

> make much better engineers relative to the other countries the US
are > attempting to foster.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Paul Kekai Manansala

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
> MYTH.....

> Date: Wed, 21 Nov 2007 23:00:37 -0000

> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>

>>

>> Other technology companies have tried strengthening their interactions

>> in Africa, including Google Inc., whose foundation has backed >> business-plan competitions in Ghana and Tanzania. However, experts in >> international technology development said IBM's mentoring program >> appears unique.

>

> The EU seems even more bullish on Africa, and China is investing all > over the place on the continent.

>

> US playing "catch-up" on Africa investment OPIC

>

> Chinese Investments Are Taking the Lead in Africa

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23854|2007-11-21 19:44:43|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

How much more boring should American history be for Asians since they are represented even less?

It's not the history being learned in the school but rather the ongoing history of the people learning the subject. A disenfranchised people doesn't just raise itself up by itself. Poor Europeans are still poor and give rise to succeeding generations of poor and disenfranchised people just as other people do around the globe. It's the leaders of a people that either leads them to military conquest or economic trade that enriches their society, allowing some to be brought up out of poverty while others are left behind. A disenfranchised people without any overall military or economic leadership can only reproduce succeeding generations of people of the same disenfranchised state of mind. Individuals will always rise up but the overall population will continue to reproduce itself unless acted upon by a significant social force.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> I'm convinced that a large part of the reason young black men drop > out of high school has to do with the fact that there are no male > role models - so to speak - in the high school curriculum. I'll use

> myself as an example regarding history classes.
> I always enjoyed World History - probably because you saw different > and dark peoples in the process in addition to its being simply > interesting. However, I found American history intensely -even > painfully - boring. And I think it was because there were NO black > people in the course except for the cursory mention of slavery and > the Civil War. The characters in history were unspeakably > uninteresting, boring and oppressive to me. This I believe was > partly due to the fact that the accounts were "perfect-ed" lies.

If

> the true fact that they were frequently despicable, vile human beings

> had been included they would have, at least, been interesting.
> Now I intensely love history- now that I know the truth.

> HTP,

> Mahari

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>

>> Bill Gates just gave a presentation to the NSBE (National Society
Of

>> Black Engineers) criticizing the US for encouraging a 50% dropout

> rate

>> of black males from High school (now called, Drop-Out factories)
> and not >> promoting development of more black engineers. He implied that > blacks

>> make much better engineers relative to the other countries the US
> are >> attempting to foster.
>>
>> Meninarmer
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: Paul Kekai Manansala
>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>> MYTH.....
>> Date: Wed, 21 Nov 2007 23:00:37 -0000
>> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>>>
>>>
>>> Other technology companies have tried strengthening their > interactions
>>> in Africa, including Google Inc., whose foundation has backed >>> business-plan competitions in Ghana and Tanzania. However,
> experts in >>> international technology development said IBM's mentoring program
>>> appears unique.
>>
>> The EU seems even more bullish on Africa, and China is investing
all >> over the place on the continent.
>>
>> US playing "catch-up" on Africa investment OPIC
>>
>> Chinese Investments Are Taking the Lead in Africa
>>
>> Regards,
>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>
>

| 23855|2007-11-21 22:07:00|ANGELINE BANDON-BIBUM|Happy Holidays! Black Friday
Notice - Books make meaningful holiday |

Happy Thanksgiving Everyone!

I hope everyone has a safe and satisfying Thanksgiving tomorrow. I will be volunteering tomorrow, serving breakfast to those in need of the basics of life. After that, I will go home and give thanks to the Almighty again.

Here's a reminder for Black Friday....Why not buy at least one book for someone for the holidays! I plan to restock my shelves with such classics as Black Boy, Manchild in the Promised Land, Song of Solomon, and, yes, David Copperfield to name a few.

Also, may I also suggest, Sojourner's Dream, a novel. Please view the following book trailer to find out more on what the story is about.

Click here: <http://uk.youtube.com/user/BANDONPRESS>

Again, Happy Thanksgiving Everyone!

Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream

Check out my websites:

<http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum>

<http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamanovel.blogspot.com>

<http://sojournersdreamlamentationsofawarrior.blogspot.com>

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

| 23856|2007-11-22 01:33:05|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

Yes, that is quite possible. But we have to remember that Asians have their culture intact and very likely have that to sustain a sense of, at least, their history. So they could very likely view this as just a subject, though boring, to learn. For black people it, in fact, reinforces the lie that we have no history.

Sadly, too many of us fail to realize the extent of black alienation from our roots and history. After all, this society has said we have no significant history and, additionally, as you know, we were forced to remain ignorant and ignorant of our history for centuries.

So I suspect they may be bored or alienated but I doubt that the level of experience is as over all denigrating as for blacks. AND they don't have the visual effect of seeing themselves as slaves of white people.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka" wrote:

>

> How much more boring should American history be for Asians since

they > are represented even less?

>

> It's not the history being learned in the school but rather the > ongoing history of the people learning the subject. A > disenfranchised people doesn't just raise itself up by itself.

Poor

> Europeans are still poor and give rise to succeeding generations of > poor and disenfranchised people just as other people do around the > globe. It's the leaders of a people that either leads them to > military conquest or economic trade that enriches their society, > allowing some to be brought up out of poverty while others are left > behind. A disenfranchised people without any overall military or > economic leadership can only reproduce succeeding generations of > people of the same disenfranchised state of mind. Individuals will > always rise up but the overall population will continue to reproduce

> itself unless acted upon by a significant social force.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > I'm convinced that a large part of the reason young black men drop

> > out of high school has to do with the fact that there are no male > > role models - so to speak - in the high school curriculum. I'll

> use

> > myself as an example regarding history classes.

> > I always enjoyed World History - probably because you saw

different

> > and dark peoples in the process in addition to its being simply > > interesting. However, I found American history intensely -even > > painfully - boring. And I think it was because there were NO

black > > people in the course except for the cursory mention of slavery

and

> > the Civil War. The characters in history were unspeakably > > uninteresting, boring and oppressive to me. This I believe was > > partly due to the fact that the accounts were "perfect-ed" lies.

> If
>> the true fact that they were frequently despicable, vile human > beings
>> had been included they would have, at least, been interesting.
>> Now I intensely love history- now that I know the truth.
>> HTP,
>> Mahari
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>>>
>>> Bill Gates just gave a presentation to the NSBE (National

Society

> Of
>>> Black Engineers) criticizing the US for encouraging a 50% drop> out
>> rate
>>> of black males from High school (now called, Drop-Out #### factories)

>> and not >>> promoting development of more black engineers. He implied that >> blacks
>>> make much better engineers relative to the other countries the

US

>> are >>> attempting to foster.
>>>
>>> Meninarmer
>>>
>>>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>>> From: Paul Kekai Manansala
>>> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A
>>> MYTH.....
>>> Date: Wed, 21 Nov 2007 23:00:37 -0000
>>> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> Other technology companies have tried strengthening their >> interactions
>>>> in Africa, including Google Inc., whose foundation has backed >>> business-plan competitions in Ghana and Tanzania. However,

>> experts in >>> international technology development said IBM's mentoring > program
>>> appears unique.
>>>
>>> The EU seems even more bullish on Africa, and China is investing

> all >>> over the place on the continent.
>>>
>>> US playing "catch-up" on Africa investment OPIC
>>>
>>> Chinese Investments Are Taking the Lead in Africa
>>>
>>> Regards,
>>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>>
>>
>

| 23857|2007-11-22 02:13:03|asar_imhotep|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>
> Good evening all!
>
> Niw-t has finally been decoded.
>
> Enjoy.
>
> Ferg Somo
>

I see no one has commented on this as of yet. The steps taken to come to the conclusion of the many meanings behind the term Niw.t coincides with a very fundamental African concept in contrast to American cultural concepts.

As Maulana Karenga would say, we have to distinguish between the African anthropological concept of being a "person-in-community" as opposed to Europeans seeing people as "autonomous individuals."

In his work MAAT: The Moral Ideal In Ancient Egypt, Karenga makes a profound observation when he states:

"It is through membership in a moral community and rightful social participation in that community that one learns to be a person of character and flourishes as a result of it. For it is in community that we develop our sense of the moral self, learn to honor our obligations, cherish our relations and do our duty in correspondence to our conception of moral worthiness. Thus, we value the communal context, for as Pincoffs (1986, 52) states, "to whatever extent we value these qualities of persons and common life, we will value the conditions that make them possible." And this speaks to both the essentiality of community and tradition." (pg 272)

This concept as espoused by Karenga reinforces the concept of the community being the "womb" of the individual. It is in this location and social environment that one "develops" into a human being (a bearer of dignity and divinity, and one who honors the obligations incurred by this social status). Your personality is shaped in a community; so your very identity and character is a result of learned experiences in the community.

So when someone says MWENIEWE (himself, owner, possessor, householder, citizen), you are saying that one is a "possessor" of a "tradition" that originates from a given location. In Africa you "bear" everything. So you bear the very traditions that you were born into, just like you "bear" a crime from the community (as the community is partially responsible for your criminal behavior in Africa).

On a purely scientific note, you can also read Mdw Ntr glyphs "ideographically." When it comes to key scientific concepts hidden in the phrases of Mdw Ntr, the phonetical glyphs actually help to define the determinative.

As I mentioned in a previous thread, the concept of space-time is an Egyptian invention. The concept for time is symbolized by the word /At/ which means moment (time). The word is actually /tA/ backwards which is usually rendered "land." Ironically /tA/ also means "time." (Budge hieroglyphic dictionary p. 815a). The creation of land (mass) makes time automatic. This is how we get the four dimensions of space-time in Mdw Ntr symbolic writing and philosophy.

Ta is written /tA/ (loaf of bread and eagle) with the N5 determinative (sun). Also the word /At/ uses the same glyphs and means time. Now what most people don't know is that the N5 symbol represents a planetary body's orbit around the sun (circle around the sun). The sun is in the middle. We can break down each glyph to mean the following:

/t/ = loaf of bread = mass (as in physical mass - Ptah - expansion of space)

/A/ = eagle = comes to be, to come into being

/N5/ = sun = signifies time because in ancient days you measured time by the earth's movement around the sun, or the moon's movement around the earth. Orbits dictate time as it takes "time" for a body of mass to orbit another body of mass.

So we can read ideographically the word /At/ to say "the coming of mass as it orbits around the sun." Since /tA/ also means time, it just reiterates the word /At/, "mass as it comes to be in orbit around the sun."

From this convention of interpreting Mdw Ntr, we can now define Niw.t in terms of what it is = increased/expanded mass. We know this to be by the individual letters that make up the symbol

/n/ = water = waves (undifferentiated matter)

/i/ = reed = that which is or together

/w/ = chick = grow or develop

/t/ = mass

So it ideographically reads, "Waves that come together to grow or develop mass (matter)." To really grasp this concept, you really have to understand Quantum Mechanics and string theory. The same concept of modern String Theory existed in Ancient Egypt (and all of Black Africa). When strings combine, that is how matter comes into being. Strings are "waves" /n/ or /nu/.

It should be mentioned that the same symbol used for Niw.t is used in Dogon mythology as it is called "the womb." It also is broken up into four demarcations and is divided into WATER, AIR, FIRE, EARTH. All of what is matter is a combination of water, air, fire, and earth (mass). This same convention is expressed in Ifa using the same circle and we've already discussed the same principle of the Kongo "Dikenga diakanda" cosmogram; as it is a symbol (on one level) which means "community."

Is this coincidence or consequence (using my Frenchman voice from the Matrix Reloaded)?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

For possible Mdw Ntr interpretations above, visit Laird Scranton's Sacred Symbols of the Dogon.

| 23858|2007-11-22 06:21:22|Peter Gray|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

This IBM initiative is truly novel. Just what young minds on the continent need.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: shalomic@nc.rr.com

Date: Wed, 21 Nov 2007 16:06:47 -0500

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

BOSTON, Massachusetts (AP) -- IBM Corp. is placing bets on African countries where it has launched a mentoring program for college students.

The project, called Makocha Minds, using the Swahili word for "teachers," puts 250 of IBM's top researchers in regular contact with engineering, math and computing students at universities in 10 sub-Saharan countries: Ethiopia, Rwanda, Uganda, South Africa, Kenya, Senegal, Botswana, Tanzania, Ghana and Nigeria.

The participants chat mainly by e-mail or phone, but in-person meetings could happen eventually.

The students usually want general guidance on becoming successful or pursuing advanced degrees, rather than help with their homework, said Mark Dean, head of IBM'S Almaden Research Center in Silicon Valley and leader of the project.

Dean said the project lays groundwork for IBM to do business in Africa, where potentially groundbreaking research is being pursued on diverse topics like plant genomics and nuclear power.

"We believe that Africa is that next emerging opportunity, " he said. "We need to be familiar with different cultures and languages and operations in the African countries. What we want is the African people and African businesses to look at IBM as a trusted provider."

Other technology companies have tried strengthening their interactions in Africa, including Google Inc., whose foundation has backed business-plan competitions in Ghana and Tanzania. However, experts in international technology development said IBM's mentoring program appears unique.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Kaiza <prweza@hotmail.co.uk>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A

MYTH.....

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 20:40:53 +0000

Mahari. Good idea. I read the story yesterday. Was impressed, but as an African, I'm quite saddened by how much local talent is being wasted .In Tanzania, only around 15 percent have access to electricity, yes 85%! Will try to contact the guy (via the newspapers article)For example, a link up with african americans with similar interests(Kungufuhu stle etc) would very much help in terms of technological transfer and help.Will keep you informed.

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: mahari@myway.com

Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 19:32:00 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way the three of you could form an organization of some sort - an Afrikan-AAmerican inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that there is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in yourselves. Plant the seed. HTP, Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Peter

>

> Thank you for sharing this. I found it very informative, with more

then

> a hint of familiarity.

>

> Meninarmer

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Peter Kaiza

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A

> MYTH.....

> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 13:42:35 +0000

>

> Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa but they lack support

>

>

>

>

> IMAGINE you are living in a situation where you don't have
to worry

> about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite > television subscription. You have power and water in abundance

and

you > can access any television channel of your choice from a remote

village.

>

>

>

> John Fute, popularly known by his friends as 'Pwagu' lives
this kind of > life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.

>

>

>

> When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for
the

first > time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension

> officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty

> pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle.

>

>

>

> His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea
road,

> looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite

dish

> and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-

date in > terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world

despite > the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe.

>

>

>

> As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the > magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation

and the > sounds of the Hagafilo River falls.

>

>

>

> His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says

family

> members visit him from time to time.

>

> Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case

> cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when
to switch

> off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor

> and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village.

>

>

>

> When he began his experiment in electricity generation,
people
close to > him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him ‘Pwagu’<sup>r</sup>, relating him
> to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who > went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has > successfully generated his own power plant.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of
the > schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> “I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in
my > village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as ‘mad’
except for the > village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue
with > what I was doing,”†says Fute.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to > settle. “When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think
of how > to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me,”†he says.

>

>

>

>

>

> He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought

on > how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative

> because he had learnt from government officials that it was the > government (TanESCO) only that had the right to own and generate > electricity by then.

>

>

>

>

>

> In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue > with his endeavour without fear of TanESCO.

>

>

>

>

>

> He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream

> of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt,

but

> the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to

time.

>

> In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby

> and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So

to > him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council

> and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family > wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power.

He

bought

> some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought

> wires and other materials necessary for production and supply

of > electricity.

>

>

>

>

>

> > From the falls, water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch

diameter

> pipe and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the > propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends > electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals into > electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says

soon

> he will expand to 30 kilowatts.

>

>

>

>

>

> After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in > helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew

> are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never > lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal

> the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the > electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local > brew shop.

>

>

>

>

>

> It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take

it

> through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and > produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no

> more. He uses the power to light up his compound and run his home > theatre sets.

>

>

>

>

>

> > From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite > dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio > signals.

>

>

>

>

>

> Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up the hill

for > domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy

(electricity, > oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe,

> up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat surface to his 9,000

> litre-capacity underground tank at his home.

>

>

>

> With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed

> variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the

time. No

> dependence on rain falls anymore.

>

>

>

>

>

> Njombe District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of > talents. Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar

> Msigwa. In today's language he can be called the 'father of farm > implements'.

>

>

>

> Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of

poles

> to fine woods of different sizes and dimensions. It is a locally > designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology.

>

>

>

>

>

> He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He

can > either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby

> factory.

>
>
>
>
>

> Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed
the loss of > his big time invention of a planter at the Sokoine University

of > Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority claimed that it was stolen,

> according to his explanation.

>
>
>
>
>

> “They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology
and
my > skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up with

this > machine,†says Msigwa.

>
>
>
>
>

> He normally produces machines according to the needs of the
time.

This

> planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length
and width.

> He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement’s show in Morogoro.

>
>
>
>

>

> When Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation

and > resentment from his voice. He says: “This was my biggest invention > following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the > poverty-stricken situation we were living in.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17.

There

was > serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known

as > ‘yanga’, but whenever they planted them, they never germinated.

At this > time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention,

which > was known as ‘Nzalilo’, would cover for three people.

>

>

>

>

>

> Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped

out to > develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of > Mwalimu Nyerere. “But when he retired from active administration,

it was > like everything went away with him,†he laments.

>

>

>

>

>
> “When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused
until they > tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen,†he > further narrates.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Msigwa’s brain works better when he is resting, alone or
when sleeping.
> He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them
into > writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number
of > which he can’t predict. As of today many still go to his workshop
for > timber and cutting of logs.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported
technology
> alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on > local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> “And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop > themselves. Don’t fear to practise your talents, your society

depends on

> you,†he says.

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

> From: atenergy@...

> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 08:14:13 -0500

> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST

> IS A MYTH.....

>

> Thank you, Meninarmer.

>

> Good idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at > NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology

transfer

> "success stories" as they were called -- examples of

> NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial

> success, whether through the licensing of the technology or

> actual manufacturing of a product (such as the foam mattress

> marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by

> NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur

> (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had

> also worked on a novel photovoltaic material (ruthenium > dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving

that

> solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant
shifts

> the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the UV
range,

> not particularly significant for terrestrial power
conversion

> systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot

> more UV.

>

> But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.

>

> Peter

>
>
>
>
>

---

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: shalomic@...
> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 01:00:56 -0500
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

>
> I suggest you contact NASA and see what solar > developments are available > through their technology transfer program. The stuff is > developed for > space, but they encourage commercialization of these > technologies.
> Last time I used them, I purchased a 6DOF program
from > them for $1.
> <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>
> <http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>

>
> Meninarmer
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Paul Kekai Manansala
> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS
> PAST IS A
> MYTH.....

> Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59 -0000
> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray
> wrote:
>>
>>
>> Thank you, Paul.
>>
>> I have been through all the hoops regarding possible

> shortcut routes
> to initiating not just purchasing/installation of > solar-electric > technology in the developing world, but actual
> technology transfer,
> i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure
polycrystalline
> boule or from
> "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years,
I've
> had > discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens
(in > the Boston
> area), among others, but got stuck with the funding > (surprise, > surprise!!). So congratulations to your family too for > actually being > involved in the technology of the future - -- did
you > hear Chavez
> talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?
> >
> >
>
> Yes, I heard that OPEC is also discussing a move
toward
> a "basket of > currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil.
> This is > being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.
>
> I still remember when people would laugh at predictions
> of $100/bbl.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
> Regards,
> Paul Keaki Manansala
>
>
>
>

>
>

---

> Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

>
>
>
>
>

---

> Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

>

---

Are you the Quizmaster? Play BrainBattle with a friend now!

---

Connect and share in new ways with Windows Live. Connect now!

| 23859|2007-11-22 10:19:10|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|
Peace and thank you for this recommendation.
Divine Ruler Equality Allah

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> Peace Pham

>

> Many of you know of the lecture I will be doing on December 15th > entitled Bantu Cosmology & the Origins of Egyptian Civilization. Many > have asked about material in which they could study to do their own > comparisons because they live in another city. Well one book, out of > many reference materials, I highly recommend is titled Sacred Symbols of > the Dogon, The Key to Advanced Science in the Ancient Egyptian > Hieroglyphs by Laird Scranton.

>

> This is a real good scholarly work and it provides a methodology to > interpreting the Mdw Ntr script and the Ta-Merrian world view > (cosmology). The comparative studies he has done with the Dogon > cosmology and language with that of ancient Egypt, I have been doing > with the Kongo & ancient Egypt. His analysis further backs the ideas > proposed by Dr. Winters, Ferg Somo, Dr Obenga, Dr. Fu-Kiau and myself.

>

> What this further helps to bring to light is how ancient the > proto-saharan civilizations were and how expansive the global education > system that had its orientation in ancient Egypt was. He comes to the > same conclusions we have been espousing (African centered researchers) > for decades and it's nice to see scholarship out there like this to make > a more fuller body of knowledge (especially in English).

>

> So for those who at least would like to get some insight into how I, at > least, approach comparative cultural and iconographic studies, then this > is a good start. I also titled this thread as such because the Bantu > languages are a branch of the larger Niger-Congo languages in which the > Dogon Toro language is a part of. So this is a hint as if you find > regular correspondences throughout many other inner African languages in > comparison to the ancient Egyptian, then more than likely the Egyptian > language is simply a branch of the Niger-Congo languages. More > definitive research needs to be conducted however.

>

> *****

>

> [Sacred Symbols of the Dogon: The Key to Advanced Science in the > Ancient Egyptian Hieroglyphs]

>

> http://www.amazon.com/gp/product/images/1594771340/ref=dp\_image\_0/102-0/485178-2819304?ie=UTF8&n=283155&s=books

> See larger image

>

> http://www.amazon.com/gp/product/images/1594771340/ref=dp\_image\_text\_0/102-0485178-2819304?ie=UTF8&n=283155&s=books Share your own

> customer images

>

> http://www.amazon.com/gp/customer-media/upload/1594771340/ref=cm\_ciu\_pd/p\_add/102-0485178-2819304?ie=UTF8&rnd=1193814567

> Publisher: learn how customers can search inside this book.

>

> http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/tg/browse/-/14061791/ref=dp\_pub\_strip/102-0485178-2819304

> Sacred Symbols of the Dogon: The Key to Advanced Science in the Ancient > Egyptian Hieroglyphs (Paperback)

> by Laird Scranton

>

> http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/search-handle-url/102-0485178-2819304/

> on> (Author), John Anthony West

>
<http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/search-handle-url/102-0485178-2819304\
>
> ?%5Fencoding=UTF8&search-type=ss&index=books&field-author=John%20Anthony\
> %20West> (Foreword)
>
>
>
>
> No customer reviews yet. Be the first.
>
<http://www.amazon.com/gp/customer-reviews/create-review/ref=cm\_cr\_acr\_w\
> r_link_dp_top/102-0485178-2819304?ie=UTF8&asin=1594771340>
>
>
>
> List Price: $18.95 Price: $12.89 & eligible for FREE Super Saver > Shipping on orders over $25. Details
>
<http://www.amazon.com/gp/help/customer/display.html/ref=mk\_gship\_dp/102\
> -0485178-2819304?ie=UTF8&nodeId=527692&pop-up=1> You Save: $6.06 > (32%)
>
>
>
> Availability: In Stock. Ships from and sold by Amazon.com. Gift-wrap > available.
>
>
>
> Want it delivered Thursday, November 1? Order it in the next 15 > hours and 19 minutes, and choose One-Day Shipping at checkout. See > details
>
<http://www.amazon.com/gp/help/customer/display.html/102-0485178-2819304\
> ?ie=UTF8&nodeId=3510241&ref=ftinfo%5Fdp%5F>
>
> 9 used & new
>
<http://www.amazon.com/gp/offer-listing/1594771340/ref=dp\_olp\_2/102-0485\
> 178-2819304> available from $12.25
>
> Review
> John Dering, chief scientist for lasers and special projects at > Scientific Applications & Research Associates (SARA), Inc. :
> "Sacred Symbols of the Dogon will challenge the reader to seriously > consider that ancient civilizations possessed a scientific

- > sophistication rivaling our present-day theories of matter and the
- > fundamental forces of physics. Highly recommended for anyone who has
- > questioned the mainstream view of ancient civilization as scientifically
- > primitive."
- >
- >
- > Book Description
- > Dogon cosmology provides a new Rosetta stone for reinterpreting Egyptian
- > hieroglyphs
- >
- > ? Provides a new understanding of Egyptian hieroglyphs as scientific
- > symbols based on Dogon cosmological drawings
- >
- > ? Use parallels between Dogon and Egyptian word meanings to identify
- > relationships between Dogon myths and modern science
- >
- > In The Science of the Dogon, Laird Scranton demonstrated that the
- > cosmological structure described in the myths and drawings of the Dogon
- > runs parallel to modern science--atomic theory, quantum theory, and
- > string theory--their drawings often taking the same form as accurate
- > scientific diagrams that relate to the formation of matter. Scranton
- > also pointed to the close resemblance between the keywords and component
- > elements of Dogon cosmology and those of ancient Egypt, and the
- > implication that ancient cosmology may also be about actual science.
- >
- > Sacred Symbols of the Dogon uses these parallels as the starting point
- > for a new interpretation of the Egyptian hieroglyphic language. By
- > substituting Dogon cosmological drawings for equivalent glyph-shapes in
- > Egyptian words, a new way of reading and interpreting the Egyptian
- > hieroglyphs emerges. Scranton shows how each hieroglyph constitutes an
- > entire concept, and that their meanings are scientific in nature. Using
- > the Dogon symbols as a "Rosetta stone," he reveals references
- > within the ancient Egyptian language that define the full range of
- > scientific components of matter: from massless waves to the completed
- > atom, even suggesting direct correlations to a fully realized unified
- > field theory
- >
- >
- >
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
- >

| 23860|2007-11-22 12:20:32|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Happy Holidays! Black Friday Notice - Books make meaningful holi|

Have A Happy 9/11!

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Wadjat\_News/message/1857

The next time someone wishes you a happy Thanksgiving, ask yourself how someone would take being wished a happy 9/11. To wish a happy Thanksgiving is to condone the demise of the people for which thanks is being given in occupation of their land. So why would anyone in their moral state of mind ever do such a thing?

They wouldn't.

When Indigenous Nations under the foreign imperial rule of invading terrorists are finally free of their oppression, let thanks be given.

When poor people of various nations are free of transnational corporate slave labor and harsh treatment, let thanks be given.

When nations are free from the threat of war from lying terrorist attackers bent upon global domination, let thanks be given.

Until then, let no thanks be given for the demise of human beings at the hands of self-righteous terrorists attempting to pursue the ridiculous notion of a "Manifest Destiny".

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, ANGELINE BANDON-BIBUM wrote:

>

> Happy Thanksgiving Everyone!

>

> I hope everyone has a safe and satisfying Thanksgiving tomorrow.

I will be volunteering tomorrow, serving breakfast to those in need of the basics of life. After that, I will go home and give thanks to the Almighty again.

>

> Here's a reminder for Black Friday.... Why not buy at least one book for someone for the holidays! I plan to restock my shelves with such classics as Black Boy, Manchild in the Promised Land, Song of Solomon, and, yes, David Copperfield to name a few.

>

> Also, may I also suggest, Sojourner's Dream, a novel. Please view the following book trailer to find out more on what the story is about.

>

> Click here: <http://uk.youtube.com/user/BANDONPRESS>

>

> Again, Happy Thanksgiving Everyone!

>

>

>

> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream

> Check out my websites:

> <http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum>

> <http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot.com>

> <http://sojournersdreamanovel.blogspot.com>

> <http://sojournersdreamlamentationsofawarrior.blogspot.com>

>

> -----

> Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail.

See how.

>

| 23861|2007-11-22 16:33:37|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Asar and Ferg,

I found the argument for NIW.T convincing. According to statements made earlier by Asar and other Afrocentrics the key to understanding the Egyptian language and philosophy is through Afrikans and their language.

This is incredibly simple and logical. The only reason that an intelligent person would not conclude or at least consider the likelihood of this is due to racism or stupidity or both. I continue to marvel at the level of recalcitrance of the caucasian individual and scholars. Then again, not really. Remember the Spartans.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>>

>> Good evening all!

>>

>> Niw-t has finally been decoded.

>>

>> Enjoy.

>>

> > Ferg Somo

> >

>

> I see no one has commented on this as of yet. The steps taken to come > to the conclusion of the many meanings behind the term Niw.t

coincides > with a very fundamental African concept in contrast to American > cultural concepts.

>

> As Maulana Karenga would say, we have to distinguish between the > African anthropological concept of being a "person-in-community" as > opposed to Europeans seeing people as "autonomous individuals."

>

> In his work MAAT: The Moral Ideal In Ancient Egypt, Karenga makes a > profound observation when he states:

>

> "It is through membership in a moral community and rightful social > participation in that community that one learns to be a person of > character and flourishes as a result of it. For it is in community > that we develop our sense of the moral self, learn to honor our > obligations, cherish our relations and do our duty in correspondence > to our conception of moral worthiness. Thus, we value the communal > context, for as Pincoffs (1986, 52) states, "to whatever extent we > value these qualities of persons and common life, we will value the > conditions that make them possible." And this speaks to both the > essentiality of community and tradition." (pg 272)

>

> This concept as espoused by Karenga reinforces the concept of the > community being the "womb" of the individual. It is in this location > and social environment that one "develops" into a human being (a > bearer of dignity and divinity, and one who honors the obligations > incurred by this social status). Your personality is shaped in a > community; so your very identity and character is a result of learned

> experiences in the community.

>

> So when someone says MWENIEWE (himself, owner,

possessor,householder,

> citizen), you are saying that one is a "possessor" of a "tradition"

> that originates from a given location. In Africa you "bear"

> everything. So you bear the very traditions that you were born into,

- > just like you "bear" a crime from the community (as the community is
- > partially responsible for your criminal behavior in Africa).
- >
- > On a purely scientific note, you can also read Mdw Ntr glyphs
- > "ideographically." When it comes to key scientific concepts hidden

in

- > the phrases of Mdw Ntr, the phonetical glyphs actually help to define

- > the determinative.
- >
- > As I mentioned in a previous thread, the concept of space-time is an
- > Egyptian invention. The concept for time is symbolized by the word
- > /At/ which means moment (time). The word is actually /tA/ backwards
- > which is usually rendered "land." Ironically /tA/ also means "time."
- > (Budge hieroglyphic dictionary p. 815a). The creation of land (mass)
- > makes time automatic. This is how we get the four dimensions of
- > space-time in Mdw Ntr symbolic writing and philosophy.
- >
- > Ta is written /tA/ (loaf of bread and eagle) with the N5

determinative

- > (sun). Also the word /At/ uses the same glyphs and means time. Now
- > what most people don't know is that the N5 symbol represents a
- > planetary body's orbit around the sun (circle around the sun). The sun

- > is in the middle. We can break down each glyph to mean the following:

- >
- > /t/ = loaf of bread = mass (as in physical mass - Ptah - expansion

of

- > space)
- > /A/ = eagle = comes to be, to come into being
- > /N5/ = sun = signifies time because in ancient days you measured

time

- > by the earth's movement around the sun, or the moon's movement

around

- > the earth. Orbits dictate time as it takes "time" for a body of mass
- > to orbit another body of mass.
- >

> So we can read ideographically the word /At/ to say "the coming of > mass as it orbits around the sun." Since /tA/ also means time, it

just > reiterates the word /At/, "mass as it comes to be in orbit around

the > sun."

>

> From this convention of interpreting Mdw Ntr, we can now define

Niw.t

> in terms of what it is = increased/expanded mass. We know this to be > by the individual letters that make up the symbol

>

> /n/ = water = waves (undifferentiated matter)

> /i/ = reed = that which is or together

> /w/ = chick = grow or develop

> /t/ = mass

>

> So it ideographically reads, "Waves that come together to grow or > develop mass (matter)." To really grasp this concept, you really

have > to understand Quantum Mechanics and string theory. The same concept

of

> modern String Theory existed in Ancient Egypt (and all of Black > Africa). When strings combine, that is how matter comes into being.

> Strings are "waves" /n/ or /nu/.

>

> It should be mentioned that the same symbol used for Niw.t is used

in

> Dogon mythology as it is called "the womb." It also is broken up

into > four demarcations and is divided into WATER, AIR, FIRE, EARTH. All

of > what is matter is a combination of water, air, fire, and earth (mass).

> This same convention is expressed in Ifa using the same circle and

> we've already discussed the same principle of the Kongo "Dikenga

> diakanda" cosmogram; as it is a symbol (on one level) which means

> "community."
>
> Is this coincidence or consequence (using my Frenchman voice from

the > Matrix Reloaded)?

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

> For possible Mdw Ntr interpretations above, visit Laird Scranton's

> Sacred Symbols of the Dogon.

>

| 23862|2007-11-22 16:51:41|Mahari Mengistu|Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

Notice the little black man.

Go to Google News

Photo 2 of 3

A woman photographing Neolithic rock art

Desert art in danger at Egypt's new tourism frontier

17 hours ago

CAIRO (AFP) ? A rising tide of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is threatening priceless rock art preserved for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.

In Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and Libya, the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains of Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as anything by Picasso.

But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires a deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations.

Not only the rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural heritage.

"You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect the art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie 5,000-7,000 years ago.

"People put water or oil on the paintings to make the faded colours look brighter, causing irreparable damage," he says.

The story is even more tragic just across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of human figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.

Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the desert.

Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers drive through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."

While only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists visiting Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red Sea resort.

"By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this year we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper.

Rock art specialist Tilman Lenssen-Erz says that in prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands of square kilometres (miles).

"This was a place so highly charged with symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the rock art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European context," says Lenssen-Erz.

"People from far away would know about the significance of the religious power that is collected in this place ... where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks making the whole area a sacred landscape."

Even more recent artefacts like the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone unscathed by the passage of modern man.

The hieroglyphs are evidence that, contrary to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went via the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting straight through the desert.

Last year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant engraving of a topless woman.

"You can't put barbed wire around it so we developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance of educating guides and tourists alike.

Saad Ali, a young tour operator based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was through education.

"We always arranged trips to clean up the desert and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to train the guides," he says.

"Now it's changed a lot. Last year we went to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the year before it was 11 tonnes."

His next target is tour operators working out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.

Kuper says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people" but that others -- tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based expats who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.

With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan to agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation conundrum.

The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-boundary cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires the three nations to all first declare individual national parks.

So far, only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of hammering out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic relations.

With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and Prof Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want to build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the jumping off point for most trips to Gilf Kabir.

"Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a museum to explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how man can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.

Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is on the wall.

====

HTP,

Mahari

| 23863|2007-11-22 19:23:07|asar_imhotep|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Asar and Ferg,

> I found the argument for NIW.T convincing. According to statements > made earlier by Asar and other Afrocentrics the key to understanding > the Egyptian language and philosophy is through Afrikans and their

> language.

> This is incredibly simple and logical. The only reason that an > intelligent person would not conclude or at least consider the > likelihood of this is due to racism or stupidity or both. I continue > to marvel at the level of recalcitrance of the caucasian individual > and scholars. Then again, not really. Remember the Spartans.

> HTP,

> Mahari

Peace Mahari

The bigger question at the end of the day is, "what are we going to build with this information?" I would hope that we don't make these discoveries only to admire what the ancients did, but to use their creative processes as inspirational mechanisms to build and sustain viable institutions and communities for ourselves(NIW.T).

Hidden in the glyph is the concept of increased expansion (a place for spiritual development). How can we use this, and other information brought out, to change our condition here in the States and around the world? I don't think our scholarship will be complete until we engage these questions.

African people of old never used higher philosophy, art and science for mere intellectual pursuits. All information was used to create institutions that would allow each human being within that institution to reach its full human potential. I don't think we should stop at finding out the information, but do as our great master teachers such as Cheikh Anta Diop, Chancellor Williams, Amos Wilson, Claud Anderson and Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau did: used their scholarship to create models for viable institutions. That's the role of a scholar in the African tradition.

Some of their works to prove the point:

Cheikh Anta Diop - Black Africa: The Economic and Cultural Basis for a Federated State

Claud Anderson - PowerNomics

Amos Wilson - Blueprint for Black Power: A Moral, Political, and Economic Imperative for the Twenty-First Century

Chancellor Williams - The Destruction of Black Civilizations

K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau - Mbongi: An African Traditional Political Institution

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23864|2007-11-22 20:43:45|asar_imhotep|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Divine Ruler Equality Allah" wrote:

>

>

> Peace and thank you for this recommendation.

> Divine Ruler Equality Allah

>

You're welcome. Don't forget actually to get his first book as well. The second will make much more sense.

- 1) Science of the Dogon
- 2) Sacred Symbols of the Dogon

Cheikh Anta Diop (Civilization or Barbarism) and Dr. Charles S. Finch (A Star of Deep Beginnings) have already made the Dogon-Egyptian connections and that with Quantum Mechanics. But this author takes it further and examines the actual glyphs which support the Dogon's and the Kmtjw's knowledge of Quantum Mechanics, String and M-Theory.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23865|2007-11-22 21:40:38|kungfuhustle|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

This disregard for the old, is a management tool, for the old represents wisdom.

Wisdom of learning through life's experience, as well as common sense, which seems to be in short supply today.

By weakening this link to wisdom, the powers that be, are empowered to influence the young to act in unwise ways, and ultimately, weaken the bonds of the family structure.

First, separate the father figure from the family structure. Then, the family unit is susceptible to external manipulations.

There are serious ramifications to manufacturing a young RAP star, having him disregard home training and express himself through cursing, lewd lyrics, and disregard for order.

Rewarding this individual with millions of dollars while his parents earn a modest living, often living paycheck to paycheck upsets the balance of the family, and puts this control into the hands of unwise, immature children, who are in turn, controlled by music and media corporations.

The media amplifies this on radio and television stations which influence young and old viewers to emulate these traits.

No wonder education is seen as unnecessary when their idols are earning tens millions to repeat nonsensical filth filled rhymes, or dribble a ball down court. Those that are put in this position generally give the money back to those in control in exchange for trinkets, the same as Africans exchanged gold for glass beads 500 years ago.

I watched P. Diddy, an inspiration to many black and white children alike. He earns millions, but with one party, pays $600,000 to the white owner of a ship to rent for a 2 day party.

Brittany Spears, a black manufactured white performer earning $800,000/month, but as court records have just shown, has no savings and spending the money as fast as they pay her.

There is the reason why performers are selected younger and younger each year. Too often, because of the money, their parents fail to protect them. How can they? This is the American dream.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: matt mercer <maatiuja@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....

Date: Wed, 21 Nov 2007 07:33:41 -0800 (PST)

I agree, when I was in New Orleans doing relief work last year, iI was struck by how many conversations I had with the sixty something generation about this issue especially for the African-American. The break down of the relationships between the old and young may have gotten more extreme after the storm, but the truth that the generation gap was already wider and deeper in conflict was just made more clear. And I think this is true for many ethnic groups and is more an issue of class ism and poor education all around.

I wonder if the the word Plaeides has been mistranslated since the ages of obsession of Greco=Roman beauty.....even in Dr. Winters work with Tocharian this is translated as "in praise of youth", but perhaps in old Egyptian it is more like, "in praise of regeneration of recognition of self-determination" especially if you write it out phonetically in Meroitic.

I was thinking about this as I was looking at the virtual tour,

<http://www.world-heritage-tour.org/list/e.html>

, of Seti I temple in the 15th frame on the ceiling is a painting I think illustrates this concept of regeneration quite well. I think from dynasty to dynasty the idea of the pesdjed or pantheon was meant to help teach people about continuity of growth and cultivation as related to social expansion and inter cultural versus indigenous expression of growth. The Ntr are like bodies of teachings that are interchangeable and shift form time to time that are constantly shifting alignments to suit the needs of the day. I think the temple ceiling here is like a blue print passed on from generation to generation of what the Hathor ceiling represents as a unified field of expression of this concept.

Bless,

Matt Mercer

JAH

Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:

Great! I think that as a people our culture teaches us to respect authority which for us has tended to be older people whom we have traditionally revered. Now, however, globally that ancient tradition has been ripped to shreds and its benefits are/have crumbled. This isn't to say that we should no longer respect our elders - they probably need it more now than ever, perhaps. What I'm referring to is the dynamic of respect for authority symbolized by the elderly. That kind of respect I believe extends itself ever upward into the government, etc. After years of invasion and interference from europeans and arabs who don't respect this ancient symbol of authority it has ceased to work sufficiently for the Afrikan. The europeans and arabs respect youth and power only. And consequently profoundly distrust our youth. So their respect for youth does not extend to and enable our youth - it seeks to destroy them subtly or overtly. So our younger generation must move beyond the tradiion and take the initiative because I believe the current black authority worldwide is weakened and wounded from some mortal blows. The caring, of course, won't leave the wounded to die but he mustn't allow himself to die because of the wounded. HTP, Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>

> Mahari. Good idea. I read the story yesterday. Was impressed, but as an African, I'm quite saddened by how much local talent is being wasted .In Tanzania, only around 15 percent have access to electricity, yes 85%!Will try to contact the guy (via the newspapers article)For example, a link up with african americans with similar interests(Kungufuhustle etc) would very much help in terms of technological transfer and help.Will keep you informed.

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: mahari@...: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 19:32:00
+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
IS A
MYTH.....

>

>

>

>

> Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way the three

of you could form an organization of some sort - an Afrikan-AAmerican

inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that there is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in yourselves.

Plant the seed.HTP,Mahari--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com,
kungfuhustle

wrote:>> Peter> > Thank you for sharing this. I found it

very informative, with more then> a hint of familiarity.> >

Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Peter Kaiza

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> To:

ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY
SAYS

AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007

13:42:35 +0000> > Off topic but there are many inovaters in Africa

but they lack support> > > > IMAGINE you are living in a situation

where you don't have to worry> about any kind of bills, be it water, electricity or satellite> television subscription. You have

power and water in abundance and you> can access any television channel of your choice from a remote village. > > > John

Fute,

popularly known by his friends as 'Pwagu' lives this kind
of> life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region. > >

> >

When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor, for
the first> time, the impression you get is that he may be an agricultural extension> officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top with a cap, dirty> pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle. > > > His homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea road,> looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a satellite dish> and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is up-to-date in> terms of electricity and what is happening throughout the world despite> the fact that he lives in a remote village in Njombe. > > > As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could view the> magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green vegetation and the> sounds of the Hagafilo River falls. > > > His does not stay with his family at this remote area. He says family> members visit him from time to time. > > Fute does not experience any power cuts or rationing as is the case> cities and towns in the country. At his place he decides when to switch> off the lights; otherwise power is on all the time. He is the inventor> and the engineer of an electric plant in remote Njombe Village. > > > When he began his experiment in electricity generation, people close to> him did not take him seriously. They nicknamed him ‘Pwagu’, relating him> to a former radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who> went by that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He has> successfully generated his own power plant. > > > > > The 48-year-old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the> schooling apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate. > > > > >

“I started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981 in my village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as ‘mad’ except for the village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me to continue with what I was doing,” says Fute. > > > > > According to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to settle. “When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of how to solve it. This is exactly what happened to me,” he says. > > > > > > He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and thought on how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the initiative because he had learnt from government officials that it was the government (Tanesco) only that had the right to own and generate electricity by then. > > > > > In 1992, the Area Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue with his endeavour without fear of Tanesco. > > > > > He started by repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream of having his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but the problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time. > > In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo in a nearby and would-be his new home village. This river flows all seasons. So to him, this was the perfect discovery. He approached the village council and they gave him a big area running across the river. His family wouldn’t agree. Nevertheless he pushed on with his plan. > > > > > > When he settled, the primary objective was to produce power. He bought some tools and produced a turbine from his home workshop. He bought wires and other materials necessary for production and supply of electricity. > > > > > > From the

falls,
water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter pipe
and from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit the propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller sends electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals
into electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts. He says
soon he will expand to 30 kilowatts. > > > > > After generating such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in helping his new village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew are the first to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never lasted long as he was forced to stop it because they started to steal the wires. If you happen to pass through that area, you will see the electric posts that were used for electric supply to the village's local brew shop. > > > > > It is very strange how he managed to tap water from the falls, take it through pipes at an unprecedented pressure to run the turbine and produce power. Apart from the costs of buying materials, there are no more. He uses the power to light up
his compound and run his home theatre sets. > > > > > From pieces of metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite dish that can access an imaginable number of television and radio signals. >
> > >
> > Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water up
the hill for domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside energy (electricity, oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump pushes water through a pipe, up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on flat

surface to his 9,000> litre-capacity underground tank at his home. >
> > > With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which he has planed> variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply all the time. No> dependence on rain falls anymore. > > > > >
Njombe
District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of>
talents.
Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar> Msigwa. In
today's language he can be called the 'father of farm> implements'. > > > > Mr Msigwa's latest invention is a machine that reduces pieces of poles> to fine woods of different sizes
and dimensions. It is a locally> designed technology that uses electricity unlike Pwagu's technology. > > > > > He, as well, used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can> either use his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby>
factory.
> > > > > Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more. This followed the loss of> his big time invention of a planter at
the Sokoine University of> Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The authority
claimed that it was stolen,> according to his explanation. > > >
> >
> "They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology
and my> skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up
with this> machine," says Msigwa. > > > > > He normally produces machines according to the needs of the time. This> planter was good as it would plant seeds to required length and width.> He had taken it to SUA for a farm implement's show in Morogoro. > > > > >
When
Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation
and> resentment from his voice. He says: "This was my biggest invention>

following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the poverty-stricken situation we were living in. >>>>>>> He began creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was serious hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known as 'yanga', but whenever they planted them, they never germinated. At this time it would take four people in a row to plant. His invention, which was known as 'Nzalilo', would cover for three people. >>>>> Msigwa says that people of his nature and talent would be helped out to develop their talents for the betterment of many, during the time of Mwalimu Nyerere. "But when he retired from active administration, it was like everything went away with him," he laments. >>>>> "When SUA wanted me to manufacture another machine, I refused until they tell me what exactly happened to first one they claimed was stolen," he further narrates. >>>>> Msigwa's brain works better when he is resting, alone or when sleeping. He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who put them into writing. Many people have benefited from his inventions, the number of which he can't predict. As of today many still go to his workshop for timber and cutting of logs. >>>>>>> He says that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, depended on local inventors, home grown technology for their advancement. >>>>> "And those who know that they have talents let them find ways to develop themselves. Don't fear to practise your talents, your society depends on you," he says. >>>>>>>

---

> To:

ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com> From: atenergy@> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007

08:14:13 -0500> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S

GLORIOUS PAST> IS A MYTH.....> > Thank you, Meninarmer.> > Good

idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at> NASA documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer> "success stories" as they were called -- examples of> NASA-initiated R&D that eventually culminated in commercial> success, whether through the

licensing of the technology or> actual manufacturing of a product

(such as the foam mattress> marketed by Serta that uses a viscoelastic foam developed by> NASA for space flight). As an independent R&D entrepreneur> (with lots of pro bono help from Sandia Labs and NREL) I had> also worked on a novel photovoltaic material

(ruthenium> dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope of achieving that> solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see -- the dopant shifts> the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into the

UV range,> not particularly significant for terrestrial power conversion> systems, but conceivably useful in space where there is a lot> more UV.> > But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks again.> >

Peter> > > >

> To:

Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> From: shalomic@> Date: Tue, 20 Nov 2007

01:00:56 -0500> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S>

GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....> > I suggest you contact NASA and see

what solar> developments are available> through their technology transfer program. The stuff is> developed for> space, but they encourage commercialization of these> technologies.> Last time I used

them, I purchased a 6DOF program from> them for $1.>

<http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>>

<http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>>

> Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Paul Kekai
Manansala > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> To:
Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS
AFRIKA'S

GLORIOUS> PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007 21:59:59

-

0000> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray> wrote:> >> > >

>

Thank you, Paul.> > > > I have been through all the hoops
regarding

possible> shortcut routes> to initiating not just purchasing/installaton of> solar-electric> technology in the developing world, but actual> technology transfer,> i.e., manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline> boule or from> "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've>
had> discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in> the Boston>

area), among others, but got stuck with the funding>

(surprise,> surprise!!). So cudos to your your family too for> actually being>

involved in the technology of the future - -- did you> hear Chavez>

talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?> > > > > Yes,

I

heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward> a "basket of> currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil.> This
is>

being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.> > I still remember when people would laugh at predictions> of $100/bbl.>

>

Regards,> Paul Kekai Manansala> > Regards,> Paul Keaki
Manansala> > >

> > >

---

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now! >

> >

> >

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!>

>

>

>

>

>
>
>
> Get free emoticon packs and customisation from Windows Live.
> <http://www.pimpmylive.co.uk>
>

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

| 23866|2007-11-23 01:23:45|Ferg|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Asar

I am encouraged by your observations which are encouraging to my research. The concepts and connections between 'womb', village, 'self', 'community' is a powerful one.

Also I might like to add that the womb containing the placenta and umbilical cord play a vital role in reinforcing this concept. The umbilical cord is a life line and ties one to the village. In other words, one may leave the village but will always return to it.

The word Dikenga has a similar meaning in Kiswahili-Bantu. It is known as Ji-Kinga from the verb 'kinga', and means to protect or defend oneself by using a screen, shield, or firebrand. 'Ji' means self. As you rightly observe the key concept of the dikenga cosmogram is to defend the community, and represents the community, hence the 'Kaya' concept of fortification.

Somo.

----- Original Message -----

From: asar\_imhotep

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, November 22, 2007 10:13 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>
> Good evening all!
>
> Niw-t has finally been decoded.
>
> Enjoy.
>
> Ferg Somo
>

I see no one has commented on this as of yet. The steps taken to come to the conclusion of the many meanings behind the term Niw.t coincides with a very fundamental African concept in contrast to American cultural concepts.

As Maulana Karenga would say, we have to distinguish between the African anthropological concept of being a "person-in-community" as opposed to Europeans seeing people as "autonomous individuals."

In his work MAAT: The Moral Ideal In Ancient Egypt, Karenga makes a profound observation when he states:

"It is through membership in a moral community and rightful social participation in that community that one learns to be a person of character and flourishes as a result of it. For it is in community that we develop our sense of the moral self, learn to honor our obligations, cherish our relations and do our duty in correspondence to our conception of moral worthiness. Thus, we value the communal context, for as Pincoffs (1986, 52) states, "to whatever extent we value these qualities of persons and common life, we will value the conditions that make them possible." And this speaks to both the essentiality of community and tradition." (pg 272)

This concept as espoused by Karenga reinforces the concept of the community being the "womb" of the individual. It is in this location and social environment that one "develops" into a human being (a bearer of dignity and divinity, and one who honors the obligations incurred by this social status). Your personality is shaped in a community; so your very identity and character is a result of learned experiences in the community.

So when someone says MWENIWE (himself, owner, possessor, household er, citizen), you are saying that one is a "possessor" of a "tradition" that originates from a given location. In Africa you "bear" everything. So you bear the very traditions that you were born into, just like you "bear" a crime from the community (as the community is partially responsible for your criminal behavior in Africa).

On a purely scientific note, you can also read Mdw Ntr glyphs "ideographically." When it comes to key scientific concepts hidden in the phrases of Mdw Ntr, the phonetical glyphs actually help to define the determinative.

As I mentioned in a previous thread, the concept of space-time is an Egyptian invention. The concept for time is symbolized by the word /At/ which means moment (time). The word is actually /tA/ backwards which is usually rendered "land." Ironically /tA/ also means "time." (Budge hieroglyphic dictionary p. 815a). The creation of land (mass) makes time automatic. This is how we get the four dimensions of space-time in Mdw Ntr symbolic writing and philosophy.

Ta is written /tA/ (loaf of bread and eagle) with the N5 determinative (sun). Also the word /At/ uses the same glyphs and means time. Now what most people don't know is that the N5 symbol represents a planetary body's orbit around the sun (circle around the sun). The sun is in the middle. We can break down each glyph to mean the following:

/t/ = loaf of bread = mass (as in physical mass - Ptah - expansion of space)

/A/ = eagle = comes to be, to come into being

/N5/ = sun = signifies time because in ancient days you measured time by the earth's movement around the sun, or the moon's movement around the earth. Orbits dictate time as it takes "time" for a body of mass to orbit another body of mass.

So we can read ideographically the word /At/ to say "the coming of mass as it orbits around the sun." Since /tA/ also means time, it just reiterates the word /At/, "mass as it comes to be in orbit around the sun."

From this convention of interpreting Mdw Ntr, we can now define Niw.t in terms of what it is = increased/expanded mass. We know this to be by the individual letters that make up the symbol

/n/ = water = waves (undifferentiated matter)

/i/ = reed = that which is or together

/w/ = chick = grow or develop

/t/ = mass

So it ideographically reads, "Waves that come together to grow or develop mass (matter)." To really grasp this concept, you really have to understand Quantum Mechanics and string theory. The same concept of modern String Theory existed in Ancient Egypt (and all of Black Africa). When strings combine, that is how matter comes into being. Strings are "waves" /n/ or /nu/.

It should be mentioned that the same symbol used for Niw.t is used in Dogon mythology as it is called "the womb." It also is broken up into four demarcations and is divided into WATER, AIR, FIRE, EARTH. All of what is matter is a combination of water, air, fire, and earth (mass). This same convention is expressed in Ifa using the same circle and we've already discussed the same principle of the Kongo "Dikenga diakanda" cosmogram; as it is a symbol (on one level) which means "community."

Is this coincidence or consequence (using my Frenchman voice from the Matrix Reloaded)?

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

For possible Mdw Ntr interpretations above, visit Laird Scranton's
Sacred Symbols of the Dogon.

| 23867|2007-11-23 01:57:35|Asar Imhotep|Dogon blacksmiths|

Nowadays, the Dogon blacksmiths forge mainly scrap metal recuperated from old railway lines or car wrecks. So, little by little, the long process of iron ore reduction, which demands a perfect knowledge of fire and its temperatures, has been abandoned.

One of the last smeltings was done in Mali, in 1995, by the Dogon blacksmiths. The event became the subject of a film which was entitled Inagina, The Last House of Iron.

Eleven blacksmiths, who still hold the secrets of this ancestral activity, agreed to perform a last smelt. They gathered to invoke the spirits. They sunk a mine shaft, made charcoal, and built a furnace with earth and lumps of slag. The last furnace - or Inagina - meaning literally 'the house of iron' gave birth to 69 kilos of iron of excellent quality. With this, the blacksmiths forged traditional tools intended for agriculture, the making of weapons, and jewellery for the Dogon people.

<http://anthro.unige.ch/galerie/inagina/dogon.gb.html>

Might be useful for our studies on Km.t (KaaUma-Ti) [ka, kala, kalunga]

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.

| 23868|2007-11-23 06:09:42|Ferg|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Thank you both, Mahari and Asar

Hope the truth will be disseminated out there.
Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Mahari Mengistu

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Friday, November 23, 2007 12:33 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Asar and Ferg,

I found the argument for NIW.T convincing. According to statements made earlier by Asar and other Afrocentrics the key to understanding the Egyptian language and philosophy is through Afrikans and their language.

This is incredibly simple and logical. The only reason that an intelligent person would not conclude or at least consider the likelihood of this is due to racism or stupidity or both. I continue to marvel at the level of recalcitrance of the caucasian individual and scholars. Then again, not really. Remember the Spartans.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

> >

> > Good evening all!

> >

> > Niw-t has finally been decoded.

> >

> > Enjoy.

> >

> > Ferg Somo

> >

>

> I see no one has commented on this as of yet. The steps taken to come > to the conclusion of the many meanings behind the term Niw.t coincides > with a very fundamental African concept in contrast to American > cultural concepts.

>

> As Maulana Karenga would say, we have to distinguish between the > African anthropological concept of being a "person-in-community" as > opposed to Europeans seeing people as "autonomous individuals. "

>

> In his work MAAT: The Moral Ideal In Ancient Egypt, Karenga makes a > profound observation when he states:

>
> "It is through membership in a moral community and rightful social > participation in that community that one learns to be a person of > character and flourishes as a result of it. For it is in community > that we develop our sense of the moral self, learn to honor our > obligations, cherish our relations and do our duty in correspondence > to our conception of moral worthiness. Thus, we value the communal > context, for as Pincoffs (1986, 52) states, "to whatever extent we > value these qualities of persons and common life, we will value the > conditions that make them possible." And this speaks to both the > essentiality of community and tradition." (pg 272)

>
> This concept as espoused by Karenga reinforces the concept of the > community being the "womb" of the individual. It is in this location > and social environment that one "develops" into a human being (a > bearer of dignity and divinity, and one who honors the obligations > incurred by this social status). Your personality is shaped in a > community; so your very identity and character is a result of learned > experiences in the community.

>
> So when someone says MWENIEWE (himself, owner,
possessor,household er,
> citizen), you are saying that one is a "possessor" of a "tradition"
> that originates from a given location. In Africa you "bear" > everything. So you bear the very traditions that you were born into,
> just like you "bear" a crime from the community (as the community is > partially responsible for your criminal behavior in Africa).

>
> On a purely scientific note, you can also read Mdw Ntr glyphs
> "ideographically. " When it comes to key scientific concepts hidden
in > the phrases of Mdw Ntr, the phonetical glyphs actually help to define
> the determinative.

>
> As I mentioned in a previous thread, the concept of space-time is an > Egyptian invention. The concept for time is symbolized by the word > /At/ which means moment (time). The word is actually /tA/ backwards > which is usually rendered "land." Ironically /tA/ also means "time."
> (Budge hieroglyphic dictionary p. 815a). The creation of land (mass) > makes time automatic. This is how we get the four dimensions of > space-time in Mdw Ntr symbolic writing and philosophy.

>

> Ta is written /tA/ (loaf of bread and eagle) with the N5
 determinative
 > (sun). Also the word /At/ uses the same glyphs and means time. Now > what most people don't know is that the N5 symbol represents a > planetary body's orbit around the sun (circle around the sun). The sun > is in the middle. We can break down each glyph to mean the following:
 >
 > /t/ = loaf of bread = mass (as in physical mass - Ptah - expansion
 of > space)
 > /A/ = eagle = comes to be, to come into being > /N5/ = sun = signifies time because in ancient days you measured
 time
 > by the earth's movement around the sun, or the moon's movement
 around
 > the earth. Orbits dictate time as it takes "time" for a body of mass > to orbit another body of mass.
 >
 > So we can read ideographically the word /At/ to say "the coming of > mass as it orbits around the sun." Since /tA/ also means time, it
 just > reiterates the word /At/, "mass as it comes to be in orbit around
 the > sun."
 >
 > From this convention of interpreting Mdw Ntr, we can now define Niw.t
 > in terms of what it is = increased/expanded mass. We know this to be > by the individual letters that make up the symbol
 >
 > /n/ = water = waves (undifferentiated matter)
 > /i/ = reed = that which is or together
 > /w/ = chick = grow or develop
 > /t/ = mass
 >
 > So it ideographically reads, "Waves that come together to grow or > develop mass (matter)." To really grasp this concept, you really have > to understand Quantum Mechanics and string theory. The same concept
 of > modern String Theory existed in Ancient Egypt (and all of Black > Africa). When strings combine, that is how matter comes into being.
 > Strings are "waves" /n/ or /nu/.
 >

- > It should be mentioned that the same symbol used for Niw.t is used in
- > Dogon mythology as it is called "the womb." It also is broken up into
- > four demarcations and is divided into WATER, AIR, FIRE, EARTH. All of
- > what is matter is a combination of water, air, fire, and earth (mass).
- > This same convention is expressed in Ifa using the same circle and
- > we've already discussed the same principle of the Kongo "Dikenga
- > diakanda" cosmogram; as it is a symbol (on one level) which means
- > "community."
- >
- > Is this coincidence or consequence (using my Frenchman voice from the
- > Matrix Reloaded)?
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
- >
- >
- > For possible Mdw Ntr interpretations above, visit Laird Scranton's
- > Sacred Symbols of the Dogon.
- >

| 23869|2007-11-23 08:46:57|ahmed|The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"|
The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"

Egyptian hieroglyphics had been used by the Egyptians for thousands of years. However, a particularly bleak period of Egyptian history is the conquest of Egypt by Persia
for more information

<http://ancient-egyptian.blogspot.com/>

| 23870|2007-11-23 09:09:06|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Agreed. But at the same time we should be aware that, I believe, part of our problem has been that too many of us in the motherland did not share this information and developed "secret societies" who held it and limited the transfer of potentially important information to the whole. We must first of all love ourselves - all of us - then we can freely give to each other whether educationally, philosophically, or financially. That may be the biggest question: how do we get us to love each other - all of us - so that a spirit of openness and real acceptance occurs to enable a free flow of information and discourse. You know how easily we get into fights with each other.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > Asar and Ferg,

> > I found the argument for NIW.T convincing. According to statements

> > made earlier by Asar and other Afrocentrics the key to understanding

> > the Egyptian language and philosophy is through Afrikans and

their

> > language.

> > This is incredibly simple and logical. The only reason that an > > intelligent person would not conclude or at least consider the > > likelihood of this is due to racism or stupidity or both. I

continue > > to marvel at the level of recalcitrance of the caucasian

individual

> > and scholars. Then again, not really. Remember the Spartans.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

>

>

> Peace Mahari

>

> The bigger question at the end of the day is, "what are we going to > build with this information?" I would hope that we don't make these > discoveries only to admire what the ancients did, but to use their > creative processes as inspirational mechanisms to build and sustain > viable institutions and communities for ourselves(NIW.T).

>

> Hidden in the glyph is the concept of increased expansion (a place

for > spiritual development). How can we use this, and other information > brought out, to change our condition here in the States and around

the > world? I don't think our scholarship will be complete until we engage > these questions.

>

> African people of old never used higher philosophy, art and science > for mere intellectual pursuits. All information was used to create > institutions that would allow each human being within that institution

> to reach its full human potential. I don't think we should stop at > finding out the information, but do as our great master teachers

such

> as Cheikh Anta Diop, Chancellor Williams, Amos Wilson, Claud

Anderson

> and Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau did: used their scholarship to create > models for viable institutions. That's the role of a scholar in the > African tradition.

>

>

> Some of their works to prove the point:

>

> Cheikh Anta Diop - Black Africa: The Economic and Cultural Basis

for

> a Federated State

>

> Claud Anderson - PowerNomics

>

> Amos Wilson - Blueprint for Black Power: A Moral, Political, and > Economic Imperative for the Twenty-First Century

>

> Chancellor Williams - The Destruction of Black Civilizations

>

> K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau - Mbongi: An African Traditional Political

Institution

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23871|2007-11-23 09:11:15|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S
GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> This disregard for the old, is a management tool, for the old represents > wisdom.

>

Society that does not respect the elderly often disintegrates into chaos.

They basically are reinventing the wheel, recapitulating the mistakes of the past and learning again the hard way.

> Wisdom of learning through life's experience, as well as common sense,

> which seems to be in short supply today.

> By weakening this link to wisdom, the powers that be, are empowered to > influence the young to act in unwise ways, and ultimately, weaken the > bonds of the family structure.

The lack of family structure breeds dependence on the state.

> First, separate the father figure from the family structure. Then, the > family unit is susceptible to external manipulations.

Divide and conquer. You've basically cut the mature leadership force in the nuclear family by half when you remove the father. It's hard enough for two parents, even with help from grandparents, etc., to raise children who can prosper in American society, especially if you're a minority.

Young people do tend to spend rather than invest. Many of them have not yet sensed their own mortality.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23872|2007-11-23 09:13:52|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|

Asar,

You know Sagan who was called the father of space of something like that discounted that the Dogon had any insight into astronomy. He is no longer with us. Be careful about "dissing" our ancestors! lol

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
wrote:

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Divine Ruler Equality Allah" > wrote:
> >
> >
> > Peace and thank you for this recommendation.
> > Divine Ruler Equality Allah
> >
>
>
> You're welcome. Don't forget actually to get his first book as well.
> The second will make much more sense.
>
> 1) Science of the Dogon
> 2) Sacred Symbols of the Dogon
>
> Chiekh Anta Diop (Civilization or Barbarism) and Dr. Charles S.

Finch

> (A Star of Deep Beginnings) have already made the Dogon-Egyptian > connections and that with Quantum Mechanics. But this author takes

it

> further and examines the actual glyphs which support the Dogon's and > the Kmtjw's knowledge of Quantum Mechanics, String and M-Theory.

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23873|2007-11-23 09:16:44|IMJs@webtv.net|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS AMYTH|

Meninarmer, thanks for posting the article on IBM & Dr. Mark Dean's African initiative.

It's great hear he's on point in this program. Most of you probably already know this, but for those who don't... Mark Dean holds 3 of the original 9 technology patents that ALL PC's are based on - Black co-father of the modern PC!

Here's an IBM page from 2001 on Dean

<http://www.research.ibm.com/people/d/deanm/>

[from 2002 - Dean gives insight on the early IBM team's *extremely modest* goal for the PC]

<http://www.blackengineer.com/PDA/people/dean.htm>

| 23874|2007-11-23 09:40:07|Peter Gray|Re: Happy Holidays! Black Friday Notice - Books make meaningful holi

Thanks for your observations, Djehuti.

I remember every time my daughters' schools commemorated Columbus Day, I had a small fit and went into the principal's office armed with Ivan van Sertima's testimony before Congress many years ago. I even tried to convince Sidwell Middle School to have van Sertima address the issue, but that didn't work.

What's next: Happy Germany-Invades-Poland Day?

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: Djehuti_Sundaka@hotmail.com

Date: Thu, 22 Nov 2007 20:20:30 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Happy Holidays! Black Friday Notice - Books make meaningful holiday gifts!

Have A Happy 9/11!

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Wadjat\_News/message/1857

The next time someone wishes you a happy Thanksgiving, ask yourself how someone would take being wished a happy 9/11. To wish a happy Thanksgiving is to condone the demise of the people for which thanks is being given in occupation of their land. So why would anyone in their moral state of mind ever do such a thing?

They wouldn't.

When Indigenous Nations under the foreign imperial rule of invading terrorists are finally free of their oppression, let thanks be given.

When poor people of various nations are free of transnational corporate slave labor and harsh treatment, let thanks be given.

When nations are free from the threat of war from lying terrorist attackers bent upon global domination, let thanks be given.

Until then, let no thanks be given for the demise of human beings at the hands of self-righteous terrorists attempting to pursue the ridiculous notion of a "Manifest Destiny".

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, ANGELINE BANDON-BIBUM wrote:

>

> Happy Thanksgiving Everyone!

>

> I hope everyone has a safe and satisfying Thanksgiving tomorrow. I will be volunteering tomorrow, serving breakfast to those in need of the basics of life. After that, I will go home and give thanks to the Almighty again.

>

> Here's a reminder for Black Friday.... Why not buy at least one book for someone for the holidays! I plan to restock my shelves with such classics as Black Boy, Manchild in the Promised Land, Song of Solomon, and, yes, David Copperfield to name a few.

>

> Also, may I also suggest, Sojourner's Dream, a novel. Please view the following book trailer to find out more on what the story is about.

>

> Click here: http://uk.youtube.com/user/ BANDONPRESS

>

> Again, Happy Thanksgiving Everyone!

>

>

>

> Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream

> Check out my websites:

> <http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum>

> http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot .com

> http://sojournersdreamanovel. blogspot. com

> http://sojournersdreamlamentationsofawarrior. blogspot. com

>

> -----

> Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

>

| 23875|2007-11-23 10:08:26|ras_piankhi|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|

Also for those that don't have them I suggest the Magical Egypt Series by John Anthony West. He with Laird Scranton also outline the Dogon/Egyptian connection as well and they show the glyphs that correspond in both the Dogon and Kemetic spirituality to string theory and quantum physics and it is really eye opening. I believe it is the very last dvd number 8 that explores these connections but the whole series really gets into the esoteric and scientific aspects of Kemetic culture. Very good series on many levels. here is an excerpt from DVD 8

<http://www.magicalegypt.com/>

Cosmology

A comparison of ancient and modern models of the structure of the universe reveal unexpected similarities.

As our most recent scientific understanding is bringing the subatomic realms into ever clearer focus, the strange world of quantum mechanics and string theory are finding a remarkably consistent echo in the cosmology, or creation myth, of the ancient Egyptians.

Could there be complex scientific notation hidden in ancient hieroglyphics? Author / researcher Laird Scranton demonstrates an unexplainably accurate description of subatomic structure, quantum physics, cellular biology and even string theory, hidden in ancient accounts of the formation of the universe.

If Scranton's discovery proves true, it may be the most important breakthrough in Egyptology since the discovery of the Rosetta stone.

<http://www.magicalegypt.com/ProductDetails.asp?ProductCode=Ep8>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Divine Ruler Equality Allah"

> wrote:

> >
> >
> > Peace and thank you for this recommendation.
> > Divine Ruler Equality Allah
> >
>
>
> You're welcome. Don't forget actually to get his first book as well.
> The second will make much more sense.
>
> 1) Science of the Dogon
> 2) Sacred Symbols of the Dogon
>
> Chiekh Anta Diop (Civilization or Barbarism) and Dr. Charles S.

Finch

> (A Star of Deep Beginnings) have already made the Dogon-Egyptian > connections and that with Quantum Mechanics. But this author takes

it

> further and examines the actual glyphs which support the Dogon's and > the Kmtjw's knowledge of Quantum Mechanics, String and M-Theory.

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23876|2007-11-23 10:32:11|Mahari Mengistu|Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS
PAST IS A MYTH.....|

>>There is the reason why performers are selected younger and younger each year. Too often, because of the money, their parents fail to protect them.<<

This is the same conclusion I have drawn. There is the real fact that their biggest - and most vulnerable - audience is very young:
teen and pre-teen. But I believe there is a more greedy, manipulative effort at play here. The young black artists are also easier to "rip-off".

The older performers have come to understand the game. Black performers have a very long history of being totally ripped off by the music industry which is why I do not bemoan the music industry's current financial crisis (according to them). They are absolutely deserving.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

- >
- > This disregard for the old, is a management tool, for the old represents
- > wisdom.
- >
- > Wisdom of learning through life's experience, as well as common sense,
- > which seems to be in short supply today.
- > By weakening this link to wisdom, the powers that be, are empowered to
- > influence the young to act in unwise ways, and ultimately, weaken the
- > bonds of the family structure.
- > First, separate the father figure from the family structure. Then, the
- > family unit is susceptible to external manipulations.
- > There are serious ramifications to manufacturing a young RAP star,
- > having him disregard home training and express himself through cursing,
- > lewd lyrics, and disregard for order.
- > Rewarding this individual with millions of dollars while his parents
- > earn a modest living, often living paycheck to paycheck upsets the
- > balance of the family, and puts this control into the hands of unwise,
- > immature children, who are in turn, controlled by music and media
- > corporations.
- > The media amplifies this on radio and television stations which - > influence young and old viewers to emulate these traits.
- > No wonder education is seen as unnecessary when their idols are earning
- > tens millions to repeat nonsensical filth filled rhymes, or dribble a
- > ball down court. Those that are put in this position generally give the
- > money back to those in control in exchange for trinkets, the same as
- > Africans exchanged gold for glass beads 500 years ago.
- >
- > I watched P. Diddy, an inspiration to many black and white children
- > alike. He earns millions, but with one party, pays $600,000 to the white
- > owner of a ship to rent for a 2 day party.
- > Brittany Spears, a black manufactured white performer earning
- > $800,000/month, but as court records have just shown, has no savings and > spending the money as fast as they pay her.

> There is the reason why performers are selected younger and younger each > year. Too often, because of the money, their parents fail to protect > them. How can they? This is the American dream.

>

> Meninarmer

>

>

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: matt mercer

> Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A

> MYTH.....

> Date: Wed, 21 Nov 2007 07:33:41 -0800 (PST)

>

> I agree, when I was in New Orleans doing relief work last year, it was > struck by how many conversations I had with the sixty something > generation about this issue especially for the African-American. The > break down of the relationships between the old and young may have > gotten more extreme after the storm, but the truth that the > generation

> gap was already wider and deeper in conflict was just made more clear.

> And I think this is true for many ethnic groups and is more an issue of > class ism and poor education all around.

> I wonder if the the word Plaeides has been mistranslated since the ages > of obsession of Greco=Roman beauty.....even in Dr. Winters work > with Tocharian this is translated as "in praise of youth", but perhaps > in old Egyptian it is more like, "in praise of regeneration of > recognition of self-determination" especially if you write it out > phonetically in Meroitic.

> I was thinking about this as I was looking at the virtual tour,

> <http://www.world-heritage-tour.org/list/e.html>

> , of Seti I temple in the 15th frame on the ceiling is a painting I > think illustrates this concept of regeneration quite well. I think > from dynasty to dynasty the idea of the pesdjat or pantheon was meant to

- > help teach people about continuity of growth and cultivation as related

- > to social expansion and inter cultural versus indigenous expression of

- > growth. The Ntr are like bodies of teachings that are interchangeable

- > and shift form time to time that are constantly shifting alignments to

- > suit the needs of the day. I think the temple ceiling here is like a

- > blue print passed on from generation to generation of what the Hathor

- > ceiling represents as a unified field of expression of this concept.

- >

- > Bless,

- > Matt Mercer

- > JAH

- >

- >

- > Mahari Mengistu wrote:

- >

- > Great! I think that as a people our culture teaches us to

- > respect

- > authority which for us has tended to be older people whom we

- > have

- > traditionally revered. Now, however, globally that ancient

- > tradition

- > has been ripped to shreds and it's benefits are/have crumbled.

- > This

- > isn't to say that we should no longer respect our elders - they

- > probably need it more now than ever, perhaps. What I'm referring

- > to

- > is the dynamic of respect for authority symbolized by the

- > elderly.

- > That kind of respect I believe extends itself ever upward into

- > the

- > government, etc. After years of invasion and interference from

- > europeans and arabs who don't respect this ancient symbol of

- > authority it has ceased to work sufficiently for the Afrikan.

> The
> europeans and arabs respect youth and power only. And > consequently > profoundly distrust our youth. So their respect for youth does
> not > extend to and enable our youth - it seeks to destroy them subtly > or > overtly.
> So our younger generation must move beyond the tradiion and take
> the > initiative because I believe the current black authority > worldwide is > weakened and wounded from some mortal blows. The caring, of > course,
> won't leave the wounded to die but he mustn't allow himself
to > die
> because of the wounded.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:
> >
> > Mahari. Good idea. I read the story yesterday. Was impressed,
> but > as an African, I'm quite saddened by how much local talent
is > being > wasted .In Tanzania, only around 15 percent have access to > electricity, yes 85%!Will try to contact the guy (via the > newspapers
> article)For example, a link up with african americans with > similar > interests(Kungufuhustle etc) would very much help in terms
of > technological transfer and help.Will keep you informed.
> >
> >
> > To: Ta_Seti@: mahari@: Tue, 20 Nov 2007 19:32:00
> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST
> IS A

> MYTH.....
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > Why don't you try to contact them? Perhaps, in some way
the > three
> of you could form an organization of some sort - an > Afrikan-AAmerican
> inventors organization or such. At least, you would know that
> there
> is powerful black talent waiting to be released - in > yourselves.
> Plant the seed.HTP,Mahari--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com,
> kungfuhustle
> wrote:>> Peter> > Thank you for sharing this. I > found it
> very informative, with more then> a hint of familiarity.> >
> Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Peter Kaiza
> > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> To:
> ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY
> SAYS
> AFRIKA'S GLORIOUS PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Tue, 20 Nov
2007 > 13:42:35 +0000> > Off topic but there are many inovaters in > Africa
> but they lack support> > > > IMAGINE you are living in a > situation
> where you donâ€¢t have to worry> about any kind of bills, be it > water, electricity or satellite> television subscription.
You
> have > power and water in abundance and you> can access any television > channel of your choice from a remote village. > > > John > Fute,
> popularly known by his friends as â€¢Pwaguâ€¢ lives this kind
> of> > life in a remote village of Njombe District, Iringa Region.
> >
> > >
> When you look at Fute a self-styled electricity inventor,

for

> the > first> time, the impression you get is that he may be an > agricultural > extension> officer. He puts on a big jacket zipped to the top

> with a > cap, dirty> pair of jeans and rides a motorcycle. > > > >

His

> homestead, located about five kilometres off Iringa-Songea

> road,>

> looks like a warehouse with tools everywhere. There is a > satellite

> dish> and electric poles at the compound, which shows that he is

> up-> to-date in> terms of electricity and what is happening

> throughout the > world despite> the fact that he lives in a remote village in > Njombe.

> > > > As one approaches his isolated home, he or she could > view

> the> magnificent scenery of the area coloured by green > vegetation and > the> sounds of the Hagafilo River falls. > > > > His does not > stay > with his family at this remote area. He says family> members > visit

> him from time to time. > > Fute does not experience any power > cuts or > rationing as is the case> cities and towns in the country.

At

> his > place he decides when to switch> off the lights; otherwise

power

> is > on all the time. He is the inventor> and the engineer of an > electric

> plant in remote Njombe Village. > > > > When he began his > experiment

> in electricity generation, people close to> him did not take > him

> seriously. They nicknamed him â□Pwaguâ□□, relating him> to a > former > radio comedian with Radio Tanzania Dar es Salaam (RTD) who went

 > by > that name. He was never discouraged by those sentiments. He > has > successfully generated his own power plant. > > > > > The > 48-year-
 > old Fute looks very talented, though never had much of the > schooling
 > apart from his Standard Seven academic certificate. > > >
 > >
 > â I > started experimenting on how to produce electricity in 1981
 in
 > my > village Mjimwema. During that time people saw me as â madâ > except > for the village chairman, Mr Gerodi Gilasi, who encouraged me
 > to > continue with what I was doing,â says Fute. > > > > > > According
 > to him, one begins to think when he or she has an issue to > settle.
 > â When you are faced with a challenge, you begin to think of > how to > solve it. This is exactly what happened to me,â he says. > > >
 > > >
 > > He says he was fed up with the darkness in his village and > thought
 > on how to do away with it. But he was afraid of taking the > initiative because he had learnt from government officials
 that
 > it > was the government (TanESCO) only that had the right to own
 > and > generate electricity by then. > > > > > In 1992, the Area
 > Commissioner, Oscar Kapinga, allowed him to continue with
 his > endeavour without fear of TanESCO. > > > > > He started
 by > repairing things like bicycles and then came with a dream>

of > having > his own electricity. He began by producing one kilowatt, but>
> the > problem was little water supply and would dry from time to time.
> > >
> In his quest for more water, he came across river Hagafilo
in a > nearby> and would-be his new home village. This river flows
all > seasons. So to> him, this was the perfect discovery. He > approached > the village council> and they gave him a big area running across
> the > river. His family> wouldn't agree. Nevertheless he pushed on
> with > his plan. > > > > > > > When he settled, the primary objective
> was > to produce power. He bought> some tools and produced a turbine
> from > his home workshop. He bought> wires and other materials > necessary for > production and supply of> electricity. > > > > > > From the > falls,
> water is brought to the turbine by a four-inch diameter> pipe
> and > from that he opens just like any other water tap to hit
the> > propellers with high pressure. The rotation of the propeller > sends> > electric signals to the motor which in turn turns the signals
> into> > electric current. Currently, he is producing 20 kilowatts.
He
> says
> soon> he will expand to 30 kilowatts. > > > > > > After > generating

> such amount of electricity, he saw no problem in> helping his > new > village mates with lighting. Nearby bars of local brew> are the > first > to benefit from his generosity. But the supply never> lasted > long as > he was forced to stop it because they started to steal> the > wires. If > you happen to pass through that area, you will see the> > electric > posts that were used for electric supply to the villageâ □ □s > local> > brew shop. > > > > > It is very strange how he managed to tap
> water
> from the falls, take it> through pipes at an unprecedented > pressure > to run the turbine and> produce power. Apart from the costs
of > buying > materials, there are no> more. He uses the power to light up
> his > compound and run his home> theatre sets. > > > > > >From > pieces of > metals and tins, Pwagu managed to assemble a satellite> dish
> that can > access an imaginable number of television and radio> signals. >
> > >
> > > Seeing that he was finding it difficult to bring water
up
> the > hill for> domestic use, he devised a pump that use no outside > energy
> (electricity,> oil), just air pressure inside it. The pump > pushes > water through a pipe,> up hill for 600 metres and 300 metres on > flat > surface to his 9,000> litre-capacity underground tank at his > home. >
> > > > With the water pumps, he can irrigate his farm, which

he

> has > planed> variety of crops, assuring him of adequate food supply

> all

> the time. No> dependence on rain falls anymore. > > > > >

> Njombe

> District is a town of inventors, more than just a house of>

> talents.

> Another equally talented man is the 61-year-old Aboubacar>

> Msigwa. In

> todayâ□□s language he can be called the â□_father of farm> > implementsâ□□. > > > > Mr Msigwaâ□□s latest invention is a > machine

> that reduces pieces of poles> to fine woods of different sizes

> and > dimensions. It is a locally> designed technology that uses > electricity unlike Pwaguâ□□s technology. > > > > >

He, as > well,

> used pieces of metals to manufacture the machine. He can> either

> use

> his poorly equipped workshop or any modern one in a nearby> factory.

> > > > > Despite his talent, Mr Msigwa invents no more.

This

> followed the loss of> his big time invention of a planter at

> the > Sokoine University of> Agriculture (SUA) in Morogoro. The

> authority

> claimed that it was stolen,> according to his explanation.

> > >

> > >

> > â□_They stole my machine, which means they stole my technology

> and > my> skill. This put me off for a long time before I came up

> with > this> machine,â□ says Msigwa. > > > > > He normally produces > machines according to the needs of the time. This> planter was > good > as it would plant seeds to required length and width.> He had > taken > it to SUA for a farm implementâ□□s show in Morogoro. >

> > > >
> When
> Msigwa explains this, one can sense the feeling of resignation
> and> > resentment from his voice. He says: â□¶This was my biggest > invention> > following some wooden bicycles. My motivation came from the> > poverty-> stricken situation we were living in. > > > > > > He began > creating farm implements in 1966 at the age of 17. There was> > serious > hunger in the area. They were given grains popularly known
as> > â□¶yangaâ□□, but whenever they planted them, they never > germinated.
> At this> time it would take four people in a row to plant.
His
> invention, which> was known as â□¶Nzaliloâ□□, would cover for > three > people. > > > > > Msigwa says that people of his nature
and > talent > would be helped out to> develop their talents for the betterment
> of > many, during the time of> Mwalimu Nyerere. â□¶But when he > retired > from active administration, it was> like everything went away
> with > him,â□ he laments. > > > > > â□¶When SUA wanted me
to > manufacture > another machine, I refused until they> tell me what exactly > happened > to first one they claimed was stolen,â€ he> further narrates. >

 >>>
 >>>> Msigwaâ€™s brain works better when he is resting, alone or
 > when > sleeping.> He normally narrates his ideas to his assistants who > put > them into> writing. Many people have benefited from his > inventions, > the number of> which he canâ€™t predict. As of today many still > go to > his workshop for> timber and cutting of logs. > > > > >
 > He
 > says
 > that Tanzanians should not rely so much on imported technology> > alone. He says that even the countries, which are developed, > depended > on> local inventors, home grown technology for their > advancement. > > >>>>> â€¶And those who know that they have talents let them > find > ways to develop> themselves. Donâ€™t fear to practise your > talents,
 > your society depends on> you,â€ he says. > > > > > >
 > _____>
 To:
 > ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com> From: atenergy@> Date: Tue, 20 Nov
 > 2007
 > 08:14:13 -0500> Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS
 > AFRIKA'S
 > GLORIOUS PAST> IS A MYTH.....> > Thank you, Meninarmer.> >
 > Good > idea. Especially since I spent 3 months on contract at> NASA > documenting exactly what you mentioned: technology transfer>
 > "success > stories" as they were called -- examples of> NASA-initiated R&D
 > that > eventually culminated in commercial> success, whether through

> the > licensing of the technology or> actual manufacturing of a > product > (such as the foam mattress> marketed by Serta that uses a > viscoelastic foam developed by> NASA for space flight). As an > independent R&D entrepreneur> (with lots of pro bono help
from > Sandia > Labs and NREL) I had> also worked on a novel photovoltaic > material
> (ruthenium> dioxide-doped strontium titanate) in the hope
of > achieving that> solar "breakthrough" we'd all like to see --
> the > dopant shifts> the absorption spectrum of titania slightly into
> the > UV range,> not particularly significant for terrestrial power > conversion> systems, but conceivably useful in space where there
> is a > lot> more UV.> > But this is digressing off-topic. Thanks > again.> >
> Peter> > > > >

> _____>

To:

> Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> From: shalomic@> Date: Tue, 20 Nov
> 2007

> 01:00:56 -0500> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS
> AFRIKA'S>

> GLORIOUS PAST IS A MYTH.....> > I suggest you contact NASA
and

> see > what solar> developments are available> through their > technology

> transfer program. The stuff is> developed for> space, but they > encourage commercialization of these> technologies.> Last time I > used

> them, I purchased a 6DOF program from> them for $1.>

> <http://technology.ksc.nasa.gov/>>

> <http://techtransfer.gsfc.nasa.gov/>>
> > Meninarmer> > -----Original Message-----> From: Paul Kekai
> Manansala > Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com>
To:
> Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: SARKOZY SAYS
> AFRIKA'S
> GLORIOUS> PAST IS A> MYTH.....> Date: Mon, 19 Nov 2007
21:59:59
> -
> 0000> Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster> > --- In > Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray> wrote:> >>
> >
> >
> Thank you, Paul.> > > > I have been through all the hoops
> regarding > possible> shortcut routes> to initiating not just > purchasing/installaton of> solar-electric> technology in
the > developing world, but actual> technology transfer,> i.e., > manufacturing, whether from pure polycrystalline> boule or > from> "dirty silicon". Over the course of several years, I've>
> had> > discussions with Astropower (in Delaware), Siemens (in> the > Boston>
> area), among others, but got stuck with the funding> > (surprise,> > surprise!!). So cudos to your your family too for> actually > being> > involved in the technology of the future - -- did you> hear > Chavez>
> talking about the possibility of $200/bbl. oil?> > > > >
Yes,
> I > heard that OPEC is also discussing a move toward> a "basket
of> > currencies" rather than the U.S. dollar for trading oil.>
This
> is> > being pushed by Chavez, Iran and surprisingly Iraq.> > I still > remember when people would laugh at predictions> of $100/bbl.>
> >
> Regards,> Paul Kekai Manansala> > Regards,> Paul Keaki

> Manansala> > >

> > > >

> _____>

> Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now! >

> > >

> > >

_____
>

> Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!>

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > _____
> > Get free emoticon packs and customisation from Windows Live.

> > <http://www.pimpmylive.co.uk>

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

_____
> Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

>

| 23877|2007-11-23 12:41:34|kungfuhustle|Re: Happy Holidays! Black Friday Notice - Books make meaningful holi|

For Horse Lovers

We are about to release an album entitled, I Ride Horses.

We are accepting donations towards helping us participate in next year's endurance race.

Look through the site below, and you will see some of the actors from the HBO series, The Wire, who are clients and helped fund this year's race.

For your listening pleasure, feel free to download the album's title track, I Ride Horses.

http://rapidshare.com/files/71789063/JAR-I\_Ride\_Horses.mp3.html

I hope you all like it. If you do, The site takes small donation thru paypal. If you contribute, send me an email to, itsyourthing@khemeye.com, and I'll forward you one of the tracks featuring some of the members of Parliment-Funkadelics and DruHill. <http://www.iridehorses.com/>

Meninarmer
Peace

-----Original Message-----

From: Djehuti Sundaka <Djehuti\_Sundaka@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Happy Holidays! Black Friday Notice - Books make meaningful holiday gifts!

Date: Thu, 22 Nov 2007 20:20:30 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

Have A Happy 9/11!

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Wadjat\_News/message/1857

The next time someone wishes you a happy Thanksgiving, ask yourself how someone would take being wished a happy 9/11. To wish a happy Thanksgiving is to condone the demise of the people for which thanks is being given in occupation of their land. So why would anyone in their moral state of mind ever do such a thing?

They wouldn't.

When Indigenous Nations under the foreign imperial rule of invading terrorists are finally free of their oppression, let thanks be given.

When poor people of various nations are free of transnational corporate slave labor and harsh treatment, let thanks be given.

When nations are free from the threat of war from lying terrorist attackers bent upon global domination, let thanks be given.

Until then, let no thanks be given for the demise of human beings at the hands of self-righteous terrorists attempting to pursue the ridiculous notion of a "Manifest Destiny".

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, ANGELINE BANDON-BIBUM wrote:

- >
- > Happy Thanksgiving Everyone!
- >
- > I hope everyone has a safe and satisfying Thanksgiving tomorrow.

I will be volunteering tomorrow, serving breakfast to those in need of the basics of life. After that, I will go home and give thanks to the Almighty again.

- >
- > Here's a reminder for Black Friday.... Why not buy at least one book for someone for the holidays! I plan to restock my shelves with such classics as Black Boy, Manchild in the Promised Land, Song of Solomon, and, yes, David Copperfield to name a few.

- >
- > Also, may I also suggest, Sojourner's Dream, a novel. Please

view the following book trailer to find out more on what the story is about.

- >
- > Click here: <http://uk.youtube.com/user/BANDONPRESS>
- >
- > Again, Happy Thanksgiving Everyone!
- >
- >
- >
- > Angeline Bandon-Bibum, Author of Sojourner's Dream
- > Check out my websites:
- > <http://www.authorsden.com/msangelinebandonbibum>
- > <http://angelinebandonbibum.blogspot.com>
- > <http://sojournersdreamanovel.blogspot.com>
- > <http://sojournersdreamlamentationsofawarrior.blogspot.com>

- >
- > -----
- > Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail.

See how.

- >
  - | 23878|2007-11-23 13:38:47|asar_imhotep|Re: Niw.t, Dogon Womb & Kongo Dikenga|
- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

- >
- > Asar
- >
- > I am encouraged by your observations which are encouraging to my research. The concepts and connections between 'womb', village, 'self', 'community' is a powerful one.

>

> Also I might like to add that the womb containing the placenta and umbilical cord play a vital role in reinforcing this concept. The umbilical cord is a life line and ties one to the village. In other words, one may leave the village but will always return to it.

>

> The word Dikenga has a similar meaning in Kiswahili-Bantu. It is known as Ji-Kinga from the verb 'kinga', and means to protect or defend oneself by using a screen, shield, or firebrand. 'Ji' means self. As you rightly observe the key concept of the dikenga cosmogram is to defend the community, and represents the community, hence the 'Kaya' concept of fortification.

>

> Somo.

>

>

>

I appreciate it. It's exciting to uncover these things and to make sense of the ancient method of teaching.

Below I have recreated the Dogon symbol for the WOMB OF AMMA. I noticed that with our knowledge of the Kongo Dikenga cosmogram, that we can interpret on one level the meaning of the Dogon WOMB OF AMMA.

If you can't see the images, visit:

http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13039&PID=216364#216364

Here is the Dogon version of their cosmological process representation:

Now here is the Kongo Dikenga:

Now they may not seem to match, until we turn the Dogon Womb on it's side:

Now they have different names for each stage of development, but one stage in particular has a similar way of saying the same concept, and the elemental signs match.

Dogon - Yala - Fire

Kongo - Kala - means coal, fire

The same elements in the SAME sections appear in both graphs. In the Kongo Dikenga graph we can see:

Musoni - water (conception)

Kala - fire (initiating act of formation)

Tukula - earth (grounding, solidified in purpose) [Nganga - doer, master, specialist,

Lemba - wind (death stage - as death is the ultimate process of "change" - as wind causes things that were here before, not to be here the same way - think hurricane).

This, to me, shows the antiquity of these concepts and has to be the result of a central university system of education at a time before Egypt as a political state came into being. Speaking of Km.t, we mentioned before that the concept of "ka" deals with "coal, fire, blackness (blackening)" as a means of transformation [coming into being]. Some words to prove our point:

Malinke-Bambara

Kami - charcoal

Kambi - charcoal

Dravidian (Tamil)

Kammi - dark

Kammu - dark

Kari - charcoal

Kay - to grow hot, burn and be warm

Culli - furnace, fireplace

Kiswahili-Bantu

Kaa - a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live ember

Mbochi

i-kama - to blacken

Tsonga-Bantu,

Khala, a piece charcoal

Mongo-Bantu,

Wala, place where charcoal is prepared

Rikwangali-Bantu,

ekara - a piece of charcoal

Oshinddonga-Bantu,

ekala - charcoal

Zulu-Bantu,

(li)-lahle - cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.

Chichewa-Bantu,

khala - piece of charcoal

Kongo -Bantu

Kala - to be, to become, to light fire.

Kalunga - principle God of change, fire

To side track here, the root word "KE" in the Dogon language is associated with a "dung beetle" and all beetles in general who EMERGE out of WATER. The same root is in the Egyptian word KHEPERA which is the deity of "change and transformation." The root KE in the Dogon language refers to all insects that EMERGE out of water, but is associated with the dung beetle specifically.

I am now positing that the African concept of KA, KAA is talking about an EMERGENCE or COMING INTO BEING from HEAT and FIRE. As proposed previously, I think Km.t was the world's WOMB of old and this is the place where you BECAME a priest. It was the central university of the world and had branch universities in other parts of Africa and Asia. This is where you did your DEVELOPMENT before going back to your respective home and SPECIALIZING in a specific art. The ancients used the concept of fire/heat in association with their priesthood (education system).

We have to think of a university with many schools under the same program. So you have the University of Houston that has a school of business, a school of liberal arts, a school of technology and so forth. Each of the schools are in separate buildings over a large stretch of land, but are still a part of the University. The same here in Africa, except, the schools were spread across the continent. The "UNIVERSITY" was Kmt itself. In Africa the world, literally, was your school. The forests are "LIVING UNIVERSITIES." So we can't look for "buildings" to say it was a university.

It's all coming together. Oh, and for Mahari & Ferg, I found an entry in Budge's Hieroglyphic dictionary of the word "TCHER" (Netcher) and it means ANCESTRESS (page 909b). More evidence that Ntr means ANCESTOR on one level.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Don't forget the Nigerian Pyramids
Nsude village shrine, Enugu State of Nigeria

| 23879|2007-11-23 16:53:17|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Niw.t, Dogon Womb & Kongo Dikenga|
Asar,

Speaking of pyramids and Nigeria. There is a theory ? that may have been put forth by the Nigerians ? that Atlantis was off the coast of Nigeria. This makes it interesting as I read the book "Who Were the Minoans? An African Answer". The author says that the Yoruba of northern Nigeria are the descendants of Minoa. And one theory is that the fabled Atlantis was on Thera, the volcanic island that exploded.

Your theory of KM.T as a university has a sound of truth. Let your imagination conjure up KM.T with its pyramids intact. They are covered with glistening white limestone and capped with gold. What a startling and amazing sight it must have been with the sun beaming down on it! The reflection must have been incredible. And at night, with the moonlight ? especially a full moon ? it would have lit up the nighttime skyline like "Ka/kala". The place must have looked like a place of fire for miles and miles through out the regions of Afrika, the ME and southern Europe. Quite an advertisement for a university, huh.

>>In Africa the world, literally, was your school. The forests are "LIVING UNIVERSITIES." So we can't look for "buildings" to say it was a university.<<

"As above, so below". There is no separation above, so it all flows as one below as well.

Thanks, Asar and Ferg and all.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

> >

> > Asar

> >

> > I am encouraged by your observations which are encouraging to my > research. The concepts and connections between 'womb', village, 'self',

> 'community' is a powerful one.

> >

> > Also I might like to add that the womb containing the placenta and > umbilical cord play a vital role in reinforcing this concept. The > umbilical cord is a life line and ties one to the village. In other > words, one may leave the village but will always return to it.

> >

> > The word Dikenga has a similar meaning in Kiswahili-Bantu. It is known > as Ji-Kinga from the verb 'kinga', and means to protect or defend > oneself by using a screen, shield, or firebrand. 'Ji' means self.

As you > rightly observe the key concept of the dikenga cosmogram is to defend > the community, and represents the community, hence the 'Kaya' concept of > fortification.

> >

> > Somo.

> >

> >

> >

>

>

>

> I appreciate it. It's exciting to uncover these things and to make sense > of the ancient method of teaching.

>

> Below I have recreated the Dogon symbol for the WOMB OF AMMA. I noticed > that with our knowledge of the Kongo Dikenga cosmogram, that we can > interpret on one level the meaning of the Dogon WOMB OF AMMA.

>

> If you can't see the images, visit:

> http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?

TID=13039&PID=216364\

> #216364

> <http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?

TID=13039&PID=21636\

> 4#216364>

>

> Here is the Dogon version of their cosmological process representation:

>

>

>

> Now here is the Kongo Dikenga:

>

>

>

>

> Now they may not seem to match, until we turn the Dogon Womb on it's > side:

- >
- >
- >
- >
- > Now they have different names for each stage of development, but one
- > stage in particular has a similar way of saying the same concept,

and

- > the elemental signs match.
- >
- > Dogon - Yala - Fire
- > Kongo - Kala - means coal, fire
- >
- > The same elements in the SAME sections appear in both graphs. In the
- > Kongo Dikenga graph we can see:
- >
- > Musoni - water (conception)
- > Kala - fire (initiating act of formation)
- > Tukula - earth (grounding, solidified in purpose) [Nganga - doer,
- > master, specialist,
- > Lemba - wind (death stage - as death is the ultimate process of "change"

- > - as wind causes things that were here before, not to be here the

same

- > way - think hurricane).
- >
- > This, to me, shows the antiquity of these concepts and has to be the
- > result of a central university system of education at a time before
- > Egypt as a political state came into being. Speaking of Km.t, we
- > mentioned before that the concept of "ka" deals with "coal, fire,
- > blackness (blackening)" as a means of transformation [coming into
- > being]. Some words to prove our point:
- >
- >
- > Malinke-Bambara
- > Kami - charcoal
- > Kambi - charcoal
- >
- > Dravidian (Tamil)
- > Kammi - dark
- > Kammu - dark
- > Kari - charcoal
- > Kay - to grow hot, burn and be warm
- > Culli - furnace, fireplace

- >
- > Kiswahili-Bantu
- > Kaa - a piece of charcoal, coal, ember, cinder, fuel, live ember
- >
- > Mbochi
- > i-kama - to blacken
- >
- > Tsonga-Bantu,
- > Khala, a piece charcoal
- >
- > Mongo-Bantu,
- > Wala, place where charcoal is prepared
- >
- > Rikwangali-Bantu,
- > ekara - a piece of charcoal
- >
- > Oshinddonga-Bantu,
- > ekala - charcoal
- >
- > Zulu-Bantu,
- > (li)-lahle - cinder, piece of charcoal, a very dark person.
- >
- > Chichewa-Bantu,
- > khala - piece of charcoal
- >
- > Kongo -Bantu
- > Kala - to be, to become, to light fire.
- > Kalunga - principle God of change, fire
- >
- > To side track here, the root word "KE" in the Dogon language is
- > associated with a "dung beetle" and all beetles in general who

EMERGE

> out of WATER. The same root is in the Egyptian word KHEPERA which is the

- > deity of "change and transformation." The root KE in the Dogon
- > language refers to all insects that EMERGE out of water, but is
- > associated with the dung beetle specifically.

>

> I am now positing that the African concept of KA, KAA is talking

about

- > an EMERGENCE or COMING INTO BEING from HEAT and FIRE. As proposed
- > previously, I think Km.t was the world's WOMB of old and this is the > place where you BECAME a priest. It was the central university of

the > world and had branch universities in other parts of Africa and Asia.

> This is where you did your DEVELOPMENT before going back to your > respective home and SPECIALIZING in a specific art. The ancients

used

> the concept of fire/heat in association with their priesthood

(education > system).

>

> We have to think of a university with many schools under the same > program. So you have the University of Houston that has a school of > business, a school of liberal arts, a school of technology and so forth.

> Each of the schools are in separate buildings over a large stretch

of > land, but are still a part of the University. The same here in

Africa,

> except, the schools were spread across the continent.

The "UNIVERSITY"

> was Kmt itself. In Africa the world, literally, was your school.

The

> forests are "LIVING UNIVERSITIES." So we can't look for "buildings"

to > say it was a university.

>

>

> It's all coming together. Oh, and for Mahari & Ferg, I found an entry in

> Budge's Hieroglyphic dictionary of the word "TCHER" (Netcher) and it > means ANCESTRESS (page 909b). More evidence that Ntr means ANCESTOR

on > one level.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

> Don't forget the Nigerian Pyramids

> Nsude village shrine, Enugu State of Nigeria

>

| 23880|2007-11-23 22:22:42|asar_imhotep|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Agreed. But at the same time we should be aware that, I believe,

> part of our problem has been that too many of us in the motherland

> did not share this information and developed "secret societies" who > held it and limited the transfer of potentially important information > to the whole. We must first of all love ourselves - all of us - then > we can freely give to each other whether educationally, > philosophically, or financially. That may be the biggest question:

> how do we get us to love each other - all of us - so that a spirit of > openness and real acceptance occurs to enable a free flow of > information and discourse. You know how easily we get into fights > with each other.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

This is a common misconception about the educational system in Africa, who we call here in America members of a "secret society." The more proper term is a "sacred society" and one should not view it with the same lens we view European based Freemasonry, Knights Templar or Shriners.

Now I will agree, for the more scientific aspects of what is known, the oral method and manner which African priests educated its members is not the most efficient way to transfer knowledge. But one of the things we have to remember is that the process was/is open to anyone. The sincere desire and high moral character has to be shown to the people with the information. Otherwise you would not be taught. Why would they waste their time on a person with no moral character and no real desire to take the process or information seriously?

Although we have it isn't the most efficient method for transferring information and testing scientific theories, it is a possible safeguard of misuse of the information. So if we know for sure that African people have been dealing with Quantum Mechanics and things 4000 years ago, we can assume other aspects of science to be known by them as well. One of the first questions you have to ask is why didn't they create a nuclear bomb? Because of their commitment to human dignity & flourishing and balance for the physical environment that they didn't take on such endeavors.

That is not the case here in America. We create technology with no regards to how it affects the human social economy, the environment or the health or human relations 100 generations from now. People who make decisions today would not be in power in times past in African societies. Your character is more important than how much "science" you THINK you know. Because science is used to advance the human condition and currently we don't have people with a deep sense of connectedness to the environment and the rest of the human family.

The only proven safeguard against this is an initiation into a long process of character development that prepares you for the proper use of power. When you pledge a secret society in America, you pledge to the ORGANIZATION. When you pledge an oath to a traditional sacred society in Africa, you pledge an oath to maintain the health of the PEOPLE (the community). In times past, if you did not honor your obligations to the people and put the social balance in disruption, you could lose your life. Somethings we need to go back to.

The day of trying to do everything for the masses is long gone. Our ancestors were right about one thing, education is not for the masses. The more I interact with people across the world, the more true their words are.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23881|2007-11-23 22:38:07|asar_imhotep|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "ras_piankhi" wrote:

>

> Also for those that don't have them I suggesty the Magical Egypt > Series by John Anthony West. He with Laird Scranton also outline the > Dogon/Egyptian connection as well and they show the glyphs that > correspond in both the Dogon and Kemetic spirituality to string theory > and quantum physics and it it really eye opening. I believe it is the > very last dvd number 8 that explores these connections but the whole > series really gets into the esoteric and scientific aspects of > Kemetic culture. Very good series on many levels. here is an excerpt > from DVD 8

>

> <http://www.magicalegypt.com/>

>

The only thing I really don't like about the book, or the series is that they still can't clearly identify Ta-Merri with Africa. It's more like the Egyptians were "Egyptians" and they taught the Dogon these aspects of the culture. They still leave it to where you could speculate the ethnicity of the Kmtjw.

This is why the greater exploration into the Niger-Congo language group will prove the most fruitful, because at this point you can't deny the ethnicity of the Ancient Egyptians.

They provide no cultural or historical context for their discussion, thus giving the possibility that the Egyptians came out of no where and taught this one tribe in Africa (although they mention similar concepts among other west African people).

They still are of the belief that Egypt rose first and then spread its influence out. The opposite is true. Egypt is the result of many African nations coming together after the Naptian Pluvial period which caused the desertification of the Sahara region. This forced the African migrations south and east ward and it is this desire to overcome nature that a political state of Ta-Merri is formed. They don't know about the university system of Africa (which still exist today).

Mdw Ntr is the way all of these societies could communicate. Words change how they are said over time and within regional dialects. Africans knew this. But what doesn't change are symbols. As Scranton correctly noted is that Mdw Ntr writing is a conscious writing system and was deliberately developed by priests. They deliberately created this system as a means to communicate with the different schools across the continent. This view is missing from their analysis.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23882|2007-11-23 23:10:17|kungfuhustle|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf]

I believe the power to influence our people today as it has been in the past is through musical expression.

Music truly is universal, and has the ability for the message to transcend educational, ethnic, religious, and philosophical differences.

Today, we see an extreme example of how music (rap) is being manipulated, packaged, and distributed to influence behavior of controlled peoples worldwide.

Rap has been intentionally altered from it's original form, fine-tuned to develop a mindset that encourages all the aspects of human behavior in the young, be they African, American, Asian, Indian, European to convert them to super consumerism, and pro-establishment slaves.

It demonstrates the universality of music through Rap, for it has penetrated all major cultures with it's tailored message.

The powers ensure the message is balanced in a manner that favors the direction they have chosen. Artists are too un-conscience to fully comprehend the ramifications of their lyrics, using "being paid" as the justification, and the yard stick to measure their success.

Music and dance were/are vital to each region of Africa, as well as the rest of the world.

Has there ever been a conglomeration of all of Africa's musical art form that spoke universally from tribe to tribe, region to region?

I've heard Alpha Blondie use many dialects in some of his music. Are there other artists who have tried the same?

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Date: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 06:22:40 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Agreed. But at the same time we should be aware that, I believe, > part of our problem has been that too many of us in the motherland > did not share this information and developed "secret societies" who > held it and limited the transfer of potentially important information > to the whole. We must first of all love ourselves - all of us - then > we can freely give to each other whether educationally, > philosophically, or financially. That may be the biggest question:
> how do we get us to love each other - all of us - so that a spirit of > openness and real acceptance occurs to enable a free flow of > information and discourse. You know how easily we get into fights > with each other.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

This is a common misconception about the educational system in Africa, who we call here in America members of a "secret society." The more proper term is a "sacred society" and one should not view it with the same lens we view European based Freemasonry, Knights Templar or Shriners.

Now I will agree, for the more scientific aspects of what is known, the oral method and manner which African priests educated its members is not the most efficient way to transfer knowledge. But one of the things we have to remember is that the process was/is open to anyone. The sincere desire and high moral character has to be shown to the people with the information. Otherwise you would not be taught. Why would they waste their time on a person with no moral character and no real desire to take the process or information seriously?

Although we have it isn't the most efficient method for transferring information and testing scientific theories, it is a possible safeguard of misuse of the information. So if we know for sure that African people have been dealing with Quantum Mechanics and things 4000 years ago, we can assume other aspects of science to be known by them as well. One of the first questions you have to ask is why didn't they create a nuclear bomb? Because of their commitment to human dignity & flourishing and balance for the physical environment that they didn't take on such endeavors.

That is not the case here in America. We create technology with no regards to how it affects the human social economy, the environment or the health or human relations 100 generations from now. People who make decisions today would not be in power in times past in African societies. Your character is more important than how much "science" you THINK you know. Because science is used to advance the human condition and currently we don't have people with a deep sense of connectedness to the environment and the rest of the human family.

The only proven safeguard against this is an initiation into a long process of character development that prepares you for the proper use of power. When you pledge a secret society in America, you pledge to the ORGANIZATION. When you pledge an oath to a traditional sacred society in Africa, you pledge an oath to maintain the health of the PEOPLE (the community). In times past, if you did not honor your obligations to the people and put the social balance in disruption, you could lose your life. Somethings we need to go back to.

The day of trying to do everything for the masses is long gone. Our ancestors were right about one thing, education is not for the masses. The more I interact with people across the world, the more true their words are.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23883|2007-11-24 08:05:24|shaimesh@aol.com|Valley of gthe King Authentic Khamitik Apparel|
From:imhotep@valleyofthekings.com

This e-mail has been sent to you as a recommendation to visit:
www.valleyofthekings.com

Message from: Imhotep to you

You have been chosen out of many by the omnipotent creative will of Ptah.

Imhotep, Son of Ptah, Director of the craftsmen, Overseer, and Chief Spokesperson of VALLEYOFTHEKINGS.COM money wasters of 2007.

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top

| 23884|2007-11-24 11:29:31|cristofori whitakara|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

i find the painting of bob marley fascinating. i read a biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his mother's side he was of nubian-egyptian descent. the book is "catch a Fire" by timothy white

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Notice the little black man.

Go to Google News

Photo 2 of 3

A woman photographing Neolithic rock art

Desert art in danger at Egypt's new tourism frontier

17 hours ago

CAIRO (AFP) ? A rising tide of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is threatening priceless rock art preserved for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.

In Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and Libya, the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains of Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as anything by Picasso.

But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires a deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations.

Not only the rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural heritage.

"You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect the art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie 5,000-7,000 years ago.

"People put water or oil on the paintings to make the faded colours look brighter, causing irreparable damage," he says.

The story is even more tragic just across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of human figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.

Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the desert.

Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers drive through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."

While only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists visiting Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red Sea resort.

"By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this year we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper.

Rock art specialist Tilman Lenssen-Erz says that in prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands of square kilometres (miles).

"This was a place so highly charged with symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the rock art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European context," says Lenssen-Erz.

"People from far away would know about the significance of the religious power that is collected in this place ... where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks making the whole area a sacred landscape."

Even more recent artefacts like the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone unscathed by the passage of modern man.

The hieroglyphs are evidence that, contrary to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went via the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting straight through the desert.

Last year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant engraving of a topless woman.

"You can't put barbed wire around it so we developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance of educating guides and tourists alike.

Saad Ali, a young tour operator based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was through education.

"We always arranged trips to clean up the desert and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to train the guides," he says.

"Now it's changed a lot. Last year we went to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the year before it was 11 tonnes."

His next target is tour operators working out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.

Kuper says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people" but that others -- tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based expats who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.

With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan to agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation conundrum.

The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-boundary cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires the three nations to all first declare individual national parks.

So far, only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of hammering out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic relations.

With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and Prof Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want to build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the jumping off point for most trips to Gilf Kabir.

"Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a museum to explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how man can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.

Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is on the wall.

====

HTP,
Mahari

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.

| 23885|2007-11-24 14:34:47|Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com|New file uploaded to Ta_Seti |
Hello,

This email message is a notification to let you know that a file has been uploaded to the Files area of the Ta_Seti group.

File : /Asar Imhotep Files/AmonFont.zip

Uploaded by : asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Description : The Amon Hieroglyphic Font set for use with PC. Also includes a PDF with all of the corresponding titles and glyph signs

You can access this file at the URL:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/files/Asar%20Imhotep%20Files/AmonFont.zip

To learn more about file sharing for your group, please visit:

<http://help.yahoo.com/help/us/groups/files>

Regards,

asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

| 23886|2007-11-24 14:45:41|asar_imhotep|Amon Hierglyphic Font Set for your PC|
Peace Phamily

I came across a True-Type Hieroglyphic Font set for the PC as I was on the AnkhOnline.com website. They offer the font set for free, but have them separated. I took the liberty of putting them into a single .zip file for convenience. The zip file also includes a .pdf document that has the list of all of the fonts included in the different true-type font styles. So use it as a reference.

To install the fonts:

1) Unzip the file using your favorite program such as WinZip onto a folder of your liking (Preferably your MyDocuments folder for easy reference).

2) The zip includes ONE pdf document and TWO folders (AmonFont and PoliceFont)with the individual font sets in them. Both folders contain the SAME fonts, they are just called something different on the AnkhOnline.com website.

3) Open the folder of your liking and "Select All" of the fonts within the folder. Copy [Ctrl + C] the selected fonts.

4) Navigate to your Windows Fonts folder [C:/Windows/Fonts](Replace "C" if C is not your main drive), and paste [Ctrl + V] the fonts in the folder.

The next time you open a program, they should show up. If any of you have any problems, please email and let me know. The file is too big for me to email people, so you will have to go to the Folders section of the Ta-Seti Yahoogroups Website and look under "Asar's Documents" to see the zip. Everyone should have gotten an email with the exact link, but here it is again:

http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/files/Asar%20Imhotep%20Files/

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23887|2007-11-24 17:49:52|IMJs@webtv.net|OT - A Friend of the Family is FINALLY Getting His Turn In Space!!!
I felt like sharing this good news...

After years of delays and shuttle setbacks one of my cousin's closest friend's, Leland Melvin is finally going up, he'll be on STS-122 scheduled to launch on Dec. 6th!... He's a mission specialist and it goes w/o saying that he's earned it.

Here's the NASA crew page

http://www.nasa.gov/mission\_pages/shuttle/main/index.html

And here's Leland's NASA Bio

<http://www.jsc.nasa.gov/Bios/htmlbios/melvin.html>

| 23888|2007-11-24 18:48:56|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|
Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in the 1940s. The relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he had met his father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in Kingston, JA.

If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept secret because

I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: cristofori whitakara <boogie\_down\_black@yahoo.com>

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

i find the painting of bob marley fascinating. i read a biography about robery marley that wrote in the book that on his mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book is "catch a Fire" by timothy white

Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote: Notice the little black man. Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A woman photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) A rising tide of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is threatening priceless rock art preserved for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara. In Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and Libya, the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains of Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires a deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only the rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect the art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings to make the faded colours look brighter, causing irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of human figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers. Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the desert. Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers drive through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient." While only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists visiting Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red Sea resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this year we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist Tilman Lenssen-Erz says that in prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands of square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged with symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the rock art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about the significance of the religious power that is collected in this place ... where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks making the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts like the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone unscathed by the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that, contrary to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went via the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting straight through the desert. Last year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant engraving of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance of educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour operator based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the desert and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we went to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the year before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators working out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak. Kuper says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people" but that others -- tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based expats who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control. With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan to agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-boundary cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires the three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So far, only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of hammering out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic relations. With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and Prof Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want to build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the jumping off point for most trips to Gilf Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a museum to explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how man can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda. Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is on the wall. === HTP, Mahari

-----
Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.
Make Yahoo! your homepage.

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! -

<http://mail.aol.com>

| 23889|2007-11-24 21:40:04|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

So if we know for sure that

- > African people have been dealing with Quantum Mechanics and things
- > 4000 years ago, we can assume other aspects of science to be known

by

- > them as well. One of the first questions you have to ask is why didn't

- > they create a nuclear bomb? Because of their commitment to human
- > dignity & flourishing and balance for the physical environment that
- > they didn't take on such endeavors.

Agreed. Many people will think you ethnocentrically biased by that statement but I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes I get really frustrated and angry with black people by their lack of desire to strike back with an appropriate level of viciousness. In reality, I think it is a part of our ancient Afrikaness/our spiritual culture that restrains us. Of course, some will think me biased as well.

- > The day of trying to do everything for the masses is long gone. Our - > ancestors were right about one thing, education is not for the masses.

- > The more I interact with people across the world, the more true

their

- > words are.

I think what has happened is that a highly advanced and moral culture was conquered and almost totally destroyed by barbarians. And subsequently -indirectly, at least, propelled by the tenants of this culture - the whole world is now moving toward the level of morality and humanity that already existed in ancient Afrika, that vanquished civilization (I don't want to suggest that there were not problems to be fixed, of course). Yet, it appears that there were some very important expressions of humanity and goodness in the works. Now it seems that in spite of the chaos the whole world is becoming awakened to their rights to a stake in human dignity and decent treatment.

HTP,

Mahari

| 23890|2007-11-25 09:24:09|asar_imhotep|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

I won't say, and not saying you are saying, that African people were saints, but I have yet to find records of African people interacting with other ethnic groups, phenotypically different, and them having anything negative to say about their interactions with African people.

All of the records I've been able to come across all talk about how hospitable these people were. In Chancellor Williams' Destruction of Black Civilizations, he talks about how in some parts of the continent that they reached a level of civilization so much that wars were fought "symbolically." All they would do is get a gang of drums and chant and yell at each other from across the river. That definitely wasn't the case in all of Africa, but it tells us something about the value of human life. It reminds me of how we in college would just chant and battle each other after a Frat party.

The real difference between the two larger cultures is in the purpose of our respective education systems. Education in the "west" primarily prepares you to enter into the work force. Rarely do individuals come out with a sense of "I can create my own reality." It's about getting a job. The African education system (mysteries) was/is designed to make you a human being.

In Africa, you are not born a man or a woman: you develop into one (after initiation). The focus is on character development and learning how to heal. This is primarily why you don't see the technological "advancements" that could be given the knowledge some have in their respective regions (water vs. fire cultures - Malidoma Some -- Healing Wisdom of Africa).

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

>

> Agreed. Many people will think you ethnocentrically biased by that > statement but I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes I get really > frustrated and angry with black people by their lack of desire to > strike back with an appropriate level of viciousness. In reality, I > think it is a part of our ancient Afrikaness/our spiritual culture > that restrains us. Of course, some will think me biased as well.

>

>
> I think what has happened is that a highly advanced and moral culture > was conquered and almost totally destroyed by barbarians. And > subsequently -indirectly, at least, propelled by the tenants of this > culture - the whole world is now moving toward the level of morality
> and humanity that already existed in ancient Afrika, that vanquished > civilization (I don't want to suggest that there were not problems to > be fixed, of course). Yet, it appears that there were some very > important expressions of humanity and goodness in the works. Now it > seems that in spite of the chaos the whole world is becoming awakened > to their rights to a stake in human dignity and decent treatment.
>

> HTP, > Mahari
>

| 23891|2007-11-25 13:53:22|Peter Clark|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia|
AA's should do their own reproduction. We have the technology, the funds, and the skills. Do your reproduction and let them challenge you on what YOUR ANCESSTORS looked like.

----- Original Message -----

From: "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)"

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 5:26:10 PM

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia

A recent reconstruction of his face shows a striking looking young man with almond eyes, an aquiline nose,

full lips and shaved head. He had the pronounced overbite typical of his royal family line,
and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned. .

The key word here is illusion, I guess

G

---

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com [mailto: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com ] On Behalf Of Paul Kekai
Manansala

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 5:32 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia

"Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

1. King Tutankhamun is given an instant, fake, aquiline nose-Illusion;

>>

Hi Gloria, even the Frenchman-like reconstruction doesn't have what I think looks like an "aquiline nose." It's quite depressed at the root as also with the Discovery Channel reconstruction.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23892|2007-11-25 13:58:59|Peter Clark|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

I don't blame the white academic world for stealing King Tut. We set on the side lines and complain about the them not doing right. Hell they didn't back in the 70's until we took action. Today Balcks, Africans, and Black African-Americans have the skill, technology, funds, resources, and everything they need to make their own reproduction of King Tut and any of the other figures of old. What will we standby and let them produce a Tiny Tim Malcolm X ???? Do what we have to do and then let the devils challenge us while we ignore them.
Hotep

----- Original Message -----

From: "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)"

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 2:11:59 PM

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

Here is a joke. An Australian newspaper talked about 'the blackened face'

Of King Tutankhamun. How low would these folks go?

GE

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com] On Behalf Of Mahari Mengistu

Sent: Monday, November 05, 2007 11:29 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

>>They can't see it anyway. The ability to

mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in the Western world.<<

Point of reference observe all of the current fantasy movies and tv shows displaying white superhumans doing such fantastical things. When you consider the endless overwhelming lies spewed about over the years and currently it's kind of amusing --- in a creepy evil kind of way.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

> >

> >

> > This is a purely stolen legacy, I don't see much resemblance
> between the mummy and the reconstruction- yet many people still > believe in this nonsense. What make westerners/arabs want to steal > other peoples civilisations?

>

> All of the previous hype and press surrounding the showing of the > fake reconstruction provides them with a comfortable reference to go

> back to now that the true Africoid face of King Tut is being > revealed. They find comfort and vindication from being shown
exactly

> what they want to see. And with the strong arm of Eurocentric > scholarship on their side, why should they worry about being > confronted with the truth? They can't see it anyway. The ability
to

> mix fantasy with reality is a very active and potent tradition in
the > Western world.

>

> Fred

>

>

> >

> > To: Ta_Seti@: pmanansala@: Sun, 4 Nov 2007 22:29:59

> +0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Face-to-face with Tutankhamun

> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > French version vs. the real thing.
> >
> > Face-to-face with Tutankhamun
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > In pictures: Face unveiled The BBC's Ian Pannell was among a small > group of guests and journalists invited to watch Egypt's chief > archaeologist, Dr Zahi Hawass, reveal King Tutankhamun's face to the > public for the first time.
> > We were taken deep underground into a small chamber with a low roof
> and hieroglyphics painted onto an ochre-coloured wall on one side.
> > A group of workmen slowly opened the golden coffin and raised the
> mummy onto a wooden stretcher.
> > Until today, only about 50 living people had seen Tutankhamun's > body. Suddenly there we were, face-to-face with the blackened, > shrivelled body of the boy king.
> > It was a rare and incredible moment.
> >
> > See how Tutankhamun looked then and now
> > Dr Hawass is something of a media performer. He moved the mummy > into its new Perspex cabinet and turned to the cameras, saying: "The > only good part of the mummy that the public will be able to see is
> the face and the legs.
> > "But the most important thing is that from today the mummy will be > completely saved from moisture, from humidity, from anything, and we > can say that the mummy is going to be safe."
> > The mummy is in danger of being damaged by the heat and humidity
> from the thousands of tourists who visit his tomb in Egypt's Valley > of the Kings.

[illegible]

>> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live

> Hotmail

> > <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

 $\gg$  $\succ$

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23893|2007-11-25 14:42:08|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Clark wrote:

$$>$$

What will we standby and let them produce a Tiny Tim Malcolm X ????

$$>$$

Here's the first stage of the transformation :

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23894|2007-11-25 16:52:59|matt mercer|Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia|

Attachments :

Funny how old Tut's visage is,
like an "American" idol of the ages,
a golden calf from way back when,
when sheep were wolves and gods were men.....

Krishna looks a lot like Tut and maybe its just tabloid smut, but mighty are the ways of humanity to purge the past of any sanity..... maybe India's' sister song is an African ally deep and strong for mind and body heart and spirit there is no sacrifice between us.....

To Meta Ophion until the even
and the birth of many intelligent individuals on earth.....

Matt Mercer
Jah

Peter Clark wrote:

AA's should do their own reproduction. We have the technology, the funds, and the skills. Do your reproduction and let them challenge you on what YOUR ANCESSTORS looked like.

----- Original Message -----

From: "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)"

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 5:26:10 PM

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia

?A recent reconstruction of his face shows a striking looking young man with almond eyes, an aquiline nose, full lips and shaved head. He had the pronounced overbite typical of his royal family line, and his lower teeth were slightly misaligned. ???

The key word here is illusion, I guess

G

---

From: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com [mailto: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com ] On Behalf Of Paul Kekai Manansala

Sent: Monday, November 19, 2007 5:32 PM

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Face-to-face with Tutankhamun- australia

"Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

1. King Tutankhamun is given an instant, fake, aquiline nose-Illusion;

>>

Hi Gloria, even the Frenchman-like reconstruction doesn't have what I think looks like an "aquiline nose." It's quite depressed at the root as also with the Discovery Channel reconstruction.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

>>the work force.<<

Correction, if you don't mind: "economic war force/warfare".

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

>

> I won't say, and not saying you are saying, that African people were > saints, but I have yet to find records of African people interacting > with other ethnic groups, phenotypically different, and them having > anything negative to say about their interactions with African people.

>

> All of the records I've been able to come across all talk about how > hospitable these people were. In Chancellor Williams' Destruction of > Black Civilizations, he talks about how in some parts of the continent

> that they reached a level of civilization so much that wars were > fought "symbolically." All they would do is get a gang of drums and > chant and yell at each other from across the river. That definitely > wasn't the case in all of Africa, but it tells us something about

the > value of human life. It reminds me of how we in college would just > chant and battle each other after a Frat party.

>

> The real difference between the two larger cultures is in the purpose > of our respective education systems. Education in the "west" primarily > prepares you to enter into the work force. Rarely do individuals

come > out with a sense of "I can create my own reality." It's about getting > a job. The African education system (mysteries) was/is designed to > make you a human being.

>
> In Africa, you are not born a man or a woman: you develop into one > (after initiation). The focus is on character development and learning

> how to heal. This is primarily why you don't see the technological > "advancements" that could be given the knowledge some have in their > respective regions (water vs. fire cultures - Malidoma Some -- > Wisdom of Africa).

Healing

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>>

>

>>

>> Agreed. Many people will think you ethnocentrically biased by

that >> statement but I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes I get really >> frustrated and angry with black people by their lack of desire to >> strike back with an appropriate level of viciousness. In reality, >> think it is a part of our ancient Afrikanness/our spiritual culture

I

>> that restrains us. Of course, some will think me biased as well.

>>

>

>>

>> I think what has happened is that a highly advanced and moral culture

>> was conquered and almost totally destroyed by barbarians. And >> subsequently -indirectly, at least, propelled by the tenants of >> culture - the whole world is now moving toward the level of morality

this

> > and humanity that already existed in ancient Afrika, that vanquished

> > civilization (I don't want to suggest that there were not problems to > > be fixed, of course). Yet, it appears that there were some very > > important expressions of humanity and goodness in the works. Now

it > > seems that in spite of the chaos the whole world is becoming awakened

> > to their rights to a stake in human dignity and decent treatment.

> >

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

>

| 23896|2007-11-25 18:22:46|matt mercer|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

I feel the statement that trying to intelligently engage the "masses" is futile is shortsighted.

Education is a vast constellation of pools at this stage, and it will take a collective of inter-cultural self-determined educators to help re-orient the curriculum vitae of the earth as a whole.

The traditions of Egypt that acknowledged this truth, that out of the conflicts of war and over inflated industry many people suffer without choice, have been passed on to many ethnic groups and cultures, the means to competently and respectfully acknowledge the diverse forms of individual growth that arise out of these tribulations.

I think it is like naming the student body at large Mekhenty-er-Irtey, Heru, or they who have no eyes or the ability to see because of their wounds. Denying them the right of time to heal for whatever reason is a disgrace to all the teachings of Egypt and their cousins, Khmt, Ta-Mhry, regardless of how juvenile their "Greco-roman" behavior may seem. When you transpose the word Thanatos phonetically into hieroglyphs, it becomes in sequence the symbols of, the eye, two lines of water, the upright horn, and a cleaning rag, or what is commonly assumed to be the study of sex and death as poles to human growth and development, is better translated as, "each person's perception of the turbulence of his/her mind and body is the thorn in the lion's paw that they must pull out", I'm referring to the old "Aesop's fable" with the mouse helping the lion. Now, whether any individual is the mouse or the lion, saying able to ask for help or humble enough to offer and accept help, or learning, is the question at hand.

In this age of unparalleled excess and re-evaluation of the use of resources, the human aspect of the sustainability issue remains clear, as in "waste not want not", "no child left behind", or "it doesn't matter where you're from, any one can cook" or "age is just a number", wasting human potential because of some catchy arithmetically feasible phrasing or sentimental emotionally charged idea is "so last year". The chaos we have to learn to deal with of tolerating each other is nothing compared to the destruction in store in store if we don't. Of all the ages of slavery and inhumanity that have washed upon the shores until now in every nation on the planet, the earth itself is staring us all in the face saying, "you punk as biatches wasted 10000 years fighting amongst yourselves and now you have nothing left but the truth that was the even speaking to you then, as gently as it could, so the songs go." So , I say, "Speak low when you speak love....." The future is ours to create. Let's talk about it as much as we can.

Much respect.

may Sekhmet and Bast guide you home in these days.....

take a bath.....

Matt Mercer,

Jah

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

So if we know for sure that

- > African people have been dealing with Quantum Mechanics and things
- > 4000 years ago, we can assume other aspects of science to be known by
- > them as well. One of the first questions you have to ask is why didn't
- > they create a nuclear bomb? Because of their commitment to human
- > dignity & flourishing and balance for the physical environment that
- > they didn't take on such endeavors.

Agreed. Many people will think you ethnocentrically biased by that statement but I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes I get really frustrated and angry with black people by their lack of desire to strike back with an appropriate level of viciousness. In reality, I think it is a part of our ancient Afrikanness/ our spiritual culture that restrains us. Of course, some will think me biased as well.

- > The day of trying to do everything for the masses is long gone. Our
- > ancestors were right about one thing, education is not for the masses.
- > The more I interact with people across the world, the more true their
- > words are.

I think what has happened is that a highly advanced and moral culture was conquered and almost totally destroyed by barbarians. And subsequently -indirectly, at least, propelled by the tenants of this culture - the whole world is now moving toward the level of morality and humanity that already existed in ancient Afrika, that vanquished civilization (I don't want to suggest that there were not problems to be fixed, of course). Yet, it appears that there were some very important expressions of humanity and goodness in the works. Now it seems that in spite of the chaos the whole world is becoming awakened to their rights to a stake in human dignity and decent treatment.

HTP,
Mahari

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.
| 23897|2007-11-25 18:39:07|kungfuhustle|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|
The more I learn, the more I'm convinced the earth would be using 100,000s of years rather than 10,000.

Are there any west africans on the board who can share what the west African women in this articles means when she says, "We eat monkey meat for our soul."?

<http://www.cnn.com/2007/US/law/11/25/monkey.meat.ap/index.html>

meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: matt mercer <maatiuja@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Date: Sun, 25 Nov 2007 18:22:44 -0800 (PST)

I feel the statement that trying to intelligently engage the "masses" is futile is shortsighted. Education is a vast constellation of pools at this stage, and it will take a collective of inter-cultural self-determined educators to help re-orient the curriculum vitae of the earth as a whole. The traditions of Egypt that acknowledged this truth, that out of the conflicts of war and over inflated industry many people suffer without choice, have been passed on to many ethnic groups and cultures, the means to competently and respectfully acknowledge the diverse forms of individual growth that arise out theses tribulations.

I think it is like naming the student body at large Mekhenty-er-Irtey, Heru, or they who have no eyes or the ability to see because of their wounds. denying them the right of time to heal for what ever reason is a disgrace to all the teachings of Egypt and their cousins, Khmt, Ta-Mhry, regardless of how juvenile their "Greco-roman" behavior may seem. When you transpose the word Thanatos phonetically into hieroglyphs, it becomes in sequence the symbols of, the eye, two lines of water, the upright horn, and a cleaning rag, or what is commonly assumed to be the study of sex and death as poles to human growth and development, is better translated as, " each person's perception of the turbulence of his/her mind and body is the thorn in the lion's paw that they must pull out", I'm referring to the old 'Aesop's fable' with the mouse helping the lion. Now, whether any individual is the mouse or the lion, saying able to ask for help or humble enough to offer and accept help, or learning, is the question at hand.

In this age of unparalleled excess and re-evaluation of the use of resources, the human aspect of the sustainability issue remains clear, as in "waste not want not", "no child left behind", or "it doesn't matter where you're from, any one can cook" or " age is just a number", wasting human potential because of some catchy arithmetically feasible phrasing or sentimental emotionally charged idea is "so last year". The chaos we have to learn to deal with of tolerating each other is nothing compared to the destruction in store if we don't. Of all the ages of slavery and inhumanity that have washed upon the shores until now in every nation on the planet, the earth itself is staring us all in the face saying, "you punk as biatches wasted 10000 years fighting amongst yourselves and now you have nothing left but the truth that was the even speaking to you then, as gently as it could, so the songs go." So , I say, "Speak low when you speak love....." The future is ours to create. Let's talk about it as much as we can.

Much respect.

may Sekhmet and Bast guide you home in these days.....

take a bath.....

Matt Mercer,

Jah

Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

So if we know for sure that

> African people have been dealing with Quantum Mechanics and

things

> 4000 years ago, we can assume other aspects of science to be known

by > them as well. One of the first questions you have to ask is why

didn't > they create a nuclear bomb? Because of their commitment to human > dignity & flourishing and balance for the physical environment

that

> they didn't take on such endeavors.

Agreed. Many people will think you ethnocentrically biased by that statement but I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes I get really frustrated and angry with black people by their lack of desire to strike back with an appropriate level of viciousness. In reality, I think it is a part of our ancient Afrikanness/our spiritual culture

that restrains us. Of course, some will think me biased as well.

> The day of trying to do everything for the masses is long gone. Our > ancestors were right about one thing, education is not for

the masses.

> The more I interact with people across the world, the more true

their > words are.

I think what has happened is that a highly advanced and moral culture was conquered and almost totally destroyed by barbarians. And subsequently -indirectly, at least, propelled by the tenants of this culture - the whole world is now moving toward the level of morality

and humanity that already existed in ancient Afrika, that vanquished civilization (I don't want to suggest that there were not problems to be fixed, of course). Yet, it appears that there were some very important expressions of humanity and goodness in the works. Now
it seems that in spite of the chaos the whole world is becoming awakened
to their rights to a stake in human dignity and decent treatment.

HTP,
Mahari

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

| 23898|2007-11-25 18:56:02|asar_imhotep|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

I don't really understand what you're trying to say, but I will make my point brief and hopefully more clear. As mentioned before, in indigenous African societies everyone within their borders were to be "educated." It was the duty of each person to be educated.

However, the teachers realized that everyone does not have the same desires or interest in learning. Everyone comes into consciousness at different stages in life - even if you've had the same standard education. Their job is not to make sure that everyone "gets it" on the same level, but to have an institution in place to take them to the next level for when they are ready. The early stages are simply the introduction.

No two people are the same and this is the why American educational models, for the most part, fail to "educate" the masses. We are human beings, with different approaches to learning, different learning speeds, different gifts and desires in life. The cookie cutter curriculum is hindering the growth of our young people.

Education is supposed to serve two purposes: 1) to help you understand who you are and what gifts you possess and 2) to prepare you for leadership. Not everyone is cut out to be a leader and that's why "education" is NOT for the masses. Your character determines how much "education" you receive. The opportunity (in traditional societies) was/is open to anyone who so desires to learn.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23899|2007-11-25 19:31:28|matt mercer|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

By 10000 years I was referring to Ishango Bone, the primate scapula inscribed with a cryptic message about counting the moon cycles and one of the seeds of African thought we are all so fond of studying. Now of course the individuals that were busy teaching in those eras long past were conscious of the innumerable cycles of growth that were beyond just human livelihood and part of life cycles of sentient life forms of a eons just rising to the surface of consciousness, so teaching women about keeping track of their menstrual cycles and men about basic cultivation seems a logical and reasonable first step, and each other about what grows in between. Though I can't imagine how it must have been to be among those first primordial teachers to have to struggle against the superstition of "the masses" in their desperate struggles to claim authority over their small lives on earth without having to discuss it openly on the mutual field of learning that was still being named. So yes, while the Queens of this earth deserve clean water and a safe space to grow, I certainly hope that all of their far flung sons are learning how to "protect their medicine" or rather respecting all the life that grows from the many wombs of this great house we all live in and share. And , if we are what we eat, than eating monkey meat is not really a sustainable form of nurturing, as poignant as that sentiment may be. Cuz' your soul only grows and flourishes when you decide to provide with the right conditions for the "mustard seed" that is you and accept that what ever environment you are in might require some collective ingenuity to create a hospitable space, just like Khmt. Or maybe we should all move to the rain forest so we can collectively spit out the atrocities of the elephantiasis of the Ptah that we face in the modern world like Qeb, and risk losing our head. Or maybe we can all just grow up and stop pretending that our tribal stories are the law that entitles us to any future besides that which we all have the opportunity to create. Collectivism versus individualism.....and I mean this whole heartedly, that as a Gay man in this age of all others, any "white brotherhood" that is trying to convince the populus that they don't have a right to learn because they don't serve the right purpose, is the ball of poop Khepri is pushing.

much love

Matt Mercer

Jah

kungfuhustle wrote:

The more I learn, the more I'm convinced the earth would be using 100,000s of years rather than 10,000.

Are there any west africans on the board who can share what the west African women in this articles means when she says, "We eat monkey meat for our soul."?

<http://www.cnn.com/2007/US/law/11/25/monkey.meat.ap/index.html>

meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: matt mercer <maatiuja@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Date: Sun, 25 Nov 2007 18:22:44 -0800 (PST)

I feel the statement that trying to intelligently engage the "masses" is futile is shortsighted. Education is a vast constellation of pools at this stage, and it will take a collective of inter-cultural self-determined educators to help re-orient the curriculum vitae of the earth as a whole. The traditions of Egypt that acknowledged this truth, that out of the conflicts of war and over inflated industry many people suffer without choice, have been passed on to many ethnic groups and cultures, the means to competently and respectfully acknowledge the diverse forms of individual growth that arise out these tribulations.

I think it is like naming the student body at large Mekhenty-er- Irtey, Heru, or they who have no eyes or the ability to see because of their wounds. denying them the right of time to heal for what ever reason is a disgrace to all the teachings of Egypt and their cousins, Khmt, Ta-Mhry, regardless of how juvenile their "Greco-roman" behavior may seem. When you transpose the word Thanatos phonetically into hieroglyphs, it becomes in sequence the symbols of, the eye, two lines of water, the upright horn, and a cleaning rag, or what is commonly assumed to be the study of sex and death as poles to human growth and development, is better translated as, "each person's perception of the turbulence of his/her mind and body is the thorn in the lion's paw that they must pull out", I'm referring to the old "Aesop's fable" with the mouse helping the lion. Now, whether any individual is the mouse or the lion, saying able to ask for help or humble enough to offer and accept help, or learning, is the question at hand.

In this age age of unparalleled excess and re-evaluation of the use of resources, the human aspect of the sustainability issue remains clear, as in "waste not want not", "no child left behind", or "it doesn't matter where you're from, any one can cook" or "age is just a number", wasting human potential because of some catchy arithmetically feasible phrasing or sentimental emotionally charged idea is "so last year". The chaos we have to learn to deal with of tolerating each other is nothing compared to the destruction in store in store if we don't. Of all the ages of slavery and inhumanity that have washed upon the shores until now in every nation on the planet, the earth itself is staring us all in the face saying, "you punk as biatches wasted 10000 years fighting amongst yourselves and now you have nothing left but the truth that was the even speaking to you then, as gently as it could, so the songs go." So , I say, "Speak low when you speak love..... .." The future is ours to create. Let's talk about it as much as we can.

Much respect.

may Sekhmet and Bast guide you home in these days..... ..

take a bath..... ..

Matt Mercer,

Jah

Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

So if we know for sure that

> African people have been dealing with Quantum Mechanics and things

> 4000 years ago, we can assume other aspects of science to be known

by > them as well. One of the first questions you have to ask is why

didn't

> they create a nuclear bomb? Because of their commitment to human > dignity & flourishing and balance for the physical environment that

> they didn't take on such endeavors.

Agreed. Many people will think you ethnocentrically biased by that statement but I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes I get really frustrated and angry with black people by their lack of desire to strike back with an appropriate level of viciousness. In reality, I think it is a part of our ancient Afrikanness/ our spiritual culture

that restrains us. Of course, some will think me biased as well.

> The day of trying to do everything for the masses is long gone. Our > ancestors were right about one thing, education is not for the masses.
> The more I interact with people across the world, the more true their words are.

I think what has happened is that a highly advanced and moral culture was conquered and almost totally destroyed by barbarians. And subsequently -indirectly, at least, propelled by the tenants of this culture - the whole world is now moving toward the level of morality and humanity that already existed in ancient Afrika, that vanquished civilization (I don't want to suggest that there were not problems to be fixed, of course). Yet, it appears that there were some very important expressions of humanity and goodness in the works. Now it seems that in spite of the chaos the whole world is becoming awakened to their rights to a stake in human dignity and decent treatment.

HTP,
Mahari

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.
| 23900|2007-11-25 20:03:49|kungfuhustle|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|
I find this opinion very amusing, but at the same time, I understand what you are saying, as well as where it is coming from.
You are right, not everyone are meant to be leaders, and not matter how much education they obtain, there's is no guarantee how effective a leader they'll be.

Same can be said for a teacher, musician, or manager. I believe people inherit specific capabilities.

I actually believe that a person should understand who they are BEFORE they enter education. Education is not supposed to provide a personal revelation, but rather help you gain the tools you will require to pursue your passion(s).

The passion is what will determine how well you are at your craft. Making a career choice based on money or position is definitely a bad move. Many kids right out of high school haven't yet figured this out, or exactly what it is they are gifted with.

Everyone should be educated. I believe your reaction is being made more based on the present reality that dominates today's perception reality rather than what reality should be.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 02:56:00 -0000

Mailer: Yahoo Groups Message Poster

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

I don't really understand what you're trying to say, but I will make my point brief and hopefully more clear. As mentioned before, in indigenous African societies everyone within their borders were to be "educated." It was the duty of each person to be educated.

However, the teachers realized that everyone does not have the same desires or interest in learning. Everyone comes into consciousness at different stages in life - even if you've had the same standard education. Their job is not to make sure that everyone "gets it" on the same level, but to have an institution in place to take them to the next level for when they are ready. The early stages are simply the introduction.

No two people are the same and this is the why American educational models, for the most part, fail to "educate" the masses. We are human beings, with different approaches to learning, different learning speeds, different gifts and desires in life. The cookie cutter curriculum is hindering the growth of our young people.

Education is supposed to serve two purposes: 1) to help you understand who you are and what gifts you possess and 2) to prepare you for leadership. Not everyone is cut out to be a leader and that's why "education" is NOT for the masses. Your character determines how much "education" you receive. The opportunity (in traditional societies) was/is open to anyone who so desires to learn.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23901|2007-11-25 20:18:31|matt mercer|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

That is exactly what I was trying to relate to you all, and though I agree with the ideals you set forth, I am also trying to remind you that many forms of disaster intercede with the natural growth of humanity, Africa was never the paradise of Eden on its own. Language, I believe was and is the only panacea to remedy the conflicts that we face as a species. The vast root networks of symbolic healing information had to be preserved in forms that are barely recognizable now because of our own collective conflicts and the warfare and strife that arose out of those eras of disagreement without sitting on the banks of the river drumming out our conflicts like a bunch of street rats from New York break dancing to Run D.M.C. still pursue us on the hunt for well being.

The reflections of Saau, intelligences or sentient lives expressing their Sahu, race or dependent origination, is many in many times. Like the quantum physics you discuss as being part of Africa's tradition, it is part of all sentient life that has grown in all times. How can you measure without clear expression, and who has the authority to speak of these truths if they can't even listen because blue is red in their culture. What mother or father can tell their child they don't have the right to heal their own wounds, and what or where is the teacher they seek, if not all the life on earth that has healed and is healing and learning to express this in more than just words but forms of communication. Like the many young people I have met in the US that have come out of this last generation of pharmaceutical intervention, being mandatorily medicated because they can't pay attention in class, and this is not a racially specific issue, all students suffer this. These students wander or forge their way or not into the world like Atum, the self-begotten, and have to become Shesmu, content to let that star of their past and future growth ripen as it will. I feel they deserve open recognition and support regardless if they have Nubian ancestry like Bob Marley, but as individuals which is what I thought most of you were trying to say. Maybe I seem like just another carbon copy Xerxes in my quest for educational truth, but I don't have any chains to those Hollywood beliefs, I am just a devoted student from central Pennsylvania who had the privilege and position to overcome the same obstacles. Of all the eras and all the dynasties that represent the intellectual accomplishments of "Egypt" for Africa and the world, how is it that the words shown as complex pictographs in the remnants we all have left are not as simple to understand as the Masai bouncing up and down in their ritual dance kissing the sky with their smiles and laughing in joy like Jimi Hendrix so drunkenly sang. I am on the earth and I am growing, and I am not alone.

Matt

Jah, which means awake in the ancient tongues.

asar_imhotep wrote:

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

I don't really understand what you're trying to say, but I will make my point brief and hopefully more clear. As mentioned before, in indigenous African societies everyone within their borders were to be "educated." It was the duty of each person to be educated.

However, the teachers realized that everyone does not have the same desires or interest in learning. Everyone comes into consciousness at different stages in life - even if you've had the same standard education. Their job is not to make sure that everyone "gets it" on the same level, but to have an institution in place to take them to the next level for when they are ready. The early stages are simply the introduction.

No two people are the same and this is the why American educational models, for the most part, fail to "educate" the masses. We are human beings, with different approaches to learning, different learning speeds, different gifts and desires in life. The cookie cutter curriculum is hindering the growth of our young people.

Education is supposed to serve two purposes: 1) to help you understand who you are and what gifts you possess and 2) to prepare you for leadership. Not everyone is cut out to be a leader and that's why "education" is NOT for the masses. Your character determines how much "education" you receive. The opportunity (in traditional societies) was/is open to anyone who so desires to learn.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

| 23902|2007-11-25 22:08:10|Paul Kekai Manansala|Why a Nile tadpole means a great deal|

Why a Nile tadpole means a great deal

Ancient Egypt's awkward numerical system was based largely on the natural world

Image :1 of 2

George Hart

Recording numbers and quantities was one of the first requirements of the bureaucracy as soon as hieroglyphs had been invented. Items to be accounted for varied from enemies slain in battle and prisoners to how many jars of beer or bunches of onions were needed to accompany the Pharaoh into the afterlife. Inventories of equipment used in temples were kept meticulously and any damage noted down.

The system of writing numbers was logical but cumbersome and took up a lot of space. A vertical or horizontal stroke indicated numbers 1 to 9, a hobble for cattle 10 to 90, a coil of rope 100 to 900 and a lotus 1,000 to 9,000. For higher numerals 10,000 was represented by a finger raised for counting and 100,000 by a tadpole ? of which myriads would emerge in the pools left by the Nile's annual flood. The concept of a million was confined to royal propaganda to convey the sense of the infinite number of years for which the Pharaoh and his monuments would exist. The notation took the form of a god with his arms raised to support the sky.

If the above numbers were written under or beside the "mouth" sign, meaning a "part", then that indicated fractions. However, in measuring bushels of wheat, often used for payment in Egypt which had no coinage, a specialist system of indicating numerals was used. This took the sign of the human eye with the markings of a falcon's cheek below it ? known as the eye of Horus, above ? and broke it into separate parts so that the eyebrow, for instance, equalled one eighth and the pupil one quarter. The fractions then added up to 63/64, so the missing 1/64 was supplied magically by the god Thoth who was responsible for mathematical accuracy. Length was measured by the distance between the elbow and finger-tip which we call a cubit and was roughly 20in.

Accurate dating was essential for royal documents and for determining days in temples when specific rituals were performed. In general, though, most people were content to be guided by the three seasons: the Nile flood, the winter sowing of crops and the summer harvest.

Background

- Egypt unlocked
- Decoding the pharaohs

- Dead cats and absent camels
- Why a Nile tadpole means a great deal
- Don't trust wives or laugh at cats

Related Links

- Deciphering hieroglyphs

It was important to be aware of lucky and unlucky days in the calendar. It was best to stay indoors when it was the birthday of the violent god Seth. If you had the bad luck to be born on that day, then, in modern jargon you would have difficulty getting life insurance.

George Hart is an Egyptologist, formerly of the British Museum

http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/specials/tutankhamun/article2915354.ece

| 23903|2007-11-26 03:07:03|zetter_74|Egypt:Black land or Black People?|
Black land or Black people?

One argument against a black Egypt contrived by euro centrists is the Meaning of the word Kemet. I have read somewhere that `Kemet' refers to the `black land' because Herodotus said it and geography (fertile dark land due to the Nile) as opposed to 'black people'.

I believe that once we are clear about what Ancient Egyptians called themselves, the case can be 100% closed, as other arguments against a black Kemet would obviously seem superfluous for one cannot argue against a name ancient Egyptians gave themselves.

I'm not an expert in the ancient Egyptian language and being a novice in these matters, would appreciate some clarification on the following issues.

1. Can the word `Kemet' posses a dual meaning e.g black land and 'black people', hence the confusion between land and people? Is there a `people' in the word 'Kemet'?

2. What are the opinions of modern Egyptologists on the meaning of the word `Kemet' ? Is there any consensus now that the word means `black people'?

3.Has there been any modern `convincing' etymological evidence provided by anyone to disprove that `Kemet' does not mean black people? If yes, any convincing Rebuttal around?

I would appreciate your enlightenment on this issue.

Thanks.

| 23904|2007-11-26 06:06:44|Peter Gray|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?|

This debate has raised its head again.

Peter (?), you are quite correct that once it is definitively known what meaning the Ancients themselves had in mind for the word, "land", then the case would seem to be closed. However, some authors like Barbara Mertz (and that Euro school of thought) insist the double triangle sign (ateb ateb) and/or the niwt determinative refer to the black fertile soil of the banks of the Nile and not to the concept of land as "nation" (e.g., the land of The Mohicans). And in spite of Diop's best efforts at the UNESCO conference on The Peopling of Ancient Egypt and the Deciphering of the Meroitic Script, the Euro notion is what you will see in textbooks or such general publications. Hence the ongoing need to reiterate the use of determinatives in Ancient Egyptian.

Peter Gray

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: prweza@hotmail.co.uk
Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 11:06:59 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt:Black land or Black People?

Black land or Black people?

One argument against a black Egypt contrived by euro centrists is the Meaning of the word Kemet. I have read somewhere that `Kemet' refers to the `black land' because Herodotus said it and geography (fertile dark land due to the Nile) as opposed to 'black people'.

I believe that once we are clear about what Ancient Egyptians called themselves, the case can be 100% closed, as other arguments against a black Kemet would obviously seem superfluous for one cannot argue against a name ancient Egyptians gave themselves.

I'm not an expert in the ancient Egyptian language and being a novice in these matters, would appreciate some clarification on the following issues.

1. Can the word `Kemet' possess a dual meaning e.g black land and 'black people', hence the confusion between land and people? Is there a `people' in the word 'Kemet'?

2. What are the opinions of modern Egyptologists on the meaning of the word `Kemet' ? Is there any consensus now that the word means `black people'?

3. Has there been any modern `convincing' etymological evidence provided by anyone to disprove that `Kemet' does not mean black people? If yes, any convincing Rebuttal around?

I would appreciate your enlightenment on this issue.

Thanks.

---

Connect and share in new ways with Windows Live. Connect now!

| 23905|2007-11-26 07:22:50|clyde winters|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?|

Hi

This term has been expertly discussed by Ferg. Please ask him for a copy of his informative paper at the following:

egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk

Clyde

--- zetter_74 <prweza@hotmail.co.uk> wrote:

- > Black land or Black people?
- >
- > One argument against a black Egypt contrived by euro
- > centrists is
- > the Meaning of the word Kemet. I have read somewhere
- > that `Kemet'
- > refers to the `black land' because Herodotus said it
- > and geography
- > (fertile dark land due to the Nile) as opposed to
- > 'black people'.
- >
- > I believe that once we are clear about what Ancient
- > Egyptians
- > called themselves, the case can be 100% closed, as > other arguments > against a black Kemet would obviously seem > superfluous for one > cannot argue against a name ancient Egyptians gave > themselves.

>
> I'm not an expert in the ancient Egyptian language > and being a > novice in these matters, would appreciate some > clarification on the > following issues.
>
>
> 1. Can the word 'Kemet' possess a dual meaning e.g > black land > and 'black people', hence the confusion between land > and people? Is > there a 'people' in the word 'Kemet'?
>
> 2. What are the opinions of modern Egyptologists on > the meaning of > the word 'Kemet'? Is there any consensus now that > the word > means 'black people'?
>
> 3. Has there been any modern 'convincing' > etymological evidence > provided by anyone to disprove that 'Kemet' does not > mean black > people? If yes, any convincing Rebuttal around?
>
> I would appreciate your enlightenment on this issue.
>
> Thanks.
>
>
>

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23906|2007-11-26 08:50:24|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?|

There's no, definitively, dual meaning for Kemet as Black land or Black people. The word is hieroglyphically represented by what is termed burnt wood followed by the glyph for T, followed by the sign, a circle with crosses. The burnt wood, kem, means black - this can be found in Gardiner's Egyptian Grammar, the T is the feminine, so we know the country was imaged as mother, the final sign means settlement, city, town, village but is not interpreted as country which is Ta in Kemet language.

This has been thoroughly dealt with by Cheikh Anta Diop in Civilization or Barbarism and also by Theophile Obenga.

There is no people sign, so I would omit Black people as an interpretation. The reason whites have associated the interpretation as land is probably due to the assignation of certain colours to specific attributes. Many of the divinities refer to themselves as red, green and black. Wsir (Osiris) is regularly referred to as green. We couldn't infer a green people. But we do know that he is the god of fertility and thus it can be interpreted as such.

The debate goes on.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: zetter_74 <prweza@hotmail.co.uk>

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 3:06 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt:Black land or Black People?

Black land or Black people?

One argument against a black Egypt contrived by euro centrists is the Meaning of the word Kemet. I have read somewhere that `Kemet' refers to the `black land' because Herodotus said it and geography (fertile dark land due to the Nile) as opposed to 'black people'.

I believe that once we are clear about what Ancient Egyptians called themselves, the case can be 100% closed, as other arguments against a black Kemet would obviously seem superfluous for one cannot argue against a name ancient Egyptians gave themselves.

I'm not an expert in the ancient Egyptian language and being a novice in these matters, would appreciate some clarification on the following issues.

1. Can the word `Kemet' possess a dual meaning e.g black land and 'black people', hence the confusion between land and people? Is there a `people' in the word 'Kemet'?

2. What are the opinions of modern Egyptologists on the meaning of the word `Kemet' ? Is there any consensus now that the word means `black people'?

3.Has there been any modern `convincing' etymological evidence provided by anyone to disprove that `Kemet' does not mean black people? If yes, any convincing Rebuttal around?

I would appreciate your enlightenment on this issue.

Thanks.

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! -

<http://mail.aol.com>

| 23907|2007-11-26 09:01:23|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post. He said that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people discuss unless it is specifically brought up.

I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said you've experienced.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@... wrote:

>

> Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in the

> 1940s. The > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he had > met his > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in Kingston,

> JA.

> If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept > secret because

> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.

>

> Intef Djehutymes

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: cristofori whitakara

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

- > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings to
- > make the faded colours look brighter, causing
- > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just
- > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of human
- > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.
- > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant
- > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the desert.
- > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers drive
- > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the
- > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient." While
- > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising
- > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists visiting
- > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red Sea
- > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this year
- > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist Tilman
- > Lenssen-Erz says that in
- > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands of
- > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged with
- > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the rock
- > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European
- > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about the
- > significance of the religious power that is collected in this place ...
- > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks making
- > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts like
- > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as
- > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone unscathed by
- > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that, contrary
- > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went via
- > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting > straight through the desert. Last > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant engraving

> of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance of > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour operator > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the desert > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we went > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the year > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators working > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.
Kuper
> says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people" but
> that others -- > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based expats > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.
> With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan to > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-boundary > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires the > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So far, > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of hammering > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic relations.
> With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and Prof > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want to > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the

Mail! -

> <http://mail.aol.com>

>

| 23908|2007-11-26 10:19:16|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?|

'I have read somewhere that `Kemet'

refers to the `black land' because Herodotus said it .....

Herodotus on three occasions refers to the Egyptians as Black people.

Perhaps he also talks about Egypt as black fertile land as well, but, the three references are to ethnic identity. References to black fertile land are to geography/soil science/ agriculture etc.

The ancient Egyptians could be Black people living on land that was not black, or, Black people on land that was so, that is, fertile land.

Come to think of it those eurocentrics who make reference to the 'black fertile land' thesis conveniently omit the 3 references of Herodotus to the Egyptians as Black people. In the process they cunningly divert the conversation away from what Herodotus said about their identity. Another diversionary ploy?

GE

www.africahistoryonline.com

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of KarnakHouse@aol.com

Sent: Monday, November 26, 2007 8:23 AM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt:Black land or Black People?

There's no, definitively, dual meaning for Kemet as Black land or Black people. The word is hieroglyphically represented by what is termed burnt wood followed by the glyph for T, followed by the sign, a circle with crosses. The burnt wood, kem, means black - this can be found in Gardiner's Egyptian Grammar, the T is the feminine, so we know the country was imaged as mother, the final sign means settlement, city, town, village but is not interpreted as country which is Ta in Kemet language.

This has been thoroughly dealt with by Cheikh Anta Diop in Civilization or Barbarism and also by Theophile Obenga.

There is no people sign, so I would omit Black people as an interpretation. The reason whites have associated the interpretation as land is probably due to the assignation of certain colours to specific attributes. Many of the divinities refer to themselves as red, green and black. Wsir (Osiris) is regularly referred to as green. We couldn't infer a green people. But we do know that he is the god of fertility and thus it can be interpreted as such.

The debate goes on.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: zetter_74 <prweza@hotmail.co.uk>

To: Ta\_Seti@yahooogroups.com

Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 3:06 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt:Black land or Black People?

Black land or Black people?

One argument against a black Egypt contrived by euro centrists is the Meaning of the word Kemet. I have read somewhere that `Kemet' refers to the `black land' because Herodotus said it and geography (fertile dark land due to the Nile) as opposed to 'black people'.

I believe that once we are clear about what Ancient Egyptians called themselves, the case can be 100% closed, as other arguments against a black Kemet would obviously seem superfluous for one cannot argue against a name ancient Egyptians gave themselves.

I'm not an expert in the ancient Egyptian language and being a novice in these matters, would appreciate some clarification on the following issues.

1. Can the word `Kemet' posses a dual meaning e.g black land and 'black people', hence the confusion between land and people? Is there a `people' in the word 'Kemet'?

2. What are the opinions of modern Egyptologists on the meaning of the word `Kemet' ? Is there any consensus now that the word means `black people'?

3.Has there been any modern `convincing' etymological evidence provided by anyone to disprove that `Kemet' does not mean black people? If yes, any convincing Rebuttal around?

I would appreciate your enlightenment on this issue.

Thanks.

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! -
<http://mail.aol.com>

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23909|2007-11-26 10:46:36|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)"

wrote:

>

> 'I have read somewhere that `Kemet'

>

> refers to the `black land' because Herodotus said it .....'

>

>

>

He probably had in mind the opposition of the "Black Land" vs. the "Red Land." This may have been the origin of the concept of the "Black Nation."

Black Land could refer either to Egyptians or Nehesu as seen at KV11, where we also see the aspect of common (divine) genetic descent of the two groups.

Therefore, the Black Land and Black Nation are distinct even if they are related in concept.

The people of the Red Land, also multi-national, also are said to have a common divine genetic descent different than that of the Egyptians and Nubians.

I do think there was at the start, even though the textual evidence is still incomplete, a belief that the blackness of the land and the people was interlinked.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23910|2007-11-26 12:36:43|Peter Gray|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?|

To reiterate,Diop's argument was that the niwt determinative identified the "land" of Kmt as the nation of Egypt and categorically not as the soil deposited by the annual inundation of the banks of the Nile. And in my own opinion, the resemblance of the determinative to a crossroads (as in junction or meeting place) was not coincidental.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: pmanansala@sbcglobal.net
Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 18:46:36 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Emeagwali, Gloria (History)" wrote:

>
> 'I have read somewhere that `Kemet'
>
> refers to the `black land' because Herodotus said it .....'
>
>
>

He probably had in mind the opposition of the "Black Land" vs. the "Red Land." This may have been the origin of the concept of the "Black Nation."

Black Land could refer either to Egyptians or Nehesu as seen at KV11, where we also see the aspect of common (divine) genetic descent of the two groups.

Therefore, the Black Land and Black Nation are distinct even if they are related in concept.

The people of the Red Land, also multi-national, also are said to have a common divine genetic descent different than that of the Egyptians and Nubians.

I do think there was at the start, even though the textual evidence is still incomplete, a belief that the blackness of the land and the people was interlinked.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Get the power of Windows + Web with the new Windows Live. Power up!

| 23911|2007-11-26 12:51:09|Peter Gray|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

Bob's father was known as "Captain Marley", who was disowned and disinherited by his family for having got black woman pregnant. Likewise, black Jamaicans of the time condemned his mother, Cedella, for having got pregnant for a white man. He (the father) was not a sailor, but worked as a surveyor for the colonial government.

Bob's relationship with his mother could hardly be described as "fleeting" -- where did you get such a notion, Intef Djehutymes? When Bob went to the US (in 1966), it was to his mother's house, and he confided a great deal in her about his recent relationship with (and marriage to) Rita Anderson. Subsequently, they remained close, as is evident from Cedella Marley's various interviews on the topic.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 17:01:21 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post. He said that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people discuss unless it is specifically brought up.

I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said you've experienced.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, KarnakHouse@ ... wrote:

>

> Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in the

> 1940s. The > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he had

> met his > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in Kingston,

> JA.

> If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept > secret because

> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.

>

> Intef Djehutymes

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: cristofori whitakara

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com

> Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> i find the painting of bob marley fascinating. i

read a

> biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his > mother's side he was of nubian-egyptian descent. the book is "catch

a

> Fire" by timothy white

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little > black man. Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A

woman

> photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at

> Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) • A

rising tide

> of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is > threatening priceless rock art preserved

> for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.

In

> Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and

Libya,

> the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains

of

> Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires
 a > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only the > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect
 the
 > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings
 to > make the faded colours look brighter, causing > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of human
 > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.
 > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the desert.
 > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers
 drive
 > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient." While > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists
 visiting
 > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red
 Sea
 > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this
 year
 > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist Tilman > Lenssen-Erz says that in > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands
 of > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged
 with > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the rock
 > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about
 the > significance of the religious power that is collected in this place ...
 > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks

making

> the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts like

> the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as

> Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone unscathed by > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that, contrary > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went via

> the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting

> straight through the desert. Last > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant engraving

> of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance of > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour operator

> based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development

> Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the desert

> and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we went > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the year > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators

working > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.

Kuper

> says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people" but

> that others --

> tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based expats

> who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.

> With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan to > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation

> conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-boundary

> cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires the > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So far,

> only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of hammering

> out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic relations.

> With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and
Prof

> Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want
to > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the

> jumping off point for most trips to Gilf

> Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a museum to > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how man

> can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.

> Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase > their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is

on

> the wall. === HTP, Mahari

>

>

> -----

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL
Mail! -
> <http://mail.aol.com>
>

---

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!
| 23912|2007-11-26 13:13:36|Peter Gray|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?|
Intef,

Of course, the niwt determinative (for settlement, town, etc.) is indicative of land (as "nation"), even if it is true that another word for land was "Ta".

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: KarnakHouse@aol.com
Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 08:22:33 -0500
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt:Black land or Black People?

There's no, definitively, dual meaning for Kemet as Black land or Black people. The word is hieroglyphically represented by what is termed burnt wood followed by the glyph for T, followed by the sign, a circle with crosses. The burnt wood, kem, means black - this can be found in Gardiner's Egyptian Grammar, the T is the feminine, so we know the country was imaged as mother, the final sign means settlement, city, town, village but is not interpreted as country which is Ta in Kemet language.

This has been thoroughly dealt with by Cheikh Anta Diop in Civilization or Barbarism and also by Theophile Obenga.

There is no people sign, so I would omit Black people as an interpretation. The reason whites have associated the interpretation as land is probably due to the assignation of certain colours to specific attributes. Many of the divinities refer to themselves as red, green and black. Wsir (Osiris) is regularly referred to as green. We couldn't infer a green people. But we do know that he is the god of fertility and thus it can be interpreted as such.

The debate goes on.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: zetter_74 <prweza@hotmail.co.uk>

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 3:06 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt:Black land or Black People?

Black land or Black people?

One argument against a black Egypt contrived by euro centrists is the Meaning of the word Kemet. I have read somewhere that 'Kemet' refers to the 'black land' because Herodotus said it and geography (fertile dark land due to the Nile) as opposed to 'black people'.

I believe that once we are clear about what Ancient Egyptians called themselves, the case can be 100% closed, as other arguments against a black Kemet would obviously seem superfluous for one cannot argue against a name ancient Egyptians gave themselves.

I'm not an expert in the ancient Egyptian language and being a novice in these matters, would appreciate some clarification on the following issues.

1. Can the word 'Kemet' possess a dual meaning e.g black land and 'black people', hence the confusion between land and people? Is there a 'people' in the word 'Kemet'?
2. What are the opinions of modern Egyptologists on the meaning of the word 'Kemet'? Is there any consensus now that the word means 'black people'?

3.Has there been any modern 'convincing' etymological evidence provided by anyone to disprove that 'Kemet' does not mean black people? If yes, any convincing Rebuttal around?

I would appreciate your enlightenment on this issue.

Thanks.

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! - <http://mail.aol.com>

---

Your smile counts. The more smiles you share, the more we donate. Join in!
| 23913|2007-11-26 13:13:42|Peter Gray|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People?|
Intef,

Of course, the niwt determinative (for settlement, town, etc.) is indicative of land (as "nation"), even if it is true that another word for land was "Ta".

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: KarnakHouse@aol.com
Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 08:22:33 -0500
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt:Black land or Black People?

There's no, definitively, dual meaning for Kemet as Black land or Black people. The word is hieroglyphically represented by what is termed burnt wood followed by the glyph for T, followed by the sign, a circle with crosses. The burnt wood, kem, means black - this can be found in Gardiner's Egyptian Grammar, the T is the femine, so we know the country was imaged as mother, the final sign means settlement, city, town, village but is not interpreted as country which is Ta in Kemet language.

This has been thoroughly dealt with by Cheikh Anta Diop in Civilization or Barbarism and also by Theophile Obenga.

There is no people sign, so I would omit Black people as an interpretation. The reason whites have associated the interpretation as land is probably due to the assignation of certain colours to specific attributes. Many of the divinities refer to themselves as red, green and black. Wsir (Osiris) is regularly referred to as green. We couldn't infer a green people. But we do know that he is the god of fertility and thus it can be interpreted as such.

The debate goes on.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: zetter_74 <prweza@hotmail.co.uk>

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 3:06 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Egypt:Black land or Black People?

Black land or Black people?

One argument against a black Egypt contrived by euro centrists is the Meaning of the word Kemet. I have read somewhere that 'Kemet' refers to the 'black land' because Herodotus said it and geography (fertile dark land due to the Nile) as opposed to 'black people'.

I believe that once we are clear about what Ancient Egyptians called themselves, the case can be 100% closed, as other arguments against a black Kemet would obviously seem superfluous for one cannot argue against a name ancient Egyptians gave themselves.

I'm not an expert in the ancient Egyptian language and being a novice in these matters, would appreciate some clarification on the following issues.

1. Can the word 'Kemet' possess a dual meaning e.g black land and 'black people', hence the confusion between land and people? Is there a 'people' in the word 'Kemet'?
2. What are the opinions of modern Egyptologists on the meaning of the word `Kemet' ? Is there any consensus now that the word means `black people'?

3.Has there been any modern `convincing' etymological evidence provided by anyone to disprove that `Kemet' does not mean black people? If yes, any convincing Rebuttal around?

I would appreciate your enlightenment on this issue.

Thanks.

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! - <http://mail.aol.com>

---

Your smile counts. The more smiles you share, the more we donate. Join in!
| 23914|2007-11-26 13:29:55|Peter Gray|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|
Sorry. I'm not accusing Mahari or Asar of bias, but isn't it a flight of fantasy to assume the Ancient Egyptians or other African had dealings with quantum mechanics as we understand the term today? And it is a modern term (just as "string theory is a modern mathematical theory). How can we "know for sure" that the ancients thought in such terms? Quantum mechanics is a whole lot more than a cosmogeny or belief system that shares a certain conceptual framework with modern implications/concepts such as the existence of multiple parallel universes.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Sun, 25 Nov 2007 05:40:00 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

So if we know for sure that

> African people have been dealing with Quantum Mechanics and things > 4000 years ago, we can assume other aspects of science to be known
by > them as well. One of the first questions you have to ask is why didn't

- > they create a nuclear bomb? Because of their commitment to human
- > dignity & flourishing and balance for the physical environment that
- > they didn't take on such endeavors.

Agreed. Many people will think you ethnocentrically biased by that statement but I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes I get really frustrated and angry with black people by their lack of desire to strike back with an appropriate level of viciousness. In reality, I think it is a part of our ancient Afrikaness/ our spiritual culture that restrains us. Of course, some will think me biased as well.

- > The day of trying to do everything for the masses is long gone. Our
- > ancestors were right about one thing, education is not for the masses.
- > The more I interact with people across the world, the more true their
- > words are.

I think what has happened is that a highly advanced and moral culture was conquered and almost totally destroyed by barbarians. And subsequently -indirectly, at least, propelled by the tenants of this culture - the whole world is now moving toward the level of morality and humanity that already existed in ancient Afrika, that vanquished civilization (I don't want to suggest that there were not problems to be fixed, of course). Yet, it appears that there were some very important expressions of humanity and goodness in the works. Now it seems that in spite of the chaos the whole world is becoming awakened to their rights to a stake in human dignity and decent treatment.

HTP,
Mahari

---

Get the power of Windows + Web with the new Windows Live. Power up!
 | 23915|2007-11-26 13:59:19|asar_imhotep|Re: Niw-t decoded -Reply to Peter|
 --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

- >
- >
- > Sorry. I'm not accusing Mahari or Asar of bias, but isn't it a flight of fantasy to assume the Ancient Egyptians or other African had dealings with quantum mechanics as we understand the term today? And it is a modern term (just as "string theory is a modern mathematical theory). How can we "know for sure" that the ancients thought in such terms? Quantum mechanics is a whole lot more than a cosmogeny or belief system that shares a certain conceptual framework with modern implications/concepts such as the existence of multiple parallel universes.

>

> Peter

>

I understand your concern but it is based on a lack of knowledge of African systems. I have suggested two works alone that will dispel that myth and I will suggest a few more to give you a better sense of the knowledge the ancients possessed which is clearly a system of quantum mechanics:

Science of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

Sacred Symbols of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

A star of deep beginnings - Dr. Charles S. Finch

Civilization of Barbarism - Dr. Chiekh Anta Diop

African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo - Dr. Kimbwabndende Bunseki Fu-Kiau

The Healing Wisdom of Africa - Dr. Malidoma Some

If you can read French, then visit as well www.anhkonline.com

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23916|2007-11-26 14:04:47|kungfuhustle|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Peter

I'm in agreement that it does sound contrary to what we have been led to believe about ancient Africa. However, I am beginning to believe that Africa is even more "ancient" than as defined by today's reference. The pyramid also.

Understanding that until recently, Europeans believed the world to be a flat surface, indicates Europeans have only very recently began to understand astronomy.

Personally, I have begun to wonder exactly where and how Ashkenazi's have made the recent "discoveries" they have been credited with in recent history.

Are they drawing from ancient manuscripts horded from ancient times?

I have noticed, every time an long lost scroll or manuscript is brought back to the light of the world, it either comes from vaults of a New York City bank (The recent, Gospel Of Mary), or the Vatican.

Meninarmer

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 16:29:54 -0500

Sorry. I'm not accusing Mahari or Asar of bias, but isn't it a flight of fantasy to assume the Ancient Egyptians or other African had dealings with quantum mechanics as we understand the term today? And it is a modern term (just as "string theory is a modern mathematical theory). How can we "know for sure" that the ancients thought in such terms? Quantum mechanics is a whole lot more than a cosmogeny or belief system that shares a certain conceptual framework with modern implications/concepts such as the existence of multiple parallel universes.

Peter

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: mahari@myway.com

Date: Sun, 25 Nov 2007 05:40:00 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

So if we know for sure that

> African people have been dealing with Quantum Mechanics and

things

> 4000 years ago, we can assume other aspects of science to be known

by > them as well. One of the first questions you have to ask is why

didn't > they create a nuclear bomb? Because of their commitment to human > dignity & flourishing and balance for the physical environment

that

> they didn't take on such endeavors.

Agreed. Many people will think you ethnocentrically biased by that statement but I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes I get really frustrated and angry with black people by their lack of desire to strike back with an appropriate level of viciousness. In reality, I think it is a part of our ancient Afrikanness/our spiritual culture

that restrains us. Of course, some will think me biased as well.

> The day of trying to do everything for the masses is long

gone. Our > ancestors were right about one thing, education is not for

the masses.

> The more I interact with people across the world, the more

true

their > words are.

I think what has happened is that a highly advanced and moral culture was conquered and almost totally destroyed by barbarians. And subsequently -indirectly, at least, propelled by the tenants of this culture - the whole world is now moving toward the level of morality

and humanity that already existed in ancient Afrika, that vanquished civilization (I don't want to suggest that there were not problems to be fixed, of course). Yet, it appears that there were some very important expressions of humanity and goodness in the works. Now it seems that in spite of the chaos the whole world is becoming awakened to their rights to a stake in human dignity and decent treatment.

HTP,
Mahari

---

Get the power of Windows + Web with the new Windows Live. Power up!
| 23917|2007-11-26 14:06:09|asar_imhotep|Re: Egypt:Black land or Black People? Reply to Paul & Peter|
To Peter, Paul and Dr. Emagwali

In my 2005 paper on titled What's in a name? The Meaning of Km.t, I posited the notion that the names of countries and towns were all in relation to deities and were the result of a thriving priesthood. With that in mind, the symbolisms used to convey the ideologies apparent in the names clearly derive from NATURE and the OCCUPATIONS of the inhabitants. I also posited that Km.t was related to Asar (Wasiri, Ausaru, Osiris) and was connected to the original BLACKSMITHS from the "south" as is explained in the Edfu text.

More and more evidence is coming out to support what I posited in 2005. Brother Ferg Somo has done an excellent unpublished linguistic work on the word Km.t (KaaUma.Ti). As he has confirmed KAA is related to a firing process and primarily COAL. Coal is a non naturally occurring product used to separate iron and other metals from their mineral shells. UMA relates to a kitchen or a unit used to house the process of smelting or cooking.

As we have discussed numerous times on this list, in order to understand what Egypt was, you have to look at the surviving living systems of Black Africa. I have posited that at one time in Africa's history (and really it hasn't stopped) that there was a continental wide University system and priesthood. Each different school specialized in a certain science. These schools met up in Ta-Meri and all of the known knowledge was collected in what is now call Egypt.

Doing more research we find that the people in Egypt didn't use the term KMT to refer to their land proper. They mainly used it (with only 1 or 2 other known instances) in spiritual texts. This clearly tells us that it was not something the average citizen was dealing with, but had some other meaning only known to those in the priesthood. Whenever they wanted to convey a political territory, they used the word TA in front of it (Ta-Meri, Ta-Nehesu, Ta-Seti, etc.). Before the 10th dynasty the Egyptians called their land /hnw/ (Henu) which meant "The interior." A portion of the land was still called that after the 10th dynasty and they use the land designation (Ta-Hnw).

On this train of using living systems to piece together the puzzle of Egyptian history, we can look to the Dogon again for references. Just like in ancient Ta-Meri, the Dogon divide their townships and districts in pairs: UPPER and LOWER. Not only this, but they give colors to represent them as well. Can you guess what colors? You guessed it: Red and White. In the Dogon culture the Red represents success in cattle herding and the white success in agriculture. Here we have a conscious division of labor between those who farm and those who forge the tools for farming. In the Dogon culture, the METALWORKERS receive a share of the crops but are NOT allowed to farm.

So Egypt is the result of two economic systems: one of farming and the other of tool making. Take note that the words Ta-Meri and Km.t were NOT used prior to the 10th dynasty. They arose at the same time. Also take note of the symbols used to convey the names. The word Meri uses the sickle tool used in farming (to till and divide the soil). The word Km.t uses a burnt piece of wood (charcoal) used for the process of making metals and other tools.

As I have argued with in my 2005 article, the name Km.t has nothing to do with the phenotype of the people. It is talking about the general occupations of the people of a given territory. Ta-Meri is a metaphor for "husbandry" or making love to soil as just like sperm is considered a "seed," you plant seeds into the ground and produce crops like a man (husband) would do with his wife in making a child. We know this to be true as well for Ta-Seti (Land of the Bow) because they were known for their "archers" and is probably the place where their military trained; just like how we in the states train our military in certain parts of the country (Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, TX for example).

To understand Km.t, you have to shift a bit from our 2007 American way of racial thinking. They knew they were Black and didn't have to prove it to anyone. Mdw Ntr is a written language system for priests so in order to crack the code you have to think like a priest.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23918|2007-11-26 14:48:58|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Why a Nile tadpole means a great deal|

One thing that ALWAYS seems to be present in eurocentric scholarship is a patronizing perspective on Kemet. Perhaps, this comes about due to a subconscious realization that they are Afrikan.

There seems to be some of this here. They say that "necessity is the mother of invention". It appears that Kemetans were fully enmeshed in the power and glory of nature and worked within it brilliantly to achieve their people's goals.

The Caucas mountain people on the other hand responded to the "necessity greed" - the necessity for greed and more power and materials than anyone rightfully needs. Thus, the necessity to create methods - numerals, etc - and shortcuts to enable them to get more of what they don't need and don't deserve faster.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> Why a Nile tadpole means a great dealAncient Egypt's awkward > numerical system was based largely on the natural world

[Hieroglyphic > numbers] [0]

>

<http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/spe
ci\

> als/tutankhamun/xxx> Image :1 of 2 [0]

>

<http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/spe
ci\

> als/tutankhamun/xxx> George Hart

> Recording numbers and quantities was one of the first requirements

of > the bureaucracy as soon as hieroglyphs had been invented. Items to

be > accounted for varied from enemies slain in battle and prisoners to

how > many jars of beer or bunches of onions were needed to accompany the > Pharaoh into the afterlife. Inventories of equipment used in temples > were kept meticulously and any damage noted down.

>

> The system of writing numbers was logical but cumbersome and took up a > lot of space. A vertical or horizontal stroke indicated numbers 1

to 9,

> a hobble for cattle 10 to 90, a coil of rope 100 to 900 and a lotus

> 1,000 to 9,000. For higher numerals 10,000 was represented by a finger

> raised for counting and 100,000 by a tadpole ? of which myriads > would emerge in the pools left by the Nile's annual flood. The > concept of a million was confined to royal propaganda to convey the > sense of the infinite number of years for which the Pharaoh and his > monuments would exist. The notation took the form of a god with his arms

> raised to support the sky.

>

> If the above numbers were written under or beside the "mouth" > sign, meaning a "part", then that indicated fractions. However, > in measuring bushels of wheat, often used for payment in Egypt which had > no coinage, a specialist system of indicating numerals was used.

This

> took the sign of the human eye with the markings of a falcon's cheek > below it ? known as the eye of Horus, above ? and broke it into > separate parts so that the eyebrow, for instance, equalled one eighth > and the pupil one quarter. The fractions then added up to  $63/64$ , so

the > missing  $1/64$  was supplied magically by the god Thoth who was responsible > for mathematical accuracy. Length was measured by the distance between > the elbow and finger-tip which we call a cubit and was roughly 20in.

>

> Accurate dating was essential for royal documents and for determining > days in temples when specific rituals were performed. In general, > though, most people were content to be guided by the three seasons:

the

> Nile flood, the winter sowing of crops and the summer harvest.

> Background

> * Egypt unlocked

>

<http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/spe ci\

> als/tutankhamun/article2885773.ece>

>

> * Decoding the pharaohs

>

<[http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/spe
ci\](http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts_and_entertainment/speci/)

> als/tutankhamun/article2901580.ece>

>

> * Dead cats and absent camels

>

<[http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/spe
ci\](http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts_and_entertainment/speci/)

> als/tutankhamun/article2908240.ece>

>

> * Why a Nile tadpole means a great deal

>

<[http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/spe
ci\](http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts_and_entertainment/speci/)

> als/tutankhamun/article2915354.ece>

>

> * Don't trust wives or laugh at cats

>

<http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/speci

> als/tutankhamun/article2923388.ece>

> Related Links

> * Deciphering hieroglyphs

>

<http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/speci > als/tutankhamun/article2885676.ece>

>

> It was important to be aware of lucky and unlucky days in the calendar.

> It was best to stay indoors when it was the birthday of the violent

god

> Seth. If you had the bad luck to be born on that day, then, in modern > jargon you would have difficulty getting life insurance.

>

> George Hart is an Egyptologist, formerly of the British Museum

>

>

http://entertainment.timesonline.co.uk/tol/arts\_and\_entertainment/speci

ia\

> ls/tutankhamun/article2915354.ece

>

| 23919|2007-11-26 15:20:49|shaimesh@aol.com|Khamitik Yoga (Ari Ankh Ka) Classes in Bklyn|

Attachments :

From: Khonsugo

Smai Tawi Daily Digest Subscribers, you may access the attached flyer at the link below:

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/SmaiTawi/files/Internal%20Breath%20Flyer.pdf>

Sakhu Healing Arts Center

An African-centered sanctuary for healing and culture

Julie R. Spooner, Ph.D., Licensed Psychologist

Founder/Director

Presents

Ari Ankh Ka

(Moving the spirit of life)

Synergy of the body, breathe and mind

Saturdays 11-12pm

(Please call to reserve your place)

Donation-$12

All classes will involve light body movement and breathing exercises to encourage good energy/blood circulation in the body. Also, it is an excellent way to bring the body back to a state of calm and link to the Ancestors.

8 Revere Place between Dean and Bergen

(Revere Pl. is between Kingston and Albany)

C Train to Kingston Ave.

Lead by:

Sensei Khonsugo

For information call 718-773-3338

---

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 23920|2007-11-26 15:20:49|shaimesh@aol.com|The Afrikan Village at Youngstown, Ohio - "Open House" This Coming W|

From: truthcenter@aol.com

THE AFRIKAN VILLAGE OF YOUNGSTOWN , OHIO
PRESENTS AN OPEN HOUSE TO THE COMMUNITY

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1, 2007
FROM 2 PM TO 7 PM
AT THE

RIISING SUN LODGE #90

645 SHERWOOD AVENUE

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO 44511
THE PROGRAM WILL INCLUDE WORKSHOPS ON:
AFRIKAN SPIRITUALITY AND BEING AFRIKAN CONSCIOUS
THE IMPORTANCE OF HONORING OUR ANCESTORS
FEATURING DR. RAY HAGINS AND PASTOR ERIC UPCHURCH!

DINNER WILL BE SERVED FOR A DONATION
THEN JOIN US ON SUNDAY, DECEMBER 2, 2007
FROM 2 PM TO 4 PM FOR OUR REGULARLY SCHEDULED VILLAGE STUDY GROUP FELLOWSHIP

OUR STUDY GROUP FELLOWSHIP WILL MEET EACH 1ST
AND 3RD SUNDAY AT THE RISING SUN LODGE #90, SHERWOOD AVE, YOUNGSTOWN

THE AFRIKAN VILLAGE OF YOUNGSTOWN IS AN ASSOCIATE MINISTRY OF THE AFRIKAN VILLAGE OF

ST. LOUIS , MO , UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF DR. RAY HAGINS

Min Wali Salahuddin, Chief Minister walizs46@hotmail.com 330-746-2020

Bro Hunrdon Mitchem Jr. (Bro Mitch), Min of Security, mmhhamilcar1@aol.com 330-797-5084

Sis Cynthia Asantewaa Carter, Min of Intelligence aset1956@hotmail.com 330-207-4710

The balancing of the land lies in Maat: Truth, Justice and Righteousness.
Do Maat and live!

---

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 23921|2007-11-26 15:20:50|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it first came out and it is certainly not there.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 9:01 am
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post.
He said

that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people discuss unless it is specifically brought up.

I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said you've experienced.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@... wrote:

>

> Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in the

> 1940s. The > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he had

> met his > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in Kingston,

> JA.

> If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept

> secret because

> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.

>

> Intef Djehutymes

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: cristofori whitakara

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)

> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> i find the painting of bob marley fascinating. i

read a

> biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his > mother's side he was of nubian-egyptian descent. the book is "catch

a

> Fire" by timothy white

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little

> black man. Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A

woman

> photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at

> Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) • A

rising tide

> of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is

> threatening priceless rock art preserved

> for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.

In

> Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and

Libya,

> the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains

of

> Gilf Kibir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires

a

> deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only the > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural

> heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr

> Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect

the

> art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie

> 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings

to

> make the faded colours look brighter, causing

> irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of

human

> figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.

> Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the desert.

> Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers

drive

> through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient." While > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising

> steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists

visiting

> Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red

Sea

> resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this

year

> we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist Tilman

> Lenssen-Erz says that in > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands

of

> square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged

with > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the

rock

> art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about

the > significance of the religious power that is collected in this place ...

> where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks

making

> the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts

like

> the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as

> Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone

unscathed by > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,

contrary > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went

via

> the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting

> straight through the desert. Last > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant

engraving

> of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance

of > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour

operator

> based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development

> Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the

desert

> and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we

went > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the

year

> before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators

working

> out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.

Kuper

> says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"

but

> that others --

> tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based

expats

> who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.

> With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan

to

> agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-

boundary

> cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires

the > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So far,

> only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of hammering > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic relations.

> With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and Prof

> Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want to > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the

> jumping off point for most trips to Gilf

> Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a museum to > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how man

> can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.

> Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase > their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is on > the wall. === HTP, Mahari

>

>

> -----

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

—

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

Mail! -

> <http://mail.aol.com>

>

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! -
<http://mail.aol.com>

| 23922|2007-11-26 17:30:09|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

I really don't have a dog in this fight. The point that I want to make is that I don't see where you can be so sure that the other gentleman is SO WRONG about his statement that Marley's mother traces her heritage back to Kemet/Nubia.

You apparently have stated your belief in the writings of a white guy. I think we can generally assume that the huge majority of white people will not willingly provide a connection of blacks to Kemet. They have to be forced to make such a connection. It is something you should not even expect to be there in a white man's book. I suspect he would respond the way you have - assuming it is nonsense.

TIMOTHY WHITE

http://www.rollingstone.com/artists/bobmarley/articles/story/5934433/timothy\_white\_dies

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@... wrote:

>
> Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't > know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but > I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it first > came out and it is certainly not there.
>
> Intef Djehutymes
>
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 9:01 am
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger
>
>
>
>
>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post.

> He said

>

> that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan

>

> descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people

>

> discuss unless it is specifically brought up.

>

> I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to

>

> automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said

>

> you've experienced.

>

> HTP,

>

> Mahari

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:

>

> >

>

> > Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in

>

> the
>
> > 1940s. The
>
> > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he
>
> had
>
> > met his
>
> > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in
>
> Kingston,
>
> > JA.
>
> > If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept
>
> > secret because
>
> > I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.
>
> >
>
> > Intef Djehutymes
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > -----Original Message-----
>
> > From: cristofori whitakara
>
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>
> > Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)
>
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > i find the painting of bob marley fascinating.ÿ i

>

> read a

>

> > biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his

>

> > mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book is "catch
>
> a
>
> > Fire" by timothy white
>
> >
>
> > Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little
>
> > black man. ÿ Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A
>
> woman
>
> > photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at
>
> > Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) â□" A
>
> rising tide
>
> > of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is
>
> > threatening priceless rock art preserved
>
> > for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.
>
> In
>
> > Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and
>
> Libya,
>
> > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains
>
> of
>
> > Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as
>
> > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the
>
> > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these
>
> > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first

requires

>

> a

>

> > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only the > > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural

>

>

> > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr

>

> > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect

>

> the

>

> > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie

>

> > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings

>

> to

>

> > make the faded colours look brighter, causing

>

> > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just > > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of

>

>

> human

>

> > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.

>

> > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant

>

> > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the

>

> desert.

>

> > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers

>

> drive

>

> > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the

>

> > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."
While
>
> > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising
>
> > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists
>
> visiting
>
> > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red
>
> Sea
>
> > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this
>
> year
>
> > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist
Tilman
>
> > Lenssen-Erz says that in
>
> > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands
>
> of
>
> > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged
>
> with
>
> > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the
>
> rock
>
> > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European
>
> > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about
>
> the
>
> > significance of the religious power that is collected in this
>
> place ...
>

> > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks
>
> making
>
> > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts
>
> like
>
> > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as
>
> > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone
>
> unscathed by
>
> > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,
>
> contrary
>
> > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went
>
> via
>
> > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting
>
> > straight through the desert. Last
>
> > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant
>
> engraving
>
> > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we
>
> > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance
>
> of
>
> > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour
>
> operator
>
> > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development
>
> > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution
was
>

> > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the
>
> desert
>
> > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is
to
>
> > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we
>
> went
>
> > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the
>
> year
>
> > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators
>
> working
>
> > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.
>
> Kuper
>
> > says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"
>
> but
>
> > that others --
>
> > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based
>
> expats
>
> > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.
>
> > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan
>
> to
>
> > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation
>
> > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-
>
> boundary
>
> > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires

>
> the
>
> > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So
>
> far,
>
> > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three
>
> > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of
>
> hammering
>
> > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic
>
> relations.
>
> > With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and
>
> Prof
>
> > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want
>
> to
>
> > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the
>
> > jumping off point for most trips to Gilf
>
> > Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a
>
> museum to
>
> > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how
>
> man
>
> > can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.
>
> > Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some
>
> > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase
>
> > their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is
>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

>

---

>

> —

>

> > Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

>

> Mail! -

>

> > <http://mail.aol.com>

>

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

French President Nicolas Sarkozy, speaking in Beijing while on a visit to China, called for calm while an investigation in the crash is under way.

Rioters set ablaze at least 60 cars, as well as a police station, library and car dealership in Villiers-le-Bel, police said. The clashes had spread across six towns by Monday night, they said.

None of the injuries to police were life-threatening, police reported. The number of rioters hurt and the extent of their injuries was unknown.

The 15- and 16-year-old boys killed in the Sunday evening wreck were both sons of African immigrants, police said. They died when their motorbike hit a patrol car in the town of Villiers-le-Bel, police said.

Don't Miss

French youths torch police station

Some residents of the town, which is heavily populated by immigrants, accused the police officers of fleeing the scene without helping the boys. Police said the teens drove through a red light without wearing helmets and on an unregistered bike.

In a statement issued by the Elysee Palace, Sarkozy urged residents to "cool down and let the justice system determine who is responsible for what." But by Monday, the clashes had spread to the nearby towns of Sarcelles, Garges-lès-Gonesse, Cergy, Ermont and Goussainville.

Villiers-le-Bel was not among the districts hit by the weeks of rioting of November 2005, when disaffected youths set thousands of cars ablaze to protest unemployment and discrimination. Those riots were touched off by the deaths of two men of North African descent who were electrocuted while hiding from police in an electrical substation.

Sarkozy served as interior minister during that wave of unrest and provoked controversy by referring to the rioters as "scum" -- language that served only to inflame the vandalism.

===

HTP,
Mahari

| 23924|2007-11-26 23:18:47|Terry Sanders|Re: The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"|

Greetings Family,

Although I touched on the subject briefly, some time ago, I feel that this is a topic that should be fully addressed, due to the serious nature of the implications.

I have a real interest in Egyptian hieroglyphics, but I cannot seem to get beyond statements made by some scholars that the Ancient Egyptian hieroglyphs have never been deciphered. On pgs. 146-150, in his book, "The Historical Origin Of Christianity", Dr. Walter Williams provides valid reasons why this has not occurred.

If Dr. Williams and Carol Andrews are correct in their assertions, what does this mean for all of the scholarly writings that are in existence today? Do we really know what the ancients had to say in their writings or are we incorrectly relying on others to tell us what they have assumed what our ancient ancestor had to say.

Dr. Williams' writings seem very convincing and if he's correct, where does that leave us, when it comes to the Egyptian hieroglyphs?

Ma, at Hotep!

Terry Sanders

ahmed wrote:

The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"

Egyptian hieroglyphics had been used by the Egyptians for thousands of years. However, a particularly bleak period of Egyptian history is the conquest of Egypt by Persia
for more information
<http://ancient-egyptian.blogspot.com/>

Ta_Seti Repository
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2
Yahoo! Groups Links

To visit your group on the web, go to:
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/

Your email settings:
Individual Email | Traditional

To change settings online go to:
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/join
(Yahoo! ID required)

To change settings via email:
mailto:Ta\_Seti-digest@yahoogroups.com
mailto:Ta\_Seti-fullfeatured@yahoogroups.com

To unsubscribe from this group, send an email to:
Ta_Seti-unsubscribe@yahoo.com

Your use of Yahoo! Groups is subject to:
<http://docs.yahoo.com/info/terms/>

| 23925|2007-11-26 23:40:56|Asar Imhotep|Re: The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"|

Hello Terry

In some degree I agree with them and in others I do not. The more politically correct term should be that the Mdw Ntr glyphs and language hasn't FULLY been deciphered by mainstream Egyptologists. There are several reasons why it hasn't been FULLY deciphered:

1. Mdw Ntr is the symbolic representation of concepts from various different African nations. To fully grasp these concepts, one must systematically organize the cosmologies of every African nation which has yet to be done. Dr. Theophile Obenga has started the process however in his work Introduction à la linguistique historique africaine Introduction to Linguistics African history
2. There are two primary levels to Mdw Ntr: one for the general public and one for the priesthood. They use the same script to convey these two realities. All African systems that have a priesthood operate by this convention. Because of Egyptologists not being initiated in African systems, they do not possess the tools to be able to read the 2nd and 3rd levels of Mdw Ntr. Mdw Ntr is a phonetic language and an ideographic language and each symbol conveys a concept and when each of these "apparent" phonetic symbols are combined, they are words for 1st level people and sentences for 2nd and 3rd level people. Egyptologists are on the 1st level
3. The Mdw Ntr has been deciphered to a degree, but because most Westerners (outside of Masons) do not have a background in interpreting symbols, they miss the subtleties and scientific concepts masked in the script.
4. Lastly, Mdw Ntr really is a "language" but a way of thinking. This may not make sense but it's the only I can explain it. It's a initiation process into balancing your left and right brain...to get closer to the concept of "meaning" that cannot be expressed in language. This is why the poet is revered in Africa. Poetry is next in line to meaning and understanding. It is also an oracle system using nature itself as the divination tools.

So they have been deciphered, but on the first level. It takes a life time to master Mdw Ntr as you have to be a poet, a geologists, computer programmer, a zoologist, astronomer, architect, blacksmith and farmer to fully grasp the concepts. This is why initiation took 40 years.

To get a good idea of the deciphering of the Mdw Ntr script, CLICK HERE to find out more. I have run the page through the Google translation script as the site and page is originally in French. Some things will be slightly off grammatically, but you can follow it generally without much loss in understanding.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Terry Sanders wrote:

Greetings Family,

Although I touched on the subject briefly, some time ago, I feel that this is a topic that should be fully addressed, due to the serious nature of the implications.

I have a real interest in Egyptian hieroglyphics, but I cannot seem to get beyond statements made by some scholars that the Ancient Egyptian hieroglyphs have never been deciphered. On pgs. 146-150, in his book, "The Historical Origin Of Christianity", Dr. Walter Williams provides valid reasons why this has not occurred.

If Dr. Williams and Carol Andrews are correct in their assertions, what does this mean for all of the scholarly writings that are in existence today? Do we really know what the ancients had to say in their writings or are we incorrectly relying on others to tell us what they have assumed what our ancient ancestor had to say.

Dr. Williams' writings seem very convincing and if he's correct, where does that leave us, when it comes to the Egyptian hieroglyphs?

Ma, at Hotep!

Terry Sanders

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.

| 23926|2007-11-27 06:24:50|Peter Gray|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

Intef, Timothy:

Marley's mother may quite possibly be of original Ghanaian stock, as are many of the Jamaican Maroons who fought the British to a sort of stalemate independence. That is not to say that she has actually "traced" her specific lineage to Ghana. but more likely that she is from a Maroon family.

As for Timothy's declaration to the effect that any "belief in the writings of a white man" is to be assumed to be erroneous (just because it is written by a white man), this is hardly worth responding to.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: mahari@myway.com

Date: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 01:30:06 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

I really don't have a dog in this fight. The point that I want to make is that I don't see where you can be so sure that the other gentleman is SO WRONG about his statement that Marley's mother traces her heritage back to Kemet/Nubia.

You apparently have stated your belief in the writings of a white guy. I think we can generally assume that the huge majority of white people will not willingly provide a connection of blacks to Kemet. They have to be forced to make such a connection. It is something you should not even expect to be there in a white man's book. I suspect he would respond the way you have - assuming it is nonsense.

TIMOTHY WHITE

http://www.rollingstone.com/artists/bobmarley/articles/story/5934433/thomothy\_white\_dies

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ ... wrote:

$$>$$

> Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't > know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but > I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it first > came out and it is certainly not there.

$$>$$

> Intef Djehutymes

 $\geq$  $\succ$

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 9:01 am

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

$$>$$
 $\angle$  $\angle$

1

11

—

 $\angle$

>

$$>$$
$$>$$
$$>$$
$$>$$

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post.
> He said
>
> that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan
>
> descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people
>
> discuss unless it is specifically brought up.
>
> I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to
>
> automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said
>
> you've experienced.
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:
>
>
>
>
>> Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in
>
> the
>
>> 1940s. The
>
>> relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he
>

> had
>
>> met his
>
>> father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in
>
> Kingston,
>
>> JA.
>
>> If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept
>
>> secret because
>
>> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.
>
>>
>
>> Intef Djehutymes
>
>>
>
>>
>
>> -----Original Message-----
>
>> From: cristofori whitakara
>
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com
>
>> Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)
>
>> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > i find the painting of bob marley fascinating.Â i

>

> read a

>

> > biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his

>

> > mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book is "catch

>

> a

>

> > Fire" by timothy white

>
> >
>
> > Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little
>
> > black man. Â Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A
>
> woman
>
> > photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at
>
> > Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) â€" A
>
> rising tide
>
> > of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is
>
> > threatening priceless rock art preserved
>
> > for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.
>
> In
>
> > Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and
>
> Libya,
>
> > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains
>
> of
>
> > Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as
>
> > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the
>
> > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these
>
> > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires
>
> a
>
> > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only
the

>
> > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural
>
> > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr
>
> > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect
>
> the
>
> > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie
>
> > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings
>
> to
>
> > make the faded colours look brighter, causing
>
> > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic
just
>
> > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of
>
> human
>
> > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.
>
> > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant
>
> > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the
>
> desert.
>
> > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers
>
> drive
>
> > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the
>
> > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."
While
>
> > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising
>

> > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists
>
> visiting
>
> > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red
>
> Sea
>
> > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this
>
> year
>
> > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist
Tilman
>
> > Lenssen-Erz says that in
>
> > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands
>
> of
>
> > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged
>
> with
>
> > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the
>
> rock
>
> > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European
>
> > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about
>
> the
>
> > significance of the religious power that is collected in this
>
> place ...
>
> > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks
>
> making
>
> > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts
>

> like
>
> > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as
>
> > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone
>
> unscathed by
>
> > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,
>
> contrary
>
> > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went
>
> via
>
> > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting
>
> > straight through the desert. Last
>
> > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant
>
> engraving
>
> > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we
>
> > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance
>
> of
>
> > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour
>
> operator
>
> > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development
>
> > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution
was
>
> > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the
>
> desert
>
> > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is
to

>
> > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we
>
> went
>
> > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the
>
> year
>
> > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators
>
> working
>
> > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.
>
> Kuper
>
> > says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"
>
> but
>
> > that others --
>
> > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based
>
> expats
>
> > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.
>
> > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan
>
> to
>
> > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation
>
> > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-
>
> boundary
>
> > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires
>
> the
>
> > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So
>
> far,

>
> > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three
>
> > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of
>
> hammering
>
> > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic
>
> relations.
>
> > With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and
>
> Prof
>
> > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want
>
> to
>
> > build a museum-cum-educatio nal centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the
>
> > jumping off point for most trips to Gilf
>
> > Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a
>
> museum to
>
> > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how
>
> man
>
> > can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.
>
> > Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some
>
> > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase
>
> > their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is
>
> on
>
> > the wall. === HTP, Mahari
>
> >
>

>>

 $\gt$

>> -----

 $\gamma$

>> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

 $\succ$

>> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

> >

 $\succ$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

 $\succ$

>>

$$>$$

>>

 $\succ$

>>

$$>$$

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> _____

>

> _

>

> > Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

>

> Mail! -

>

> > <http://mail.aol.com>

>

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! -
> <http://mail.aol.com>
>

---

Connect and share in new ways with Windows Live. Connect now!
| 23927|2007-11-27 06:48:32|Peter Gray|Re: Niw-t decoded -Reply to Peter|
Thanks again, Asar. But any idea where I might get the books you listed? Online perhaps? (The only one I already have is Civilisation or Barbarism).

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: asar_imhotep@yahoo.com
Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 21:59:17 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Niw-t decoded -Reply to Peter

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:

>
>

> Sorry. I'm not accusing Mahari or Asar of bias, but isn't it a flight of fantasy to assume the Ancient Egyptians or other African had dealings with quantum mechanics as we understand the term today? And it is a modern term (just as "string theory is a modern mathematical theory). How can we "know for sure" that the ancients thought in such terms? Quantum mechanics is a whole lot more than a cosmogeny or belief system that shares a certain conceptual framework with modern implications/ concepts such as the existence of multiple parallel universes.

>

> Peter

>

I understand your concern but it is based on a lack of knowledge of African systems. I have suggested two works alone that will dispel that myth and I will suggest a few more to give you a better sense of the knowledge the ancients possessed which is clearly a system of quantum mechanics:

Science of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

Sacred Symbols of the Dogon - Laird Scranton

A star of deep beginnings - Dr. Charles S. Finch

Civilization of Barbarism - Dr. Chiekh Anta Diop

African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo - Dr. Kimbwabndende Bunseki Fu-Kiau

The Healing Wisdom of Africa - Dr. Malidoma Some

If you can read French, then visit as well www.anhkonline.com

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Your smile counts. The more smiles you share, the more we donate. Join in!

| 23928|2007-11-27 07:22:57|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

But it is you who stated that you read it in Timothy White's book.

I didn't proceed from that platform, but from personal knowledge, several interviews conducted with Bob Marley himself and published in music journals as early as 1976.

I rechecked White's original publication because YOU said you saw it there.

And at any rate I would love to know how Cedella Booker is alleged to have traced her ancestry back to Nubia/Kemet.

Perhaps you can enlighten me.

Intef Djehuty

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 5:30 pm

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

I really don't have a dog in this fight. The point that I want to make is that I don't see where you can be so sure that the other gentleman is SO WRONG about his statement that Marley's mother traces her heritage back to Kemet/Nubia.

You apparently have stated your belief in the writings of a white guy. I think we can generally assume that the huge majority of white people will not willingly provide a connection of blacks to Kemet.

They have to be forced to make such a connection. It is something you should not even expect to be there in a white man's book. I suspect he would respond the way you have - assuming it is nonsense.

TIMOTHY WHITE

<http://www.rollingstone.com/artists/bobmarley/articles/story/5934433/t>

timothy_white_dies

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@... wrote:

>

> Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't > know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but

> I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it first > came out and it is certainly not there.

>

> Intef Djehutymes

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 9:01 am

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post.

> He said

>

> that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan

>

> descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people

>

> discuss unless it is specifically brought up.

>

> I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to

>

> automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said

>

> you've experienced.

>

> HTP,

>

> Mahari

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:

>

>>

>

> > Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in

>

> the

>

> > 1940s. The

>

> > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he

>

> had

>

> > met his

>

> > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in

>

> Kingston,

>

> > JA.

>

> > If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept

>

> > secret because

>

> > I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.

>

> >

>

> > Intef Djehutymes

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > -----Original Message-----

>

> > From: cristofori whitakara

>

> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>

> > Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)

>

> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > i find the painting of bob marley fascinating.Â i

>

> read a

>

> > biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his

>

> > mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book

is "catch

>

> a

>

> > Fire" by timothy white

>

> >

>

> > Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little

>

> > black man. Â Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A

>

> woman

>

> > photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at

>

> > Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) â€" A

>

> rising tide

>

> > of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is

>

> > threatening priceless rock art preserved

>

> > for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.

>

> In

>

> > Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and

>

> Libya,

>

> > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains

>

> of

>

> > Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as

>

> > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from

the

>

> > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these

>

> > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires

>

> a

>

> > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only
the

>

> > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural

>

> > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr

>

> > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect

>

> the

>

> > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie

>

> > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings

>

> to

>

> > make the faded colours look brighter, causing

>

> > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic

just

>

> > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of

>

> human

>

> > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.

>

> > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant

>

> > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the

>

> desert.

>

> > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers

>

> drive

>

> > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the

>

> > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."

While

>

> > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising

>

> > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists

>

> visiting

>

> > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red

>

> Sea

>

> > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this

>

> year

>

> > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist

Tilman

>

> > Lenssen-Erz says that in

>

> > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands

>

> of

>

> > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged

>

> with

>

> > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the

>

> rock

>

> > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European

>

> > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know

about

>

> the

>

> > significance of the religious power that is collected in this

>

> place ...

>

> > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks

>

> making

>

> > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts

>

> like

>

> > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as

>

> > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone

>

> unscathed by

>

> > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,

>

> contrary

>

> > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went

>

> via

>

> > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting

>

> > straight through the desert. Last

>

> > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant

>

> engraving

>

> > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we

>

> > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance

>

> of

>

> > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour

>

> operator

>

> > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra

Development

>

> > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution

was

>

> > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the

>

> desert

>

> > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is

to

>

> > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we

>

> went

>

> > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the

>

> year

>

> > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators

>

> working

>

> > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.

>

> Kuper

>

> > says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"

>

> but

>

> > that others --

>

> > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based

>

> expats

>

> > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.

>

> > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan

>

> to

>

> > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation

>

> > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-

>

> boundary

>

> > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires

>

> the

>

> > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So

>

> far,

>

> > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three

>

> > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of

>

> hammering

>

> > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic

>

> relations.

>

> > With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and

>

> Prof

>

> > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want

>

> to

>

> > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the

>

> > jumping off point for most trips to Gilf

>

> > Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a

>

> museum to

>

> > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain

how

>

> man

>

> > can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.

>

> > Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some

>

> > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase

>

> > their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is

>

> on

>

> > the wall. === HTP, Mahari

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > -----

>

> > Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

>

> > Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> _____

>

> _

>

> > Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

>

> Mail! -

>

> > <http://mail.aol.com>

>

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

Mail! -

> <http://mail.aol.com>

>

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail ! -

<http://o.aolcdn.com/cdn.webmail.aol.com/mailtour/aol/en-us/text.htm?ncid=aolcmp00050000000003>

| 23929|2007-11-27 07:23:29|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

Bob's father was not a colonial functionary. The late Mortimo Planner, an outstanding spokesman for Rastafari and an ideological influencer and mentor to Bob, was privileged to certain information which I received not only from him but from others in his circle.

I would not like to elaborate further on this as it puts into question some of the work I am currently working on. But I worked exclusively as a music critic from 1970 to 1982 during which time I interviewed many of the artists of Bob's generation, including jimmy cliff, with whom my brother worked as promotions manager.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 12:51 pm

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

Bob's father was known as "Captain Marley", who was disowned and disinherited by his family for having got black woman pregnant. Likewise, black Jamaicans of the time condemned his mother, Cedella, for having got pregnant for a white man. He (the father) was not a sailor, but worked as a surveyor for the colonial government.

Bob's relationship with his mother could hardly be described as "fleeting" -- where did you get such a notion, Intef Djehutymes? When Bob went to the US (in 1966), it was to his mothers house, and he confided a great deal in her about his recent relationship with (and marriage to) Rita Anderson. Sunseuently, they remained close, as is evident from Cedella Marley's various interviews on the topic.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 17:01:21 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post. He said that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people discuss unless it is specifically brought up.

I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said you've experienced.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@... wrote:

>

> Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in the

> 1940s. The > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he had

> met his > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in Kingston,

> JA.

> If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept > secret because

> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.

>

> Intef Djehutymes

>

> Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and Libya, > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains of > Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires a > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only the > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural
 > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect the > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings to > make the faded colours look brighter, causing > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of human > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.
 > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the desert.
 > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers drive
 > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient." While > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists visiting > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red Sea > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this year > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist Tilman > Lenssen-Erz says that in > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands of > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged with > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the rock
 > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about

the > significance of the religious power that is collected in this place ...

> where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks making > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts like

> the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as

> Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone unscathed by > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that, contrary > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went via

> the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting

> straight through the desert. Last > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant engraving

> of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance of > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour operator

> based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development

> Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the desert

> and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we went > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the year > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators working > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.

Kuper

> says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people" but

> that others --

> tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based expats

> who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.

> With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan to > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-

boundary

> cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires the > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So far,

> only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of hammering > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic relations.

> With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and Prof

> Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want to > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the

> jumping off point for most trips to Gilf

> Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a museum to > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how man

> can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.

> Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase > their names. For the desert's desecrators, it seems the writing is on > the wall. === HTP, Mahari

>

>

> -----

> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

> Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! -
> <http://mail.aol.com>
>

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail ! -

<http://o.aolcdn.com/cdn.webmail.aol.com/mailtour/aol/en-us/text.htm?ncid=aolcmp00050000000003>

| 23930|2007-11-27 07:24:52|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|

Peter

I really don't know where your argument is leading to. I responded to your question about whether Marley's mother came from Nubia/Egypt which you said you had seen in Timothy White's book, "Catch A Fire." I have never mentioned TW's name or book.

Then you mentioned what appears to be a quote in which he questions the "belief in the writings of a white man" is to be assumed to be erroneous,

well, TW is not a black man but white!!

We don't need to assert the Nubian/Egypt connection in order to validate Marley's talent. There is no record of Cedella Booker stating that she has Nubian/Egyptian ancestry. If there is, I would be very grateful to receive that or any source from which you may have obtained the information on Marley's ancestry.

Asante Sana.

Itf Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 6:24 am

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

Intef, Timothy:

Marley's mother may quite possibly be of original Ghanian stock, as are many of the Jamaican Maroons who fought the British to a sort of stalemate independence. That is not to say that she has actually "traced" her specific lineage to Ghana. but more likely that she is from a Maroon family.

As for Timothy's declaration to the effect that any "belief in the writings of a white man" is to be assumed to be erroneous (just because it is written by a white man), this is hardly worth responding to.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: mahari@myway.com

Date: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 01:30:06 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

I really don't have a dog in this fight. The point that I want to make is that I don't see where you can be so sure that the other gentleman is SO WRONG about his statement that Marley's mother traces her heritage back to Kemet/Nubia.

You apparently have stated your belief in the writings of a white guy. I think we can generally assume that the huge majority of white people will not willingly provide a connection of blacks to Kemet. They have to be forced to make such a connection. It is something you should not even expect to be there in a white man's book. I suspect he would respond the way you have - assuming it is nonsense.

TIMOTHY WHITE

http://www.rollingstone.com/artists/bobmarley/articles/story/5934433/timothy\_white\_dies

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@... wrote:

>
> Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't > know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but > I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it first > came out and it is certainly not there.

>
> Intef Djehutymes

>
>
>
> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 9:01 am
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>
>
>
>
>
>
>

> > 1940s. The
>
> > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he
>
> had
>
> > met his
>
> > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in
>
> Kingston,
>
> > JA.
>
> > If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept
>
> > secret because
>
> > I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.
>
> >
>
> > Intef Djehutymes
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > -----Original Message-----
>
> > From: cristofori whitakara
>
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>
> > Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)
>
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > i find the painting of bob marley fascinating. i

>

> read a

>

> > biography about robery marley that wrote in the book that on his

>

> > mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book is "catch

>
> a
>
>> Fire" by timothy white
>
>>
>
>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little
>
>> black man. Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A
>
> woman
>
>> photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at
>
>> Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) " A
>
> rising tide
>
>> of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is
>
>> threatening priceless rock art preserved
>
>> for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.
>
> In
>
>> Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and
>
> Libya,
>
>> the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains
>
> of
>
>> Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as
>
>> anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the
>
>> nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these
>
>> masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires
>

> a
>
> > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only
the
>
> > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural
>
> > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr
>
> > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect
>
> the
>
> > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie
>
> > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings
>
> to
>
> > make the faded colours look brighter, causing
>
> > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic
just
>
> > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of
>
> human
>
> > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.
>
> > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant
>
> > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the
>
> desert.
>
> > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers
>
> drive
>
> > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the
>
> > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."
While

>
> > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising
>
> > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists
>
> visiting
>
> > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red
>
> Sea
>
> > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this
>
> year
>
> > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist
Tilman
>
> > Lenssen-Erz says that in
>
> > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands
>
> of
>
> > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged
>
> with
>
> > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the
>
> rock
>
> > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European
>
> > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about
>
> the
>
> > significance of the religious power that is collected in this
>
> place ...
>
> > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks
>

> making
>
> > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts
>
> like
>
> > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as
>
> > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone
>
> unscathed by
>
> > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,
>
> contrary
>
> > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went
>
> via
>
> > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting
>
> > straight through the desert. Last
>
> > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant
>
> engraving
>
> > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we
>
> > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance
>
> of
>
> > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour
>
> operator
>
> > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development
>
> > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution
was
>
> > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the
>

> desert
>
> > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is
to
>
> > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we
>
> went
>
> > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the
>
> year
>
> > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators
>
> working
>
> > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.
>
> Kuper
>
> > says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"
>
> but
>
> > that others --
>
> > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based
>
> expats
>
> > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.
>
> > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan
>
> to
>
> > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation
>
> > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-
>
> boundary
>
> > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires
>
> the

>
> > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So
>
> far,
>
> > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three
>
> > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of
>
> hammering
>
> > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic
>
> relations.
>
> > With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and
>
> Prof
>
> > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want
>
> to
>
> > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the
>
> > jumping off point for most trips to Gilf
>
> > Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a
>
> museum to
>
> > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how
>
> man
>
> > can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.
>
> > Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some
>
> > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase
>
> > their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is
>
> on
>

> > the wall. === HTP, Mahari

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > -----

>

> > Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

>

> > Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

>

>

> —

>

> > Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

>

> Mail! -

>

> > <http://mail.aol.com>

>

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! -
> <http://mail.aol.com>
>

Connect and share in new ways with Windows Live. Connect now!

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail ! -

<http://o.aolcdn.com/cdn.webmail.aol.com/mailtour/aol/en-us/text.htm?ncid=aolcmp00050000000003>

| 23931|2007-11-27 07:26:58|Peter Gray|Re: The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"|

Thank you, Asar.

The link at the end [CLICK HERE] is an incredible summary, but I can't get it to print beyond the third line -- not even the initial map. Is this Google related, or am I doing something wrong?

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: asar_imhotep@yahoo.com

Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 23:40:54 -0800

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"

Hello Terry

In some degree I agree with them and in others I do not. The more politically correct term should be that the Mdw Ntr glyphs and language hasn't FULLY been deciphered by mainstream Egyptologists. There are several reasons why it hasn't been FULLY deciphered:

1. Mdw Ntr is the symbolic representation of concepts from various different African nations. To fully grasp these concepts, one must systematically organize the cosmologies of every African nation which has yet to be done. Dr. Theophile Obenga has started the process however in his work Introduction à la linguistique historique africaine Introduction to Linguistics African history
2. There are two primary levels to Mdw Ntr: one for the general public and one for the priesthood. They use the same script to convey these two realities. All African systems that have a priesthood operate by this convention. Because of Egyptologists not being initiated in African systems, they do not possess the tools to be able to read the 2nd and 3rd levels of Mdw Ntr. Mdw Ntr is a phonetic language and an ideographic language and each symbol conveys a concept and when each of these "apparent" phonetic symbols are combined, they are words for 1st level people and sentences for 2nd and 3rd level people. Egyptologists are on the 1st level

3. The Mdw Ntr has been deciphered to a degree, but because most Westerners (outside of Masons) do not have a background in interpreting symbols, they miss the subtleties and scientific concepts masked in the script.
4. Lastly, Mdw Ntr really is a "language" but a way of thinking. This may not make sense but it's the only I can explain it. It's a initiation process into balancing your left and right brain...to get closer to the concept of "meaning" that cannot be expressed in language. This is why the poet is revered in Africa. Poetry is next in line to meaning and understanding. It is also an oracle system using nature itself as the divination tools.

So they have been deciphered, but on the first level. It takes a life time to master Mdw Ntr as you have to be a poet, a geologists, computer programmer, a zoologist, astronomer, architect, blacksmith and farmer to fully grasp the concepts. This is why initiation took 40 years.

To get a good idea of the deciphering of the Mdw Ntr script, CLICK HERE to find out more. I have run the page through the Google translation script as the site and page is originally in French. Some things will be slightly of grammatically, but you can follow it generally without much loss in understanding.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Terry Sanders wrote:

Greetings Family,

Although I touched on the subject briefly, some time ago, I feel that this is a topic that should be fully addressed, due to the serious nature of the implications.

I have a real interest in Egyptian hieroglyphics, but I cannot seem to get beyond statements made by some scholars that the Ancient Egyptian hieroglyphs have never been deciphered. On pgs. 146-150, in his book, "The Historical Origin Of Christianity", Dr. Walter Williams provides valid reasons why this has not occurred.

If Dr. Williams and Carol Andrews are correct in their assertions, what does this mean for all of the scholarly writings that are in existence today? Do we really know what the ancients had to say in their writings or are we incorrectly relying on others to tell us what they have assumed what our ancient ancestor had to say. Dr. Williams writings seem very convincing and if he's correct, where does that leave us, when it comes to the Egyptian hieroglyphs?

Ma, at Hotep!

Terry Sanders

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.

---

Your smile counts. The more smiles you share, the more we donate. Join in!
| 23932|2007-11-27 08:32:42|asar_imhotep|Re: Niw-t decoded -Reply to Peter|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thanks again, Asar. But any idea where I might get the books you listed? Online perhaps? (The only one I already have is Civilisation or Barbarism).

>

> Peter

>

>

All of the books mentioned mentioned you can find on www.amazon.com.
If my local Shrine of the Black Madonna doesn't have it, that's where I go.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23933|2007-11-27 08:46:12|asar_imhotep|Re: The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost
Language"|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thank you, Asar.

>

> The link at the end [CLICK HERE] is an incredible summary, but I can't get it to print beyond the third line -- not even the initial map. Is this Google related, or am I doing something wrong?

>

> Peter

>

>

>

It's could be Google related, I can't really diagnose from here. I would say just copy and paste it into to word and then print, but because the page is translated, Word tends to copy the translation, but also the original French and pastes them both on top of each other. You would have to manually go in and remove the French which is tedious. Then go back and correct the English translation. I wish all of this stuff was in English.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23934|2007-11-27 09:16:08|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|
Peter,

That was my statement although I didn't say it exactly as you have re-written it. My position is that anything written by a white man dealing with black people is to be viewed with skepticism. Of course, what he writes COULD be accurate. However, there is more reason to believe that it will be skewed than absolutley fair or accurate. I based this on the reason for which this forum exists and from years of reading white dominated newspapers which mis-state the truth about black people and have for centuries now and from current events. If any black person automatically believes what is written in books and newspapers and in the media, in general, he is deluded. I know that makes life more difficult but life is.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Intef, Timothy:

>

> Marley's mother may quite possibly be of original Ghanian stock, as are many of the Jamaican Maroons who fought the British to a sort of stalemate independence. That is not to say that she has actually "traced" her specific lineage to Ghana. but more likely that she is from a Maroon family.

>

> As for Timothy's declaration to the effect that any "belief in the writings of a white man" is to be assumed to be erroneous (just because it is written by a white man), this is hardly worth responding to.

>

> Peter

>

i find the painting of bob marley fascinating. i read a biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his mother's side he was of nubian-egyptian descent. the book is "catch a Fire" by timothy white. Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little black man. Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A woman photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) " A rising tide of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is threatening priceless rock art preserved
 for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.
 In Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and Libya, the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains of Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires a deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only the rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr
 Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect the art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings to make the faded colours look brighter, causing irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of human figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers. Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the desert. Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers drive through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient." While only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists visiting Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red Sea resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this year we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist Tilman Lenssen-Erz says that in prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands of square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged with symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the rock art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about the significance of the religious power that is collected in this> > place ...> > > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks> > making> > > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts> > like> > > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as> > > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone> > unscathed by> > > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,> > contrary> > > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went> > via> > > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting> > > straight through the desert. Last> > > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant> > engraving> > > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we> > > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance> > of> > > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour> > operator> > > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development> > > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was> > > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the> > desert> > > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to> > > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we> > went> > > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the> > year> > > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators> > working> > > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.> > Kuper> > > says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"> > but> > > that others --> > > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based> > expats> > > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.> > > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan> > to> > > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation> > > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-> > boundary> > > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires> > the> > > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So> > > far,> > > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three> > > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of> > hammering> > > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic> > relations.> > > With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and> > Prof> > > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want> > to> > > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the> > > jumping off point for most trips to Gilf> > > Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a> > museum to> > > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how> > man> > > can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.> > > Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some> > > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase> > > their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is> > on> > >

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 5:30 pm

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> I really don't have a dog in this fight. The point that I > want to

>

> make is that I don't see where you can be so sure that the other

>

> gentleman is SO WRONG about his statement that Marley's mother traces

>

> her heritage back to Kemet/Nubia.

>

> You apparently have stated your belief in the writings of a white > guy. I think we can generally assume that the huge majority of white

>

>

> people will not willingly provide a connection of blacks to Kemet.

>

> They have to be forced to make such a connection. It is something > you should not even expect to be there in a white man's book. I
>
>
> suspect he would respond the way you have - assuming it is nonsense.

> TIMOTHY WHITE

>
>
<http://www.rollingstone.com/artists/bobmarley/articles/story/5934433/t> > imothy_white_dies

> HTP,

> Mahari

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:

>> Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't >> know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but

>> I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it
first

>> came out and it is certainly not there.

>> Intef Djehutymes

>> -----Original Message-----

>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> >
>
> > I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the
>
> post.
>
> > He said
>
> >
>
> > that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan
>
> >
>
> > descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people
>
> >
>
> > discuss unless it is specifically brought up.
>
> >
>
> > I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to
>
> >
>
> > automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said
>
> >
>
> > you've experienced.
>
> >
>
> > HTP,
>
> >
>
> > Mahari

>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:
>
>>
>
>>>
>
>>
>
>>> Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in
>
>>
>
>> the
>
>>
>
>>> 1940s. The
>
>>
>
>>> relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he
>
>>
>
>> had
>
>>
>
>>> met his
>
>>
>
>>> father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in
>
>>
>
>> Kingston,
>
>>

>
>>> JA.
>
>>
>
>>> If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept
>
>>
>
>>> secret because
>
>>
>
>>> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.
>
>>
>
>>>
>
>>
>
>>> Intef Djehutymes
>
>>
>
>>>
>
>>
>
>>>
>
>>
>
>>> -----Original Message-----
>
>>
>
>>> From: cristofori whitakara
>
>>
>
>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>
>>
>

[illegible]

[illegible]

>>>
>
>>
>
>>>
>
>>
>
>>> i find the painting of bob marley fascinating.ÿ□ÿ i
>
>>
>
>> read a
>
>>
>
>>> biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his
>
>>
>
>>> mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book
>
> is "catch
>
>>
>
>> a
>
>>
>
>>> Fire" by timothy white
>
>>
>
>>>
>
>>
>
>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little
>
>>
>
>>> black man. ÿ□ÿ Go to Google News Photo 2 of
3 A
>

> >
>
> > woman
>
> >
>
> > > photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger
at
>
> >
>
> > > Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) ÿçâ
□¬" A
>
> >
>
> > rising tide
>
> >
>
> > > of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism
is
>
> >
>
> > > threatening priceless rock art preserved
>
> >
>
> > > for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.
>
> >
>
> > In
>
> >
>
> > > Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and
>
> >
>
> > Libya,
>
> >
>

> > > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the
>
> mountains
>
> >
>
> > of
>
> >
>
> > > Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity
as
>
> >
>
> > > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from
>
> the
>
> >
>
> > > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these
>
> >
>
> > > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first
>
> requires
>
> >
>
> > a
>
> >
>
> > > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only
>
> the
>
> >
>
> > > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural
>
> >
>

> > > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says
Dr

>

> >

>

> > > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to

>

> protect

>

> >

>

> > the

>

> >

>

> > > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie

>

> >

>

> > > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings

>

> >

>

> > to

>

> >

>

> > > make the faded colours look brighter, causing

>

> >

>

> > > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic

>

> just

>

> >

>

> > > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of

>

> >

>

> > human

>

> >

>

> > > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.
>
> >
>
> > > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a
>
> giant
>
> >
>
> > > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the
>
> >
>
> > desert.
>
> >
>
> > > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers
>
> >
>
> > drive
>
> >
>
> > > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the
>
> >
>
> > > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."
>
> While
>
> >
>
> > > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been
>
> rising
>
> >
>
> > > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists
>

> >
>
> > visiting
>
> >
>
> > > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red
>
> >
>
> > Sea
>
> >
>
> > > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this
>
> >
>
> > year
>
> >
>
> > > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist
>
> Tilman
>
> >
>
> > > Lenssen-Erz says that in
>
> >
>
> > > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands
>
> >
>
> > of
>
> >
>
> > > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged
>
> >
>

> > with
>
> >
>
> > > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the
>
> >
>
> > rock
>
> >
>
> > > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European
>
> >
>
> > > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know
>
> about
>
> >
>
> > the
>
> >
>
> > > significance of the religious power that is collected in this
>
> >
>
> > place ...
>
> >
>
> > > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks
>
> >
>
> > making
>
> >
>
> > > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts
>
> >
>

> > like
>
> >
>
> > > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known
as
>
> >
>
> > > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone
>
> >
>
> > unscathed by
>
> >
>
> > > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,
>
> >
>
> > contrary
>
> >
>
> > > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went
>
> >
>
> > via
>
> >
>
> > > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting
>
> >
>
> > > straight through the desert. Last
>
> >
>
> > > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant
>
> >
>

> > engraving
>
> >
>
> > > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we
>
> >
>
> > > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance
>
> >
>
> > of
>
> >
>
> > > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour
>
> >
>
> > operator
>
> >
>
> > > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra
>
> Development
>
> >
>
> > > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution
>
> was
>
> >
>
> > > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the
>
> >
>
> > desert
>
> >
>
> > > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is

>
> to
>
>>
>
>>> train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year
we
>
>>
>
>> went
>
>>
>
>>> to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while
the
>
>>
>
>> year
>
>>
>
>>> before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators
>
>>
>
>> working
>
>>
>
>>> out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.
>
>>
>
>> Kuper
>
>>
>
>>> says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"
>
>>
>
>> but
>

> >
>
> > > that others --
>
> >
>
> > > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based
>
> >
>
> > expats
>
> >
>
> > > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.
>
> >
>
> > > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan
>
> >
>
> > to
>
> >
>
> > > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation
>
> >
>
> > > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-
>
> >
>
> > boundary
>
> >
>
> > > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires
>
> >
>

> > the
>
> >
>
> > > three nations to all first declare individual national parks.
So
>
> >
>
> > far,
>
> >
>
> > > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three
>
> >
>
> > > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of
>
> >
>
> > hammering
>
> >
>
> > > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic
>
> >
>
> > relations.
>
> >
>
> > > With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper
and
>
> >
>
> > Prof
>
> >
>
> > > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want
>
> >

>
> > to
>
> >
>
> > > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla,
the
>
> >
>
> > > jumping off point for most trips to Gilf
>
> >
>
> > > Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a
>
> >
>
> > museum to
>
> >
>
> > > explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain
>
> how
>
> >
>
> > man
>
> >
>
> > > can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.
>
> >
>
> > > Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some
>
> >
>
> > > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase
>
> >
>
> > > their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing

is

>

> >

>

> > on

>

> >

>

> > > the wall. === HTP, Mahari

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > > -----

>

> >

>

> > > Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

>

> >

>

> > > Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

[illegible]

> > >

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

> > >

 $\succ$

>>

$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$

> > >

 $\succ$

> >

$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$

> >

$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$
 $\gg$
$$>$$

> > >

$$>$$

[illegible]

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

>

>

> —

>

> > Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

>

> Mail! -

>

> > <http://mail.aol.com>

>

> >

>

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com

Date: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 17:16:06 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

Peter,

That was my statement although I didn't say it exactly as you have re-written it. My position is that anything written by a white man dealing with black people is to be viewed with skepticism. Of course, what he writes COULD be accurate. However, there is more reason to believe that it will be skewed than absolutely fair or accurate. I based this on the reason for which this forum exists and from years of reading white dominated newspapers which mis-state the truth about black people and have for centuries now and from current events. If any black person automatically believes what is written in books and newspapers and in the media, in general, he is deluded. I know that makes life more difficult but life is.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Intef, Timothy:

>

> Marley's mother may quite possibly be of original Ghanian stock, as are many of the Jamaican Maroons who fought the British to a sort of stalemate independence. That is not to say that she has actually "traced" her specific lineage to Ghana. but more likely that she is from a Maroon family.

>

> As for Timothy's declaration to the effect that any "belief in the writings of a white man" is to be assumed to be erroneous (just because it is written by a white man), this is hardly worth responding to.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: mahari@...: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 01:30:06
+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

>

>

>

> I really don't have a dog in this fight. The point that I want to make is that I don't see where you can be so sure that the other gentleman is SO WRONG about his statement that Marley's mother traces

You her heritage back to Kemet/Nubia. You apparently have stated your belief in the writings of a white guy. I think we can generally assume that the huge majority of white people will not willingly provide a connection of blacks to Kemet. They have to be forced to make such a connection. It is something you should not even expect to be there in a white man's book. I suspect he would respond the way you have - assuming it is nonsense.

TIMOTHY WHITE

http:// www.rollingstone .com/artists/ bobmarley/ articles/ story/5934433/timothy\_ white \_dies

HTP, Mahari--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:>> Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't> know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but> I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it first> came out and it is certainly not there.> > Intef Djehutymes> > > -----Original Message-----> From: Mahari Mengistu> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com> Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 9:01 am> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger> > > > > >
> > > > > > > > > > I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post. > He said> > that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan> > descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people> > discuss unless it is specifically brought up.> > I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to> > automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said> > you've experienced. > > HTP,> > Mahari> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:> > > > > Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in> > the> > > 1940s. The> > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he> > had> > met his> > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in> > Kingston,> > JA.> > If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept> > > secret because> > I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.> > > > > Intef Djehutymes> > > > > > > -----Original Message-- ----> > From: cristofori whitakara> > > To:
Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com> > > Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800
(PST)> > > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger> > > >
> > > > > > > > > > i find the painting of bob marley fascinating.Â i> > read a> > biography about robbery
marley that wrote in the book that on his> > mother's side he was of nubian-egyptian descent. the book is "catch> > a> > Fire" by timothy white> > > > Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little> > black man. Â Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A> > woman> > photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at> > Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) â€" A> rising tide> > of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is> > threatening priceless rock art preserved> >
> for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.> >

In> > Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and> > Libya,> > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains> > of> > Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as> > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the> > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these> > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires> > a> > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only the> > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural> > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr> > > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect> > the> > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie> > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings> > to> > make the faded colours look brighter, causing> > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just> > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of> > human> > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.> > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant> > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the> > desert.> > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers> > drive> > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the> > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient." While> > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising> > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists> > visiting> > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red> > Sea> > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this> > year> > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist Tilman> > > Lenssen-Erz says that in> > > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands> > of> > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged> > with> > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the> > rock> > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European> > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about> > the> > significance of the religious power that is collected in this> > place ...> > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks> > making> > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts> > like> > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as> > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone> > unscathed by> > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,> > contrary> > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went> > via> > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting> > straight through the desert. Last> > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant> > engraving> > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we>>> developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance>> of>>> educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour>> operator>>> based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development>>> Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was>>> through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the>>> desert>>> and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to>>> train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we>>> went>>> to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the>>> year>>> before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators>>> working>>> out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.>>> Kuper>>> says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people">>> but>>> that others -->>> tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based>>> expats>>> who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.>>> With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan>>> to>>> agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation>>> conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans->>> boundary>>> cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires>>> the>>> three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So>>> far,>>> only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three>>> countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of>>> hammering>>> out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic>>> relations.>>> With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and>>> Prof>>> Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want>>> to>>> build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the>>> jumping off point for most trips to Gilf>>> Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a>>> museum to>>> explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how>>> man>>> can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.>>> Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some>>> tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase>>> their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is>>> on>>> the wall. === HTP, Mahari>>>>>>>> -----

[illegible]

_____ > > >

[illegible]

Email

and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail! - >

<http://mail.aol.com>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Connect and share in new ways with Windows Live.

> <http://www.windowslive.com/connect.html?>

ocid=TXT_TAGLM_Wave2_newways_112007

>

---

Connect and share in new ways with Windows Live. Connect now!

| 23937|2007-11-27 10:03:24|Peter Gray|Re: The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"|

Sorry, Asar.

I have just been able to print it, although it seems that pages 2 - 21 were blank for some reason.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: asar_imhotep@yahoo.com

Date: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 16:46:11 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Story of the Rosetta Stone, "Finding a Lost Language"

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thank you, Asar.

>

> The link at the end [CLICK HERE] is an incredible summary, but I can't get it to print beyond the third line -- not even the initial map. Is this Google related, or am I doing something wrong?

>

> Peter

>

>

>

It's could be Google related, I can't really diagnose from here. I would say just copy and paste it into to word and then print, but because the page is translated, Word tends to copy the translation, but also the original French and pastes them both on top of each other. You would have to manually go in and remove the French which is tedious. Then go back and correct the English translation. I wish all of this stuff was in English.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasui te.com>

---

You keep typing, we keep giving. Download Messenger and join the im Initiative now. Join in!
| 23938|2007-11-27 10:10:40|Peter Gray|Re: Niw-t decoded -Reply to Peter|
Great. Then I can find them.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: asar_imhotep@yahoo.com
Date: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 16:32:37 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Niw-t decoded -Reply to Peter

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thanks again, Asar. But any idea where I might get the books you listed? Online perhaps? (The only one I already have is Civilisation or Barbarism).

>

> Peter

>

>

All of the books mentioned mentioned you can find on www.amazon.com.
If my local Shrine of the Black Madonna doesn't have it, that's where I go.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasui te.com>

---

Share life as it happens with the new Windows Live. Share now!

| 23939|2007-11-27 10:18:12|Peter Gray|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|
Intef,

I have no record of Cedella Brooks claiming that she had Nubian/Egyptian ancestry -- that was the reason for my post -- to clarify the matter. So it seems we are actually in agreement. The onus is on whoever made the statement to provide a "source" from which they obtained such info. I simply wanted to state that she would have been quite reasonable to speculate on having Ghanaian ancestry, nothing else.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: KarnakHouse@aol.com
Date: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 10:24:42 -0500
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

Peter

I really don't know where your argument is leading to. I responded to your question about whether Marley's mother came from Nubia/Egypt which you said you had seen in Timothy White's book, "Catch A Fire." I have never mentioned TW's name or book.

Then you mentioned what appears to be a quote in which he questions the "belief in the writings of a white man" is to be assumed to be erroneous,

well, TW is not a black man but white!!

We don't need to assert the Nubian/Egypt connection in order to validate Marley's talent. There is no record of Cedella Booker stating that she has Nubian/Egyptian ancestry. If there is, I would be very grateful to receive that or any source from which you may have obtained the information on Marley's ancestry.

Asante Sana.

Itf Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 6:24 am

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

Intef, Timothy:

Marley's mother may quite possibly be of original Ghanian stock, as are many of the Jamaican Maroons who fought the British to a sort of stalemate independence. That is not to say that she has actually "traced" her specific lineage to Ghana. but more likely that she is from a Maroon family.

As for Timothy's declaration to the effect that any "belief in the writings of a white man" is to be assumed to be erroneous (just because it is written by a white man), this is hardly worth responding to.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 01:30:06 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

I really don't have a dog in this fight. The point that I want to make is that I don't see where you can be so sure that the other gentleman is SO WRONG about his statement that Marley's mother traces her heritage back to Kemet/Nubia.

You apparently have stated your belief in the writings of a white guy. I think we can generally assume that the huge majority of white people will not willingly provide a connection of blacks to Kemet. They have to be forced to make such a connection. It is something you should not even expect to be there in a white man's book. I suspect he would respond the way you have - assuming it is nonsense.

TIMOTHY WHITE
http://www.rollings\_tone.com/artists/bobmarley/articles/story/5934433/timothy\_white\_dies

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ ... wrote:

>

> Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't > know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but > I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it first > came out and it is certainly not there.

>

> Intef Djehutymes

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 9:01 am

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post.

> He said

>

> that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan

>

> descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people

>

>

> discuss unless it is specifically brought up.
>
> I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to
>
> automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said
>
> you've experienced.
>
> HTP,
>
> Mahari
>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:
>
>>
>
>> Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in
>
> the
>
>> 1940s. The
>
>> relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he
>
> had
>
>> met his
>
>> father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in
>
> Kingston,
>
>> JA.
>
>> If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept
>
>> secret because
>
>> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.
>
>>
>
>> Intef Djehutymes
>

[illegible]

>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>> i find the painting of bob marley fascinating. i
>
> read a
>
>> biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his
>
>> mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book is "catch
>
> a
>
>> Fire" by timothy white
>
>>
>
>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little
>
>> black man. Go to Google News Photo 2 of 3 A
>
> woman
>
>> photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger at
>
>> Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) " A
>
> rising tide
>
>> of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is
>
>> threatening priceless rock art preserved
>
>> for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.

>
> In
>
> > Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and
>
> Libya,
>
> > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains
>
> of
>
> > Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as
>
> > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the
>
> > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these
>
> > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires
>
> a
>
> > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only
the
>
> > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural
>
> > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr
>
> > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect
>
> the
>
> > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie
>
> > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings
>
> to
>
> > make the faded colours look brighter, causing
>
> > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic
just

>
> > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of
>
> human
>
> > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.
>
> > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant
>
> > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the
>
> desert.
>
> > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers
>
> drive
>
> > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the
>
> > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."
While
>
> > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising
>
> > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists
>
> visiting
>
> > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red
>
> Sea
>
> > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this
>
> year
>
> > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist
Tilman
>
> > Lenssen-Erz says that in
>
> > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands
>
> of

>
> > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged
>
> with
>
> > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the
>
> rock
>
> > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European
>
> > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about
>
> the
>
> > significance of the religious power that is collected in this
>
> place ...
>
> > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks
>
> making
>
> > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts
>
> like
>
> > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as
>
> > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone
>
> unscathed by
>
> > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,
>
> contrary
>
> > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went
>
> via
>
> > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting
>
> > straight through the desert. Last
>

> > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant
>
> engraving
>
> > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we
>
> > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance
>
> of
>
> > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour
>
> operator
>
> > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development
>
> > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution
was
>
> > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the
>
> desert
>
> > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is
to
>
> > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we
>
> went
>
> > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the
>
> year
>
> > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators
>
> working
>
> > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.
>
> Kuper
>
> > says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"
>
> but

>
> > that others --
>
> > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based
>
> expats
>
> > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.
>
> > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan
>
> to
>
> > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation
>
> > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-
>
> boundary
>
> > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires
>
> the
>
> > three nations to all first declare individual national parks. So
>
> far,
>
> > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three
>
> > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of
>
> hammering
>
> > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic
>
> relations.
>
> > With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper and
>
> Prof
>
> > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency want
>
> to
>
> > build a museum-cum-educatio nal centre in the oasis of Dakhla, the

>
>> jumping off point for most trips to Gilf
>
>> Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a
>
> museum to
>
>> explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain how
>
> man
>
>> can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.
>
>> Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some
>
>> tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase
>
>> their names. For the desert's desecraters, it seems the writing is
>
> on
>
>> the wall. === HTP, Mahari
>
>>
>
>>
>
>> -----
>
>> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.
>
>> Make Yahoo! your homepage.
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>
>>
>

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

 $\gt$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

>>

$$>$$

> _____

$$>$$

> _

$$>$$

> > Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

>

> Mail! -

>

> > <http://mail.aol.com>

>

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

Mail! -

> <http://mail.aol.com>

>

Connect and share in new ways with Windows Live. Connect now!

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail ! -

<http://o.aolcdn.com/cdn.webmail.aol.com/mailtour/aol/en-us/text.htm?ncid=aolcmp0005000000003>

---

Your smile counts. The more smiles you share, the more we donate. Join in!
| 23940|2007-11-27 10:34:52|Peter Gray|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|
Intef,

Then perhaps you should now interview both Cedella Brooks and Bunny [Livingstone] Wailer, to verify whether or not the statements they recorded in the video documentary, Rebel Music, were true. It is also in this video that other neighbours/friends of the family attested to Mr. Marley's function as a government surveyor. OK?

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: KarnakHouse@aol.com
Date: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 05:38:45 -0500
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

Bob's father was not a colonial functionary. The late Mortimo Planner, an outstanding spokesman for Rastafari and an ideological influencer and mentor to Bob, was privileged to certain information which I received not only from him but from others in his circle. I would not like to elaborate further on this as it puts into question some of the work I am currently working on. But I worked exclusively as a music critic from 1970 to 1982 during which time I interviewed many of the artists of Bob's generation, including jimmy cliff, with whom my brother worked as promotions manager.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Gray <atenergy@hotmail.com>
To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 12:51 pm
Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

Bob's father was known as "Captain Marley", who was disowned and disinherited by his family for having got black woman pregnant. Likewise, black Jamaicans of the time condemned his mother, Cedella, for having got pregnant for a white man. He (the father) was not a sailor, but worked as a surveyor for the colonial government.

Bob's relationship with his mother could hardly be described as "fleeting" -- where did you get such a notion, Intef Djehutymes? When Bob went to the US (in 1966), it was to his mothers house, and he confided a great deal in her about his recent relationship with (and marriage to) Rita Anderson. Sunsequently, they remained close, as is evident from Cedella Marley's various interviews on the topic.

Peter

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 17:01:21 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the post. He said that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people discuss unless it is specifically brought up.

I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said you've experienced.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ ... wrote:

>

> Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in the

> 1940s. The > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he had

> met his > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in Kingston,

> JA.

> If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best kept

> secret because

> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.

> Intef Djehutymes

$$>$$

> From: cristofori whitakara

> Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)

$$>$$
 $\succ$

✓

/ /

>

$$>$$
$$>$$
 $\succ$

✓

/

>

$$>$$
$$>$$

read a > mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book is "catch

> Fire" by timothy white

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little

woman

> Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) • A

rising tide

> of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism is

> threatening priceless rock art preserved
 > for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.
 In
 > Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and Libya,
 > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the mountains
 of > Gilf Kebir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity as > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from the > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first requires
 a > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only the > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural
 > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says Dr > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to protect
 the
 > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings
 to > make the faded colours look brighter, causing > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic just > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of human
 > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.
 > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a giant > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the
 desert.
 > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers
 drive
 > through the desert to reach Gilf Kebir, site of the Cave of the > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient." While > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been rising > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists
 visiting
 > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a Red
 Sea
 > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this
 year
 > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist Tilman > Lenssen-Erz says that in > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands
 of > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged
 with > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the

rock

- > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European
  - > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know about the
  - > significance of the religious power that is collected in this place ...
  - > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks making
  - > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts like
  - > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known as
  - > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone unscathed by
  - > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that, contrary
  - > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only went via
  - > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting
  - > straight through the desert. Last
  - > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant engraving
  - > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we
  - > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance of
  - > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour operator
  - > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra Development
  - > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution was
  - > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the desert
  - > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is to
  - > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year we went
  - > to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while the year
  - > before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators working
  - > out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.
- Kuper
- > says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people" but
  - > that others --
  - > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based expats
  - > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.
  - > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan

In my 2005 paper on titled What's in a name? The Meaning of Km.t, I posited the notion that the names of countries and towns were all in relation to deities and were the result of a thriving priesthood. With that in mind, the symbolisms used to convey the ideologies apparent in the names clearly derive from NATURE and the OCCUPATIONS of the inhabitants. I also posited that Km.t was related to Asar (Wasiri, Ausaru, Osiris) and was connected to the original BLACKSMITHS from the "south" as is explained in the Edfu text.

More and more evidence is coming out to support what I posited in 2005. Brother Ferg Somo has done an excellent unpublished linguistic work on the word Km.t (KaaUma.Ti). As he has confirmed KAA is related to a firing process and primarily COAL. Coal is a non naturally occurring product used to separate iron and other metals from their mineral shells. UMA relates to a kitchen or a unit used to house the process of smelting or cooking.

As we have discussed numerous times on this list, in order to understand what Egypt was, you have to look at the surviving living systems of Black Africa. I have posited that at one time in Africa's history (and really it hasn't stopped) that there was a continental wide University system and priesthood. Each different school specialized in a certain science. These schools met up in Ta-Meri and all of the known knowledge was collected in what is now called Egypt.

Doing more research we find that the people in Egypt didn't use the term KMT to refer to their land proper. They mainly used it (with only 1 or 2 other known instances) in spiritual texts. This clearly tells us that it was not something the average citizen was dealing with, but had some other meaning only known to those in the priesthood. Whenever they wanted to convey a political territory, they used the word TA in front of it (Ta-Meri, Ta-Nehesu, Ta-Seti, etc.). Before the 10th dynasty the Egyptians called their land /hnw/ (Henu) which meant "The interior." A portion of the land was still called that after the 10th dynasty and they use the land designation (Ta-Hnw).

On this train of using living systems to piece together the puzzle of Egyptian history, we can look to the Dogon again for references. Just like in ancient Ta-Meri, the Dogon divide their townships and districts in pairs: UPPER and LOWER. Not only this, but they give colors to represent them as well. Can you guess what colors? You guessed it: Red and White. In the Dogon culture the Red represents success in cattle herding and the white success in agriculture. Here we have a conscious division of labor between those who farm and those who forge the tools for farming. In the Dogon culture, the METALWORKERS receive a share of the crops but are NOT allowed to farm.

So Egypt is the result of two economic systems: one of farming and the other of tool making. Take note that the words Ta-Meri and Km.t were

NOT used prior to the 10th dynasty. They arose at the same time. Also take note of the symbols used to convey the names. The word Meri uses the sickle tool used in farming (to till and divide the soil). The word Km.t uses a burnt piece of wood (charcoal) used for the process of making metals and other tools.

As I have argued with in my 2005 article, the name Km.t has nothing to do with the phenotype of the people. It is talking about the general occupations of the people of a given territory. Ta-Meri is a metaphor for "husbandry" or making love to soil as just like sperm is considered a "seed," you plant seeds into the ground and produce crops like a man (husband) would do with his wife in making a child. We know this to be true as well for Ta-Seti (Land of the Bow) because they were known for their "archers" and is probably the place where their military trained; just like how we in the states train our military in certain parts of the country (Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, TX for example).

To understand Km.t, you have to shift a bit from our 2007 American way of racial thinking. They knew they were Black and didn't have to prove it to anyone. Mdw Ntr is a written language system for priests so in order to crack the code you have to think like a priest.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.
| 23943|2007-11-27 14:27:02|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger|
Mahari

The correspondece was with brother called, so apologies if this last was misdirected to you.

Blessings.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com>

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Tue, 27 Nov 2007 9:18 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

Please go back and read the posts. I did not say this. I HAVE NOT

READ THIS BOOK.

It is sometimes easy to get the posts confused. You have done such.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@... wrote:

>

>

> But it is you who stated that you read it in Timothy White's book.

> I didn't proceed from that platform, but from personal knowledge, > several interviews conducted with Bob Marley himself and published > in music journals as early as 1976.

> I rechecked White's original publication because YOU said you saw > it there.
> And at any rate I would love to know how Cedella Booker is alledged > to have traced her ancestry back to Nubia/Kemet.
> Perhaps you can enlighten me.

>

> Intef Djehuty

>

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Mahari Mengistu

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 5:30 pm

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> I really don't have a dog in this fight. The point that I > want to

>

> make is that I don't see where you can be so sure that the other

>

> gentleman is SO WRONG about his statement that Marley's mother

traces

>

> her heritage back to Kemet/Nubia.

>

> You apparently have stated your belief in the writings of a white

>

> guy. I think we can generally assume that the huge majority of white

>

> people will not willingly provide a connection of blacks to Kemet.

>

> They have to be forced to make such a connection. It is something > you should not even expect to be there in a white man's book. I > suspect he would respond the way you have - assuming it is nonsense.

>

>

>

>

>

> TIMOTHY WHITE

>

>

<http://www.rollingstone.com/artists/bobmarley/articles/story/5934433/t>

>

> imothy_white_dies

>

>

>

> HTP,

>

> Mahari

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:

>

> >

>

> > Bob Marley's mother traces her own ancestry to Ghana. I don't > > know what edition of Timothy White's book you have read, but

>

>

> > I reviewed the original edition for Frontline (London) when it

first

>

> > came out and it is certainly not there.

>

> >

>

> > Intef Djehutymes

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > -----Original Message-----

>

> > From: Mahari Mengistu

>

> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>

> > Sent: Mon, 26 Nov 2007 9:01 am

>

> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > I may be mis-reading you or perhaps you mis-read the

>

> post.

>

> > He said

>

> >

>

> > that on his MOTHER'S side - not his father's. And your Afrikan

>

> >

>

> > descent - unfortunately - is not something that most black people

>

> >

>

> > discuss unless it is specifically brought up.

>

> >

>

> > I'm not saying that it is true but there is no reason to

>

> >

>

> > automatically assume it isn't true from what you've read or said

>

> >

>

> > you've experienced.

>

> >

>

> > HTP,

>

> >

>

> > Mahari

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@ wrote:

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > > Bob Marley's father was a British sailor passing thru Jamaica in

>

> >

>

> > the

>

> >

>

> > > 1940s. The

>

> >

>

> > > relationship with Marley's mother was fleeting. He says that he

>

> >

>

> > had

>

> >

>

> > > met his

>

> >

>

> > > father only once and he is recorded as having met an uncle in

>

> >

>

> > Kingston,

>

> >

>

> > > JA.

>

> >

>

> > > If is of Nubian-Egyptian descent it must be the world's best

kept

>

> >

>

> > > secret because

>

> >

>

>>> I knew the man and members of his band from 1972.

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>> Intef Djehutymes

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>> -----Original Message-----

>

> >

>

> > > From: cristofori whitakara

>

> >

>

> > > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

>

> >

>

> > > Sent: Sat, 24 Nov 2007 11:29:29 -0800 (PST)

>

> >

>

> > > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Egypt's Rock Art in Danger

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > > i find the painting of bob marley

fascinating.Ã,Â i

>

> >

>

> > read a

>

> >

>

> > > biography about robbery marley that wrote in the book that on his

>

> >

>

> > > mother's side he was of nubian-egytpian descent. the book

>

> is "catch

>

> >

>

> > a

>

> >

>

> > > Fire" by timothy white

>

> >

>

> > >

>

>>

>

>>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Notice the little

>

>>

>

>>> black man. Ã,Â Go to Google News Photo 2 of

3 A

>

>>

>

>> woman

>

>>

>

>>> photographing Neolithic rock art Desert art in danger

at

>

>>

>

>>> Egypt's new tourism frontier 17 hours ago CAIRO (AFP) Ãçâ

,¬" A

>

> >

>

> > rising tide

>

> >

>

> > > of travellers seeking out the new frontier of Egyptian tourism

is

>

> >

>

> > > threatening priceless rock art preserved

>

> >

>

> > > for millennia in one of the most-isolated reaches of the Sahara.

>

> >

>

> > In

>

> >

>

> > > Egypt's southwest corner, straddling the borders of Sudan and

>

> >

>

> > Libya,

>

> >

>

> > > the elegant paintings of prehistoric man and beast in the

>

> mountains

>

> >

>

> > of

>

> >

>

> > > Gilf Kabir and Jebel Ouenat are as stunning in their simplicity

as

>

> >

>

> > > anything by Picasso. But lying 500 kilometres (330 miles) from

>

> the

>

> >

>

> > > nearest habitation, the desert offers little sanctuary for these

>

> >

>

> > > masterpieces and any effective protected designation first

>

> requires

>

> >

>

> > a

>

> >

>

> > > deal between the three sometimes quarrelsome nations. Not only

>

> the

>

> >

>

> > > rock art is at stake, but the region's entire cultural and natural

>

> >

>

> > > heritage. "You can't estimate the amount of damage done," says

Dr

>

> >

>

> > > Rudolph Kuper, a German archaeologist involved in trying to

>

> protect

>

> >

>

> > the

>

> >

>

> > > art, mostly dating from when the desert was a receding prairie

>

> >

>

> > > 5,000-7,000 years ago. "People put water or oil on the paintings

>

> >

>

> > to

>

> >

>

> > > make the faded colours look brighter, causing

>

> >

>

> > > irreparable damage," he says. The story is even more tragic

>

> just

>

> >

>

> > > across the border in Libya, where the delicate brush strokes of

>

> >

>

> > human

>

> >

>

> > > figures at Ain Dua appear to have been shot at by bored soldiers.

>

> >

>

> > > Nearby, a painted cave is filled with rubbish while outside a

>

> giant

>

> >

>

> > > portrait of Bob Marley shimmers garishly in the white of the

>

> >

>

> > desert.

>

> >

>

> > > Paying up to 10,000 dollars for a two-week expedition, travellers

>

> >

>

> > drive

>

> >

>

> > > through the desert to reach Gilf Kabir, site of the Cave of the

>

> >

>

> > > Swimmers made famous by the 1996 film "The English Patient."

>

> While

>

> >

>

> > > only a handful came here in the 1980s, the numbers have been

>

> rising

>

> >

>

> > > steadily through the 1990s as some of the millions of tourists

>

> >

>

> > visiting

>

> >

>

> > > Egypt seek out something more exotic than the sandy beach of a

Red

>

> >

>

> > Sea

>

> >

>

> > > resort. "By 2006 there were probably 800 people coming and this

>

> >

>

> > year

>

> >

>

> > > we expect more than 1,000," says Kuper. Rock art specialist

>

> Tilman

>

> >

>

> > > Lenssen-Erz says that in

>

> >

>

> > > prehistoric times the sites would have been known for thousands

>

> >

>

> > of

>

> >

>

> > > square kilometres (miles). "This was a place so highly charged

>

> >

>

> > with

>

> >

>

> > > symbolism and with the world views that were fixed there in the

>

> >

>

> > rock

>

> >

>

> > > art that it would have been like a huge cathedral in a European

>

> >

>

> > > context," says Lenssen-Erz. "People from far away would know

>

> about

>

> >

>

> > the

>

> >

>

> > > significance of the religious power that is collected in this

>

> >

>

> > place ...

>

> >

>

> > > where the supernatural powers of the world were fixed on rocks

>

> >

>

> > making

>

> >

>

> > > the whole area a sacred landscape." Even more recent artefacts

>

> >

>

> > like

>

> >

>

> > > the world's westernmost example of ancient hieroglyphics known

as

>

> >

>

> > > Meri's rock, to the northeast of Gilf Kabir, have not gone

>

> >

>

> > unscathed by

>

> >

>

> > > the passage of modern man. The hieroglyphs are evidence that,

>

> >

>

> > contrary

>

> >

>

> > > to the idea that pharaonic trade with sub-Saharan Africa only

went

>

> >

>

> > via

>

> >

>

> > > the Nile Valley, the ancients had a major trading route cutting

>

> >

>

> > > straight through the desert. Last

>

> >

>

> > > year, someone embellished the ancient writings with a giant

>

> >

>

> > engraving

>

> >

>

> > > of a topless woman. "You can't put barbed wire around it so we

>

> >

>

> > > developed the idea of mental fences," Kuper says of the importance

>

> >

>

> > of

>

> >

>

> > > educating guides and tourists alike. Saad Ali, a young tour

>

> >

>

> > operator

>

> >

>

> > > based in the oasis of Farafra who also runs the Farafra

>

> Development

>

> >

>

> > > Institution NGO, also realised that the only long-term solution

>

> was

>

> >

>

> > > through education. "We always arranged trips to clean up the

>

> >

>

> > desert

>

> >

>

> > > and every year we found more rubbish so we found the solution is

>

> to

>

> >

>

> > > train the guides," he says. "Now it's changed a lot. Last year

we

>

> >

>

> > went

>

> >

>

>>> to clean up and we collected only 4.5 tonnes of rubbish while

the

>

>>

>

>> year

>

>>

>

>>> before it was 11 tonnes." His next target is tour operators

>

>>

>

>> working

>

>>

>

>>> out of Cairo, still largely unaware of the damage they wreak.

>

>>

>

>> Kuper

>

> >

>

> > > says that such programmes help to manage "70-80 percent of people"

>

> >

>

> > but

>

> >

>

> > > that others --

>

> >

>

> > > tourists still living with a colonial mentality and Cairo-based

>

> >

>

> > expats

>

> >

>

> > > who take away artefacts in their 4x4s -- are difficult to control.

>

> >

>

> > > With untold damage already wrought, getting Egypt, Libya and Sudan

>

> >

>

> > to

>

> >

>

> > > agree on policing the militarily sensitive area is a conservation

>

> >

>

> > > conundrum. The hope is to have the area designated as a trans-

>

> >

>

> > boundary

>

> >

>

> > > cultural landscape UNESCO World Heritage site, but that requires

>

> >

>

> > the

>

> >

>

> > > three nations to all first declare individual national parks.

So

>

> >

>

> > far,

>

> >

>

> > > only Egypt has designated a park, but officials from all three

>

> >

>

> > > countries are due to meet in Cairo in December in the hope of

>

> >

>

> > hammering

>

> >

>

> > > out a deal, despite their occasionally fraught diplomatic

>

> >

>

> > relations.

>

> >

>

> > > With the support of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Kuper

and

>

> >

>

> > Prof

>

> >

>

> > > Mustafa Fouda from the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency

want

>

> >

>

> > to

>

> >

>

> > > build a museum-cum-educational centre in the oasis of Dakhla,

the

>

> >

>

> > > jumping off point for most trips to Gilf

>

> >

>

>>> Kabir. "Hopefully we can make our dreams come true, with a

>

>>

>

>> museum to

>

>>

>

>>> explain the relationship between man and the desert, to explain

>

> how

>

>>

>

>> man

>

>>

>

>>> can make use of the resources in a sustainable way," says Fouda.

>

>>

>

> > > Pending the politicians' decision, Kuper says that recently some

>

> >

>

> > > tourists have returned to the Cave of the Swimmers to try to erase

>

> >

>

> > > their names. For the desert's desecrators, it seems the writing

is

>

> >

>

> > on

>

> >

>

> > > the wall. === HTP, Mahari

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > > -----

>

> >

>

> > > Get easy, one-click access to your favorites.

>

> >

>

> > > Make Yahoo! your homepage.

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>>>

>

>>

>

>> _____

>

>>

>

>> _

>

>>

>

>>> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

>

> >

>

> > Mail! -

>

> >

>

> > > <http://mail.aol.com>

>

> >

>

> > >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

> >

>

>

---

>

> —

>

>> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

>

> Mail! -

>

>> <http://mail.aol.com>

>

>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

—

> More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail ! -

> http://o.aolcdn.com/cdn.webmail.aol.com/mailtour/aol/en-us/text.htm?

ncid=aolcmp00050000000003

>

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail ! -

<http://o.aolcdn.com/cdn.webmail.aol.com/mailtour/aol/en-us/text.htm?ncid=aolcmp00050000000003>

| 23944|2007-11-27 17:30:25|Mahari Mengistu|No calculators, just a brush and papyrus|

No calculators, just a brush and papyrus

Reimer: Egyptian math quicker than modern day methods

Kerry Fiallo

Page 1 of 1

Media
Credit:
Chris
Gifford
Associate professor of mathematics
and

David Reimer, associate professor of mathematics and statistics, presented "The Strange Math of the Egyptians" at the College on Nov 14.

The lecture focused on re-evaluating how modern mathematicians view ancient Egyptian mathematics.

Reimer, who is currently writing his own textbook, has studied the history of math going back to simple calculations by cavemen, but ancient Egypt "is really a favorite subject," he said.

"I maintain that Egyptian math is faster than our math," Reimer argued. "I can perform Egyptian math nearly twice as fast at my best."

Reimer backed this statement with a brief history on ancient Egypt and how its math was created. Two texts on ancient Egyptian math currently exist, the Rhind and Moscow papyri, however, half of the Moscow papyrus has disappeared.

"We don't know how advanced the Egyptians were," he said.

Most historians maintain that the ancient Babylonians were more advanced in mathematics than the Egyptians. However, since there are about 1,000 Babylonian texts on mathematics and only two on Egyptian mathematics, the comparison is "a little unfair," Reimer said.

Reimer then explained the basics of ancient Egyptian math, which included arithmetic progressions and ways to ascertain the area of a circle and volume of a truncated pyramid.

The Egyptian method of determining the area of a circle was "better than most (other ancient civilizations)" and their method of determining the volume of a truncated pyramid was "a good accomplishment" of the time since it was exact, Reimer said.

In ancient Egypt, all mathematics could be easily understood since all the concepts (addition, multiplication and division) were essentially directly connected to one another.

"It was very interesting," Jessica Miller, junior special education and math major, said of the lecture. "It was very informative and (Reimer) definitely has a lot of information on this."

At the end of the lecture, Reimer claimed that the overall goal of his presentation was to maintain that "just because something looks different to us □ doesn't mean that it's primitive or awkward."

===

HTP,
Mahari

| 23945|2007-11-27 22:52:12|Mahari Mengistu|Dinosaur find dries Australia water project| statistics

David Reimer explains the speed of ancient Egyptian
math.

Media
Credit:
Chris
Gifford

CORRECTED-Dinosaur find dries Australia water project

Mon Nov 26, 2007 8:59pm EST

By Rob Taylor

CANBERRA, Nov 27 (Reuters) - A hoard of dinosaur bones has been discovered at the site of a planned desalination plant meant to deliver Australia's second biggest city from drought, forcing a re-think of the A$3 billion ($2.7 billion) project.

The fossilised bones, estimated to be 115 million years old and belonging to dinosaurs and ancient marine reptiles, were found on a windswept beach in front of the planned project at Powlett River, southeast of Melbourne.

"It's like boring through the tombs of Egypt's ancient emperors or drilling through the terracotta warriors in China after they were discovered," local opposition lawmaker Ken Smith told Reuters, demanding a study before the project proceeds.

"Those ancient sites were important to the world and so is this here," he said.

Much of Australia has been in drought for more than a decade, with international climate scientists warning the dry could be the harbinger of global warming.

Melbourne plans to build one of the world's biggest water desalination plants to drought-proof the city, with construction to begin next year and up to 150 billion litres of drinking water a year flowing by 2011, rivalling a plant in Israel.

The plant will extract salt from sea water through reverse osmosis, discharging salt waste into the ocean and pumping the purified water 85 km (55 miles) to Melbourne.

Monash University researcher and dinosaur expert Lesley Kool was quoted by local papers as saying there was evidence of dinosaurs, teeth, bones and vertebrae. "The rocks were deposited at a time when Australia was in the polar circle," she said. Other remains on the site included the teeth of Pleisosaurs, a small and long-necked reptile which lived in rivers, and the two-legged, plant-eating dinosaur Qantassaurus.

Victoria state Water Minister Tim Holding is yet to commit to an environmental impact report on the site of the bones.

"We will take all environmental and cultural issues into consideration when determining the final specifications," a spokesman said. (Editing by Jeremy Laurence)

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23946|2007-11-28 04:17:14|asar_imhotep|Other Dogon connections to the Egyptian NIW.T Symbol|

Other Dogon connections to the Egyptian NIW.T symbol

As we have previously discussed, by research of Ferg Somo, that a more proper phonetical pronunciation of the word NIW.T (primarily used as a determinative) in the ancient Mdw Ntr language is the Ki-Swahili Bantu word UAENIEWE which means the following:

- Owners and occupants
- Natives of the Town or Village
- Householders, citizens
- Inhabitants of the town or village
- The people themselves

Taking a cue from the Bantu word MJI, a word for village, has many philosophical implications based on the shape of the icon used to represent it. Those meanings are, "placenta, womb, or a place for burying the dead." Our focus will be with the conceptual idea of the community, village being a "womb" for human social development.

Although we have mainly focused on the Bantu relation to Egyptian words and concepts, we can also get clarity by comparing other indigenous concepts in the larger Niger-Congo linguistic branch which Bantu is a part. We can do this because what we know of the priesthood of ancient Ta-Meri was really a large scale university (lodge) system in which Km.t was home of the Grand Lodges. Ta-Meri (Egypt, Km.t) was the place where all of this knowledge was collected for analysis. But the bulk of the knowledge came from other parts of Africa.

Dr. Yosef Ben Jochanann tells us in his book The African Called Ramesis and the African Origin of Western Civilization on pg 66 that:

LITERATURE

It was the adoption of [the] syllabic script (see pg 34) that made possible the inclusion of many foreign words (texts) from Ta-Meri's fellow African neighbors textually; and of course , from far off Asia, with which "foreign trade" had become very substantial. Thus it was that Ramesis II established certain schools solely for the "interpretation of foreign literature and business manifests" at a location of what is today called "El Faiyum" or "harem," and staffed by the "ladies" therein. (emphasis mine)

With this understanding, we know "foreign" African concepts was incorporated at various times in Ta-Merian history and given a literary representation for a people who did not have a full writing system. The Dogon are one such sect of the Egyptian priesthood and culture.

In staying focused with the topic (the NIW.T symbol), the Dogon have a symbol very similar to the NIW.T symbol called the Womb of All World Signs. Again our connection is with the exact conceptual meaning of WOMB. I will attempt to further this discussion by applying the Dogon concept of the WOMB to actual LAND and further tie that with the Egyptian NIW.T symbol as it refers to LAND. My previous discussion can be seen at the following link:

http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/message/23878

In The Science of the Dogon pg 31, Laird Scranton summarizes Griaule's work Conversations with Ogotemmeli concerning the Dogon creation of matter and states:

By nature, the Earth is female, Looking at it flat and considering the cardinal points of the compass as her appendages, it is like a woman lying on her back with her arms and legs spread. (emphasis mine)

This is the exact shape as our NIW.T symbol of Ta-Meri. Our connection is further strengthened by examining the Dogon Celestial Granary also mentioned in Conversations with Ogotemmeli. I have scanned a copy of the image and it is located at the bottom of this email. We know from this discussion that the circular bottom of the Celestial Granary represents the sun. The flat square top represents the moon and the middle (between the sun and moon) represents the Earth.

As can be seen the circular bottom of the granary is the "plan" of the "earth" just like the NIW.T symbol would be an "urban planning" symbol for a location. The four stages of "planning" (which applies to creation and to man's endeavors) according to the Dogon are bummo, yala, toy and toymu.

As can be clearly seen, the same symbol used in the Kongo (Dikenga) used on one level to mean "community" is related ideographically to the NIW.T symbol of Ta-Meri which we have found out is associated (on one level) with the term WOMB. This same symbol is found amongst the Dogon of Mali and is also associated with a womb called the WOMB OF ALL WOLRD SIGNS.

This same circle divided into 4 sections amongst the Dogon is associated with "earth" or "land." These four sections are said to be, "like a woman lying on her back with her arms and legs spread." We find out later (Scranton pg. 31) that Amma tried to have intercourse with the Earth (according to the myth) to form man, but because it breached divine law, the Jackal was born instead and this is how the Jackal became associated with disorder (Doesn't this sound familiar with SET of Egypt?).

A woman laying flat on the ground would look like a big X if her arms and legs were spread out. The fact that Amma tried to enter sexually into the anthill (the earth's female part) to impregnate it, clearly associates the concept of WOMB with the LAND.

I do not find these associations coincidental. And if you have been following the discussion, we know the Dogon had a clear understanding of Quantum Mechanics and if I had more time I would show that they understood the human reproductive process of meiosis as well (including the understanding of X and Y chromosomes and how the X chromosome is associated with the WOMB OF ALL SIGNS as the X is the female chromosomal sign). But I have been up reading since 11 PM yesterday and it is now 6:06 AM Wednesday morning. So for those of you who actually read this, tell me what you think: I'm tired

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

If you cannot view the above image, please visit
http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?TID=13039&PID=216422#216422

| 23947|2007-11-28 04:33:02|Alex van Deelen|DNA Tests Find Branches but Few Roots|
<http://www.nytimes.com/2007/11/25/business/25dna.html?pagewanted=1>

DNA Tests Find Branches but Few Roots

By RON NIXON

Published: November 25, 2007

HENRY LOUIS GATES JR., whose PBS special "African American Lives" explores the ancestry of famous African-Americans using DNA testing, has done more than anyone to help popularize such tests and companies that offer them. But recently this Harvard professor has become one of the industry's critics.

Looking Into the Past, for a Price Mr. Gates says his concerns date back to 2000, when a company told him his maternal ancestry could most likely be traced back to Egypt, probably to the Nubian ethnic group. Five years later, however, a test by a second company startled him. It concluded that his maternal ancestors were not Nubian or even African, but most likely European.

Why the completely different results? Mr. Gates said the first company never told him he had multiple genetic matches, most of them in Europe. "They told me what they thought I wanted to hear," Mr. Gates said.

An estimated 460,000 people have taken genetic tests to determine their ancestry or to expand their known family trees, according to Science magazine. Census records, birth and death certificates, ship manifests, slave narratives and other documents have become easier to find through the Internet, making the hunt for family history less daunting than in years past.

Yet for many, the paper or digital trail eventually ends. And for those who have reached that point, genetic DNA tests may help to provide the final piece of the puzzle.

The expectations and reasons for taking the test vary. For some, the test allows them to reconnect with African ancestors after centuries of slavery wiped out links between African-Americans and their forebears. Others want to see if they have links to historical figures like Genghis Khan or Marie Antoinette. For still others, it's an attempt to fill gaps in family histories and find distant cousins they might not otherwise have known.

The demand has spawned an industry. Almost two dozen companies now offer such services, up from just two or three only six years ago. The field is so hot that private equity investors have moved in: Spectrum Equity Investors recently bought Ancestry.com, an online genealogy site, for about $300 million shortly after the site added genetic testing as a service.

But as the number of test takers and companies has grown, so has the number of scientists or scholars like Mr. Gates who have questioned assertions that companies make about their tests. One of the most controversial issues is the ability of the tests to determine the country or the ethnic group of origin for African-Americans or Native Americans.

Mr. Gates, director of the W.E.B. Du Bois Institute for African and African American Research at Harvard, said his experience and similar stories from others have prompted him to enter the field.

Mr. Gates recently teamed up with Family Tree DNA, a DNA testing and genealogy firm in Houston, to provide genetic testing and genealogy work for African-Americans. The new venture is called AfricanDNA.

"What we hope to do is combine this with genealogical and other records to try to help people discover their roots," he said. "The limitations of current genetic DNA tests mean you can't rely on this alone to tell you anything. We hope to bring a little order to the field."

In an editorial in Science magazine in October, a number of scientists and scholars said companies might not be fully explaining the limitations of genetic testing, or what results actually mean.

The authors said that limited information in the databases used to compare DNA results might lead people to draw the wrong conclusions or to misinterpret results. The tests trace only a few of a customer's ancestors and cannot tell exactly where ancestors might have lived, or the specific ethnic group to which they might have belonged. And the databases of many companies are not only small - they're also proprietary, making it hard to verify results.

"My concern is that the marketing is coming before the science," said Troy Duster, a professor of sociology at New York University who was an adviser on the Human Genome Project and an author of the Science editorial.

"People are making life-changing decisions based on these tests and may not be aware of the limitations," he added. "While I don't think any of the companies are deliberately misleading customers, they may have a financial incentive to tell people what they want to hear."

Bennett Greenspan, founder and president of Family Tree DNA, said his company sometimes has to tell clients just the opposite. "We'll have people who may think that they have a certain type of ancestry and we'll tell them based on the test they are not," he said. "I can only tell them what the tests show, nothing more. And sometimes it's not what they want to hear."

HERE'S how the test works: A customer swabs his or her cheeks and gums, collects microscopic tissue samples and sends them to a laboratory. The lab extracts and digitizes the DNA and sends the results back to the companies. Using computer software, the companies try to identify matches between the customer's DNA and those in their databases.

Looking Into the Past, for a Price The test, which costs $100 to $900, typically comes in two forms. One test analyzes mitochondrial DNA, which reveals information only about a person's maternal line, traced back through the mother's mother to other female forebears (but not the males, because mitochondrial DNA is passed to all children only from their mothers).

The second test looks at the Y chromosome, which can provide clues only about a customer's paternal line - so only men can take the Y-chromosome test.

Several companies, including DNA Tribes of Arlington, Va., also offer a test that examines the DNA contribution of both parents. These tests are the most controversial because many scientists say there isn't enough data yet to get accurate results.

Mitochondrial and Y-chromosome tests combined reveal information pertaining to just 1 percent of a person's DNA. But testing companies say that this 1 percent can reveal a lot about a person and bridge gaps in paper records. Mr. Greenspan said that anyone who starts to research his or her family history will eventually encounter roadblocks.

"This is where DNA comes in and offers clues that might otherwise never be known," said Mr. Greenspan, who started Family Tree DNA in 2000, after encountering his own roadblocks while researching his Jewish ancestry. "Can it answer all your questions? No. But used in combination with other tools, it can be extremely helpful."

Gina M. Paige, president of African Ancestry Inc., based in Washington, said the DNA tests could be even more important for people whose lineage is loosely or sparsely documented.

"For most African-Americans, there is no paper trail," Ms. Paige said. Speaking of her company, she added, "we make money, but we see this as a service to a people who have been cut off from their history and culture."

Sharing that view is the actor Isaiah Washington, formerly of "Grey's Anatomy" and now appearing on "Bionic Woman" on NBC. After taking a DNA test to determine his ancestry in 2005, he says African Ancestry told him that his maternal ancestors most likely came from the Mende people in Sierra Leone. "I was excited because I didn't know what to expect," he said. "I remember watching 'Roots' when I was young and it stuck with me. I always wanted to know where my ancestors came from before slavery, and here you have the science telling you."

Still, Benjamin Todd Jealous, president of the Rosenberg Foundation in San Francisco, a nonprofit group that finances social programs, said it's important that customers not expect too much from DNA tests. Family Tree DNA examined the DNA of Mr. Jealous's grandfather before he died last year. The test showed both European and African ancestry, which wasn't surprising to family members, but it also connected them to an ethnic group in Africa that they had never heard of.

"Over all, I think we were satisfied with the service we received," Mr. Jealous said. "But again, it's a relatively new area, so we went in not expecting a lot. Some people are looking for definite answers."

The author Edward Ball had a different experience with DNA ancestry tests.

A native of Savannah, Ga., Mr. Ball has a new book, "The Genetic Strand," (Simon & Schuster) that explores his family history through DNA. He became intrigued when he found labeled hair samples of various family members hidden in a drawer; some of the hair was more than 100 years old. He sent it to various companies for DNA testing. The first tests found that some of the family's DNA was American Indian. Another company found African genes in his family tree, but no Native American ones. Then he was told by one of the various experts he consulted that the DNA most likely originated in Northern Europe. Mr. Ball didn't know what to believe.

"My sense of family and identity were radically altered," he said. "Then it simply became confusing after getting ambiguous and contradictory results."

EVEN some early proponents of DNA testing for ancestry have doubts about how useful the tests are.

Bert Ely, a geneticist at the University of South Carolina, was a co-founder of the African-American DNA Roots Project in 2000, hoping to use DNA tests as a way to find connections between African-Americans and ethnic groups in Africa.

"I originally thought that the mitochondrial DNA test might be a good way for African-Americans to trace their country of origin," Mr. Ely said. "Now I'm coming to the opposite conclusion."

Last October, he matched the DNA sequences of 170 African-Americans against those of 3,725 people living in Africa. He found that most African-Americans had genetic similarities to numerous ethnic groups in Africa, making it impossible to match African-Americans with a single ethnic group, as some companies assert they can do.

Looking Into the Past, for a Price Mr. Ely also published a paper in which he tried to determine whether the country of origin of native Africans could be found by using mitochondrial DNA tests. Several of the Africans in the study matched multiple ethnic groups. For example, DNA results for a person from Ghana provided genetic matches with people in 20 African countries.

Other scientists have raised issues with the way companies analyze and present results. Of particular concern is the use of statistical methods to determine ancestry when there are multiple matches to different ethnic groups. Companies don't always make it clear that the results are estimates, not definitive matches.

It's not that the tests are wrong, scientists say. Most companies use the same methods and, in some cases, the same labs to extract DNA from samples. But even the largest databases have only a few thousand records in them, and some areas and populations are sampled more than others. Most companies get data from information published in publicly available research papers; few collect samples themselves. Scientists emphasize that much of this data was gathered for other purposes and was never intended to be used for personal genealogical testing.

For their part, testing companies say they continually update their databases to get a larger number of samples.

As part of the reporting for this article, I decided to submit my own samples for a mitochondrial DNA test. "Roots" had left an impression on me, as it had on Mr. Washington. Like most African-Americans, I longed to know where I came from. Could tests tell me?

I often travel to Africa, and no matter where I go, someone will say that I must belong to one of the ethnic groups there. I've always wondered if any of them could be right. Could I really be an Igbo or a Mende?

There were also stories in my family about Native American or European ancestry. What, if any, of this was true?

Six weeks after I submitted the first samples, the results started to roll in. Every company told me that my mother's female ancestors were all African. But after that, things got murky.

African Ancestry said my DNA was a match with that of the Mende and Kru people from Liberia. Family Tree DNA's database showed a match with one person who was Mende. But my DNA also matched that of several other groups, like the Songhai in Mali, and various ethnic groups from Mozambique and Angola. Other peoples cited were the Futa-Fula (also known as the Fulani), who live in eight African nations, and the Bambara, who are primarily in Mali.

Why so many? "We try to be brutally honest and give you everything the test results show," said Mr. Greenspan of Family Tree DNA. "If there are multiple matches, we're going to show you that."

Mr. Ely's African-American DNA Roots Project, which examined DNA sequences that other companies provided to me, confirmed many matches from Family Tree DNA and African Ancestry, but added additional ethnic groups. DNA Tribes, whose test shows DNA results from a combination of genetic material from both parents, added even more ethnic matches.

I once thought that my ancestors, like those of most African-Americans, would have come from West Africa. But some of the results showed links to regions that I had thought weren't engaged in the slave trade with the United States - like Mozambique. But then a search of the TransAtlantic Slave Trade database, which was compiled from slave ship records, showed that some Africans from Mozambique did indeed end up in the United States. So maybe the Mozambique results were possible.

The companies also offered technical support to understand the results, and I spent considerable time trying to make sense of them. I learned a lot about how they reached conclusions, but not much about where I or my ancestors ultimately came from.

"What this all means is that you can't take one of these tests and go off and say you're this or that," Mr. Gates said. "Somewhere down the road, the results could change and you might have another group of people who might also be your genetic cousins."

| 23948|2007-11-28 08:36:27|cristofori whitakara|Re: Dinosaur find dries Australia water project| the lakota sioux have dancing ceremonies that illustrate their co-existence with dinosaurs.i wonder if the Kouri peoples and others (aboriginals) have similiar ceremonies?

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

CORRECTED-Dinosaur find dries Australia water project

Mon Nov 26, 2007 8:59pm EST

By Rob Taylor

CANBERRA, Nov 27 (Reuters) - A hoard of dinosaur bones has been discovered at the site of a planned desalination plant meant to deliver Australia's second biggest city from drought, forcing a re-think of the A$3 billion ($2.7 billion) project.

The fossilised bones, estimated to be 115 million years old and belonging to dinosaurs and ancient marine reptiles, were found on a windswept beach in front of the planned project at Powlett River, southeast of Melbourne.

"It's like boring through the tombs of Egypt's ancient emperors or drilling through the terracotta warriors in China after they were discovered," local opposition lawmaker Ken Smith told Reuters, demanding a study before the project proceeds.

"Those ancient sites were important to the world and so is this here," he said.

Much of Australia has been in drought for more than a decade, with international climate scientists warning the dry could be the harbinger of global warming.

Melbourne plans to build one of the world's biggest water desalination plants to drought-proof the city, with construction to begin next year and up to 150 billion litres of drinking water a year flowing by 2011, rivalling a plant in Israel.

The plant will extract salt from sea water through reverse osmosis, discharging salt waste into the ocean and pumping the purified water 85 km (55 miles) to Melbourne.

Monash University researcher and dinosaur expert Lesley Kool was quoted by local papers as saying there was evidence of dinosaurs, teeth, bones and vertebrae. "The rocks were deposited at a time when Australia was in the polar circle," she said. Other remains on the site included the teeth of Pleisosaurs, a small and long-necked reptile which lived in rivers, and the two-legged, plant-eating dinosaur Qantassaurus.

Victoria state Water Minister Tim Holding is yet to commit to an environmental impact report on the site of the bones.

"We will take all environmental and cultural issues into consideration when determining the final specifications, " a spokesman said. (Editing by Jeremy Laurence)

====

HTP,

| Mahari

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.
| 23949|2007-11-28 08:53:21|shaimesh@aol.com|Dr. Ali Muhammed Lectures 12/9/07 @ 5pm - Harlem - $15|

Attachments :

From: qabalagod@gmail.com

Greetings Brothers and Sisters,

I am pleased to announce to you all that a genius among us will be arriving from his home town of Philadelphia to Harlem's Hiram Grand Lodge of Ancient Free & Accepted Masons, to present to you an intense Presentation on The Alchemical Meaning of Masonry and the Black Body. This Historical lecture will be delivered on Sunday December 9th 2007. I will be presenting a brief expose/presentation on Keys to understanding almost any language. And opening up for Bro. Ali will be Bro. Anpu, a brilliant Qabalist who will be introducing a brand of Qabalah unique to his region of the best part of the planet, (NORTH AMERICA!!!)Philadelphia.

I look forward to seeing you there. WE ARE STARTING AT 5PM SHARP.
Do your best to arrive early.

Your Brother and Soldier,

A. A. Rashid.

Smai Tawi Daily Digest Subscribers may access the attachment by clicking below:

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/SmaiTawi/files/Dr.%20Ali%20Muhammadd%2012-9-07.pdf>

---

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 23950|2007-11-28 08:53:47|Ferg|Re: Other Dogon connections to the Egyptian NIW.T Symbol|

Asar, this might be of interest.

Dont forget to click on: The bloom of Banjeli study guide inPDF. The PDF may take a few tries, use the'refresh button' to activatethe browser.

Ferg Somo

<http://66.102.9.104/search?q=cache:R6IHRx0AmSIJ:www.der.org/films/blooms-of-banjeli.html+the+womb+of+an+african+village&hl=en&ct=clnk&cd=31&gl=uk>

----- Original Message -----

From: asar\_imhotep

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Wednesday, November 28, 2007 12:17 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Other Dogon connections to the Egyptian NIW.T Symbol

Other Dogon connections to the Egyptian NIW.T symbol

As we have previously discussed, by research of Ferg Somo, that a more proper phonetical pronunciation of the word NIW.T (primarily used as a determinative) in the ancient Mdw Ntr language is the Ki-Swahili Bantu word UAENIEWE which means the following:

- Owners and occupants
- Natives of the Town or Village
- Householders, citizens
- Inhabitants of the town or village
- The people themselves

Taking a cue from the Bantu word MJI, a word for village, has many philosophical implications based on the shape of the icon used to represent it. Those meanings are, "placenta, womb, or a place for burying the dead." Our focus will be with the conceptual idea of the community, village being a "womb" for human social development.

Although we have mainly focused on the Bantu relation to Egyptian words and concepts, we can also get clarity by comparing other indigenous concepts in the larger Niger-Congo linguistic branch which Bantu is a part. We can do this because what we know of the priesthood of ancient Ta-Meri was really a large scale university (lodge) system in which Km.t was home of the Grand Lodges. Ta-Meri (Egypt, Km.t) was the place where all of this knowledge was collected for analysis. But the bulk of the knowledge came from other parts of Africa.

Dr. Yosef Ben Jochanann tells us in his book The African Called Ramesis and the African Origin of Western Civilization on pg 66 that:

LITERATURE

It was the adoption of [the] syllabic script (see pg 34) that made possible the inclusion of many foreign words (texts) from Ta-Meri's fellow African neighbors textually; and of course , from far off Asia, with which "foreign trade" had become very substantial. Thus it was that Ramesis II established certain schools solely for the "interpretation of foreign literature and business manifests" at a location of what is today called "El Faiyum" or "harem," and staffed by the "ladies" therein. (emphasis mine)

With this understanding, we know "foreign" African concepts was incorporated at various times in Ta-Merian history and given a literary representation for a people who did not have a full writing system. The Dogon are one such sect of the Egyptian priesthood and culture.

In staying focused with the topic (the NIW.T symbol), the Dogon have a symbol very similar to the NIW.T symbol called the Womb of All World Signs. Again our connection is with the exact conceptual meaning of WOMB. I will attempt to further this discussion by applying the Dogon concept of the WOMB to actual LAND and further tie that with the Egyptian NIW.T symbol as it refers to LAND. My previous discussion can be seen at the following link:

http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/message/23878

In The Science of the Dogon pg 31, Laird Scranton summarizes Griaule's work Conversations with Ogotemmeli concerning the Dogon creation of matter and states:

By nature, the Earth is female, Looking at it flat and considering the cardinal points of the compass as her appendages, it is like a woman lying on her back with her arms and legs spread. (emphasis mine)

This is the exact shape as our NIW.T symbol of Ta-Meri. Our connection is further strengthened by examining the Dogon Celestial Granary also mentioned in Conversations with Ogotemmeli. I have scanned a copy of the image and it is located at the bottom of this email. We know from this discussion that the circular bottom of the Celestial Granary represents the sun. The flat square top represents the moon and the middle (between the sun and moon) represents the Earth.

As can be seen the circular bottom of the granary is the "plan" of the "earth" just like the NIW.T symbol would be an "urban planning" symbol for a location. The four stages of "planning" (which applies to creation and to man's endeavors) according to the Dogon are bummo, yala, toy and toymu.

As can be clearly seen, the same symbol used in the Kongo (Dikenga) used on one level to mean "community" is related ideographically to the NIW.T symbol of Ta-Meri which we have found out is associated (on one level) with the term WOMB. This same symbol is found amongst the Dogon of Mali and is also associated with a womb called the WOMB OF ALL WOLRD SIGNS.

This same circle divided into 4 sections amongst the Dogon is associated with "earth" or "land." These four sections are said to be, "like a woman lying on her back with her arms and legs spread." We find out later (Scranton pg. 31) that Amma tried to have intercourse with the Earth (according to the myth) to form man, but because it breached divine law, the Jackal was born instead and this is how the Jackal became associated with disorder (Doesn't this sound familiar with SET of Egypt?).

A woman laying flat on the ground would look like a big X if her arms and legs were spread out. The fact that Amma tried to enter sexually into the anthill (the earth's female part) to impregnate it, clearly associates the concept of WOMB with the LAND.

I do not find these associations coincidental. And if you have been following the discussion, we know the Dogon had a clear understanding of Quantum Mechanics and if I had more time I would show that they understood the human reproductive process of meiosis as well (including the understanding of X and Y chromosomes and how the X chromosome is associated with the WOMB OF ALL SIGNS as the X is the female chromosomal sign). But I have been up reading since 11 PM yesterday and it is now 6:06 AM Wednesday morning. So for those of you who actually read this, tell me what you think: I'm tired

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

If you cannot view the above image, please visit [http://www.mochasuite.com/forum\_new/forum\_posts.asp?
TID=13039&PID=216422#216422](http://www.mochasuite.com/forum_new/forum_posts.asp?TID=13039&PID=216422#216422)

| 23951|2007-11-28 09:31:40|clyde winters|Re: DNA Tests Find Branches but Few Roots|
Thanks this was a great article.

Clyde

--- Alex van Deelen <avdeelen@wanadoo.nl> wrote:

>

<http://www.nytimes.com/2007/11/25/business/25dna.html?pagewanted=1>

>

> DNA Tests Find Branches but Few Roots

> By RON NIXON

> Published: November 25, 2007

>

> HENRY LOUIS GATES JR., whose PBS special "African > American Lives" explores > the ancestry of famous African-Americans using DNA > testing, has done more > than anyone to help popularize such tests and > companies that offer them. But > recently this Harvard professor has become one of > the industry's critics.

>

> Looking Into the Past, for a Price Mr. Gates says > his concerns date back to > 2000, when a company told him his maternal ancestry > could most likely be > traced back to Egypt, probably to the Nubian ethnic > group. Five years later, > however, a test by a second company startled him. It > concluded that his > maternal ancestors were not Nubian or even African,

> but most likely

> European.

>

> Why the completely different results? Mr. Gates said > the first company never > told him he had multiple genetic matches, most of > them in Europe. "They told > me what they thought I wanted to hear," Mr. Gates > said.

- >
- > An estimated 460,000 people have taken genetic tests
- > to determine their
- > ancestry or to expand their known family trees,
- > according to Science
- > magazine. Census records, birth and death
- > certificates, ship manifests,
- > slave narratives and other documents have become
- > easier to find through the
- > Internet, making the hunt for family history less
- > daunting than in years
- > past.
- >
- > Yet for many, the paper or digital trail eventually
- > ends. And for those who
- > have reached that point, genetic DNA tests may help
- > to provide the final
- > piece of the puzzle.
- >
- > The expectations and reasons for taking the test
- > vary. For some, the test
- > allows them to reconnect with African ancestors
- > after centuries of slavery
- > wiped out links between African-Americans and their
- > forebears. Others want
- > to see if they have links to historical figures like
- > Genghis Khan or Marie
- > Antoinette. For still others, it's an attempt to
- > fill gaps in family
- > histories and find distant cousins they might not
- > otherwise have known.
- >
- > The demand has spawned an industry. Almost two dozen
- > companies now offer
- > such services, up from just two or three only six
- > years ago. The field is so
- > hot that private equity investors have moved in:
- > Spectrum Equity Investors
- > recently bought Ancestry.com, an online genealogy
- > site, for about $300
- > million shortly after the site added genetic testing
- > as a service.
- >
- > But as the number of test takers and companies has
- > grown, so has the number
- > of scientists or scholars like Mr. Gates who have > questioned assertions that > companies make about their tests. One of the most > controversial issues is > the ability of the tests to determine the country or > the ethnic group of > origin for African-Americans or Native Americans.

>
> Mr. Gates, director of the W.E.B. Du Bois Institute > for African and African > American Research at Harvard, said his experience > and similar stories from > others have prompted him to enter the field.
>
> Mr. Gates recently teamed up with Family Tree DNA, a > DNA testing and > genealogy firm in Houston, to provide genetic > testing and genealogy work for > African-Americans. The new venture is called > AfricanDNA.
>
> "What we hope to do is combine this with > genealogical and other records to > try to help people discover their roots," he said.
> "The limitations of > current genetic DNA tests mean you can't rely on > this alone to tell you > anything. We hope to bring a little order to the > field."
>
> In an editorial in Science magazine in October, a > number of scientists and > scholars said companies might not be fully > explaining the limitations of > genetic testing, or what results actually mean.
>
> The authors said that limited information in the > databases used to compare > DNA results might lead people to draw the wrong > conclusions or to > misinterpret results. The tests trace only a few of > a customer's ancestors > and cannot tell exactly where ancestors might have > lived, or the specific > ethnic group to which they might have belonged. And > the databases of many > companies are not only small - they're also > proprietary, making it hard to > verify results.

>
> "My concern is that the marketing is coming before > the science," said Troy
> Duster, a professor of sociology at New York > University who was an adviser > on the Human Genome Project and an author of the > Science editorial.
>
> "People are making life-changing decisions based on > these tests and may not > be aware of the limitations," he added. "While I > don't think any of the > companies are deliberately misleading customers, > they may have a financial > incentive to tell people what they want to hear."
>
> Bennett Greenspan, founder and president of Family > Tree DNA, said his > company sometimes has to tell clients just the > opposite. "We'll have people > who may think that they have a certain type of > ancestry and we'll tell them > based on the test they are not," he said. "I can > only tell them what the > tests show, nothing more. And sometimes it's not > what they want to hear."
>
> HERE'S how the test works: A customer swabs his or > her cheeks and gums, > collects microscopic tissue samples and sends them > to a laboratory. The lab > extracts and digitizes the DNA and sends the results > back to the companies.
> Using computer software, the companies try to > identify matches between the > customer's DNA and those in their databases.
>
> Looking Into the Past, for a Price The test, which > costs $100 to $900, > typically comes in two forms. One test analyzes > mitochondrial DNA, which > reveals information only about a person's maternal > line, traced back through > the mother's mother to other female forebears (but

- > not the males, because
- > mitochondrial DNA is passed to all children only
- > from their mothers).
- >
- > The second test looks at the Y chromosome, which can
- > provide clues only
- > about a customer's paternal line - so only men can
- > take the Y-chromosome
- > test.
- >
- > Several companies, including DNA Tribes of
- > Arlington, Va., also offer a test
- > that examines the DNA contribution of both parents.
- > These tests are the most
- > controversial because many scientists say there
- > isn't enough data yet to get
- > accurate results.
- >
- > Mitochondrial and Y-chromosome tests combined reveal
- > information pertaining
- > to just 1 percent of a person's DNA. But testing
- > companies say that this 1
- > percent can reveal a lot about a person and bridge
- > gaps in paper records.
- > Mr. Greenspan said that anyone who starts to - > research his or her family
- > history will eventually encounter roadblocks.
- >
- > "This is where DNA comes in and offers clues that
- > might otherwise never be
- >

=== message truncated ===

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your home page.

<http://www.yahoo.com/r/hs>

| 23952|2007-11-28 10:33:21|shaimesh@aol.com|Photographer & Numerologist, David Jenkins on No Out There today (Bl|

From: llear@no-out-there.com

I've received many compliments on my new photos. Well, on today's NO OUT THERE talk show you'll get a chance to meet the person behind the lens.

David Jenkins is a world-class photographer and the person responsible for my fabulous photo below, on my website and also on BlogTalkRadio. Visit his online studio at www.djenkinsphoto.com.

David, who is also very knowledgeable about spirituality and metaphysics, has been a numerologist for years. He let me know he intends to delve more into my name change, Llenar, and the impact of that change in and on my life.

Tune in today as we discuss both his gift of photography and numerology during a lively half-hour NO OUT THERE talkshow at NOON CST, TODAY, NOVEMBER 28TH, (1pm-EST, 11am-MST, 10am-PST) online at www.no-out-there.com/radio and/or CALL-IN to 646-716-9798.

And Shai, if you missed last week's THANKSGIVING show, you can listen at: www.no-out-there.com/radio

NOON CST TODAY

(1pm-EST, 11am-MST, 10am-PST)

www.no-out-there.com/radio

CALL-IN to 646-716-9798.

Llenar

llenar@no-out-there.com

www.no-out-there.com

". . .how can you continue to see the world as real if the self that is determining it to be real is intangible? Ramtha

Internal Virus Database is out-of-date.

Checked by AVG Free Edition.

Version: 7.5.476 / Virus Database: 269.9.6/865 - Release Date: 6/24/2007 8:33 AM

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

| 23953|2007-11-28 10:33:22|shaimesh@aol.com|Dr. Hagins at Georgia Perimeter College
Saturday, December 8th - Dec|

From: Truthcenter@aol.com

You Are Invited To Attend An Educational Lecture Given By

Dr. Ray Hagins

(Regularly featured leading Psychologist, Historian, Lecturer and Spiritual Leader on the nationally syndicated Michael Baisden Radio Show 102.5 in Atlanta)

Topic: The Subliminal Seduction of Holiday Celebrations"

When: Saturday, December 8, 2007

Where: Georgia Perimeter College Decatur Campus

Building SB Room 1190

3251 Panthersville Road

Decatur, Georgia 30034

Other Important Info:

Lite Breakfast and Learn Seminar

"From Health To Wealth "

By Me'Shi Avery

Building SC RM 2140

Scheduled Timefor Events:9am-2PM

Donations will be accepted to cover the cost of

Dr. Haginsexpensesfrom St. Louis to Atlanta

Major Credit Cards will be accepted for CDs & DVDs of Dr. Hagins lectures that will be available to purchase on site

(Due to limited seating and strict adherence to room capacity, please RSVP via email if you plan to attend this event)

Dec8th's Programming Scheduleis as follows:

9:00-10:00a.m.

"From Health To Wealth" seminar conducted by Me'Shi Avery

Learn how making smart choices about your health can lead to financial wealth! Lite refreshments will be served.
(Please RSVP for this seminar if you plan to attend)

11:00 a.m. - 1:00p.m. --- Dr. Ray Hagins' Educational / Cultural Lecture

1:00 - 1:35 p.m. -- Q & A with Dr. Ray

1:35 - 2:00 p.m. -- Opportunity to purchase Dr. Hagins'
DVDs, CD's and other Conscious Materials.

For more event information contact:

Me'Shi Avery via Email: mavery4u@hotmail.com

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

| 23954|2007-11-28 10:43:36|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: DNA Tests Find Branches but Few
Roots|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>
> Thanks this was a great article.
>
>

At some point in the future they may be able to identify many more genetic branches, but the current number of Y and mtDNA lineages is far too small to be taken very seriously.

They also do not identify the many indirect lines in one's blood stream.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23955|2007-11-28 11:27:55|cristofori whitakara|Re: Dr. Ali Muhammed Lectures 12/9/07 @ 5pm - Harlem - $15|

in harlem or phillie?

shaimesh@aol.com wrote:

From: qabalagod@gmail.com

Greetings Brothers and Sisters,

I am pleased to announce to you all that a genius among us will be arriving from his home town of Philadelphia to Harlem's Hiram Grand Lodge of Ancient Free & Accepted Masons, to present to you an intense Presentation on The Alchemical Meaning of Masonry and the Black Body. This Historical lecture will be delivered on Sunday December 9th 2007. I will be presenting a brief expose/presentation on Keys to understanding almost any language. And opening up for Bro. Ali will be Bro. Anpu, a brilliant Qabalist who will be introducing a brand of Qabalah unique to his region of the best part of the planet, (NORTH AMERICA!!!)Philadel phia.

I look forward to seeing you there. WE ARE STARTING AT 5PM SHARP. Do your best to arrive early.

Your Brother and Soldier,

A. A. Rashid.

Smai Tawi Digest Subscribers may access the attachment by clicking below:

[http://groups.yahoo.com/group/SmaiTawi/files/Dr. %20Ali%20Muhamma d%2012-9-07.pdf](http://groups.yahoo.com/group/SmaiTawi/files/Dr.%20Ali%20Muhamma d%2012-9-07.pdf)

---

Check out AOL Money Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.

| 23956|2007-11-28 11:50:29|Asar Imhotep|Re: Other Dogon connections to the Egyptian NIW.T Symbol|

I appreciate this. I remember seeing this a while back at the University of Houston. I need to revisit it. I will definitely read the accompanying pdf file and incorporate it into my notes. Thanks.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Ferg wrote:

Asar, this might be of interest.

Dont forget to click on: The bloom of Banjeli study guide inPDF. The PDF may take a few tries, use the 'refresh button' to activate the browser.

Ferg Somo

<http://66.102.9.104/search?q=cache:R6lHRx0AmSIJ:www.der.org/films/blooms-of-banjeli.html+the+womb+of+an+african+village&hl=en&ct=clnk&cd=31&gl=uk>

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

| 23957|2007-11-28 12:05:10|Peter Gray|Re: Dinosaur find dries Australia water project|

Coexistence with dinosaurs? The dance(s) may be fascinating, but surely any "remembrance" of dinosaurs is mythical.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: boogie_down_black@yahoo.com

Date: Wed, 28 Nov 2007 08:36:26 -0800

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Dinosaur find dries Australia water project

the lakota sioux have dancing ceremonies that illustrate their co-existence with dinosaurs.i wonder if the Kouri peoples and others (aboriginals) have similiar ceremonies?

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

CORRECTED-Dinosaur find dries Australia water project

Mon Nov 26, 2007 8:59pm EST

By Rob Taylor

CANBERRA, Nov 27 (Reuters) - A hoard of dinosaur bones has been discovered at the site of a planned desalination plant meant to deliver Australia's second biggest city from drought, forcing a re-think of the A$3 billion ($2.7 billion) project.

The fossilised bones, estimated to be 115 million years old and belonging to dinosaurs and ancient marine reptiles, were found on a windswept beach in front of the planned project at Powlett River, southeast of Melbourne.

"It's like boring through the tombs of Egypt's ancient emperors or drilling through the terracotta warriors in China after they were discovered," local opposition lawmaker Ken Smith told Reuters, demanding a study before the project proceeds.

"Those ancient sites were important to the world and so is this here," he said.

Much of Australia has been in drought for more than a decade, with international climate scientists warning the dry could be the harbinger of global warming.

Melbourne plans to build one of the world's biggest water desalination plants to drought-proof the city, with construction to begin next year and up to 150 billion litres of drinking water a year flowing by 2011, rivalling a plant in Israel.

The plant will extract salt from sea water through reverse osmosis, discharging salt waste into the ocean and pumping the purified water 85 km (55 miles) to Melbourne.

Monash University researcher and dinosaur expert Lesley Kool was quoted by local papers as saying there was evidence of dinosaurs, teeth, bones and vertebrae. "The rocks were deposited at a time when Australia was in the polar circle," she said. Other remains on the site included the teeth of Pleisosaurs, a small and long-necked reptile which lived in rivers, and the two-legged, plant-eating dinosaur Qantassaurus.

Victoria state Water Minister Tim Holding is yet to commit to an environmental impact report on the site of the bones.

"We will take all environmental and cultural issues into consideration when determining the final specifications, " a spokesman said. (Editing by Jeremy Laurence)

===

HTP,
Mahari

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

| 23958|2007-11-28 12:21:30|cristofori whitakara|Re: Dinosaur find dries Australia water project|
i received this information from www.wbai.org 99.5 fm while listening to the program First voices Indigenous Voices with tiokasin GhostHorse

Peter Gray wrote:

Coexistence with dinosaurs? The dance(s) may be fascinating, but surely any "remembrance" of dinosaurs is mythical.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: boogie_down_black@yahoo. com
Date: Wed, 28 Nov 2007 08:36:26 -0800
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Dinosaur find dries Australia water project

the lakota sioux have dancing ceremonies that illustrate their co-existence with dinosaurs.i wonder if the Kouri peoples and others (aboriginals) have similiar ceremonies?

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

CORRECTED-Dinosaur find dries Australia water project

Mon Nov 26, 2007 8:59pm EST

By Rob Taylor

CANBERRA, Nov 27 (Reuters) - A hoard of dinosaur bones has been discovered at the site of a planned desalination plant meant to deliver Australia's second biggest city from drought, forcing a re-think of the A$3 billion ($2.7 billion) project.

The fossilised bones, estimated to be 115 million years old and belonging to dinosaurs and ancient marine reptiles, were found on a windswept beach in front of the planned project at Powlett River, southeast of Melbourne.

"It's like boring through the tombs of Egypt's ancient emperors or drilling through the terracotta warriors in China after they were discovered," local opposition lawmaker Ken Smith told Reuters, demanding a study before the project proceeds.

"Those ancient sites were important to the world and so is this here," he said.

Much of Australia has been in drought for more than a decade, with international climate scientists warning the dry could be the harbinger of global warming.

Melbourne plans to build one of the world's biggest water desalination plants to drought-proof the city, with construction to begin next year and up to 150 billion litres of drinking water a year flowing by 2011, rivalling a plant in Israel.

The plant will extract salt from sea water through reverse osmosis, discharging salt waste into the ocean and pumping the purified water 85 km (55 miles) to Melbourne.

Monash University researcher and dinosaur expert Lesley Kool was quoted by local papers as saying there was evidence of dinosaurs, teeth, bones and vertebrae. "The rocks were deposited at a time when Australia was in the polar circle," she said. Other remains on the site included the teeth of Pleisosaurs, a small and long-necked reptile which lived in rivers, and the two-legged, plant-eating dinosaur Qantassaurus.

Victoria state Water Minister Tim Holding is yet to commit to an environmental impact report on the site of the bones.

"We will take all environmental and cultural issues into consideration when determining the final specifications," a spokesman said. (Editing by Jeremy Laurence)

====

HTP,
Mahari

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

---

Your smile counts. The more smiles you share, the more we donate. Join in!

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.
| 23959|2007-11-28 15:52:51|shaimesh@aol.com|Re: Dr. Ali Muhammed Lectures 12/9/07 @
5pm - Harlem - $15|

Attachments :

Harlem @ the Masonic Lodge. Flyer attached. Look forward to seeing you there :)

Sista Shai (Shy-ee)

-----Original Message-----

From: cristofori whitakara

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Wed, 28 Nov 2007 11:27 am

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Dr. Ali Muhammed Lectures 12/9/07 @ 5pm - Harlem - $15

in harlem or phillie?

shaimesh@aol.com wrote:

From: qabalagod@gmail.com

Greetings Brothers and Sisters,

I am pleased to announce to you all that a genius among us will be arriving from his home town of Philadelphia to Harlem's Hiram Grand Lodge of Ancient Free & Accepted Masons, to present to you an intense Presentation on The Alchemical Meaning of Masonry and the Black Body. This Historical lecture will be delivered on Sunday December 9th 2007. I will be presenting a brief expose/presentation on Keys to understanding almost any language. And opening up for Bro. Ali will be Bro. Anpu, a brilliant Qabalist who will be introducing a brand of Qabalah unique to his region of the best part of the planet, (NORTH AMERICA!!!)Philadel phia.

I look forward to seeing you there. WE ARE STARTING AT 5PM SHARP.
Do your best to arrive early.

Your Brother and Soldier,

A. A. Rashid.

Smai Tawi Daily Digest Subscribers may access the attachment by clicking below:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/SmaiTawi/files/Dr.%20Ali%20Muhamma d%2012-9-07.pdf

---

Check out AOL Money Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

| 23960|2007-11-28 21:02:47|Mahari Mengistu|Napolean said he wanted to be Muslim; it didn't work|

A European hero at work... the man who said:
"History is a set of agreed upon lies".

=====

To invade Egypt, Napoleon said he wanted to be Muslim; it didn't work

6 hours ago

"Mirage - Napoleon's Scientists and the Unveiling of Egypt"

Nina Burleigh (Harper)

Napoleon Bonaparte had an idea for winning the hearts and minds of the Muslim people he invaded: He told the Egyptians that he and his army wanted to be Muslims, too.

It wasn't true, but that didn't bother Napoleon. What might have bothered him was that the idea didn't work.

He delayed revealing that he had targeted Egypt until hundreds of troop carriers were plowing through the Mediterranean, vainly hunted by Britain's navy. Some in France already knew what he wanted. He thought Egypt could be the start of an empire rivalling the one Alexander the Great conquered 2,000 years earlier.

As Nina Burleigh's "Mirage" describes it, the 28-year-old general lacked intercultural savvy. It may not have occurred to him - or it may not have mattered - that people dislike being invaded, especially when they get shot at, even if the invaders come from a country with democratic institutions.

In Cairo, Muslims told Napoleon that conversion required circumcision and renouncing alcohol. Frank McLynn, a British biographer, wrote that their view began a long negotiation at Al-Azhar University, still today a centre of Muslim faith. It ended in compromise, ratified in Mecca: The French were allies of Islam, and they could keep both wine and foreskins.

McLynn calls the compromise "a great and underrated propaganda victory for Napoleon." But it didn't prevent Turkey, the nominal ruler of Egypt, from declaring war on France nor the Sultan from decreeing it a holy war.

Rebellion erupted at Al-Azhar, lasting two days and two nights, killing 200 French soldiers before the French command got a grip. French bombardment continued after the rebels ceased fire, killing 2,000 Egyptians. The book says "a few dozen" executions followed. Some French complained there should have been more.

"In fact the insurgency was never really extinguished, and a larger, longer and more dangerous insurrection lay ahead," Burleigh writes.

With an easy style and an eye for striking detail, Burleigh concentrates on 151 French scientists, scholars and students who joined the expedition, tempted by hero worship of Napoleon and the prospect of scientific adventure. The campaign killed 31 of them. Survivors reached home in small groups and produced a 24-volume "Description of Egypt."

McLynn records that the French expedition supervised building important public works - hospitals, sewers, street lighting, irrigation schemes, and so on.

They also founded Egyptology. An army engineer, busy strengthening the defence of a medieval castle, uncovered the Rosetta Stone. Named for the nearby Egyptian seaside town, the stone carried the same proclamation written both in ancient Greek, well known to scholars, and in Egyptian hieroglyphics, then still a great mystery. More than 20 years later another Frenchman, Jean-Francois Champollion, used the Greek to complete deciphering the hieroglyphs.

Napoleon's scientists admired the ruins and copied the inscriptions. Unable to read the language, they had little idea of the stories told. But the illustrated Egyptian designs inspired a style among Western artists that remained popular through the 1800s and later.

Bubonic plague combined with British ships, Turkish troops and hostile Egyptians to defeat the French army. After a year, the invasion was doomed and Napoleon returned to France amid unstable politics.

===

HTP,
Mahari

| 23961|2007-11-28 22:09:12|shaimesh@aol.com|Christ's Mother, "The Black Madonna"|

From: AthenaIPMG@aol.com

Christ's Mother, "The Black Madonna" is worshiped throughout Europe of all places

The Original
Black
Madonna
Saxakali.com

Blacked Out
Through Whitewash

is a great book for all peoples of color

Order your copy
today

Contact

A-Kar Productions
sepps1@dock.net
et

The most sacred icons of the Catholic Church are the Black Madonna and Christ child, which are found in Europe's most venerated shrines and cathedrals. Each year, hundreds of thousands of European pilgrims ritually humble themselves before the image of Black Mary and her child Jesus at Black Madonna sites throughout France, Germany, Spain, Italy, Belgium, Portugal and other Catholic countries. Many Black Madonna statues have the black paint literally kissed off of their hands and feet. In Poland, the Church encourages believers to pray to the Black Madonna of Czestochowka every morning before rising. It is reported that Pope John Paul follows this ritual. Time Magazine (June 11, 1979) reported on Popelaul II's visit to Czestochowka's holiest shrine, which prominently displays "The Lady" known for centuries as the Black Madonna. At Our Lady of Koden (Poland), there are statues of white saints carrying pictures of Black Madonnas. Pilgrims throughout the ages have visited Black Madonna sites and left inspired, confident, relieved, or healed of their afflictions. Today, there are over 300 documented Black Madonna sites in France alone! 1 Sometimes they are hidden awaken vaults, while the public is shown Madonnas with European features.

or

suzar.co

m

"Ye shall know the Truth and the Truth
...shall BLOW YO MIND!..."

Visit
Today!

suzar.co

m

The Queen of the Pyrenees

In the hard-to-find classic, Anacalypsis, historian Godfrey Higgins writes, "...in all the Romish countries of Europe, in France, Italy, Germany, etc., the God Christ, as well as his mother, are described in their old pictures and statues to be black. The infant God in the arms of his black mother, his eyes and drapery white, is himself perfectly black. If the reader doubt my word, he may go to the cathedral at Moulins -to the famous chapel of the Virgin at Loretto ...the whiteness of the eyes and teeth, and the studied redness of the lips, are very observable... There is scarcely an old church in Italy where some remains of the worship of the BLACK VIRGIN and BLACK CHID are not to be met with. Very often the black figures have given way to white ones, and in these cases the black ones, as being held sacred, were put into retired places in the churches, but were not destroyed... 2

The Black Madonnas originally all had Africoid features before most of them were destroyed by iconoclasts. When they were replaced, the artists retained the dark skin color but, not being familiar with real Afrikans, gave European features to the paintings. In cases where originals have survived, you may witness Africoid features on Mary and her child Jesus, such as the Black Madonna of Nuria, Spain - called "the Queen of the Pyrenees." Russia's remarkable legacy of Black Madonnas and other Christian icons of dark skin is evidenced in the book, Russian Icons by Vladimir Ivanov, including the feature story of the Spring 1994 issue of Russian Life magazine, graced with a Black Madonna on its cover.

- 1) Watts, 22.
- 2) Higgs, v! 138

---

© 1994 by the author. All rights reserved. This book may not be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from the author.

Actually the worship of the virgin, Black "Mother of God" with her God-begotten child, far predates Christianity and prevailed throughout the ancient world.

Goddess Ad (Isis) suckling Her Holy Child Heru (Horus).

Historians recognize that the statue of the Egyptian Goddess Isis with her child Horus in her arms was the first Madonna and Child. They were renamed Mary and Jesus when Europe was forcibly Christianized. The worship of Isis and Horus was especially popular in ancient Rome. "Roman legions carried this figure of Black Isis holding the Black infant Horus all over Europe where shrines were established to her. So holy and venerate were these shrines that when Christianity invaded Europe, these figures of the Black Isis holding the Black Horus were not destroyed but turned into figures of the Black Madonna and Child. Today these are still the holiest shrines in Catholic Europe." 1 Titles such as Our Lady, The Great Mother, are the same titles attributed to Isis! The word "Madonna" itself is from mater domina, a title used for Isis! The month of May, which was dedicated to the heathen Virgin Mothers, is also the month Mary, the Christian Virgin. 2

The Fedorovo Virgin, a Black Madonna icon of 18th century Russia

Incredulously, many contemporary white authors seem not to link or acknowledge the Black Madonna's color with her Afrikan origin, although their ancestors did without hesitation. Some flatly deny any racial connection. Instead, they come up with various reasons and sophisticated explanations (the "dark" phase of the moon, fertility of the earth, etc.) -any excuse except Melanin - to explain why the Lady is portrayed black.

This is evident in a number of books by white authors discussing Black Madonnas. Perhaps whites have become so enmeshed in the webs of false history woven by their predecessors that many are blind to the truth, unable to see or discern even glaring evidence of Afrikan historical presence. If white writers of today are indeed this ignorant - or pretending ignorance - of the Black Madonna's Afrikan origin, let them read the works of a few rare honest white scholars which preceded them, such as Gerald Massey, T.W. Doane, Godfrey Higgins and Kersey Graves. These writers knew and wrote the truth. This is amazing given the exceedingly overtly racist times in which they lived. Yet today, official white establishment does not and will not acknowledge the Afrikan genesis of their whitewashed religions.

In Bible Myths, T.W. Doane devotes a chapter to The Worship of the Virgin Mother, where he candidly states, "The whole secret of the fact of these early representations of the Virgin Mary and Jesus - so called-being black, crowned, and covered with jewels, is that they are of pre-Christian origin; they are Isis and Horus... baptized anew." 3

- 1) Saskana, 53-54.
- 2) Doane, 335.
- 3) Ibid., 337.

---

© The above image cannot be displayed. Your computer may not have enough memory to open the image, or the image may have been moved. Restart the computer and open the file again. If the red x still appears, you may have to delete the image and then insert it again.

Send mail to info@saxakali.com with questions or comments about this web site.
Copyright 1997 [Saxakali]
Last modified: February 19, 1999

---

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 23962|2007-11-28 23:17:26|asar_imhotep|Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo
Wisdom Teachings|

Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teachings

The Globe. A sculpture in the building of the United Nations in Geneva.

The teachings of timeless wisdom tell us, that there are traces of the teachings found everywhere on the globe, expressing through the Scriptures and spiritual teachings of many nations (see our booklet on H. P. Blavatsky).

Two days ago I got an e-mail from a friend living in Brazzaville, Congo, who wrote to me about fascinating parallels between the Eastern wisdom teachings and Kikongo, his mother tongue:

"All the material I receive from you helps me establish a link with the traditional religion of our ancestors akin to ancient Egyptian spiritual practices. Focus being made on positive aspects of course.

It is called "Kinzambi kia Kongo" meaning "Solar Religion". Kikongo being my mother tongue it is also an ethnic group living in Central Africa: DRC, Congo, Gabon, Angola? and members can found in other areas of the globe: Southern part of African, Americas, Asia?

I also suspect some kinship between Sanskrit and Kikongo in terms of vocabulary and vibration. By way of examples the most sacred sound in kikongo is OMAKONGO (OM AKONGO think of the pranava OM). Again kundalini is to be found in kikongo too. Kunda is like the base or springboard from which the spine (kilini or lini in kikongo) can be activated.

In the same connection, KONGO is a sacred sound in kikongo meaning the Sun, Universe, God, Power , Love, Wisdom? is the highest title in Japanese Buddhism. Its equivalent in Sanskrit is Vajra.

As for Shamballa, traces of its origin can also be found in kikongo. Sha = city in old kikongo; mbala = name of a tribe with relations to divine power.

Melekisedeki. Mele = targeted towards, Kisedeki = Heart of the Sun.

NGUM & NZA in Kikongo means Solve & Coagula in Alchemy, Yang & Yin for Chinese wisdom. Ngum = Spirit and NZA= matter. In pronouncing this mantra you can feel similarities with HAM SA?

The sound NGUM (I found in some Buddhist texts that GUM is used to correct negative aspects of someone's life) was vocalized by our ancestors to fight, clear negativity. The following mantra is OM GUM GANAPATAYI SVAHA dedicated to Ganesha is revealing enough.

A Six-rayed Star is said to be the symbol of Kongo people. One triangle represents GOD with his three attributes: LOVE, WISDOM and WILL; the other one three divine ancestors of kongo religion. Be it said by passing that Ne KUTUMI (similarities with Master KOOT HUMI) is one of the great divine ancestors in tradition.

In Avalokitesvara's mantra OM MANI PADME HUM there is the word Mani. The same word in kikongo is regarded as the title given to an initiate who has attained enlightenment. Hence the term MANI KONGO given to the old king of Kongo Kingdom in the 13th century. He was said to have a divine consciousness while living on earth.

In Kukai's mantra is NAMU DAISHI HENJO KONGO (Homage to Maitreya). we see the word KONGO. Kukai is the Highest Priest in Shigon.

In Bagavad Gita, Krishna says of letters: " I am A". In kikongo AKONGO (A KONGO) is the name of HIGH GOD. (AKONGO = OMAKONGO) .The first letter of the kikongo alphabet is

"A", just like in hebrew with Alef, latin Alpha. Kikongo alphabet has equally 22 letters just like hebrew. Think of the 22 chapters of the Book of Revelation in the Bible.

Maha in Sanskrit means Great; it is the same thing in kikongo. Hence words mahatma, MahaLowa in kikongo (Great Sun = Vairocana)."

He also gave me a text where he is going a bit more into details. I sent it to some friends who were very much touched by it. A friend from Argentina replied:

"Thank for sharing the African e-mail with me. It made my imagination fly to the planets interplay and Shiva's dance. It is so joyful to find our common origin that we can hardly realize how the diaspora took place among the human beings. Everything has to be experienced, I guess. This reminded me when Roberto got in touch for the first time with Celtic music. He was astonished to find out that it contained even tango as well as tarantella in it. Going backwards, if possible, we should be able to trace the OM?

So many sounds have lost their significance, ? that's why the Master says that the degradation of languages shows the degradation of people. The pulsation, perhaps?"

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23963|2007-11-29 06:52:03|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teaching|

Thanks, Asar, that was a good one. You won't have the email contact for the writer in the Kongo, would you?

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thu, 29 Nov 2007 7:17 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teachings

Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teachings

The Globe. A sculpture in the building of the United Nations in Geneva.

The teachings of timeless wisdom tell us, that there are traces of the teachings found everywhere on the globe, expressing through the Scriptures and spiritual teachings of many nations (see our booklet on H. P. Blavatsky).

Two days ago I got an e-mail from a friend living in Brazzaville, Congo, who wrote to me about fascinating parallels between the Eastern wisdom teachings and Kikongo, his mother tongue: "All the material I receive from you helps me establish a link with the traditional religion of our ancestors akin to ancient Egyptian spiritual practices. Focus being made on positive aspects of course.

It is called "Kinzambi kia Kongo" meaning "Solar Religion". Kikongo being my mother tongue it is also an ethnic group living in Central Africa: DRC, Congo, Gabon, Angola and members can found in other areas of the globe: Southern part of African, Americas, Asia

I also suspect some kinship between Sanskrit and Kikongo in terms of vocabulary and vibration. By way of examples the most sacred sound in kikongo is OMAKONGO (OM AKONGO think of the pranava OM). Again kundalini is to be found in kikongo too. Kunda is like the base or springboard from which the spine (kilini or lini in kikongo) can be activated.

In the same connection, KONGO is a sacred sound in kikongo meaning the Sun, Universe, God, Power, Love, Wisdom is the highest title in Japanese Buddhism. Its equivalent in Sanskrit is Vajra.

As for Shamballa, traces of its origin can also be found in kikongo. Sha = city in old kikongo; mbala = name of a tribe with relations to divine power.

Melekisedeki. Mele = targeted towards, Kisedeki = Heart of the Sun.

NGUM & NZA in Kikongo means Solve & Coagula in Alchemy, Yang & Yin for Chinese wisdom. Ngum = Spirit and NZA= matter. In pronouncing this mantra you can feel similarities with HAM SA

The sound NGUM (I found in some Buddhist texts that GUM is used to correct negative aspects of someone's life) was vocalized by our ancestors to fight, clear negativity. The following mantra is OM GUM GANAPATAYI SVAHA dedicated to Ganesha is revealing enough.

A Six-rayed Star is said to be the symbol of Kongo people. One triangle represents GOD with his three attributes: LOVE, WISDOM and WILL; the other one three divine ancestors of kongo religion. Be it said by passing that Ne KUTUMI (similarities with Master KOOT HUMI) is one of the great divine ancestors in tradition.

In Avalokitesvara's mantra OM MANI PADME HUM there is the word Mani. The same word in kikongo is regarded as the title given to an initiate who has attained enlightenment. Hence the term MANI KONGO given to the old king of Kongo Kingdom in the 13th century. He was said to have a divine consciousness while living on earth.

In Kukai's mantra is NAMU DAISHI HENJO KONGO (Homage to Maitreya). we see the word KONGO. Kukai is the Highest Priest in Shigon.

In Bagavad Gita, Krishna says of letters: " I am A". In kikongo AKONGO (A KONGO) is the name of HIGH GOD. (AKONGO = OMAKONGO) .The first letter of the kikongo alphabet is "A", just like in hebrew with Alef, latin Alpha. Kikongo alphabet has equally 22 letters just like hebrew. Think of the 22 chapters of the Book of Revelation in the Bible.

Maha in Sanskrit means Great; it is the same thing in kikongo. Hence words mahatma, MahaLowa in kikongo (Great Sun = Vairocana)."

He also gave me a text where he is going a bit more into details. I sent it to some friends who were very much touched by it. A friend from Argentina replied:

"Thank for sharing the African e-mail with me. It made my imagination fly to the planets interplay and Shiva's dance. It is so joyful to find our common origin that we can hardly realize how the diaspora took place among the human beings. Everything has to be experienced, I guess. This reminded me when Roberto got in touch for the first time with Celtic music. He was astonished to find out that it contained even tango as well as tarantella in it. Going backwards, if possible, we should be able to trace the OM

So many sounds have lost their significance, that's why the Master says that the degradation of languages shows the degradation of people. The pulsation, perhaps?"

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

| 23964|2007-11-29 14:18:03|asar_imhotep|Re: Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teaching|

No I don't at this present moment. If you follow the original link he may be able to help you.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, KarnakHouse@... wrote:

>
> Thanks, Asar, that was a good one. You won't have the email contact > for the writer in the Kongo, would you?
>
>
>
>
> Intef Djehutymes
>

| 23965|2007-11-29 15:07:05|cristofori whitakara|Re: Dr. Ali Muhammed Lectures 12/9/07 @ 5pm - Harlem - $15|

ty i look forward to being there work permitting :) or i'll show there late

shaimesh@aol.com wrote:

Harlem @ the Masonic Lodge. Flyer attached. Look forward to seeing your there :)

Sista Shai (Shy-ee)

-----Original Message-----

From: cristofori whitakara

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Sent: Wed, 28 Nov 2007 11:27 am

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Dr. Ali Muhammed Lectures 12/9/07 @ 5pm - Harlem - $15

in harlem or phillie?

shaimesh@aol.com wrote:

From: qabalagod@gmail.com

Greetings Brothers and Sisters,

I am pleased to announce to you all that a genius among us will be arriving from his home town of Philadelphia to Harlem's Hiram Grand Lodge of Ancient Free & Accepted Masons, to present to you an intense Presentation on The Alchemical Meaning of Masonry and the Black Body. This Historical lecture will be delivered on Sunday December 9th 2007. I will be presenting a brief expose/presentation on Keys to understanding almost any language. And opening up for Bro. Ali will be Bro. Anpu, a brilliant Qabalist who will be introducing a brand of Qabalah unique to his region of the best part of the planet, (NORTH AMERICA!!!)Philadel phia.

I look forward to seeing you there. WE ARE STARTING AT 5PM SHARP.
Do your best to arrive early.

Your Brother and Soldier,

A. A. Rashid.

Smai Tawi Daily Digest Subscribers may access the attachment by clicking below:

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/SmaiTawi/files/Dr.%20Ali%20Muhamma d%2012-9-07.pdf>

---

Check out AOL Money Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

| 23966|2007-11-29 16:38:34|Paul Kekai Manansala|Should Toronto allow Africentric schools?|
Panel: Should Toronto allow Africentric schools?

<http://communities.canada.com/nationalpost/blogs/toronto/archive/2007/11/19/q-a-should-toronto-allow-africentric-schools.aspx>

Toronto has been engaged in a heated debate about the merits of opening up a pilot Africentric public school which would put more black teachers in the classrooms and take an African-centred approach to the curriculum. While the proposal has found much support from the black community, critics say the idea goes down a dangerous, divisive path that will do more harm than good.

In reporting on this story, the Post's Natalie Alcoba presented four questions on the issue to a panel of experts: Vernon Farrell, a retired Toronto District School Board principal and current member of the Toronto school board's Africentric Advisory Committee; Courtney Betty, a Toronto lawyer who has spoken out against plans for a black-only school; and Ken Fells, the principal of St. Patrick's Alexandra school in Halifax and an advocate of the Africentric program in Nova Scotia. Here's what they had to say:

Would you send your child to an Africentric school, and why?

VF: I would send my child to an Africentric school because an Africentric school is an effective school where effective teachers use an inclusive curriculum to facilitate successful learning outcomes for all students. An Africentric school environment fosters the belief that all students can learn; it has an inclusive curriculum that validates all other centres/cultures unlike the Eurocentric curriculum which only validates Europeans and their conquests. Our world is predominantly non-European, yet the contributions which non-Europeans have made and are making to world development are omitted from the Eurocentric curriculum taught in schools today. All students need to see themselves and their cultures included in a curriculum relevant to development of their self-identity.

CB: There is a revered ancient African Proverb which lies at the core of African civilization; "It takes a village to raise a child." This has been the guiding light for people of African descent universally. Many would agree that the world has become a global village. Why then would we consider creating barriers at a time when so many barriers have been broken down by so many people? In a city such as Toronto one of the most important lessons for our young people is the exposure to many cultures. Toronto is one of the greatest multicultural cities in the world and the valuable lessons learned from interacting with different cultures will help any young person as they navigate through life. What is very sad is that as a result of the systematic failure of Toronto secondary schools, some parents are now being forced to consider separate schools as a magical solution. What is even more shameful is that Stephen Lewis documented the problems facing visible minority youth over 15 years ago and at that time recognized that they had been in existence for 10 years. So no, my first approach would not be to seek a magical situation without taking all steps necessary to have the Toronto District School Board held accountable for their systematic failure of so many of our young people.

KF: Most certainly I would send my child and recommend that any parent or guardian send their child to an Africentric School. Firstly, teachers who work in an Africentric environment are schoolteachers, not just classroom teachers. An Africentric school would validate the child's experiences that are culturally relevant but more importantly demonstrate the contributions of those in the diaspora. I want my child to grow up with a sense of who they are and recognize how their community work ethic has been incorporated within the school curriculum and outcomes. Africentric outcomes are based on principles that are modeled through how students greet one another, spirit, family, community, harmony and interconnectedness fostering that positive environment.

| 23967|2007-11-29 17:34:27|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teaching|

>>A Six-rayed Star is said to be the symbol of Kongo people. One triangle represents GOD with his three attributes: LOVE, WISDOM and WILL; the other one three divine ancestors of kongo religion. Be it said by passing that Ne KUTUMI (similarities with Master KOOT HUMU) is one of the great divine ancestors in tradition.<<

This reminds me of the Star of David whose existence we have yet to clearly substantiate. However, the symbol is Kemau and goes back to at least 2000 BC - at least 1000 years before Israel was established. One other thing, Asar, doesn't the Bantu/Afrikan word "wa" mean "people, us, our collective selves" or approximately? It dawned on me that couldn't the English word "we" have its genesis in "wa"?
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahooogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teachings

>

origin\

> -sanskrit-and-kikongo-wisdom-teachings/>

>

> [globe.jpg]

>

> The Globe. A sculpture in the building of the United Nations in Geneva.

>

> The teachings of timeless wisdom

> tell us, that there

are

> traces of the teachings found everywhere on the globe, expressing > through the Scriptures and spiritual teachings of many nations (see

our

> booklet on H. P. Blavatsky

> ).

>

> Two days ago I got an e-mail from a friend living in Brazzaville

> , Congo

> , who wrote to me

> about fascinating parallels between the Eastern wisdom teachings and > Kikongo , his mother tongue:

>

> "All the material I receive from you helps me establish a link with > the traditional religion of our ancestors akin to ancient Egyptian > spiritual practices. Focus being made on positive aspects of course.

>

> It is called "Kinzambi kia Kongo" meaning "Solar > Religion". Kikongo being my mother tongue it is also an ethnic group > living in Central Africa: DRC, Congo, Gabon, Angola? and members can > found in other areas of the globe: Southern part of African,

Americas,

> Asia?

>

> I also suspect some kinship between Sanskrit and Kikongo in terms of > vocabulary and vibration. By way of examples the most sacred sound

in > kikongo is OMAKONGO (OM AKONGO think of the pranava OM). Again

kundalini > is to be found in kikongo too. Kunda is like the base or springboard > from which the spine (kilini or lini in kikongo) can be activated.

>

> In the same connection, KONGO is a sacred sound in kikongo meaning

the

> Sun, Universe, God, Power , Love, Wisdom? is the highest title in > Japanese Buddhism. Its equivalent in Sanskrit is Vajra.

>

> As for Shamballa, traces of its origin can also be found in kikongo. Sha

> = city in old kikongo; mbala = name of a tribe with relations to divine

> power.

>

> Melekisedeki. Mele = targeted towards, Kisedeki = Heart of the Sun.

>

> NGUM & NZA in Kikongo means Solve & Coagula in Alchemy, Yang & Yin

for

> Chinese wisdom. Ngum = Spirit and NZA= matter. In pronouncing this > mantra you can feel similarities with HAM SA?

>

> The sound NGUM (I found in some Buddhist texts that GUM is used to > correct negative aspects of someone's life) was vocalized by our > ancestors to fight, clear negativity. The following mantra is OM GUM > GANAPATAYI SVAHA dedicated to Ganesha is revealing enough.

>

> A Six-rayed Star is said to be the symbol of Kongo people. One triangle > represents GOD with his three attributes: LOVE, WISDOM and WILL; the > other one three divine ancestors of kongo religion. Be it said by > passing that Ne KUTUMI (similarities with Master KOOT HUMI) is one

of > the great divine ancestors in tradition.

>

> In Avalokitesvara's mantra OM MANI PADME HUM there is the word Mani.

> The same word in kikongo is regarded as the title given to an initiate > who has attained enlightenment. Hence the term MANI KONGO given to

the

- > old king of Kongo Kingdom in the 13th century. He was said to have a
- > divine consciousness while living on earth.
- >
- > In Kukai's mantra is NAMU DAISHI HENJO KONGO (Homage to Maitreya).
- > we see the word KONGO. Kukai is the Highest Priest in Shigon.
- >
- > In Bagavad Gita, Krishna says of letters: " I am A". In kikongo
- > AKONGO (A KONGO) is the name of HIGH GOD. (AKONGO = OMAKONGO) .The

first

- > letter of the kikongo alphabet is "A", just like in hebrew with
- > Alef, latin Alpha. Kikongo alphabet has equally 22 letters just like
- > hebrew. Think of the 22 chapters of the Book of Revelation in the Bible.

- >
- > Maha in Sanskrit means Great; it is the same thing in kikongo. Hence
- > words mahatma, MahaLowa in kikongo (Great Sun = Vairocana)."
- >
- > He also gave me a text

where

- > he is going a bit more into details. I sent it to some friends who were

- > very much touched by it. A friend from Argentina replied:
- >
- > "Thank for sharing the African e-mail with me. It made my
- > imagination fly to the planets interplay and Shiva's dance. It is so
- > joyful to find our common origin that we can hardly realize how the
- > diaspora took place among the human beings. Everything has to be
- > experienced, I guess. This reminded me when Roberto got in touch

for the

- > first time with Celtic music. He was astonished to find out that it
- > contained even tango as well as tarantella in it. Going backwards,

if

- > possible, we should be able to trace the OM?
- > So many sounds have lost their significance, ? that's why the - > Master says that the degradation of languages shows the degradation

of

- > people. The pulsation, perhaps?"

>

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23968|2007-11-29 18:27:26|ras_piankhi|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "ras_piankhi" wrote:

>>

>> Also for those that don't have them I suggesty the Magical Egypt

>> Series by John Anthony West. He with Laird Scranton also outline the >> Dogon/Egyptian connection as well and they show the glyphs that >> correspond in both the Dogon and Kemetic spirituality to string theory

>> and quantum physics and it it really eye opening. I believe it is the >> very last dvd number 8 that explores these connections but the whole

>> series really gets into the esoteric and scientific aspects of >> Kemetic culture. Very good series on many levels. here is an excerpt

>> from DVD 8

>>

>> <http://www.magicalegypt.com/>

>>

>

> The only thing I really don't like about the book, or the series is > that they still can't clearly identify Ta-Merri with Africa. It's more > like the Egyptians were "Egyptians" and they taught the Dogon these > aspects of the culture. They still leave it to where you could > speculate the ethnicity of the Kmtjw.

>

> This is why the greater exploration into the Niger-Congo language > group will prove the most fruitful, because at this point you can't > deny the ethnicity of the Ancient Egyptians.

>

> They provide no cultural or historical context for their discussion,

> thus giving the possibility that the Egyptians came out of no where > and taught this one tribe in Africa (although they mention similar > concepts among other west African people).

>

> They still are of the belief that Egypt rose first and then spread its > influence out. The opposite is true. Egypt is the result of many > African nations coming together after the Naptian Pluval period which > caused the desertification of the Sahara region. This forced the > African migrations south and east ward and it is this desire to > overcome nature that a political state of Ta-Merri is formed. They > don't know about the university system of Africa (which still exist > today).

- >
- > Mdw Ntr is the way all of these societies could communicate. Words
- > change how they are said over time and within regional dialects.
- > Africans knew this. But what doesn't change are symbols. As Scranton
- > correctly noted is that Mdw Ntr writing is a conscious writing system
- > and was deliberately developed by priests. They deliberately created
- > this system as a means to communicate with the different schools
- > across the continent. This view is missing from their analysis.
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
- >

I totally agree with what your saying in your post. They dance around the fact that Egypt is African in every respect. They try to do it in a seemingly objective "way" but they do it none the less. Yes they have put no info in their approach to their studies about Egypt Origins being in the south the Nile Valley peoples migrating from the Sahara east and southwards as you so eloquently put it. They have no Idea about the Educational System that has been maintained through out the continent either. They definitely leave speculation as to the Kmtjw's identity because their are numerous West African tribes from the Yoruba many others who trace their origins to the Nile Valley and their present location to their displacement from the Nile valley by invasion and etc.

What I did like about it was the symbolic connections the they made using actual picture of Egyptian hieroglyphs and the Dogons' own symbolism of Amma and the Sene seeds then they showed the symbols for String Theory alongside the Dogons' creation symbols and the Ancient Egyptians Symbols for the goddess Neith and how they were one and the same. I knew he would never make a connection between Africa and Egypt because of the stigma they believe they will face and the their own cowardice and imo racism. They make every other claim possible but dance around the African origins of Egypt. When their is more than enough irrefutable evidence out there. If one is looking for the actual symbols and their meanings and how they are identical as further proof of their connections I think they are good in that respect.

Funny you mentioned about their lack of connecting Egypt to Africa because i remember Dr Ben used to say explicitly(I have seen him in lectures say it and I own a lecture to how John Anthony West would sneak into his classes at Columbia University or Cornell I can't remember which one right now but he never was actually enrolled in his class. He said he would sit in the back and take notes and tape his lectures and how alot of what he taught ended up West's books like Serpent in the sky and etc but he never got any credit for it. He also discussed the fact J A West never connects Egypt with Africa culturally or in terms of it's origins.

One Black Love,

Ras Khalif

| 23969|2007-11-29 19:00:14|Asar Imhotep|Re: Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teaching|

Peace Mahari

I'm not sure if there is a definite connection. Here is the www.etymonline.com entry for "we"

*****

we

O.E. we, from P.Gmc. **wiz* (cf. O.S. wi, O.N. ver, Dan. vi, O.Fris. wi, Du. wij, O.H.G., Ger. wir, Goth. weis "we"), from PIE **wei-* (cf. Skt. *vayam, O.Pers. vayam, Hitt. wesh "we," O.C.S. ve "we two," Lith. vedu "we two"). The "royal we" (use of plural pronoun to denote oneself) is at least as old as "Beowulf" (c.725); use by writers to establish an impersonal style is also from O.E.; it was especially common 19c. in unsigned editorials, to suggest staff consensus, and was lampooned as such since at least 1853 (cf. also wegotism).

[for those who might not know what the abbreviations above stand for - i included the definitions below]

Skt. Sanskrit, the classical Indian literary language from 4c. B.C.E.

P.Gmc. Proto-Germanic, hypothetical prehistoric ancestor of all Germanic languages, including English.

PIE Proto-Indo-European, the hypothetical reconstructed ancestral language of the Indo-European family. The time scale is much debated, but the most recent date proposed for it is about 5,500 years ago.

O.S. Old Saxon, a West Germanic language, the earliest written form of Low German, spoken c.700-c.1100.

O.N. Old Norse. the Norwegian language as written and spoken c.100 to 1500 C.E., the relevant phase of it being "Viking Norse" (700-1100), the language spoken by the invaders and colonizers of northern and eastern England c.875-950. This was before the rapid divergence of West Norse (Norway and the colonies) and East Norse (Denmark and Sweden), so the language of the vikings in England was essentially the same, whether they came from Denmark or from Norway. Only a few of the loan words into English can be distinguished as being from one or the other group.

O.C.S. Old Church Slavonic, the earliest attested Slavic language, known from 9c. C.E. Used by the Slavs of Macedonia and Bulgaria.

O.N.Fr. Old North French, the dialect of northern France before the 1500s, especially that of coastal Normandy and Picardy.

Lith. Lithuanian, the Baltic language spoken in Lithuania.

*****

The initial article is making a connection with Sanskrit and Kikongo so their might be a basis for further research. As can be seen in the example above, the Sanskrit word for we is "vayam." The Bantu W could correspond to the Sanskrit V. I think Dr. Winters could expound on this further if there is a real connection.

The Kikongo root "wa" usually are in words that deals with life itself, conception or "living." Some examples are:

Kongo

Fwa = death (stop order - to cease movement)

Yakwa = conception (go order - command behind the process of movement - biologically)

Nkwa = life, living

Nkwi-ki = life, living

Sengumunwa = Conceive conceptually

Vulumunwa = Conceive conceptually

Akan

Nkwa = life

Ta-Meri

Nkwa (ankh) = life

In Swahili, the "wa" class noun makes things plural. So:

mtu = person

watu = people

The prefix goes on the numbers too:

mtu mmoja = 'one person',

watu watano = 'five people'.

It goes on the verb too:

watu wazuri watano walisoma = 'five good people were reading'.

In most Bantu languages, "wa" also means "of" as in "originating from something or somewhere."

So from the looks of things, it really just depends on how it is applied.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

>>A Six-rayed Star is said to be the symbol of Kongo people. One triangle represents GOD with his three attributes: LOVE, WISDOM and WILL; the other one three divine ancestors of kongo religion. Be it said by passing that Ne KUTUMI (similarities with Master KOOT HUMI) is one of the great divine ancestors in tradition.<<

This reminds me of the Star of David whose existence we have yet to clearly substantiate. However, the symbol is Kemau and goes back to at least 2000 BC - at least 1000 years before Israel was established. One other thing, Asar, doesn't the Bantu/Afrikan word "wa" mean "people, us, our collective selves" or approximately? It dawned on me that couldn't the English word "we" have its genesis in "wa"?
HTP,
Mahari

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.

| 23970|2007-11-29 21:31:25|shaimesh@aol.com|Reminder: BLACK NAZI's: The Rise of the 4th Reich!!!12/2/07 @ 3:30p|

From: qabalagod@gmail.com

History in the Making!!!!

Come Join us as this Masterful Teacher:

ASEER "THE DUKE OF TIERS" ...takes us on a voyage through Waters which have never been chartered before.

I appreciate this brothers input. For he challenges the Colonizer in our minds and makes the Moorish legacy coherent to the common man who knows not yet that he is Free.

LECTURE WILL BE HELD @ L.I.U. BROOKLY DEKALB AVENUE ENTRANCE
DONATION $15

SUNDAY DECEMBER 2nd 2007 3:30 SHARP.
ALL VENDORS WELCOME
CALL US AT 347.787.8930

OR 347.627.4960
718.506.4518 (LEAVE MESSAGE IF CALLING BEFORE 7PM)

Belief is the Master craftsman of the soul body. What you believe is what the soul shall experience when the husk or vesture gives up the ghost.

Bro. A. A. Rashid
<http://aarashid.com>

WE ANTICIPATESEEING YOU. PEACE.

---

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 23971|2007-11-29 21:44:09|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|

>>He said he would sit in the back and take notes and tape his lectures and how alot of what he taught ended up West's books like Serpent in the sky and etc but he never got any credit for it. He also discussed the fact J A West never connects Egypt with Africa culturally or in terms of it's origins<<

You can be sure that the ideas and leads presented here by the black researchers will end up in white men's books and theses as well - without credit.

Anybody care to bet?

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "ras_piankhi" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "ras_piankhi" wrote:

> > >

> > > Also for those that don't have them I suggesty the Magical Egypt

> > > Series by John Anthony West. He with Laird Scranton also outline the > > > Dogon/Egyptian connection as well and they show the glyphs that > > > correspond in both the Dogon and Kemetic spirituality to string theory

>>> and quantum physics and it it really eye opening. I believe it is the >>> very last dvd number 8 that explores these connections but the whole >>> series really gets into the esoteric and scientific aspects of >>> Kemetic culture. Very good series on many levels. here is an excerpt >>> from DVD 8
>>>
>>> <http://www.magicalegypt.com/>
>>>
>>
>> The only thing I really don't like about the book, or the series is >> that they still can't clearly identify Ta-Merri with Africa. It's more >> like the Egyptians were "Egyptians" and they taught the Dogon these >> aspects of the culture. They still leave it to where you could >> speculate the ethnicity of the Kmtjw.
>>
>> This is why the greater exploration into the Niger-Congo language >> group will prove the most fruitful, because at this point you can't >> deny the ethnicity of the Ancient Egyptians.
>>
>> They provide no cultural or historical context for their discussion, >> thus giving the possibility that the Egyptians came out of no where
>> and taught this one tribe in Africa (although they mention similar >> concepts among other west African people).
>>
>> They still are of the belief that Egypt rose first and then spread its >> influence out. The opposite is true. Egypt is the result of many >> African nations coming together after the Naptian Pluval period which >> caused the desertification of the Sahara region. This forced the >> African migrations south and east ward and it is this desire to >> overcome nature that a political state of Ta-Merri is formed. They >> don't know about the university system of Africa (which still exist >> today).
>>
>> Mdw Ntr is the way all of these societies could communicate. Words > > change how they are said over time and within regional dialects.

> > Africans knew this. But what doesn't change are symbols. As Scranton

> > correctly noted is that Mdw Ntr writing is a conscious writing system

> > and was deliberately developed by priests. They deliberately created

> > this system as a means to communicate with the different schools > > across the continent. This view is missing from their analysis.

> >

> > Asar Imhotep

> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

> >

> I totally agree with what your saying in your post. They dance
around > the fact that Egypt is African in every respect. They try to do it

in > a seemingly objective "way" but they do it none the less. Yes they > have put no info in their approach to their studies about Egypt

> Origins being in the south the Nile Valley peoples migrating from
the

> Sahara east and southwards as you so eloquently put it. They have no

> Idea about the Educational System that has been maintained through out

> the continent either. They definitely leave speculation as to the > Kmtjw's identity because their are numerous West African tribes from > the Yoruba many others who trace their origins to the Nile Valley

and > their present location to their displacement from the Nile valley by > invasion and etc.

>

> What I did like about it was the symbolic connections the they made

> using actual picture of Egyptian hieroglyphs and the Dogons' own > symbolism of Amma and the Sene seeds then they showed the symbols

for

> String Theory alongside the Dogons' creation symbols and the Ancient > Egyptians Symbols for the goddess Neith and how they were one and

the > same. I knew he would never make a connection between Africa and Egypt

> because of the stigma they believe they will face and the their own > cowardice and imo racism. They make every other claim possible but > dance around the African origins of Egypt. When their is more than > enough irrefutable evidence out there. If one is looking for the > actual symbols and their meanings and how they are identical as > further proof of their connections I think they are good in that respect.

>

> Funny you mentioned about their lack of connecting Egypt to Africa > because i remember Dr Ben used to say explicitly(I have seen him in > lectures say it and I own a lecture to how John Anthony West would > sneak into his classes at Columbia University or Cornell I can't > remember which one right now but he never was actually enrolled in > class. He said he would sit in the back and take notes and tape his > lectures and how alot of what he taught ended up West's books like > Serpent in the sky and etc but he never got any credit for it. He also > discussed the fact J A West never connects Egypt with Africa > culturally or in terms of it's origins.
his

>

>

> One Black Love,

> Ras Khalif

>

| 23972|2007-11-29 21:52:51|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Finding our Common Origin - Sanskrit and Kikongo Wisdom Teaching|

Thanks, Asar, for the input. Clearly, more research is needed to come to a clear connectin - if it exists.

There have been discussions here concerning Sanskrit and Tamil which strongly suggests that Sanskrit has a strong connection to Tamil which has Afrikan origins and possibly originated prior to Sanskrit.

So - maybe.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Asar Imhotep wrote:

>

> Peace Mahari

>

> I'm not sure if there is a definite connection. Here is the www.etymonline.com entry for "we"

>

> *****

>

> we

> O.E. we, from P.Gmc. *wiz (cf. O.S. wi, O.N. ver, Dan. vi, O.Fris. wi, Du. wij, O.H.G., Ger. wir, Goth. weis "we"), from PIE *wei- (cf. Skt. vayam, O.Pers. vayam, Hitt. wesh "we," O.C.S. ve "we two," Lith. vedu "we two"). The "royal we" (use of plural pronoun to denote oneself) is at least as old as "Beowulf" (c.725); use by writers to establish an impersonal style is also from O.E.; it was especially common 19c. in unsigned editorials, to suggest staff consensus, and was lampooned as such since at least 1853 (cf. also wegotism).[for those who might not know what the abbreviations above stand for - i included the definitions below]

>

> Skt. Sanskrit, the classical Indian literary language from 4c. B.C.E.

>

> P.Gmc. Proto-Germanic, hypothetical prehistoric ancestor of all Germanic languages, including English.

>

> PIE Proto-Indo-European, the hypothetical reconstructed ancestral language of the Indo-European family. The time scale is much debated, but the most recent date proposed for it is about 5,500 years ago.

>

> O.S. Old Saxon, a West Germanic language, the earliest written form of Low German, spoken c.700-c.1100.

>

> O.N. Old Norse, the Norwegian language as written and spoken c.100 to 1500 C.E., the relevant phase of it being "Viking Norse" (700-1100), the language spoken by the invaders and colonizers of northern and eastern England c.875-950. This was before the rapid divergence of West Norse (Norway and the colonies) and East Norse (Denmark and Sweden), so the language of the vikings in England was essentially the same, whether they came from Denmark or from Norway. Only a few of the loan words into English can be distinguished as being from one or the other group.

>

> O.C.S. Old Church Slavonic, the earliest attested Slavic language, known from 9c. C.E. Used by the Slavs of Macedonia and Bulgaria.

>

> O.N.Fr. Old North French, the dialect of northern France before the 1500s, especially that of coastal Normandy and Picardy.

>

> Lith. Lithuanian, the Baltic language spoken in Lithuania.

>

> *****

>

> The initial article is making a connection with Sanskrit and Kikongo so their might be a basis for further research. As can be seen in the example above, the Sanskrit word for we is "vayam." The Bantu W could correspond to the Sanskrit V. I think Dr. Winters could expound on this further if there is a real connection.

>

> The Kikongo root "wa" usually are in words that deals with life itself, conception or "living." Some examples are:

- >
- > Kongo
- > Fwa = death (stop order - to cease movement)
- > Yakwa = conception (go order - command behind the process of movement - biologically)
- > Nkwa = life, living
- > Nkwi-ki = life, living
- > Sengumunwa = Conceive conceptually
- > Vulumunwa = Conceive conceptually
- >
- > Akan
- > Nkwa = life
- >
- > Ta-Meri
- > Nkwa (ankh) = life
- >
- > In Swahili, the "wa" class noun makes things plural. So:
- >
- > mtu = person
- > watu = people
- >
- > The prefix goes on the numbers too:
- > mtu mmoja = 'one person',
- > watu watano = 'five people'.
- >
- > It goes on the verb too:
- > watu wazuri watano walisoma = 'five good people were reading'.
- >
- >
- > In most Bantu languages, "wa" also means "of" as in "originating from something or somewhere."
- >
- > So from the looks of things, it really just depends on how it is applied.
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
- >
- >
- >
- > Mahari Mengistu wrote:
- >>A Six-rayed Star is said to be the symbol of Kongo people. One
- > triangle represents GOD with his three attributes: LOVE, WISDOM and
- > WILL; the other one three divine ancestors of kongo religion. Be it > said by passing that Ne KUTUMI (similarities with Master KOOT HUMI) > is one of the great divine ancestors in tradition.<<

>
> This reminds me of the Star of David whose existence we have yet to > clearly substantiate. However, the symbol is Kemau and goes back to > at least 2000 BC - at least 1000 years before Israel was established.
> One other thing, Asar, doesn't the Bantu/Afrikan word "wa" > mean "people, us, our collective selves" or approximately? It dawned > on me that couldn't the English word "we" have its genesis in "wa"?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
> -----
> Get easy, one-click access to your favorites. Make Yahoo! your homepage.
>

| 23973|2007-11-30 03:29:04|Alex van Deelen|Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)|

This is a blatant example of anti-African bias in archaeology.

It makes you wonder what is going on in Egypt under Hawass, doesn't it?

Also, I wonder if an apology or a public acknowledgement has been forthcoming. If not just to set the record straight, then to acknowledge the powerful influence of racism on the interpretation of ancient history. And remember that Zimbabwe only became politically independent in 1980.

Alex

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great\_Zimbabwe#Effect\_on\_the\_political\_climate

According to Paul Sinclair, interviewed for None But Ourselves:[7]

" I was the archaeologist stationed at Great Zimbabwe. I was told by the then-director of the Museums and Monuments organization to be extremely careful about talking to the press about the origins of the [Great] Zimbabwe state. I was told that the museum service was in a difficult situation, that the government was pressurizing them to withhold the correct information. Censorship of guidebooks, museum displays, school textbooks, radio programmes, newspapers and films was a daily occurrence. Once a member of the Museum Board of Trustees threatened me with losing my job if I said publicly that blacks had built Zimbabwe. He said it was okay to say the yellow people had built it, but I wasn't allowed to mention radio carbon dates... It was the first time since Germany in the thirties that archaeology has been so directly censored.

| 23974|2007-11-30 04:12:35|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)|

Unfortunately, this quote is a little out of context. The Sinclair chap worked for Rhodesia, then under the apartheid regime of the late Ian Smith. The quote gives the impression it is from the current Zimbabwe and its government.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Alex van Deelen

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 11:20 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

This is a blatant example of anti-African bias in archaeology.

It makes you wonder what is going on in Egypt under Hawass, doesn't it?

Also, I wonder if an apology or a public acknowledgement has been forthcoming. If not just to set the record straight, then to acknowledge the powerful influence of racism on the interpretation of ancient history. And remember that Zimbabwe only became politically independent in 1980.

Alex

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great\_Zimbabwe#Effect\_on\_the\_political\_climate

According to Paul Sinclair, interviewed for None But Ourselves:[7]

" I was the archaeologist stationed at Great Zimbabwe. I was told by the then-director of the Museums and Monuments organization to be extremely careful about talking to the press about the origins of the [Great] Zimbabwe state. I was told that the museum service was in a difficult situation, that the government was pressurizing them to withhold the correct information. Censorship of guidebooks, museum displays, school textbooks, radio programmes, newspapers and films was a daily occurrence. Once a member of the Museum Board of Trustees threatened me with losing my job if I said publicly that blacks had built Zimbabwe. He said it was okay to say the yellow people had built it, but I wasn't allowed to mention radio carbon dates... It was the first time since Germany in the thirties that archaeology has been so directly censored.

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

| 23975|2007-11-30 05:08:59|Peter Kaiza|Re: Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)|

Yap, your are right that quote relates to the days when Zimbabwe was ruled by Rhodesians.About Zahi hawass.Could his denying of an african egypt be due to the fact that modern egyptian elites are mostly 'arabs' and agreeing to a black african kemet will imply that the 'arabs' are mainly colonists?

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: KarnakHouse@aol.com
Date: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 07:12:22 -0500
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

Unfortunately, this quote is a little out of context. The Sinclair chap worked for Rhodesia, then under the apartheid regime of the late Ian Smith. The quote gives the impression it is from the current Zimbabwe and its government.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Alex van Deelen

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Sent: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 11:20 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

This is a blatant example of anti-African bias in archaeology.

It makes you wonder what is going on in Egypt under Hawass, doesn't it?

Also, I wonder if an apology or a public acknowledgement has been forthcoming. If not just to set the record straight, then to acknowledge the powerful influence of racism on the interpretation of ancient history. And remember that Zimbabwe only became politically independent in 1980.

Alex

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great\_Zimbabwe#Effect\_on\_the\_political\_climate

According to Paul Sinclair, interviewed for None But Ourselves:[7]

" I was the archaeologist stationed at Great Zimbabwe. I was told by the then-director of the Museums and Monuments organization to be extremely careful about talking to the press about the origins of the [Great] Zimbabwe state. I was told that the museum service was in a difficult situation, that the government was pressurizing them to withhold the correct information. Censorship of guidebooks, museum displays, school textbooks, radio programmes, newspapers and films was a daily occurrence. Once a member of the Museum Board of Trustees threatened me with losing my job if I said publicly that blacks had built Zimbabwe. He said it was okay to say the yellow people had built it, but I wasn't allowed to mention radio carbon dates... It was the first time since Germany in the thirties that archaeology has been so directly censored.

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

---

Can you guess the film? Search Charades!

| 23976|2007-11-30 06:05:36|KarnakHouse@aol.com|Re: Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)|

Zaki Hawass suffers, like most Arabs or Arab colonized other, with the inherent racism of Arab colonialism. While progressive panafricanists have clearly noted the role of christianity as a colonizing instrument, the majority of modern Africans and other Arab-colonised peoples (the whole of North Africa, Indonesia, Turkey, Syria, Lebanon, etc.) identify with Islam in very emotional and psychologically dynamic ways that they see themselves as identificationally meshed with Arabs.

For example, many black Africans are part of the Al Qaeda phenomenon, willing to give their lives to Islam. In its extreme form, this is no different from the Jim Jones paradigm: a modern day white Jesus giving salvation to the oppressed. Thus mass suicide.

Zaki Hawass suffers from this same mentality, and in a way, mirrors the historical relations between ancient Kemites and Nubians. Though Nubians contributed to the genesis of Kemitan culture from the predynastic, and had important positions in pharaonic government, their society was nevertheless colonized by Kemites in the pursuit of gold, silver, timber and went on to build massive fortifications in Nubia to control rebellion. Contemporary corollaries would be America's continuing invasions and occupation of Haiti over 100 years, Britain's conquest of the Caribbean, parts of Africa, parts of the Pacific. The difference is all these peoples contested foreign and European hegemony and control, thus wars of liberation.

The colonized national in present day Egypt does not want to have an identification with the Black African as genesis of ancient civilization. Thus they indulge, far worst than the European, in "discovering" kings and queens, who had no other scientific identification than a hunch, no cartouch with royal name, nothing that identified them as royal except they had straight hair and light skin.

I met a very light Egyptian architect attending a conference at the Egyptian Cultural Centre and when an Arab Egyptian was talking, he shouted "We are not Arabs!" I told him, don't be so loud. He replied, "I don't care!" and shouted it again. This was one liberated human. But the majority see themselves as Arab even though some of the Arabic they speak come straight out of Kemet, e.g., sema which means unity in Kemitan, is interpreted as sound or to hear in Arabic. There are many such survivals in Arabic, NEB, Lord in Kemitan, Nabi, Noble in Arabic. Sufu in Kemitan is an urbane, cultured person, the Sufi branch of Islam reflects this word as being similar. The practising philosophy of the Sufi really expresses deep Kemitan philosophy at almost every stage of its thought and practices. This is perhaps why many Islamic clerics regard the Sufi as not being part of Islam. But it does show that for our ancient philosophy and their practices to survive in colonial societies, many of our peoples merged their learning in existing forms. Like the Ugandan Archbishop in Rome, at the Vatican, who once a week casts out demons and negatives from flocks of people who come from all over the world to be treated by him. Although the Vatican disproves of his work, he is too important to the Church to silence. It's a long way from Zaki Hawass, but I am trying to give a general picture of the role of colonialism in the depersonalization of peoples.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Kaiza

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 1:08 pm

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

Yap, you are right that quote relates to the days when Zimbabwe was ruled by Rhodesians. About Zahi Hawass. Could his denying of an African Egypt be due to the fact that modern Egyptian elites are mostly 'Arabs' and agreeing to a black African Kemet will imply that the 'Arabs' are mainly colonists?

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: KarnakHouse@ aol.com

Date: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 07:12:22 -0500

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

Unfortunately, this quote is a little out of context. The Sinclair chap worked for Rhodesia, then under the apartheid regime of the late Ian Smith. The quote gives the impression it is from the current Zimbabwe and its government.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Alex van Deelen

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 11:20 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

This is a blatant example of anti-African bias in archaeology.

It makes you wonder what is going on in Egypt under Hawass, doesn't it?

Also, I wonder if an apology or a public acknowledgement has been forthcoming. If not just to set the record straight, then to acknowledge the powerful influence of racism on the interpretation of ancient history. And remember that Zimbabwe only became politically independent in 1980.

Alex

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great\_Zimbabwe#Effect\_on\_the\_political\_climate

According to Paul Sinclair, interviewed for None But Ourselves:[7]

" I was the archaeologist stationed at Great Zimbabwe. I was told by the then-director of the Museums and Monuments organization to be extremely careful about talking to the press about the origins of the [Great] Zimbabwe state. I was told that the museum service was in a difficult situation, that the government was pressurizing them to withhold the correct information. Censorship of guidebooks, museum displays, school textbooks, radio programmes, newspapers and films was a daily occurrence. Once a member of the Museum Board of Trustees threatened me with losing my job if I said publicly that blacks had built Zimbabwe. He said it was okay to say the yellow people had built it, but I wasn't allowed to mention radio carbon dates... It was the first time since Germany in the thirties that archaeology has been so directly censored.

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

---

Can you guess the film? Search Charades!

| 23977|2007-11-30 06:26:50|Peter Kaiza|Re: Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)|

Can't agree more. Good analysis. It may even be argued that colonisation via religion may even be worse than physical colonisation. Some Black African Muslims (as the case in modern Egypt or Zanzibar) see themselves as 'arabs' - despite the fact that they may not have a single drop of Arab blood - and although being an 'Arab' does not qualify one a better Muslim, nevertheless some Arabs use Arabness to emphasise their authentic Islamic credentials. And therein the danger lies.

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoo.com

From: KarnakHouse@aol.com

Date: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 09:05:25 -0500

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

Zaki Hawass suffers, like most Arabs or Arab colonized other, with the inherent racism of Arab colonialism. While progressive pan-Africanists have clearly noted the role of Christianity as a colonizing instrument, the majority of modern Africans and other Arab-colonised peoples (the whole of North Africa, Indonesia, Turkey, Syria, Lebanon, etc.) identify with Islam in very emotional and psychologically dynamic ways that they see themselves as identificationally meshed with Arabs. For example, many black Africans are part of the Al Qaeda phenomenon, willing to give their lives to Islam. In its extreme form, this is no different from the Jim Jones paradigm: a modern day white Jesus giving salvation to the oppressed. Thus mass suicide. Zaki Hawass suffers from this same mentality, and in a way, mirrors the historical relations between ancient Kemites and Nubians. Though Nubians contributed to the genesis of Kemitan culture from the predynastic, and had important positions in pharaonic government, their society was nevertheless colonized by Kemites in the pursuit of gold, silver, timber and went on to build massive fortifications in Nubia to control rebellion.

Contemporary corollaries would be America's continuing invasions and occupation of Haiti over 100 years, Britain's conquest of the Caribbean, parts of Africa, parts of the Pacific. The difference is all these peoples contested foreign
and
European hegemony and control, thus wars of liberation.
The colonized national in present day Egypt does not want to have an identification with the Black African as genesis of ancient civilization.
Thus they indulge, far worst than the European, in "discovering" kings and queens, who had no other scientific identification than a hunch, no cartouch with royal name, nothing that identified them as royal except
they had straight hair and light skin.
I met a very light Egyptian architect attending a conference at the Egyptian
Cultural Centre and when an Arab Egyptian was talking, he shouted "We are not Arabs!" I told him, don't be so loud. He replied, "I don't care!"
and shouted it again. This was one liberated human. But the majority see themselves as Arab even though some of the Arabic they speak
come straight out of Kemet, e.g., sema which means unity in Kemetan, is interpreted as sound or to hear in Arabic. There are many such survivals in Arabic, NEB, Lord in Kemetan, Nabi, Noble in Arabic. Sufu in Kemetan is an urbane, cultured person, the Sufi branch of Islam reflects this word
as being similar. The practising philosophy of the Sufi really expresses deep Kemetan philosophy at almost every stage of its thought and practices.
This is perhaps why many Islamic clerics regard the Sufi as not being part of Islam. But it does show that for our ancient philosophy and their practices

to survive in colonial societies, many of our peoples merged their learning in existing forms. Like the Ugandan Archbishop in Rome, at the Vatican, who once a week casts out demons and negatives from flocks of people who come from all over the world to be treated by him. Although the Vatican disproves of his work, he is too important to the Church to silence. It's a long way from Zaki Hawass, but I am trying to give a general picture of the role of colonialism in the depersonalization of peoples.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Kaiza

To: ta_seti@yahoogroups .com

Sent: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 1:08 pm

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

Yap, your are right that quote relates to the days when Zimbabwe was ruled by Rhodesians. About Zahi hawass. Could his denying of an african egypt be due to the fact that modern egyptian elites are mostly 'arabs' and agreeing to a black african kemet will imply that the 'arabs' are mainly colonists?

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

From: KarnakHouse@ aol.com

Date: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 07:12:22 -0500

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)

Unfortunately, this quote is a little out of context.

The Sinclair chap

worked for Rhodesia, then under the apartheid regime of the late

Ian Smith. The quote gives the impression it is from the current Zimbabwe and its government.

Intef Djehutymes

-----Original Message-----

From: Alex van Deelen

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Sent: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 11:20 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology
And Racism (from Wikipedia)

This is a blatant example of anti-African bias in archaeology.

It makes you wonder what is going on in Egypt under Hawass, doesn't it?

Also, I wonder if an apology or a public acknowledgement has been forthcoming. If not just to set the record straight, then to acknowledge the powerful influence of racism on the interpretation of ancient history. And remember that Zimbabwe
only became politically independent in 1980.

Alex

[http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great\_Zimbabwe#
Effect\_on\_the\_political\_climate](http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great_Zimbabwe#Effect_on_the_political_climate)

According to Paul Sinclair, interviewed for None
But Ourselves:[7]

" I was the archaeologist stationed at Great Zimbabwe. I was told by the then-director of the Museums and Monuments organization to be extremely careful about talking to the press about the origins of the [Great] Zimbabwe state. I was told that the museum service was in a difficult situation, that
the government was pressurizing them to withhold the correct information.
Censorship of guidebooks, museum displays, school textbooks, radio programmes, newspapers and films was a daily occurrence. Once a member of the Museum Board of Trustees threatened me with losing my job if I said publicly that blacks had built Zimbabwe. He said it was okay to say the yellow people had built it, but I wasn't allowed to mention radio carbon dates... It was the first time since Germany in the thirties that archaeology has been so directly censored.

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

---

Can you guess the film? Search Charades!

---

Are you the Quizmaster? Play BrainBattle with a friend now!

| 23978|2007-11-30 09:15:41|Alex van Deelen|Re: Great Zimbabwe, Archaeology And Racism (from Wikipedia)|

> Unfortunately, this quote is a little out of context.

It isn't out of context.

> The Sinclair
> chap worked for Rhodesia, then under the apartheid regime > of the late Ian Smith. The quote gives the impression it is > from the current Zimbabwe and its government.
>
> Intef Djehutymes

Well let's give the casual reader a little credit.

Alex

| 23979|2007-11-30 10:01:34|Alex van Deelen|Should Toronto allow Africentric schools?|
Toronto is in Ontario. Is J. Philippe Rushton still teaching at the University of Western Ontario?

As long as the information being taught to children is of high quality, it would actually be better than the normal curriculum.

Although I haven't seen their curriculum yet.

(And of course, the same people are not arguing against religious schools as being 'divisive', so how genuine they are in their criticisms of an Afrocentric curriculum...)

Alex

| 23980|2007-11-30 11:44:28|bonotchim@aol.com|Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr|

Hotep I think it may have been Martian Bernal and not J. West who sat in on Doc. Ben's class as he (Bernal) was at Cornell during the years that Doc. Ben was there. Bro.B.

Funny you mentioned about their lack of connecting Egypt to Africa
> because i remember Dr Ben used to say explicitly(I have seen him in > lectures say it and I own a lecture to how John Anthony West
would > sneak into his classes at Columbia University or Cornell I can't > remember which one right now but he never was actually enrolled in his > class. He said he would sit in the back and take notes and tape
his > lectures and how alot of what he taught ended up West's books
like > Serpent in the sky and etc but he never got any credit for it. He

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Fri, 30 Nov 2007 12:44 am

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Dogon Symbols, Bantu Cosmology, Key to Egyptian Mdw Ntr

>>He said he would sit in the back and take notes and tape his lectures and how alot of what he taught ended up West's books like Serpent in the sky and etc but he never got any credit for it. He also discussed the fact J A West never connects Egypt with Africa culturally or in terms of it's origins<<

You can be sure that the ideas and leads presented here by the black researchers will end up in white men's books and theses as well - without credit.

Anybody care to bet?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "ras_piankhi" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "ras_piankhi" wrote:

>>>

>>> Also for those that don't have them I suggesty the Magical Egypt

>>> Series by John Anthony West. He with Laird Scranton also outline the >>> Dogon/Egyptian connection as well and they show the glyphs that >>> correspond in both the Dogon and Kemetic spirituality to string theory >>> and quantum physics and it it really eye opening. I believe it is the >>> very last dvd number 8 that explores these connections but the whole

>>> series really gets into the esoteric and scientific aspects of >>> Kemetic culture. Very good series on many levels. here is an excerpt

>>> from DVD 8

>>>

>>> <http://www.magicalegypt.com/>

>>>

>>

>> The only thing I really don't like about the book, or the series is >> that they still can't clearly identify Ta-Merri with Africa. It's more >> like the Egyptians were "Egyptians" and they taught the Dogon these > > aspects of the culture. They still leave it to where you could > > speculate the ethnicity of the Kmtjw.

 > >
 > > This is why the greater exploration into the Niger-Congo language > > group will prove the most fruitful, because at this point you can't > > deny the ethnicity of the Ancient Egyptians.
 > >
 > > They provide no cultural or historical context for their discussion, > > thus giving the possibility that the Egyptians came out of no
 where
 > > and taught this one tribe in Africa (although they mention similar > > concepts among other west African people).
 > >
 > > They still are of the belief that Egypt rose first and then spread its > > influence out. The opposite is true. Egypt is the result of many > > African nations coming together after the Naptian Pluvial period
 which > > caused the desertification of the Sahara region. This forced the > > African migrations south and east ward and it is this desire to > > overcome nature that a political state of Ta-Merri is formed. They > > don't know about the university system of Africa (which still exist
 > > today).
 > >
 > > Mdw Ntr is the way all of these societies could communicate. Words > > change how they are said over time and within regional dialects.
 > > Africans knew this. But what doesn't change are symbols. As Scranton
 > > correctly noted is that Mdw Ntr writing is a conscious writing system
 > > and was deliberately developed by priests. They deliberately created
 > > this system as a means to communicate with the different schools > > across the continent. This view is missing from their analysis.
 > >
 > > Asar Imhotep
 > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
 > >
 > I totally agree with what your saying in your post. They dance
 around > the fact that Egypt is African in every respect. They try to do it
 in > a seemingly objective "way" but they do it none the less. Yes they

- > have put no info in their approach to their studies about Egypt
- > Origins being in the south the Nile Valley peoples migrating from the
- > Sahara east and southwards as you so eloquently put it. They have no
- > Idea about the Educational System that has been maintained through out
- > the continent either. They definitely leave speculation as to the
- > Kmtjw's identity because there are numerous West African tribes from
- > the Yoruba many others who trace their origins to the Nile Valley and
- > their present location to their displacement from the Nile valley by
- > invasion and etc.
- >
- > What I did like about it was the symbolic connections they made
- > using actual picture of Egyptian hieroglyphs and the Dogons' own
- > symbolism of Amma and the Sene seeds then they showed the symbols for
- > String Theory alongside the Dogons' creation symbols and the Ancient
- > Egyptians Symbols for the goddess Neith and how they were one and the
- > same. I knew he would never make a connection between Africa and Egypt
- > because of the stigma they believe they will face and their own
- > cowardice and imo racism. They make every other claim possible but
- > dance around the African origins of Egypt. When there is more than
- > enough irrefutable evidence out there. If one is looking for the
- > actual symbols and their meanings and how they are identical as
- > further proof of their connections I think they are good in that respect.
- >
- > Funny you mentioned about their lack of connecting Egypt to Africa
- > because I remember Dr Ben used to say explicitly(I have seen him in
- > lectures say it and I own a lecture to how John Anthony West would
- > sneak into his classes at Columbia University or Cornell I can't
- > remember which one right now but he never was actually enrolled in his
- > class. He said he would sit in the back and take notes and tape his
- > lectures and how a lot of what he taught ended up West's books like
- > Serpent in the sky and etc but he never got any credit for it. He also
- > discussed the fact J A West never connects Egypt with Africa
- > culturally or in terms of its origins.
- >
- >
- > One Black Love,

> Ras Khalif
>

---

More new features than ever. Check out the new AOL Mail!

| 23981|2007-11-30 11:48:22|Paul Kekai Manansala|Should Toronto allow Africentric schools?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
> Toronto is in Ontario. Is J. Philippe Rushton still > teaching at the University of Western Ontario?
>
>

I believe so. He's also now the head of the infamous Pioneer Fund, which in addition to promoting biological determinism, eugenics, etc. has funded a number of peer review publications such as Journal of Indo-European Studies and Mankind Quarterly.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23982|2007-11-30 17:20:37|Ptah Ra|Re: Microsoft Word - Niw-t decoded.pdf|

Peace to all.

Paul N. Johnson, a black cultural teacher and leader (1919-1954) offers the following understanding on these issues.

- 1) Our history and our languages are the keys to our ancient cultures.
- 2) We need to revamp our preslavery status.
- 3) We need to return to our ancient cultures to get a fresh and right (correct) start, because other nations of the world are not going to allow us to build on their usurped premises, nor will they allow us to attach our rooms to their houses.
- 4) We need to gather a few ideas from the massive information to be found in our ancient cultures and technologies and make them new, modern and up-to-date.

I believe as a nation or race of people, we are well on our way to accomplishing all of these objectives. I commend and encourage each of you to continue your great work, and to continue sharing your results as this is the foundation for the future prosperity of the race.

Hotep,
Ptah

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
wrote:

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:
> >
> > Asar and Ferg,
> > I found the argument for NIW.T convincing. According to statements

> > made earlier by Asar and other Afrocentrics the key to understanding

> > the Egyptian language and philosophy is through Afrikans and

their

> > language.
> > This is incredibly simple and logical. The only reason that an > > intelligent person would not conclude or at least consider the > > likelihood of this is due to racism or stupidity or both. I

continue

> > to marvel at the level of recalcitrance of the caucasian

individual

> > and scholars. Then again, not really. Remember the Spartans.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
>
>
> Peace Mahari
>
> The bigger question at the end of the day is, "what are we going to > build with this information?" I would hope that we don't make these

- > discoveries only to admire what the ancients did, but to use their
- > creative processes as inspirational mechanisms to build and sustain
- > viable institutions and communities for ourselves(NIW.T).

>

- > Hidden in the glyph is the concept of increased expansion (a place

for

- > spiritual development). How can we use this, and other information
- > brought out, to change our condition here in the States and around

the

- > world? I don't think our scholarship will be complete until we engage

- > these questions.

>

- > African people of old never used higher philosophy, art and science
- > for mere intellectual pursuits. All information was used to create
- > institutions that would allow each human being within that

institution

- > to reach its full human potential. I don't think we should stop at
- > finding out the information, but do as our great master teachers

such

- > as Cheikh Anta Diop, Chancellor Williams, Amos Wilson, Claud

Anderson

- > and Dr. K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau did: used their scholarship to create
- > models for viable institutions. That's the role of a scholar in the
- > African tradition.

>

>

- > Some of their works to prove the point:

>

- > Cheikh Anta Diop - Black Africa: The Economic and Cultural Basis

for

- > a Federated State
- >
- > Claud Anderson - PowerNomics
- >
- > Amos Wilson - Blueprint for Black Power: A Moral, Political, and
- > Economic Imperative for the Twenty-First Century
- >
- > Chancellor Williams - The Destruction of Black Civilizations
- >
- > K. Bunseki Fu-Kiau - Mbongi: An African Traditional Political

Institution

- >
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
- >

| 23983|2007-11-30 21:22:55|ahmed|The Religion of Ancient Egypt|

Egyptian Mythology

Mythology is defined as a collection of interrelated stories of a given culture. Myths tend to describe the creation of the world and give a culture an understanding of the events of nature and the world around them. Myths are also generated to tell the story of the first people to inhabit the earth. These people are elevated to gods and goddesses, which usually associate them as having supernatural and special powers. Myths also express the values or beliefs of a culture, and every for more information about Mythology

Divine Ennead Heliopolitan Hermopolitan Ogdoad Memphite Theology
Priest Caste The Soul Mummification Cats List of Gods Egyptian Astrology

<http://ancient-egyptian.blogspot.com/>

| 23984|2007-12-01 13:30:10|Paul Kekai Manansala|African in Iron Age Denmark?|

Ancient mtDNA from Iron Age Denmark

Am J Phys Anthropol. 2007 Nov 28 [Epub ahead of print]

Rare mtDNA haplogroups and genetic differences in rich and poor Danish Iron-Age villages.

Melchior L, Gilbert MT, Kivisild T, Lynnerup N, Dissing J.

The Roman Iron-Age (0-400 AD) in Southern Scandinavia was a formative period, where the society changed from archaic chiefdoms to a true state formation, and the population composition has likely changed in this period due to immigrants from Middle Scandinavia. We have analyzed mtDNA from 22 individuals from two different types of settlements, Bgebjergg and Skovgaarde, in Southern Denmark. Bgebjergg (ca. 0 AD) represents the lowest level of free, but poor farmers, whereas Skovgaarde 8 km to the east (ca. 200-270 AD) represents the highest level of the society. Reproducible results were obtained for 18 subjects harboring 17 different haplotypes all compatible (in their character states) with the phylogenetic tree drawn from present day populations of Europe. This indicates that the South Scandinavian Roman Iron-Age population was as diverse as Europeans are today. Several of the haplogroups (R0a, U2, I) observed in Bgebjergg are rare in present day Scandinavians.

Most significantly, R0a, harbored by a male, is a haplogroup frequent in East Africa and Arabia but virtually absent among modern Northern Europeans. We suggest that this subject was a soldier or a slave, or a descendant of a female slave, from Roman Legions stationed a few hundred kilometers to the south. In contrast, the haplotype distribution in the rich Skovgaarde shows similarity to that observed for modern Scandinavians, and the Bgebjergg and Skovgaarde population samples differ significantly (P approximately 0.01). Skovgaarde may represent a new upper-class formed by migrants from Middle Scandinavia bringing with them Scandinavian haplogroups.

| 23985|2007-12-01 16:12:40|Mahari Mengistu|Re: African in Iron Age Denmark?|

>>Most significantly, R0a, harbored by a male, is a haplogroup frequent in East Africa and Arabia but virtually absent among modern Northern Europeans. We suggest that this subject was a soldier or a slave, or a descendant of a female slave, from Roman Legions stationed a few hundred kilometers to the south. <<

Ha, ha, ha! Yeah, right. I'd be interested to know the european age of this haplogroup. It is not unusual IF one faces the fact that europe WAS AFRIKAN in its earliest age.
If European researchers aren't dumb I suppose we can assume that they are just playing for time and not JUST WASTING TIME with their deluded research.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

- >
- > Ancient mtDNA from Iron Age DenmarkAm J Phys Anthropol. 2007 Nov 28
- > [Epub ahead of print]
- >
- > Rare mtDNA haplogroups and genetic differences in rich and poor

Danish

- > Iron-Age villages.
- >
- > Melchior L, Gilbert MT, Kivisild T, Lynnerup N, Dissing J.
- >
- > The Roman Iron-Age (0-400 AD) in Southern Scandinavia was a formative

- > period, where the society changed from archaic chiefdoms to a true

state

- > formation, and the population composition has likely changed in this
- > period due to immigrants from Middle Scandinavia. We have analyzed

mtDNA

- > from 22 individuals from two different types of settlements,
- > Bgebjerggull and Skovgaarde, in Southern Denmark.
- > Bgebjerggull (ca. 0 AD) represents the lowest level of free, but
- > poor farmers, whereas Skovgaarde 8 km to the east (ca. 200-270 AD)
- > represents the highest level of the society. Reproducible results

were

- > obtained for 18 subjects harboring 17 different haplotypes all
- > compatible (in their character states) with the phylogenetic tree drawn

- > from present day populations of Europe. This indicates that the South

- > Scandinavian Roman Iron-Age population was as diverse as Europeans

are

- > today. Several of the haplogroups (R0a, U2, I) observed in
- > Bgebjerggull are rare in present day Scandinavians.
- >
- > Most significantly, R0a, harbored by a male, is a haplogroup frequent in

- > East Africa and Arabia but virtually absent among modern Northern
- > Europeans. We suggest that this subject was a soldier or a slave, or a

- > descendant of a female slave, from Roman Legions stationed a few hundred

- > kilometers to the south. In contrast, the haplotype distribution in

the

- > rich Skovgaarde shows similarity to that observed for modern
- > Scandinavians, and the Bgebjergg and Skovgaarde population
- > samples differ significantly (P approximately 0.01). Skovgaarde may
- > represent a new upper-class formed by migrants from Middle

Scandinavia

- > bringing with them Scandinavian haplogroups.

>

| 23986|2007-12-01 16:22:16|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: African in Iron Age Denmark?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

- > >>Most significantly, R0a, harbored by a male, is a haplogroup
- > frequent in East Africa and Arabia but virtually absent among modern
- > Northern Europeans. We suggest that this subject was a soldier or a
- > slave, or a descendant of a female slave, from Roman Legions
- > stationed a few hundred kilometers to the south. <<

>

- > Ha, ha, ha! Yeah, right. I'd be interested to know the european age
- > of this haplogroup. It is not unusual IF one faces the fact that
- > europe WAS AFRIKAN in its earliest age.
- > If European researchers aren't dumb I suppose we can assume that they
- > are just playing for time and not JUST WASTING TIME with their
- > deluded research.

>

Mahari, we know that was the only explanation they could give. At least they gave the guy the opportunity to be soldier. More commonly,

we would expect only the patented Eurocentric conclusion that he was a slave.

Who knows maybe he was a prince!

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23987|2007-12-01 17:28:01|K. Loganathan|Crimson Clues From the Ancient Past|

>

Bloodhound.

New diagnostic techniques revealed traces of blood (inset) in microscopic samples from ancient African artifacts such as this one.

Credit: Werner Forman/Corbis; (inset) Mazel et al., Analytical Chemistry, online edition (2007)

Crimson Clues From the Ancient Past

By Phil Berardelli

ScienceNOW Daily News

29 November 2007

Chemists have confirmed something that archaeologists and art historians have long suspected: Ancient sculptures found in western Africa contain blood from ritual animal sacrifices in their patina. The study, which used new diagnostic techniques, should yield a greater understanding of the practices of artists from long ago, and it could open the way for more detailed analyses of the world's most precious artifacts.

Anthropologists and ethnologists have uncovered much cultural evidence, from oral histories and illustrations, that ancient African artists often used ritual animal blood in their creations, generally as attempts to please or appease their deities. In the empire of Mali, for example, which flourished from the early 13th century to the late 15th century C.E., the Dogon people decorated or painted their sculptures with various pigments thought to be composed partly of blood. But because of the age of the artifacts, the composition of the patina has eluded standard chemical analyses.

So a team from the Centre for Research and Restoration of the Museums of France in Paris and other institutions in France employed a quartet of new techniques. Working with mass-spectroscopy specialists at the French national research agency in Gif-sur-Yvette and with scientists at the European Synchrotron Radiation Facility in Grenoble, they used two types of mass spectroscopy and two methods of x-ray scanning. The techniques are so sensitive that they can detect even a few target molecules in a few micrograms of material, says physical chemist Pascale Richardin, a co-author of the study. They also offer the advantage that one technique can detect a desired molecule that the others might miss. In this instance, the measurements revealed the unmistakable presence in the patina of a form of iron associated only with blood, the team reports in an upcoming issue of Analytical Chemistry.

The research shows without doubt that the wooden figures were used in ceremonies involving animal sacrifice, says electroanalytical chemist Christian Amatore of the École Normale Supérieure in Paris, who calls the protocol "failure-free." Next up, says Richardin, is analyzing the painting materials used by the masters of the European Renaissance--not to look for blood, but to attempt to reveal the secrets of their colors and textures.

Source: Science

<http://sciencenow.sciencemag.org/cgi/content/full/2007/1129/3?etoc>

---

Be a better sports nut! Let your teams follow you with Yahoo Mobile. Try it now.

| 23988|2007-12-02 08:56:38|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|Mr (Pyramid) Text Study, Utterances 26-31|

also posted at <http://mrtextstudy.blogspot.com>

Mr (Pyramid) Text Study Utterances 26-31

From "The Pyramid Texts" Translation by Samuel A. B. Mercer

Utterances 26-28.

26.

Horus who art in Osiris N., take to thyself the eye of Horus for thou art as the eye of Horus which (lit. who) has extended with its odour.

27.

To say: Osiris N., take the eye of Horus, equip thyself with its odour.

28.

Osiris N., Horus has given to thee his eye that thou mayest equip thy face with it. One pellet of incense (1644a).

Utterance 29.

To say: O N., I have come, I have brought to thee the eye of Horus, that thou mayest equip thy face with it, that it may purify thee, that its odour may (come) to thee.

The odour of the eye of Horus is for N.; it drives away thy sweat. It defends thee against the violence (?) of the arm of Set.

ON., the eye of Horus, is pleasing to thee; it is sound for thee. The eye of Horus is sound; thou art sound. Three pellets of incense (1644b).

Utterance 30.

To say: Horus, dweller in Osiris N., equip thee with the eye of Horus; take it to thee.

Utterance 31.

To say: Osiris N., Horus has completely filled thee with his eye.

---

From "The Ancient Egyptian Pyramid Texts" translated by R.O Faulkner

Utterance 26

Oh Horus who is Osiris the King, take the Eye of Horus to yourself, even the Eye of Horus which he has diffused abroad by means of its perfume.

Utterance 27

O Osiris the King, take the Eye of Horus and provide yourself with its perfume.

Utterance 28

O Osiris the King, Horus has given you his Eye; provide your face with it.

Utterance 29

O King, I have come and I bring to you the Eye of Horus. May you provide your face with it, that it may cleanse you, its perfume being on you. The perfume of the Eye of Horus is on this King, it removes your efflux and protects you from the sweat of the hand of Seth. O Osiris the King, may the intact Eye of Horus belong to you, the Eye of Horus being intact, intact!

Utterance 30

O Horus who is Osiris the King, you are provided with the Eye of Horus; take it.

Utterance 31

O Osiris the King, Horus has filled you with his complete Eye.

---

my comments

Here Father and Son are explicitly identified as one and the same, as Wsr (Ausar or Osiris) is shown as being identified with the Son, Hrw (Horus or Heru). Again, the Wdj (Udjat) or Eye of Hrw, is again utilized here. Possession of the Eye represents one possessing the Knowledge of Self. The diffusion of the Eye by "means of its perfume" represents several processes

1) hormones secreted by the endocrine system to facilitate growth, development, and awareness in the physical body to aid the mind's goals and objectives.

2) Wisdom manifested from the mental influence in society through literature, the arts, stone masonry and carpentry, community service, education and other manifestations of the learned community of this ancient University-oriented society.

When Hrw is shown giving his Eye to Wsr, it shows the relationship of Progenitors and Offspring, the Offspring who are Hrw being the vanguard for the Progenitors and Elders or Wsr, to insure security for the family and nation.

The dialogue regarding the use of the perfume of the Eye preventing perspiration, caused by hardship from dealing with St, represents obtaining a holistic and balanced method of living and avoiding regressing to living a beast way of life, St being the patron of beasts and animals. Thus the prevention of elimination of living a beast way of life is based on acquisition and retention of the Eye of Hrw or the Complete Knowledge of Self, otherwise known as the Complete Eye. The Eye was known to be divided into fragments which are a series of powers of the fraction  $1/2$ , the sums of which approximate the total 1.

$1/2 + 1/4 + 1/8 + 1/16 + 1/32 + 1/64 = 63/64$  which is approximately 1.

For simplicity and casual use, the series was terminated at  $1/64$ , and also represented the knowledge of the casual relationship of the number 1 to the sum of the parts of 64 who when summing the digits is  $6 + 4 = 10$  and then  $1 + 0 = 1$ . Thus Knowledge of Self deals with bringing fragments of observation and stimulus together to synthesize a coherent vision.

by Ren 饒 Friedman

2007 Field Note 6 - The Early Kings of Hierakonpolis

Hierakonpolis was old even to the ancient Egyptians, but the memory of its early kings was embodied in the jackal-headed Souls of Nekhen.

Hierakonpolis (Nekhen) has long been a site of profound significance for the study of Egypt's beginnings, not just because of zombies, and not just for us today. Even the ancient Egyptians thought it was old, and venerated its early rulers, their names long forgotten, as the jackal headed Souls of Nekhen. While the sheer extent and diversity of the Predynastic (ca. 3800-3000 B.C.) remains (see introduction) attest the historic basis of their beliefs, recent discoveries in the elite cemetery at the site indicate these memories stretch back much further than we ever imagined. These new finds are also allowing us to tie up many loose ends around that site (while creating others) and put together a much more coherent picture of the early rise of Hierakonpolis and Egyptian civilization, although there is still much we need to find out.

Based on the still unparalleled Painted Tomb (Tomb 100), discovered by F.W. Green in 1899, it was believed that Hierakonpolis was at its peak in the Naqada IIC period, thus about 3500 B.C., a time of social change and economic development throughout Predynastic Egypt. One of the largest tombs of its time, the painted scenes on its walls containing elements that would go on to become characteristic of royal iconography proclaimed the royal status of its owner and his home town. But try as we might to find further evidence for this, everywhere we looked around the desert site, the extensive archaeological remains, which include breweries, food production installations (see 2007 Field Note 3), pottery kilns, and ceremonial centers (see Narmer's Temple), all dated some 300-400 years earlier (early Nagada II period). This level of complexity suggested that strong rulers had already been established well before the owner of the Painted Tomb, but it was not until 2000 that the first clear indications of their existence were finally uncovered (see Elite Cemetery). The discovery of the elaborate and clearly royal tomb (Tomb 23) in the elite cemetery, first summarized in a special report (see Special Report: New Finds from the Elite Cemetery), has since been supplemented by further exploration that have revealed a vast and unexpected architectural complex and a unprecedented view of the very beginnings of Egyptian kingship, civilization, and some if its more enduring characteristics. These excavations were made possible by a grant from the National Geographic Society and The Friends of Nekhen to whom we are very grateful.

The Painted Tomb, still the earliest tomb with painted wall decorations, originally suggested that Hierakonpolis had already reach glorious heights at about 3500 B.C. as the home of a powerful ruler, who was able to construct a large tomb decorated with prototypes of later royal iconography.

The elite cemetery at HK6 is located about 1.5 miles back in the wadi that cuts through the site. Excavations here under the direction of Barbara Adams uncovered the first hints of what was to come, but because of her untimely death, work here could not be resumed fully until 2005, but have been on-going annually ever since with remarkable results.

When we returned to the cemetery, we knew the tomb was going to be big, but full excavation exceeded our initial expectations when Tomb 23, turned out to be the largest tomb of its time period (ca. 3800 B.C., Naqada IIB) yet known. Measuring 5.5m long by over 3.1m wide, it is approximately the same size as the Painted tomb, but can be dated by associated pottery some 300 years earlier. That it can comfortably seat the entire excavation crew give perhaps even a better idea of its substantial size.

In addition to its size, it is also the earliest Egyptian tomb found to have clear evidence of above ground architecture. How tombs were marked has long been a question, and lack of evidence suggested a mound of earth was employed. Needless to say, nothing prepared us for what we found. Four post holes to either side of the tomb cavity indicate there was a superstructure above it. Preservation was such that we have not just the post holes, but also the posts!

Squared and dressed posts, now nearly 6,000 years old, on the east side of the tomb cavity attest a separate above-ground structure or chapel.

On the east side of the grave, posts also survive to indicate a separate above-ground structure, which we call an offering chapel, for lack of a better term. In addition to these buildings, hundreds of evenly spaced smaller post marked out an imposing enclosure wall that is 16m long and 9m wide and was originally, at least in part, painted a deep red. Completely unexpected, it presages the funerary precincts of mud brick known in the First Dynasty over half a millennium later.

No doubt a conspicuous structure, it is no surprise that the tomb and its surroundings have been severely plundered on several occasions. Nevertheless, the tomb chamber still contained many fine and unique items as would befit a regal owner including ivory pins and tags, stone and pottery vessels, part of a cow figurine, and scorpion statuettes; no doubt only a small part of its original riches. In addition, two further examples of the ceramic masks known exclusively from this cemetery were also recovered, although only their ears remain to tell the tale. Nevertheless, they were clearly similar to the more complete masks found earlier in association with another elite tomb further to the north in this cemetery. Curved to fit over the human head and attached by means of a thong passed through holes behind the ears, they are Egypt's earliest funerary masks and stand at the beginning of a traditions whose origin had long been a matter of conjecture.

Egypt's first funerary masks, even if those from Tomb 23 are represented only by their ears!

Although the two ears from two different masks suggest that at least two high-ranking occupants were originally present in the tomb, the partially articulated remains of up to 5 individuals and the disarticulated remains of 7 others were found, but their association with the original burial is still unclear. However, multiple burials are common features of large and wealthy tombs at other sites in Predynastic Egypt, but whether they are all family members or include servants and sacrifices remains unknown.

While the tomb chamber was pretty thoroughly rifled, the area to the east, in and around the so-called chapel was less disturbed, and it is here that we recovered fragments of Egypt's first near life size human stone statue. Its size and indeed its shape are based on the recovery of the well-carved nose and both ears. The rest of the statue, however, is represented by over 600 small fragments that have proved difficult to mend. Thus, while most statues are missing their ears and nose, we have the ears and nose and we're missing the statue.

The nose and ears indicate that Egypt's earliest life-size stone human statue once stood in the chapel.

The rest of the statue is less easily understood....

Evidently deliberately defaced at some point in time (a clue to a more intriguing story yet to be uncovered), it and the ruler it embodied were originally much revered to judge from the artifact deposits nearby. These included two stunning animal figures expertly created from chipped flint, an incised ivory handle, possible of a mace, several transverse arrowheads, and, more surprisingly, a single human neck vertebra with a deep peri-mortem cut marks. To whom this vertebra may have belonged is unknown, but it seems likely that all of the objects are part of an intentional deposit of materials, in this case carrying strong connotations of power and control. Evidence for similar ritual or votive activity near, but not exactly at the corners became a recurrent pattern as the excavations widened into the surrounding areas.

While the scale of the architecture, the effort involved in its construction, and the presence of stone statuary and other goods, has already suggested that Tomb 23 belonged to an early rulers of Hierakonpolis, if not a far larger territory, the expanded excavations seem to leave little doubt, placing Tomb 23 within, and potentially as the focus of, an elaborate and unparalleled architectural complex.

To the north additional tombs were found. The largest, Tomb 26, although dwarfed by Tomb 23 is still of substantial size, measuring 3.30m long and nearly 1.5m wide. It too was clearly marked above-ground with larger posts supporting a superstructure and surrounded by an enclosure wall anchored in a deep foundation trench, showing that Tomb 23 is not unique in this respect. The grave was also badly plundered, but it still contained several objects attesting to its high status and a wide range of foreign contacts.

The most intriguing of the finds is a stylised scorpion of calcite which was pierced in the center apparently for mounting. Similar in style and size to the more fragmentary examples found in Tomb 23, these scorpion figurines stand at the beginning of the special relationship that Hierakonpolis had with the scorpion. This is best exemplified by the 27 scorpion figurines in the Main Deposit from the Early Dynastic temple in the floodplain, as well as that carved on the Scorpion mace head (also from the Main Deposit), which is most definitely mounted. This mounting shows that the carving refers not to an actual scorpion but to an image of a scorpion, no doubt derived from the type of image we have found at the HK6 tombs. A consensus on the meaning of the scorpion has yet to be reached, with some suggesting it represents royal power, royal ancestors, or evidence of a local cult of a scorpion deity. In support of the latter contention, although much later, in the New Kingdom local forms of Isis are sometimes depicted with scorpions on their heads. The scorpion was considered to be a good mother, protective of her young, in the way Isis was protective of her son Horus. Thus, the early scorpion goddess of Hierakonpolis may well have been the counterpart of the vulture goddess and great mother Nekhbet of Elkab across the river, who will be shown hovering protectively over the kings of Egypt throughout its long history. Scorpion statuettes placed in these early tombs may have provided the same protection in the journey to rebirth in the afterlife.

Scorpion statuette from Tomb 26--the fetish of an early scorpion goddess?

Route of the wine trade. It's a long way to go for a good drink!

Garnet beads mined from sources in the Eastern Desert

The large columned structure around the elephant's tomb (in which I am sitting) was a revelation and answered some nagging questions, while posing many more.

The deposit in the northeast corner (lower) and parallel deposit in the northwest corner (upper), which was partly sealed by melted wall plaster.

Shiny black egg-shaped pot from Tomb 23 complex

An undisturbed deposit of Red Sea shells in the southeast corner

Ivory and shells from Structure D9

Incised ostrich eggshell from the northeast corner

Other objects from the tomb show that the next life was well catered for with a variety of exotic goods and delicacies. A Palestinian loop handled jar found in the tomb is the earliest evidence of wine consumption in Upper Egypt, as it is wine that these vessels seem to have held. This vintage probably arrived via the northern site of Maadi, coming across the Sinai and then up the river, making for a journey of over 800 miles. It's a long way to go for a good drink.

Other foreign contacts are indicated by a knobbed mace head, possibly representing influence from Southwest Asia where such mace heads are better attested, while not quite so far to the east, beautifully finished garnet beads came from sources the Eastern desert, amongst with other exotic goods indicating the high status of those buried here.

Evidence for contacts southward were found perhaps not coincidentally on the south side of the complex, where we discovered the grave of an adolescent Africa elephant in 2003 (see Who Let the Elephants In?). Presumed to be non-local, it was one of two young elephants known from the site, who appear to have been selectively targeted and captured by hunting parties sent southward for this purpose.

Based on proximity, the elephant was assumed to be associated with Tomb 23, the ownership and maintenance of such a mighty beast in both life and death being an eloquent statement on the power and wealth of its master. But as we systematically investigated the intervening area between the two tombs, we soon began to wonder just who was subsidiary to whom, when excavations revealed part of a large columned structure, 17m long and at least 8.5m wide (the southern limits have not yet been excavated).

Within these walls, the trunks of acacia trees served as column, set upright within deep conical post holes, arranged in six rows of at least three posts each. However as this arrangement eventually revealed itself, we soon came to realize that it also included the two post holes found in the floor of the elephant's grave in 2003, one partly covered by the articulating ribs and vertebrae of the elephant. We couldn't explain it then, but it is now clear that posts from this pre-existing structure were removed in order to accommodate the elephant's burial at a later date. How much later is unclear, but evidence of ritual activities at the two north corners suggests that the building continued to function, apparently with the elephant in mind to judge from this remarkable flint portrait of an elephant found near the northeast corner. Again, near but not at the corner, other objects found in association include, a flint fish tail knife, 60 trapezoidal arrowheads, and two hollow-based arrowheads.

This was paralleled by a similar deposit in the northwest corner where layers of melted plaster that once coated the post walls, partly sealed a deposit of over 20 small trapezoidal arrowheads, an imitation fishtail knife of soft green soapstone, and another flint figure of either a running gazelle or dog.

From both corners, we were also able to reconstruct matte red vessels, of the type previously known exclusively from the ceremonial center at HK29A (see Narmer's Temple: Pottery Assessment). At the temple, these unique vessels were found in great numbers always in conjunction with shiny black polished egg-shaped jars, several of which were also found at in the HK6 tomb complexes. Their shape and surface treatment obviously had symbolic significance (dull red = dry desert, death; shiny black = fertile, flooded alluvium, rebirth). Given the later connection between king and cosmos, it is perhaps not surprising to see these unique vessels in both temple and tomb indicating that similar rituals to ensure rebirth and cosmic order were conducted at both of these locations.

The relationship of Tomb 23 to the elephant and the structure above it is still unclear, but a row of posts connecting the two compounds show that they were contemporary at some point in time. Another cross wall running eastward connects to Structure D9, another unexpected discovery.

This structure, with walls composed of closely spaced posts and 2 rows of large columns running down the center had a focus that was entirely above-ground. No substructure was found below it. Although eroded, again, near the corners, were intentional deposits of artifacts. On the north a shallow pit contained objects of carved ivory, while near the southeast was a collection of 36 Nerita shells from the Red Sea. However, conspicuous by their absence were the arrowheads and the ritual pottery known from the other compounds and this differential distribution of artifacts suggests that each of the structures served a different purpose, housing specific rituals, as component parts of one large interconnected complex that keeps on getting bigger.

In Structure 07, found in January 2008 directly east of Structure D9, the theme of seashells and ivories continued, but this even larger columned hall contained so much more. Approximately 15m long and 10.5m wide, 24 wooden columns once filled its interior, some of which appear to have been the focus of offerings including seashells (12 different kinds, all from the Red Sea), a cow horn, and a sizeable bundle of cloth apparently containing malachite, but still unopened!

All of these objects seem to have been placed in the pits intentionally as foundation deposits, but the best things were as usual, in the corners, especially those along the east side. Although recently disturbed, in the northeast we uncovered masses of ostrich eggshell, some decorated with an incised scene of hunting possibly including ibexes or giraffes, an elephant, and a running dog, along with geometric designs.

Found in quantities too great to mend, we asked our eggspert Art Muir to calculate the surface area of a standard ostrich egg, which turns out to be a rather remarkable 570 square cm. He then went on to determine just how much area our fragments covered. His analysis indicates that a minimum of 5 complete eggs were originally present in this corner and the fragments with blow holes indicate that whole eggs were definitely involved. This is the largest concentration of ostrich eggs found all in one place in Predynastic Egypt and again shows what an important place it once was. Although ostrich imagery abounds in rock art and on pottery, and beads of ostrich eggshell are known from variety Predynastic sites, (though not particularly common at Hierakonpolis), whole eggs are a good deal rarer. In Nubia they are often found in the burials of children, no doubt symbolic of rebirth and continued nourishment, since one egg can feed about 8 people. In Egypt itself, these fragile eggs appear restricted to the wealthier graves. At Nagada a decorated egg now in the Ashmolean was also used in place of the owner's missing head! Thus this concentration of eggs in this structure can be seen as yet another expression of the wealth the elite controlled and this was not the only indication.

In the southeast corner were objects of different types, in fact, each more amazing than the next. They include an adorable little hippopotamus, just 3.3cm long, expressively carved from soapstone, who was accompanied by a pair of curved ivory wands. Found in extremely poor condition, after much nail-biting, we were able to lift them both and conserve one of them, with impressive results.

All carved from the same piece of ivory, the wand (for lack of a better term) originally had a procession of at least four hippopotami, although only two could be reattached. The body of the wand is undecorated, but has been very finely smoothed. A remarkable find, no exact parallels for it are known.

Nor could I find parallels for the odd little objects, also carved of ivory, which we call spoons only because of their resemblance to fast-food coffee stirrers, but I have no idea what they are. While they most resemble projectile points, I cannot figure out how they could have been effectively hafted without creating a rather non-aerodynamic assemblage. Alternatively they could be gaming pieces or casting sticks, as a large number of small stone balls and two squares of petrified wood were strewn throughout the corner. Both natural and carved, they come in a variety of materials and colors. Similar objects have traditionally been considered gaming pieces, but other interpretations are possible, and the search continues.

While collecting little balls, something even more intriguing appeared. Even before all the fragments of the malachite figurine were reassembled, it was clear it was a statuette of a falcon, with wings masterfully carved out of the same piece of hard stone. Once restored, we could see what a remarkable piece of carving it is, with the wings linked to the body by only a single point of attachment. This practice has now allowed us to identify other enigmatic stone objects previously found in HK6, which were fully carved but broken off only at the attachment point. These are now clearly the wings of other, larger, falcon figures.

The falcon statuette (left) as it was found. The falcon restored (center). One mystery solved: these enigmatic objects (right) can now be identified as the wings of other falcon statuettes.

At present, these are the earliest examples of falcon statues in Egypt. Although known sporadically in the Predynastic period, the falcon only becomes common in Protodynastic, or Dynasty 0 times especially in connection with early royal names. We cannot say whether our falcons already carried royal connotations, but given the elite context at HK6 and the strong association of Hierakonpolis with early kingship and falcons, it seems highly likely.

Egypt's earliest falcon statue, appropriately found in the "City of the Falcon"

Measuring only 6.2cm, our falcon is tiny, but there may already be a glimmer of the trend toward ritual gigantism that later led to the outsized palettes (like the palette of Narmer), and maceheads (like the Scorpion macehead) in the Main Deposit. This trend is visible in the flint artifacts, and particularly the distinctive hollow base arrowheads, which were found in large numbers in the south and central part of the structure. The large size of some, measuring nearly 10cm, suggest they served a ritual purpose, or were oversized votive offerings, rather than object of actual use.

Hollow base arrowheads from Structure 07. The large size of some suggest they are oversized votive objects rather than objects of actual use.

Flint critters from HK6

The satellite image of the Hierakonpolis shows the land reclamation on all sides, making the search for Egypt's beginnings a limited time offer.

Their manufacture, with their long elegant wings, shows great skill and it is likely that the same craftsmen also created our latest ibex figurine, perhaps just to show off! Unfortunately from a disturbed context within a modern pit, nevertheless it makes a fine addition to this relatively rare class of artefact, of which only about 70 examples are known. The flint figurines collected from various areas at HK6 now represent the largest single assemblage of flint figures with known provenance.

Entered from the west, Structure 07 is clearly connected with the broader complex all of which appears to be bounded on the east by a wall running along the edge of the wadi terrace. Made with the typical post construction, this wall is not the most photogenic of our discoveries, but it is important for two reasons. First, its plastered facade was painted with geometric and possibly figural designs, giving us evidence for the mode in which the various motifs known commonly from the more durable pottery became known and providing the prototype for the Painted tomb. A surprising discovery, in retrospect such a wall should perhaps have been expected given the love of lavish wall decoration on Dynastic tombs and temple. Old habits die hard.

Painted plaster (left) from the enigmatic fence. Not much to look at, but it is this fence (right) that holds the key.

The wall is also important for another reason. Already 27m long, it clearly continues in both a north and south direction. For an interpretation of the structures to its west, much depends on where or if this wall makes a corner. If it is found to enclose a large area surrounding Tomb 23 and its neighbors then it suggests that all should be viewed as components of one large interrelated complex now an impressive 50m E-W and 40m N-S, but certainly larger. Presumably, though not necessarily, dedicated to the owners of Tomb 23, one might then suggest it is a "palace for eternity" modeled on the actual residence of a Predynastic king.

Alternatively, if it proves to be a perimeter wall for the entire cemetery then this range of structures may be part of a special precinct for conducting mortuary rituals for all of the cemetery's elite inhabitants, perhaps like the holy precinct considered to be at Buto. Given the historic pairing of the two sites, perhaps Hierakonpolis originally had a holy precinct too.

Holy Precinct in the tomb of Reneni at Elkab--perhaps Hierakonpolis originally had one too.

Further excavation obviously will be needed, but already we have some hints that substantial above ground architecture is not restricted to Tomb 23. A number of similar early tomb complexes may be spread across the cemetery and while it is too early to say there is a series of elite tombs from which a dynasty of prehistoric kings might be established, it certainly is tempting!

Unfortunately, the window of opportunity for revealing this chapter of Egypt's early history is rapidly closing. Ambitious land reclamation schemes threaten the site on all sides. With less than 15% of the cemetery explored, we will have to hoist our trowels with speed when excavations at HK6 resume in February 2008. Help us find it before it is too late by joining the Friends of Nekhen, see www.hierakonpolis.org. Your support can really make the difference.

Map of area excavated to date

| 23990|2007-12-02 17:28:02|K. Loganathan|Remains of 4,000-year-old dam found in Upper Egypt|

Remains of 4,000-year-old dam found in Upper Egypt

www.chinaview.cn 2007-12-02 18:12:49

  Print

CAIRO, Dec. 2 (Xinhua) -- Remains of an ancient dam dating back some 4,000 years have been discovered in Upper Egypt, local English daily The Egyptian Gazette reported Sunday. Secretary-General of the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities Zahi Hawass said Saturday that the ancient dam was found a few meters away from the Karnak Temple in Luxor, some 500 km south of Cairo.

The finding was made by an Egyptian-French archaeological team, which has been working in Luxor since March, Hawass was quoted as saying at a press conference.

"The 230-meter long dam was built during the age of the Middle Kingdom (of ancient Egypt) to protect the temple from the Nile flood," said Hawass.

The Egyptian archaeology supremo stressed the importance of the finding, saying it proved that the ancient Egyptians were good at building dams.

The discover will also revive interest in the ancient Egyptian city, which was believed by some archaeologists that nothing of great importance would be found again, said the report.

The team had also unearthed the relics of a Roman bath built in the first century AD and a clay jar containing 316 coins from different historical periods, said Hawass.

http://news.xinhuanet.com/english/2007-12/02/content\_7185514.htm

---

Be a better pen pal. Text or chat with friends inside Yahoo! Mail. See how.

| 23991|2007-12-02 20:35:59|shaimesh@aol.com|KEMET TOUR ORIENTATION - December 15th|

From: Alaman5375@aol.com

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR IX ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET) - 2008

Personally escorted by PROF. MANU AMPIM
(experienced tour guide & historian of Africana Studies)

-----

*FREE TOUR INFORMATION SESSION - 1 hour

DATE: Saturday, December 15, 2007

PLACE: MERRITT COLLEGE, 12500 Campus Drive, Bldg. A-218 Oakland, CA
(Go up 35th Ave., which turns into Redwood Rd. make right on Campus Dr.)

TIME: 2:45 pm (sharp)

*Must call to reserve seat.

510.482.5791 or Profmanu@acninc.net

Tour itinerary

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

Tour schedule: May 31 - June 14, 2008 - $3299 (all inclusive)

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR IX ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET)

TRIP INCLUDES:

- All tips, taxes, and domestic travel in Egypt
- Deluxe hotel accommodations & two meals per day
- Entrance fees to over 40 sites & monuments
- CD on 'Documenting Your Travel Experiences'
- On-site and evening presentations by Prof. Ampim
- Optional 5 units college credit

TOUR HIGHLIGHTS (LAND OF THE PHARAOHS):

We will visit...

-The great pyramids of Giza & the Great Sphinx (Heru-em-akhet), which is the most well-known statue in the world.

-The ancient capital city of Memphis and the extensive monuments of Sakkara, including the Tomb of Ptah-Hotep, author of the oldest surviving book in the world.

-The massive Dahshure & Meidum pyramids, and the Mastaba of Ra-Hotep & Nofret, whose famous statues in the Cairo Museum are forgeries according to Prof. Ampim in his book, 'Modern Fraud'.

-The Egyptian Museum with its renowned collection of well-preserved Pharaonic antiquities.

-The temples of Luxor and Karnak, which constitute one of the largest open-air museums in the world.

- The famous Valley of the Kings/Queens and Noble Tombs, including the Tomb of King Tutankhamen & the Temple of Queen Hatshepsut.

- The ancient city of the tomb builders, Deir el-Medina.
- The Luxor Museum& the Nubian Museum in Aswan.
- The Dendera, Edfu,and Abydos temples
- The Noble Tombs in Aswan &the templesof Pharaoh Ramses II / Queen Nefertari at Abu Simbel.
- The ancient Workmen's Village of Deir el Medina
- The Nubian village tour
- and much more...

-----

Prof. Manu Ampim is a leading primary researcher and historian on African &African American history and culture.He has written two books, conducted pioneering first-hand research in 18 countries, and has taken eight educational tours to Egypt and Central America. Ampim is currently an professor of history and Africana Studies at Contra Costa College and Merritt College innorthern CA, and host of the popular internet radio program, Africana Studies on www.BlakeRadio.com

In a message dated 12/1/07 9:07:02 PM, profmanu@acninc.net writes:

Greetings, Excerpts from my recent October '07 presentation in Philadelphia on my Sudanese fieldwork. "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." Advancing the work, Manu Ampim

3 Parts:

Click Here: Check out "YouTube - Professor Manu Ampim:"

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Nlo52r2u\_48

Click Here: Check out "YouTube - Professor Manu Ampim:Q, and A,"

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZHeH0tH3M\_U&feature=related

Click Here: Check out "YouTube - Professor Manu Ampim:/Historian and Researcher"<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xqaX6vekp04&feature=related>

=====

FULL TRIP ITINERARY & REGISTRATION FORM

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

FOR MORE INFO:

Prof. Manu Ampim
 Director, Advancing the Research
 510-482-5791
www.ManuAmpim.com
profmanu@acninc.net

TOUR REGISTRATION & PAYMENT:

Consolidated Tours Organization, Inc.
 1675 Virginia Avenue, Suite 200

Atlanta, GA 30337
Tel. 404-767-2727
Fax. 404-766-4520
Email: ctoinc@aol.com

---

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 23992|2007-12-03 09:06:27|drnealy@juno.com|my KMT video on Youtube|

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6pht5FABsGI>

---

Click for your daily horoscope, learn about money, love & family.

| 23993|2007-12-03 09:09:17|Paul Kekai Manansala|Ethiopian Scientists Discover Ancient Antiquities|

Group of Ethiopian Scientists Discover Ancient Antiquities

Published 11/30/2007 - 12:35 p.m. EST

Slide Show

Wukro, Ethiopia

A group of Ethiopian scientists discovered a number of ancient antiquities, dating back to pre-Ethiopian Axumite kingdom civilization era.

"In 20 days of our first archeological excavation, our group of scientists and geologists have uncovered a number of different ancient antiquities" Gezaei Haile, scientist and geology instructor at Mekelle University told Jimma Times.

The ancient antiquities discovered in Tigray region's Wukro town, rich in rock hewn church of specific name, Aynalem village is believed to be property of the pre-Axumite era, before the birth of Christianity in Ethiopia. "We have not yet found out the exact age of our antiquities but our assumption is that they belong to a time of 200 years before birth of Christ, as none of the antiquities have sign of cross on them" Gezaei added.

The geological survey is aimed at uncovering the grave of Queen Yodit Gudit, believed to be buried there and whom history blames her of burning down Christian churches around Tigray region during the 10th century. "The antiquities will be sent to Vienna University for further study" said Gezaei.

The Ancient Antiquities include Sabian inscriptions; one stone carved obelisk, women faced Gothic, Egyptian pyramid shaped rocks, Ancient metal utensils, Animal fossils and one meter depth house foundation. No one around the area has dared to come closer or try to use the area to plough for agricultural purpose for certain fear of religious belief.

"There has been a belief coming from generation to generation that, if people try to dig the place believed to be Queen Gudit's grave then, Drought, famine and disease will break out afterwards" says Gezaei, adding "that's why the antiquities were physically and easily found undisrupted and on their original structure."

This is one of the previously rare cases when Ethiopians run an archeological study on their own. "Second phase of the study will resume soon after the deep study of the first finding is under gone." said Fitsum Asmerom, public and international relations of the group.

Tesfa-Alem Tekle
JT Northern Ethiopia Correspondent

| 23994|2007-12-03 09:12:06|Paul Kekai Manansala|OT: Protests over efforts to give tribes control over Kennewick Man|

Scientists protest efforts to give Indian tribes control over ancient man's remains

The Associated Press
Published: November 30, 2007

-

---

 E-Mail Article

---

---

WASHINGTON: Scientists hoping to study the ancient skeleton known as Kennewick Man are protesting efforts on two fronts that they say could block them from examining one of the oldest and most complete set of bones ever found in North America.

For a third time in four years, the scientists are opposing a bill in the U.S. Senate that would allow federally recognized American Indian tribes to claim ancient remains even if they cannot prove a link to a current tribe.

They also are contesting draft regulations issued by the Bush administration on the disposal of culturally unaffiliated remains.

Both measures could end up with the same result, scientists say: preventing an improved understanding of North American history and the role of the continent's first inhabitants.

If adopted, the proposed changes could "result in a world heritage disaster of unprecedented proportions" and "rob our descendants of the unique insights concerning the shared heritage of all people that physical anthropological studies of culturally unidentifiable human remains can provide," the American Association of Physical Anthropologists said in a statement.

Today in Americas

Venezuela rejects bid by Ch'z to amend charter

Arkansas Republican now draws a crowd

-

Involuntary-servitude case in New York highlights plight of domestic workers

"

Supporters of the legislation call such worries overblown. They say the changes are intended to clarify the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act to ensure that federally recognized tribes can safeguard the graves of their ancestors.

Neither the Senate bill nor the draft regulations would affect the 9,300-year-old bones known as Kennewick Man, they said. The skeleton was discovered in 1996 along the Columbia River near Kennewick, Washington, in the Northwestern United States and has been the focus of a bitter fight ever since.

A federal appeals court ruled in 2004 that scientists can study the ancient bones, and teams of anthropologists and other analysts have begun poring over more than 300 bones and bone fragments at the Burke Museum of Natural History and Culture in Seattle, Washington, where the remains are housed.

A spokesman for Democratic Sen. Byron Dorgan, chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, said the Senate bill would clarify what process should be followed for future discoveries of ancient remains.

"The court ruling said it's not clear" what should happen, "so Congress wants to clarify what its intent was, and its intent is that tribes that believe they have a connection (to ancient remains) either through descent or cultural affiliation, have an opportunity to make that case," said Barry Piatt, a Dorgan spokesman.

The Bush administration opposes the Senate bill, which mirrors legislation proposed in 2004 and 2005. In testimony before the Indian Affairs Committee in 2005, Paul Hoffman, a deputy assistant secretary of the Interior, called the proposed change too broad and said it would loosen the Indian graves law to include remains that might not be connected to a tribe.

Hoffman said the grave protection act "should protect the sensibilities of currently existing tribes, cultures, and people while balancing the need to learn about past cultures and customs." In cases where remains are not significantly related to an existing tribe, people or culture, they should be available for appropriate scientific analysis, he said.

The administration did not testify on the current Senate bill, which was approved by the Senate Indian Affairs Committee on a voice vote, but its views have not changed since 2005, said Sherry Hutt, manager of the Interior Department's enforcement of the grave protection act.

"The position that the secretary took at that time ... was that science is a good thing, and NAGPRA (the act) is not administered to be a death knell to science. That remains our view," she said.

But scientists said the Sept. 27 committee vote, coupled with the Oct. 16 publication of draft rules on disposition of culturally unidentifiable remains, shows there is a deliberate effort quietly to change the grave protection law. The Senate bill was approved without a public hearing two days after it was formally proposed.

The draft regulations and the Senate bill assume that any remains found belong to federally recognized tribes, said Cleone Hawkinson, a founding member of the Portland, Ore.-based Friends of America's Past. That includes remains from small bands of people who died out and left no descendants, and remains of indigenous ancestors to modern-day Latinos, including those who died just a few hundred years ago.

Hutt disputed that, saying the proposed regulations were not related to the Senate bill and in any case would not affect Kennewick Man. The regulations have been under development since 2001, Hutt said, calling any relationship between the draft rules and the Senate bill coincidental.

From:mothersforafrica@yahoo.com

Some of you may have experienced difficulties tuning into the show because it was full. The producer of the show is working on expanding our limit base. Please be patient.

Our guest Sister Merira Kwesi wife to Ashra Kwesi is a national and international lecturer on African history, civilization, religion, coupled with her husband she also conducts annual Kemet Nu, "Black people 'Know Thyself' Educational Tours to Egypt and Ethiopia. She will be discussing Sistah's in the Struggle, one of my favorite lectures of all time. Please tune in & find out why. Sistah Merira is one of the most dynamic & powerful lecturers I know and my personal Shero. This will be a show not to miss!

Product Title

You can change your preferences & unsubscribe from this mailing list at anytime. Please e-mail back and request to unsubscribe if you want these e-mails to stop!

Please pass the word around. Thank you for your continued support!!!!

Eternal Love, Blessings, Peace, Power, African Unity, Guidance and protection.

Queen Mother Nana Akosua Sekyiiabea

2007 www.Mothers4Africa.com, P.O. Box 6579, Altadena CA, 91003
626-376-4010, 866-978-6277

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 23996|2007-12-03 12:52:36|Ptah Ra|Re: Amon Hierglyphic Font Set for your PC|

Thank you. I have wondered for some time about a true type font for heiroglyphs.

asar_imhotep wrote:

Peace Phamily

I came across a True-Type Hieroglyphic Font set for the PC as I was on the AnkhOnline.com website. They offer the font set for free, but have them separated. I took the liberty of putting them into a single .zip file for convenience. The zip file also includes a .pdf document that has the list of all of the fonts included in the different true-type font styles. So use it as a reference.

To install the fonts:

- 1) Unzip the file using your favorite program such as WinZip onto a folder of your liking (Preferably your MyDocuments folder for easy reference).
- 2) The zip includes ONE pdf document and TWO folders (AmonFont and PoliceFont)with the individual font sets in them. Both folders contain the SAME fonts, they are just called something different on the AnkhOnline.com website.
- 3) Open the folder of your liking and "Select All" of the fonts within the folder. Copy [Ctrl + C] the selected fonts.
- 4) Navigate to your Windows Fonts folder [C:/Windows/ Fonts](Replace "C" if C is not your main drive), and paste [Ctrl + V] the fonts in the folder.

The next time you open a program, they should show up. If any of you have any problems, please email and let me know. The file is too big for me to email people, so you will have to go to the Folders section of the Ta-Seti Yahoogroups Website and look under "Asar's Documents" to see the zip. Everyone should have gotten an email with the exact link, but here it is again:

http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/files/Asar%20Imhotep%20Files/

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

i was reading about the coronation of king solomon and in the first book of kings there is mentioned that solomon was crowned at Gihon. is this same Gihon mentioned in gen 2 referring to the land of Cush (Ta-Seti) or some other well around the city of david (jerusalem)?

---

Never miss a thing. Make Yahoo your homepage.

| 23998|2007-12-03 13:00:28|shaimesh@aol.com|Dr.Eric Upchurch - New Afrikan Village Nation - Live interview tonit|

From:satintrain1250@yahoo.com

Hotepl! Dr. Eric Upchurch ,who was with Dr. Ray Hagins in Youngstown this past weekend has asked Bro. Ed ( New Afrikan Networking Nation ) to be a guest on his "Live" broadcast tonight at 8:00 p.m. The web site address for Dr. Eric Upchurch is www.wkhradio.com Lets give him our support Bro. Dave

---

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 23999|2007-12-03 15:47:12|shaimesh@aol.com|Dr.Eric Upchurch - New Afrikan Village Nation - Rescheduled for Tomo|

From:satintrain1250@yahoo.com

The web broadcast that Dr. Eric Upchurch had scheduled for tonight on www.wkhradio.com has been rescheduled for tomorrow night.Thanks,Bro.Dave

---

Check out AOL Money & Finance's list of the hottest products and top money wasters of 2007.

| 24000|2007-12-03 17:05:53|ras_piankhi|A Lamentation for King Tut-Ankh-Amen|

I think this is a great article about the disrespect done to our ancestors. She makes some very valid points. My son was very upset visibly when we went to Kemet this July and saw the mummies of our ancestors on display as was I and a few others on our trip.

A Lamentation for King Tut-Ankh-Amen

Posted November 27th, 2007 by Wandia Njoya

The display of King Tut-Ankh-Amen's remains earlier this month and the exhibition of the treasures from his tomb in Europe and the United States are utterly disrespectful to his memory and to the dignity of living Africans who trace their heritage to Ancient Egypt.

We pray for King Tut-Ankh-Amen and moan the sacrilege that has visited the continent that we love and call our homeland.

There is something fundamentally morbid about digging graves in search of dispensable information. It may be significant or interesting to know that King Tut-Ankh-Amen was a child king, but of what use was examining his remains to find out how tall he was, and then showing them to the rest of the world? If information was already available in written records, exposing the remains ? of a child, mark you ? was uncalled for. The spectacle raises questions about moral decency and calls into doubt the Western world's over-proclaimed respect for the sanctity of human life.

In many African societies, the places reserved for the departed are generally regarded as sacred. From this worldview, the violation of the sanctity of the dead dangerously stretches the patience of the ancestors who respond by demanding costly reparations from the living. This mythical view of life is crucial to the stability of African societies, and was hence one of the firsts target of attack from missionaries and colonial administrators. African societies are still paying the price for the colonial desecration of their public and cultural spaces in form of the environmental degradation and cultural alienation that they continue to confront. For instance, the imposition of Christian burials on the Gikuyu society in Kenya during the colonial period are among the numerous events that are directly or indirectly related to the reduction of the inherent cultural respect for the natural environment. Forests have been decimated on an alarming scale and the lands on which elders are now buried, in accordance with Christian rites, have sometimes become the source of acrimonious and sometimes deadly family disputes over inheritance. Similar histories of the social instability and conflicts stemming from the colonialist desecration of the spaces reserved for ancestors abound in many parts of Africa, demonstrating that individual sanity and social cohesion depend on the respect that the living have for the dead.

On the other hand, the oppression of Africans by Europeans points to the history of the European disrespect for the departed that manifests itself in the fascination with human remains. An example that has been in the press over the last few years is that of Saartjie Baartman, a Khoi woman from South Africa who was humiliated by public display in Britain and France at the turn of the 19th century. When Baartman died in 1815, George Cuvier, under the patronage of Napoleon, dissected her remains, placed her private parts and her brain in jar and left her skeleton on display in the Museum de l'Homme in Paris, where it would remain until the 1970's. Baartman was subsequently repatriated for burial at the request of the South African government in 2002, but not before Roger-Gerard Schwartzberg, the French minister in charge of research and culture, insisted in the French Senate that her remains were the property of the French government and were an important research specimen. A similar fate was met by Ishi, a Native American whose brain was placed in the collection of body remains of Native Americans at the Smithsonian in Washington DC.

The audacity of the French minister to disregard public opinion and plain decency is just one illustration of the fact that Euro-America continues to live under the delusion that these disgusting practices benefit mankind by advancing knowledge. Even the man on the street would recognize the research as inherently immoral, reprehensible, and racist. The same proverbial man would also be astounded by the social myopia and intellectual incompetence behind this so-called research. George Cuvier actually used Baartman's private parts to prove that Africans had no civilization! It is instructive that Cuvier did not follow the requirements of a credible scientific experiment or argument by carrying out the same experiment on a Frenchwoman to show that Europeans were civilized. Yet despite his obvious incompetence and flawed logic, he still enjoys a reputation as a researcher who made important contributions to knowledge.

While Cuvier is referred to as a palaeontologist, a less educated individual who carried out an identical action would be referred to as a "psychopath" or a "serial killer." The display of human remains that is sanctified by the walls of a museum would be regarded as revolting if found in the home of an individual. These inconsistencies demonstrate that science and the Western academy in general have acquired a quasi-religious status in the Western dominated world, so that actions deemed as criminal and revolting when carried out by less-educated individuals are presented as groundbreaking research when perpetrated by degree-waving individuals in the name of science. In other words, advanced Western degrees are considered a Midas touch that transforms crimes against humanity into the advancement of knowledge.

Native American activist Susan Shown Harjo aptly captured this hypocrisy when she termed the Supreme court's endorsement of the scientific study of the Ancient One, a Native American ancestor, as "legal fiction" that "human remains are Native American only after the founding of the United States and older ones are 'archaeological resources'." The same logic applies here; King Tut-Ankh-Amen becomes fair game for disrespect and trivialization on the grounds that he lived millennia ago before humanity ostensibly began by the advent of the European and American empires and their holy writs on human rights. Thus, European and Arab archaeologists find no ethical problem in digging the tombs of Africans whose lives are safely identified as fixed in the past, yet their home countries would be mortified if Africans suggested studying the remains sheltered in the guarded shrines at Arlington National Cemetery, Westminster Abbey or the Pathé in Paris. They would also be hostile to us "fondly" calling British monarchs "Beth," "Vicky," "Charlie" or "Eddy," in the same manner that they refer to King Tut-Ankh-Amen as "King Tut."

In another entry of her column at Indian Country, Harjo makes insightful observations that aptly identify the framework within which we can question the ideology and impact of Western archaeology on Africa. In an article titled "Dancing On Graves Of Missing Native Americans," she observes: "A bunch of white folks are dancing on the graves of Native Americans these days. The bodies are stashed in laboratories and other surrogate tombs, where adults experiment on them and use them on bizarre rituals."

Harjo's invocation of "bizarre rituals" is significant, because when applied to the excavation of sites in Africa by Europeans, it reveals that these excavations have no objective or rational justification but are instead motivated by greed and the thirst for power. King Tut-Ankh-Amen's remains were first unearthed by a greedy Howard Carter in search of precious metals and jewellery in the 1920's, a process that partially destroyed the remains. Carter's greed and disrespect have since been minimized as resulting from his inexperience and his un-trained eye, presumably by sympathizers who recognize the pathology of seeking for wealth in the graves, an action which would otherwise carry legal penalties in the European world.

The West's fascination for sifting through the bones of non-European peoples is also motivated by its ritualistic claim to supremacy that lacks supporting evidence in reality. Ancient Egypt has been particularly uncooperative in this regard because its location on the African continent nullifies white supremacy which almost exclusively depends on the negation of Africans rather than on the supposedly unique achievements of Europe. But unlike in the early twentieth century when films had white actors take on roles as rulers of ancient Egypt, the Western world can no longer get away with blatant whitening of Africa's mythical and historical figures, especially after scholars such as Senegalese Cheikh Anta Diop and African-American Ivan van Sertima have asserted that the roots of ancient Egypt were indeed African.

The National Geographic inadvertently exposed Euro-America's current discomfort with the African foundation of Egypt by clarifying that King Tut-Ankh-Amen's skin tone was impossible to determine with accuracy, and so it had decided to settle for a "medium skin tone." Meanwhile, the magazine's front cover carried the rendering of the King's face with features that are currently privileged in the Eurocentric world and with an obviously artificial skin tone designed to ward off any associations with Africans. The National Geographic's treatment of King Tut-Ankh-Amen feigns ignorance of the underlying but well-known politics of the interest in the skin tone.

Nevertheless, the magazine's efforts have been rendered futile by eminent scholars who have challenged the Europeanization and falsification of King Tut-Ankh-Amen's history. These individuals include the eminent Dr. Mulenga Karenga who wrote a brilliant statement in 2005, and the King Tut Action Committee. The latter group from Philadelphia have constructed a commendable website that provides information and essays that correct the history of ancient Egypt. It also pays homage and respect to our ancestor in a manner that is fitting and that starkly contrasts the King's treatment at the hands of the European researchers.

The other ritualistic element of Euro-America's fascination with African tombs lies in its uneasy conscience following its decimation, dispossession and enslavement of non-European peoples. By sifting through the remains of our forebears, the parties concerned hope to find redemption without having to confront us, the living descendants of the people by whose agony the Western world enriched itself. That is how the Bounty Hunter TV star Duane Chapman could come up with the sick idea of being buried in a historical slave burial ground in Washington DC. By the same token, European pseudo-scientists have been occupied with the disengagement of Africa from human history rather than tell living Africans, in plain words and to our faces, that they do not consider themselves bound to treat us with respect as human dignity demands.

We have seen this obsession with the African dead as a means of cleansing the white conscience before. Gerard Soete, the Belgian police officer involved in the assassination of Congolese nationalist Patrice Lumumba, retained some souvenirs from Lumumba's remains, which he admitted many years later after supposedly being haunted by his conscience. Last year, Congolese president Denis Sassou Nguesso, with the endorsement of the Catholic Church, exhumed Savorgan de Brazza's remains in Algiers and reinterred them in Brazzaville at a mausoleum whose foundation stone had been laid by former French president Jacques Chirac. The bizarre move was heralded by the respective heads of government as a means to recognize Brazza as a "humanitarian," but it was obvious to the casual observer that the charade was a desperate attempt of Sassou Nguesso to remain in France's good books and of France to reassert its waning hegemony in the area.

The resort to seeking affirmation from the dead is inadvertent sign of desperation and an admission of an inevitable tragic end. Like the politicians seeking to save their diminishing power and influence, the Western academy's interest in graves is fuelled by the sub-conscious, and in a few cases overt recognition that rationality and the Enlightenment are overrated, for the human mind will never unlock all mysteries in this world. As they dig in the tombs, researchers ritualistically seek "objective" evidence of improvable and profoundly Eurocentric mythologies about civilization and the origin of man.

These efforts are doomed to fail, for there is no way that human beings can isolate the origin of their existence, regardless of what Darwin and his disciples say. The logic for this argument is simple: a petrol-fuelled engine cannot identify when it originated because it did not build itself. It requires a non-machine being, in this case a human one, to accurately identify when it was first built. Following the same logic, we can argue that it takes a non-human to prove where human beings came from. In other words, for human beings to provide "independent" evidence of their origins, they would have to step outside their humanity. The truth inherent in myths of origin lies less in the factual details and more in the acceptance that humanity cannot decipher its own origin, and seeking to do so ultimately results in self-destruction.

But rather than confront the inability to step outside humanity, European scholars and explorers have chosen the easy, albeit brutal, escape route: degrade Africans' humanity so as to deem Europeans sufficiently "objective" and superior to judge it. The futility of these academic pursuits explains why archaeological studies inevitably end up being racist, for racism is inherently a negation of humanity.

It is no wonder that each "advance" in archaeological knowledge usually leaves Africans feeling short-changed, if not downright insulted. The recovery by Mary and Louis Leakey of evidence of early humanity in Olduvai Gorge did not liberate Africa from the racist image already imposed on it. Instead, it furnished credible evidence for the Western myth that the humanity of Africans is stuck in the past unlike that of Europeans. The Leakey family subsequently derived international fame and political capital from these "discoveries." A more recent reappearance of the Leakey ghost has been discussed by Steve Sharra in one of his contributions to this website, in which he details the Western media's attribution of important research by Kenyan Dr Kyalo Manthi to another Leakey descendant.

Harjo is indeed correct to identify studies of human remains as a ritualistic exercise, especially because the scholars concerned still have nothing to show for it. She opens a piece aptly titled "This Isn't Rocket Science" with the following observation: "White people in the soft sciences have studied Native people to death ? and beyond ? and what they're trying to prove is still a mystery. One thing they've learned is how to use `studies' to diminish Native people. Another thing they've learned is how to hold on to their collections of Native people for future `studies.'" Harjo adds that one of the lamest responses to her scepticism is the "predictable question" as to whether the studies wouldn't be justified if they led to a cure for diabetes. She then remarks that "in the 27 years since I was first asked that question, there have been no anthropological or archaeological 'studies' that have contributed to treating or curing diabetes among Native people."

If archaeological studies have little scientific or social merit, the question arises as to why the Western elite continues to endorse them. A tentative answer could be found in the fact that white supremacy's most formidable enemy is death itself. All the theories and institutions that credit European civilization as being superior to every other have not been able to suppress the reality identified by Pius Adesanmi on this website that "Death is the most democratic of human experiences, the great uniter, and the faultless leveler. Distinctions of race, class, creed, nationality, gender, and age are mute in the province of death." The Western world's fear of the truth exposed by death explains what Adesanmi describes as the panic of the Euro-American media when faced with hypothetical death, as opposed to real deaths that are being incurred by other people at the hands of American imperialism.

Death's nullification of white supremacy indicates why European societies engage in rituals that equate death with black human beings and comfort with staring in the face of the African dead. The most morbid of these rituals occurred in North America where frenzied white mobs savagely killed solitary or a handful of African Americans. The mobs were not content with the mere stifling of the life of the victims whom they grossly outnumbered. They wrecked such havoc and devastation on the remains as if to ensure that the victims would not be eligible for resurrection at the second coming of Christ, and took pictures for further evidence.

Today, the Western media and charity organizations still paint death as an essentially African phenomenon when they describe it in terms of horrifying statistics that suggest its inexplicable ubiquity on our continent. The French humanitarian organization L'Arche de Zoe, already saddled with kidnapping debacle in Chad, still carries on its website the inflammatory statement that a child in Darfur dies every 5 minutes. It is instructive that the organization has not computed the number of people killed or rendered without food and shelter over time in order to produce a similar statistic about how many Darfurians the militias, with the complacency and support of the Sudanese government, directly or indirectly kill every number of minutes. This framework is similar to describing how many Iraqis die every week rather than how many Iraqis the American-led occupation force kills every week. The reason for this discrepancy is obvious: focus on the killer evokes demands for justice and retribution, while focus on the dead alone suggests that the loss of lives is existential rather than politically and criminally instigated. Focus on the dead substitutes justice for pity and exonerates the killer.

Consequently, the indignity inherent in the treatment of what remains of King Tut-Ankh-Amen's life says less about him and more about what the Western-oriented academy is trying to hide. It exposes Western epistemology as profoundly flawed and deeply ritualistic despite claims of having superseded the human need for rituals that is expressed in every society. It also calls into question the morality of the institutions making millions of dollars from the spectacle.

But the ancestors are just and have sought retribution. For the breach of human decency, Euro-America is now burdened with an insatiable thirst for power that leads it to not only use science and technology to kill millions of people in increasingly shorter amounts of time, but to also seek illusive redemption in the silence of the dead.

We pray for King Tut-Ankh-Amen and moan the sacrilege that has visited the continent that we love and call our homeland.

<http://www.zeleza.com/blogging/african-affairs/lamentation-king-tut-ankh-amen>

|